The children's hopes for months past are about to be realized. The youngsters have been seeing visions, and dreaming dreams; they have been reading articles in the daily papers, and hearing their parents talk about playgrounds and their little heads have been nearly bursting trying to fathom just what it all means. But now the puzzle is to be solved, and a real playground for the boys and girls of Peterborough is to be opened. There will be the sand box and the baby swings for the little ones who can't come alone, but will have to be brought and looked after by an older brother or sister. There will be the ring games and story hour for those a little older. Then there are the baseball, volley ball, basket ball courts and diamonds, as well as big swings and teeters for the older boys and girls. Something for every boy and girl according to his or her age, from the baby right up to the fathers and mothers. Yes, we want the parents to come around and renew their youth, get on the swings and bring back the good, old days when you used to hang a rope from the limb of a tree, or the old barn girders, or get into a game of volley ball; it's a real worry chaser, and you'll feel ten years younger.

Keep this in mind—the playground is for all ages, and each age will find something to fit his or her particular need.

Isn't it grand to see a group of boys and girls who can't go away on a vacation having a place to play and enjoy themselves under proper supervision. Every boy and girl may come to the playground—"it is yours."

The report of the Committee on Appointments recommended that he be paid one-half year's salary, but Mr. W. H. Hill, the Chairman, moved that it be increased to the full year. 3. That Mr. Joseph Crowe be appointed janitor of the South Central School to succeed Mr. Lacheur, salary to be according to schedule and duties to start 1st of July, 1915.

4. That the Board establish kindergarten primary classes as soon as qualified teachers are available, and that the kindergarten teachers at present on the staff avail themselves of the opportunity of qualifying by taking the summer school course established by the Education Department, at Toronto University.

MR. GLADMAN URGES POLICE TO BE EXCEPTIONALLY ALERT NOW

Mayor Buller Replied That No Town on the Continent is Better Policed Than Peterboro' and Local Detectives Have Made a Name for Clever Work—Will Wait Until Government Has Announced Their Intentions.

The Legal Committee of the City Council last night decided to suspend action in the matter of providing protection for local factories engaged in the manufacture of munitions until some definite announcement had been received from Ottawa as to what share, if any, the Government proposed to assume in the guarding of these plants.

There were present Ald. Dobbin, in the chair; Aldermen Stratton, Edgar, Saunders and Mayor Buller; also Messrs. W. C. Ackerman, Jas. Kendry, J. C. Smith, George Gladman, and E. R. Wilson.

Mayor Buller—The factories may be able to do as the C. G. E. have done, and look after their buildings during the day time. This would dispense with any other appointments for day patrol.

Ald. Stratton—What is Mr. Lougheed's telegram a reply to Mayor Buller—I don't know. It is a reply to my conversation with Mr. Burnham. I don't know the exact words Mr. Burnham used in his communication to the Department."

Mr. Lougheed's telegram simply said that the matter of patrolling factories was receiving the best attention of the Department.

Mayor Buller asked if the local manufacturers expected the city to contribute toward the cost of the needed protection.

Mr. Gladman replied by asking another question. What would the city do if word came that a gang of bank robbers were on their way to Peterborough? Surely extra watchmen would be put on duty?

Mayor Buller—"If you said a factory was in danger to-night we would immediately jump to action.

Ald. Stratton pointed to the indefinite time patrols would be kept on duty. It might run a year.

Willing to Assist.

Mayor Buller—"We certainly want to see the manufacturers treated fairly; I would support anything. The city could well afford to assist in providing protection even though a precedent was established.

Mr. Gladman said he believed the police should be as alert as possible. A close tab should be kept on every stranger, and be keenly on the lookout for suspicious individuals.

Boost for Police.

Mayor Buller—"There's not a town on the continent better policed than Peterborough for its size. Every minute and every hour of the day the precautions you speak of are taken. I knew before it came out in the press that Nerlich was holidaying at Oak Orchard. I knew when P. C. Webster of Lakefield arrested a stranger near the Village, who gave a German name and said he was going to Montreal. Down here, when he was examined, the number of his regiment was tattooed on him. He proved to be a German reservist.

His Worship was sure of the ability of Detectives Newhall and Meagher, whom he considered as good as could be found in the district. Mayor Buller said he simply wished to show that Peterborough police were alert and it was common tip among circus followers and others to keep clear of Peterborough.

Mr. Gladman said he was not finding fault with the police, but merely desired to emphasize the great need for present alertness.

Don't Reach Auburn.

Mr. Jas. Kendry said that the police did not go as far as the Auburn Mills.

In regard to the C. G. E. idea of giving to workmen authority to make arrests, Mr. Kendry said it appealed to him. The workmen were all over the premises. Two men would be sufficient to patrol the grounds on the outside.

The Men Needed.

Ald. Dobbin began counting up the people needed. Two on the Auburn Woolen Mills, two at the Bonner-Worth Co.; four at the C. G. E.; two at Ackerman's; two at the William Hamilton Co.; two at the Peterbroough Canoe Co., and two at Baker's planing mill; a total of sixteen, at a cost of $225 a week for a twelve hour night service.

It was suggested that the insurance companies should bear a part of the cost. Mr. Kendry replied that nothing could be expected from that direction.

Mr. E. R. Wilson arrived and stated that he had a contract for munitions.

Mayor Buller: "You'll have to add that to the list."

Mr. Kendry said the police are seen in bunches down town, but they never extend their beats to the vicinity of Auburn.

Mr. Gladman pointed out that while the protection by workmen might suffice during the day, it would be inadequate for night patrol.

Ald. Dobbin suggested that the city pay three-tenths of the cost of protection, the manufacturers to pay seven-tenths.

Mr. Kendry replied that he would sooner pay the whole cost than accept that offer.

Ald. Stratton suggested that the Committee wait until further information be received from the Government as to what the Department intends to do.

Mayor Buller moved a resolution to this effect but that another meeing be held on Friday. Ald. Stratton seconded it.

His Worship said he would endeavour to secure definite information from the Government by that time. If nothing were forthcoming from that quarter he would support a proposal that the city pay half the cost of the required protection.

BROWNLEE MADE 49 PER CENT. PROFIT

Brownlee Never Even Inspected Boxes, Which Were Shipped Direct to the Department

OTTAWA, July 6.—Under the system of purchasing for the soldiers inaugurated during the opening months of the war by the Government, T. A. Brownlee, an Ottawa retail druggist, made $5,685 from the sale (without tender) of 180 hospital boxes for the medical units of the overseas forces. This sum represented 49 per cent. profit on the transaction. All of the boxes were purchased by Brownlee from the National Drug Company of Canada and from the Parke, Davis Company of Toronto. Brownlee never even inspected them, as they were shipped direct to the department.

The Government, which let this contract to a retailer without tender, could have purchased the boxes direct from the wholesale companies and saved the $5,685, the middleman's profit of 49 per cent. The boxes were purchased by Brownlee for $11,360 and sold to the Government for $17,205. The above is simply one instance of the manner in which contracts were let by the Government in the days before purchases had to be turned over to a Commission, independent of the patronage system. The Plamondon drug contract, the binocular purchases, the Powell-Garland bandage rake-offs are other instances.

In addition to the hospital boxes Brownlee sold to the Government $19,218 worth of other supplies which he also bought from the wholesale houses for $16,977.88. His gross profit on all supplies sold the Government from August 11 to January 1 was $8,823.19.

DEATH OF FORMER COUNTY INSPECTOR

Mr. J. Coyle Brown Passed Away in Cobourg Yesterday—Was 82 Years of Age

A message from Cobourg conveyed the news to Mr. J. C. Shook of the death of Mr. J. Coyle Brown, formerly Public School Inspector for the County of Peterborough, which occurred in Cobourg yesterday.

The late Mr. Brown had reached the good old age of 82 years. He taught in the Public schools in East Peterborough for a number of years and about the year 1870 was appointed to the position of Inspector for the County, which office he held until the year 1910, when he was succeeded by Mr. Rihard Lees. And by virtue of his office as Inspector he was familiar to thousands of people now of middle age throughout the county. Shortly after retiring from the Inspectorship he went to Cobourg to reside and some time ago had a stroke, from which he partially recovered, and it is assumed that a renewal of the attack caused his death.

A Presbyterian in religion, he was a member of St. Paul's church while in Peterborough, and for a number of years before leaving, an elder in that church.

The funeral will take place on Thursday, interment at Norwood on the arrival of the C.P.R. noon train from the west.

Husband and Wife Were Both Drunk

They Were Allowed to Leave the City—Cyclist Paid Fine of $5

Richard Wilson and his wife were a very repentant pair when they came before Magistrate Dumble this morning. Richard was charged with creating a disturbance in a public place, while Mrs. Isabella Wilson, his better half, was charged with being drunk in a public place.

"We were out in the country, piped Richard, and came back to town when it was raining. We got a wee drop of whiskey to warm us." We will get out of the city right away if you will let us go."

P. C. Blade related the circumstances to the Magistrate. He was called to a house on Charlotte street, where the couple had rented rooms They were fighting and the man was beating the woman. He was also using some very foul language. They were both drunk, the woman particularly. He placed them under arrest and they spent last night in separate cells at the Police Station.

The Wilson couple claimed to hail from Ottawa. They were very anxious to get out of town. The Magistrate said that they were certainly not wanted around here and if there was a chance that the city could get rid of them he would give them a chance. Their case was accordingly enlarged for a week and if they get out of the city it will be dropped at the end of that time.

Will Migrate.

"Isaac Dormer. You are charged with vagrancy." Isaac stood up, and something about his features looked familiar to His Worship.

"Not this time," replied the Chief. "That was another time."

Isaac wanted to go to his daughter in some other town and his case was enlarged two days to give a chance to get out.

"If you are not in the city in two days you will not be called upon here," said the Magistrate.

Knocked Woman Down.

Nicholas Sautiners paid $5.00 for the privilege of breaking the traffic by-law. Like many other cyclists in the city, he rode on the street without keeping as near to the right-hand curb as possible. At noon on Monday he was wheeling north on George street and at Charlotte street turned the corner too short. A woman, crossing to the south side of Charlotte street at the crossing, was hit by his bicycle and knocked down. She was unconscious for about a minute and sustained a nasty cut on the back of her head.

Chief Thompson was standing on the corner at the time and he assisted her into McDermid and Jury's drug store on the corner. He took her to her home in an automobile. She was badly shaken up, but is recovering.

Cyclists in the city have a habit of cutting the corners too short and accidents happen day after day, particularly about the noon hour. The police have a number of these offenders under surveilance and prosecutions will continue until the people riding bicycles are educated. The price of the education is going to be costly to some. Sautiners thought the $5.00 fine this morning was a costly lesson. Others would do well to profit by his experience.

VISITORS FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Four men from the Y.M.C.A. at Punxsutawna, arrived in the city last evening en route to Lindsay, where they begin their annual two weeks' hike through the northern counties. Among the four were Mr. C. H. Manley, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Punxsutawna, and Mr. J. Boyd Allison, a member of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A. of the same town. Last night they spent as guests at the local Association building. To-day they left for Lindsay, where their hike commences.

UTILITIES COMMISSION BY-LAW CARRIED BY 130

Interest Was Not Very Keen in the Voting Yesterday. But Sufficient of the Ratepayers Showed Their Confidence in the Judgment of the Commissioners.

HOW THE VOTE WENT

The Utilities Commission By-law to borrow $50,000 for the purpose of purchasing land and erecting an electrical sub-station and waterworks storehouse, was supported by the ratepayers yesterday by a vote of 291 for and 161 against, a majority of 130.

It was by no means a large vote, but at the same time it was not the smallest on record. As far as street conversations were an indication there was very little interest in the voting. However, it speaks well for those citi- However, it speaks well for those citivancement of the city, for the Utilities Commission had pointed out the necessity of the work, and that they have the full confidence of the ratepayers is found in the fact that this money by-law was passed during the present times of financial stringency.

Only one sub-division gave an adverse vote, Halpin's, in the South Ward. Every other polling place gave a majority, although some of them were overwhelmingly small, while were not very large. All south of Charlotte street gave a majority of eleven, and East City presented a majority of only nine. It remained for the other three sections of the city to manifest a real sympathy for the by-law, and support for the Commission.

As was pointed out a short time ago, the sub-station will be located at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets.

ALL THE SCHOOL BUILDINGS ARE CLEAN AND TIDY

Fire Chief Howard Reported to the Board of Education on His Annual Inspection Tour to the Halls of Learning

The report of Fire Chief Howard's annual trip of inspection of the Public Schools was received by the Board of Education in regular session last evening. The report shows the schools to be in a very clean condition and the scholars proficient in fire drill. After the reading of the report it was decided, on motion of Trustee G. N. Gordon that a letter of thanks be sent to Fire Chief Howard in recognition of his report.

The Chief's report to the Board was as follows:

"I beg leave to report to your honourable body that on Thursday, June 10th, I made my annual inspection of all the Public Schools in the city.

On the occasion of my visit to the schools I was accompanied by His Worship Mayor Wm. Buller, Alderman G. Walter Green, Trustee J. H. Smith and several other prominent citizens.

The principals and teachers of the respective schools are evidently taking a keen interest in the matter of fire drill and are deserving of every encouragement you may offer.

All the buildings presented a clear and tidy appearance which speaks well for the janitors, and His Worship the Mayor and Alderman Green and the other gentlemen were particularly well pleased.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

I have the honour to be gentlemen,

Your obedient servant,

W. A. HOWARD,

Chief, Fire Department.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LADIES OF THE PROGRESSIVE CLUB

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,— Men as a general thing, as compared to women, think they can give points to women when she enters the field of beneficient effort. This is all wrong. I know it. Why hang it I can prove it to the King's taste.

Since the out come of the campaign for the Patriotic Fund a lot of fellows who gave a hand have been perked up and never fail to claim that we are the people. So we are. Only, mind you, we're not quite sure of it. That was a good campaign. It brought results. I am free to admit, and the results are apparent even if I didn't do the admitting. We cannot go behind the returns. But the work is whacked into the shade by the real, hard, persistent drudgery of the loyal band of ladies who are working for the Red Cross.

I poked into the store on Simcoe street where the head of the cyclone that is bringing in waste paper gains its momentum. Say, it was a corker of a scene. Over a score of women were ripping up paper, sorting it and getting it ready for the bailer. That, I may explain, is a contrivance that squashes the paper into compact bundles.

I was told, and I am sure of the facts, that finding nearly every other avenue either preempted or tried out these ladies decided to gather in the waste paper of the city, bundle it up and ship it to the paper mill. I understand that the munificient sum of 30 cents per hundred pounds is realized and the shippers pay the freight. Gee Whilikens. So much real hard work. The very sight of it is a lesson in obstinacy, optimism, pluck, stick-at-itiviness that is a corker. Just look in yourself and see. Don't wait or you will be nabbed, set to work and held to it. So far only one lone man has been captured. He stays because he is paid.

It puts men to shame to see the women so loyal and helpful. Sleeves rolled up, aprons buckled on, hair any old way and intense activity. That car is to be filled. It will hold 30,000 pounds. About 6,000 pounds have been inserted into the car, so far. About 10,000 pounds await handling in the general distraction. And a cold winter coming on. Whew.

On Saturday a call was sent for masculine help. There is some handling to be done. Not a trousers required. Yes there was one. Lawyer Kerr forsook his briefs and caveats and biles on bills and came and pitched in and did yeoman work. All credit to him. And he was not under the collar at the reluctance of those who were asked to help and didn't.

It is one great, big, prolonged job. All for about $90.00, which would be the commercial value of the car load of scrap. One good thing, and mind you good comes through tribulation, is that dozens of attics and cellars have been screened of accultions of trash in the way of waste paper, old magazines, etc. As a result insurance should be some cheaper, for the fire risk will be lessened. And the city incinerator has been cheated of a meal.

I forgot to say, and will say it now before I forget, that the Boy Scouts have been loyal and helpful. The girl guides have been right alongside in good work. When an auto piled with the wreck and rocks of ages comes to its moorings ten or twelve scouts jump on to the machine and begin to tear the load limb from limb. The little fellows are working like beavers and will use up their nice karkie suits and fracture the coats and trousers. Already emaciation shows in some of the uniforms. Good boys. Stick to it. You'll be an angel bye and bye.

Yours contentedly,

CITIZEN.

Trades and Labour Council Wants Caretaker to Move Into City or a Successor Appointed

The objection of the Trades and Labour Council to the Board of Education that Mr. Elliott, being paid as caretaker of the West Ward School, resided outside the city limits, was left with the Committee on Appointments last night.

Mr. W. H. Hill explained that Mr. Elliott resided immediately opposite the West Ward school. He resided there when he was appointed and was chosen amongst over twenty applicants for the reason that he was always near at hand to prevent vandalism, etc.

Strawberry Festival Was Great Success

Big Crowd From City Attend Social Under the Auspices of Lily Lake Union Sunday School

The Lily Lake Union Sunday school on the second line of Smith, organized about two months ago, held a very successful strawberry festival on the school grounds last evening. The attendance was very large, many going out from town for the event. These included Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray street church, Rev. Mr. McKenzie, of Knox church, Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Adjt. McElhiney, Ald. Duffus and Fire Chief Howard. Long tables were arranged on the grounds and these were filled many times, the abundant supply of strawberries and other good things proving a great attraction. A booth where ice cream and candy was sold did a thriving business.

After supper was served a splendid programme was given from a temporarily erected platform. Mr. Wesley Oliver, superintendent of the school, acted as chairman. Speeches were made by Rev. Mr. Webb and Rev. Mr. McKenzie, Mr. Gillespie and Adjt. McElhiney, Ald. Duffus, Chief Howard, C. E. Moore, T. O. Young, and Leggott, all extending best wishes to the officers and teachers of the new Sunday school, for a successful work in this vicinity.

The programme was as follows:

Address—Mr. Oliver.
Recitation—Miss Huston.
Address—Mr. McKenzie.
Song—Mrs. Telford.
Recitation—Mr. Johns.
Address—Mr. Webb.
Recitation—Miss Ackinson.
Address—Mr. Gillespie.
Address—Adjt. McElhiney.

A baseball match between Central Smith and Lily Lake teams resulted in a win for the former, the score being 9—7.

As a result of their first effort quite a good sum was realized, which speaks well for the future of the Sunday school.

A vote of thanks was tendered those who took part, by Messrs. D. Dixon and E. Ackinson.

THE MAN WHO SHOT MORGAN—Frank Holt, the lecturer in German at Cornell, now thought to be Enrich Muenter, a German, formerly at Harvard, who shot J. P. Morgan, on Saturday, July 3rd. His head is bandaged because of wounds received in his encounter with Mr. Morgan and other members of the household.

Additional Rooms Will Be Opened

The Overcrowded Condition at the King Edward and South Central Schools to Receive Attention

The regular meeting of the Board of Education, held last evening, being the last until September, was a busy session.

The following report of the Supervision Committee was adopted:

As authorized, your committee advertised for tenders for text-books and supplies and also Collegiate Institute supplies and have awarded the contract to Mr. R. J. Soden, his being the lowest tender.

To relieve the overcrowded conditions of the King Edward and South Central Schools it will be necessary to open additional rooms and your committee therefore recommend that an additional room be opened in each of these schools on the 1st of September next.

Respectfully submitted,

J. Crane, Chairman.

The Substitute for Vodka.

Elimination of vodka from Russia has evidently started that immense nation tea drinking. In February last the New York 'Journal of Commerce' stated that the quotations were 8c to 10c a pound higher than they were a year previously, and that the Russians were buying all the India Ceylons available. The price has been advancing ever since.

The Clever Strategy of Russian Retreat

It is hardly to be supposed that Germany intends to conquer Russia, or even a large part thereof. It seems most probable that Germany has hoped to smash the Russian army by a sudden terrific blow with enormous forces. Her aim probably is to put the Russian army completely out of the field and then turn to other allies. On the other hand, the Russian aim in this long retreat, has been to hold its line intact, and inflict the severest possible loss, keeping just far enough away to avoid dangerous losses and yet not too far to lure the enemy on. If the Russians can compell the loss of one German soldier for every Russian soldier lost, that alone will be an advantage gained. By reports they seem to have done considerably better. But the biggest point gained is that of stretching out the lines of the enemy forces and getting them continually farther from their base of supplies. Another great advantage lies in the fact that the Russians will be able to choose their own battle ground from which to launch their return advance against the Germans, just as the allies did before Paris. When they do give battle, it will be with full supplies in every branch—ammunition, rapid fire guns and heavy reinforcements. The German forces on the other hand, will be badly weakened by the long advance, far from base, away from reinforcements, and far less well supplied, due to being far from base. We may confidently expect news very soon of a reversal of this retreat, with the Russian steam roller again crushing back the German forces. The Italian forces continue to make rapid progress and it is evident that neither Austria nor Germany can spare any troops from Galicia or the west to defend against Italy. That fact alone, is evidence that Germany is putting forth her utmost energy against Russia in this powerful effort in Galicia. So, when Russia turns on Germany at the end of the retreat, Germany will either have to fall back to an even greater distance than she has come, or else she will have to seriously weaken the forces she has opposed to the allies in the west. In that case of course, there would be a great forward movement on the western front at once. But it has been the fixed policy of Germany to hold fast to that western front.

BIG GAME IN THE CITY LEAGUE SERIES

One of the most important games of the season in the City League series will be the second game of Saturday's double-header, which brings together the East Citys and Thistles. A win for East City will give them a clear lead of two games, which with four left to play, will make it an almost impossible task to head off the East City team. On the other hand, a victory for the Thistles will tie up he two teams. Last time they met the East City team won 2 to 1, after a grand game. Saturday's struggle should be equally as keen. In the 2 o'clock game the contestants will be the Classics and Empires.

BIG DOINGS IN THE BIG LEAGUES

At Chicago the Cubs won the first game of a double header from Cincinnati, 5 to 4, after a fourteen inning duel. The second game was called in the seventh inning on account of darkness with the teams tied with two runs each. In the final inning of the second game a free-for-all-fight occurred after Good tripled. He slid into the bag and spiked Olson. The latter became enraged and struck at Good. In a moment they were exchanging blows. The Chicago players came to the assistance of Good. Cincinnati players joined the fracas, and it was some time before Umpire Quigley got control of the situation. He then ordered Olson and Good to the clubhouse. All the extra players on the bench werre also banished.

The Dodgers took two games from the Boston Braves. This, coupled with the victory of New York over Philadelphia, forced the world's champions into the cellar position, so long held by their last year rivals — the Giants.

After losing five consecutive games the Chicago White Sox braced up and defeated St. Louis 12 to 2. Three St. Louis pitchers and a team of sixteen men failed to check the slugging of Manager Rowland's men.

The Boston Red Sox took two more games from Washington yesterday, further narrowing the margin between them and Chicago for first place in the Americai League. They defeated Walter Johnson in the second game.

The Athletics made it three straight from the Yankees right in New York. Thomas Knowlson, a semi-professional pitcher from Ridgway, Pa., started his first major league game for Philadelphia. He was hit hard but was effective in the pinches.

SOUVENIR BASEBALLS FOR CANUCK SOLDIERS

A case containing American League bats and balls was received by Mr. James W. Somers, of the City Clerk's Department, from Ban. B. Johnson, President of the Canadian "boys" now at Niagara camp. The following teams contributed: Philadelphia Athletics, four balls; Detroit Tigers, two balls; Washington, one ball; Pittsburg, one ball; Boston Americans, one ball; Chicago White Sox, one ball. Three balls were lost in transit.

WILL SELECT LACROSSE TEAMS FOR THE GAME ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Manager Ed. Dillon requests the following lacrosse players to work out at Central Park beginning at 6.30 to-night in preparation for Friday night's game with the Y.M.C.A.: McFadden, Gillman, Crough, Kenneally, Meagher, Tracey, Johnston, O'Connor, Reynolds, McCoy, Hamilton, Donovan, McGrath, Halpin, Kelly.

George Robertson wants the following players out to-night at Central park to practice for the game on Friday night: Flemming, Hatton, Mein, Hardy, Best, Burnham, P. Dunsford, Cranfield, Brown, Johnston, H. Dunsford, Waters, Hill, Grange, Palmer, Olin, Todd.

There has been so much rivalry among the O.A.L.A. players this season as to who is the best shot, fastest runner, that the management has decided to put on a new feature of the game on Friday night in the shape of a shooting contest, long distance throwing and one hundred yards race. The intermediate team is determined to win the balance of the games this season, thus making a three-cornered tie with astings and Campbellford, as Hastings states that they are sure tie with Hastings and Campbellford, Hastings on July 14.

The teams for Friday night's game will be selected to-night after practice.

War Has Hit Thistles Hard

Four of Players Now in Training For Overseas Service

The war has hit the Thistles harder than any of the other City Baseball League teams. Before the season opened they lost Harold Morrow, who is now in France with the Canadian Remount Depot. The next to take his departure was Lieut. Harold Hill, the catcher of the team, who is acting quartermaster of the 59th Battalion, C. E. F., at Barriefield Camp. Last week two more of the players have donned the khaki. Second-baseman Gordon Matthews is in training with the Canadian Army Service Corps at Rockcliffe Camp, Ottawa, and Lieut. The Price of Cheese To-day

After turning down 1 1-4c a week ago, the Cheese Board sold out this morning at 15 1-8c. The total quantity boarded was 2,516 boxes, and of these 645 sold at 15 3-16c, the remainder went at 15 1-8c.

The bidding began down around 14 1-2c but quickly rose to 15c. Mr. Cook offered 1-16c., Mr. Gillespie, 1-8c, and Mr. Cook got first call at 15 3-16c., buying Westwood, Villiers, Norwood and Ormonde. He offered 15 1-8c for further selections, and called Warsaw, Myrtle, Killarney, Oakdale, Daisy D., Selwyn, Keene, Trewern, Pine Grove.

Mr. Cook had considerable difficulty gathering in that number. Warsaw and Myrtle sold readily enough, but all the others refused several times before they finally capitulated.

Mr. Mann, salesman for Trewern, said there was some pretty good stuff up there, cold storage and all, that he did not like to see it go at 15 1-8c. Warminster refused absolutely.

Mr. Cook offered 15 1-16 for further but Mr. Gillespie got in at 15 1-8c., and secured East Emily, Indian River, Warminster, Shearer, Missing Link, Young's Point, Lang and Westwood.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I see that the Review approves of nominating a candidate for the House of Commons at this inopportune time, when it is imperative that nothing should break in upon the harmony of the people during the crisis of this dreadful war. It admits that the "election is still very probably a considerable distance away," and seeks to excuse its rashness on the ground that both Liberals and Conservatives all over the country are electing candidates. Such is not the case. It is true that a false report got abroad some considerable time ago that a general election would likely happen, in consequence of which some of the nervous constitutions, but since the report was denied from headquarters things have resumed their normal conditions. Its further excuse that the candidate will have ample time to organize the Riding, when, as we all know, the candidate does not do the organizing. The Executive says that the organization is in excellen shape and ready for any emergency.

And then it draws on the contingency of the candidate withdrawing, when another could be nominated—a possibility so remote that it is not worthy of consideration and never has been thought so, and yet the Review admits that this development is not likely to occur. Mr. Burnham disdains any part in bringing the nomination on now, and when there is no other aspirant in view, and, indeed, when the proposed time is so limited for any one to offer himself, it would be rashness to spring the nomination so prematurely even from a party point of view.

It is to be hoped that the Liberals will not be so unpatriotic and follow in the footsteps of their opponents, and add their quota to the dissension among our people, instead of blending into one harmonious whole for the common good of our country in this the hour of its trial.

Yours truly,
OBSERVER.

June 7th, 1915.

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I see by your paper of yesterday that Barney Corrigan's hen, not to be outdone by the Union street hen, has increased her brood in ten days from 26 chicks to 28, hatched from 26 eggs. As I expressed my faith in Barney's veracity on the first count, I do not now want to doubt that which was probable and pin my faith to the last story which is improbable. I am afraid that some of the bad boys have been playing pranks on Barney. It sounds too much like a free ad. for the dealer from whom Barney got the eggs and whom he names. Some of the hens have a knack of decoying away other hen's chicks, sometimes the whole brood, and thus increase if not double its own. Let it be as it may, I know Barney is sincere, and to be an honest man.

Yours truly,
HENERY.

An Explanation in Regard to Road Oil

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— Having seen letters in your columns re quality of road oil being distributed on the streets of the city and the strenuous language used by some of the aldermen in regard to same at last Monday's Council meeting, would say when asked for a price and sample on oil, we submitted them as requested. Our price was three-quarters of a cent per gallon lower than our competitor, and the samples were so similar that the parties in charge decided to submit them to an analyzist to decide their qualities, which we were perfectly satisfied to do, although we had the better argument in price. After waiting three weeks for a report it was given out that the analysis favoured the competitive oil. My company asked me to procure a copy of the analysis, which I asked for, and was told there was no analysis, that there was only a report, and was given no explanation why the analysis was not carried out. Now in order to try and be fair with us, I was given to understand that after the first car of competitive oil was distributed they would try a car of our oil, but we did not get an order until the fourth car was required. Then I was told to bring on a car, which I did, and on that car load we saved the city $61, and if they had used our oil for their requirements we would have saved the city between four and five hundred dollars. Some of the aldermen called it an inferior oil. Such is not the case. Although it was lower in price that don't say it is an inferior oil. Judging by what you see in the papers this oil was unloaded on East City for an experiment. It may have been distributed over there, as they know quite well if there was any knocks coming it would get it from that quarter, as they are noted over there for knocking, but that is not the only place in the city the oil was distributed. I was given a severer test than that and there was not a complaint. It was distributed on the market square, where there are two of the largest meat shops in the city and a [illegible] houses and not one complaint from that quarter. Our company is located in the city quite a number of years and pay quite a heavy tax. Also, the oil is being unloaded on our property. The system they are using for distributing the oil was procured from us, also any information that could be obtained we gave. In view of all this we did not try to influence one single alderman to procure the business, but we did expect to get a square deal, which we did not get. As far as injuring the rubber tiers our oil won't injure them any more than the other, and we are quite willing to submit our oil for analysis, and if it isn't worth two cents per gallon more for road purposes we don't look for any business. We have no apology to make, as our goods are the very best that can be manufactured.

Yours truly,
JAS. CLANCY.
Agent for Imperial Oil Co.

Robbers Came When Wolf Hounds Were Asleep

NEW YORK, June 7.—Five Russian wolf hounds were asleep in the trenches, to say nothing of Yorma, a Japanese butler, when thieves forced an entrance to La Belle Titcomb's dwelling, at No. 47 West Ninety-seventh street, and stole twenty-one large pieces of silverware valued at $5,000. These Russian wolf hounds, perhaps, never would have known anything about the robbery had not their mistress, an equestrienne of particular note, spanked each of them soundly and sent them to bed without supper when the police informed her she had been robbed.

Joseph O'Brien, a boy, saw several men [illegible] across the roof of his home at No. 64 West 100th street. He told the janitor and the latter called the police. The strange men escaped, leaving behind the heavy bag. At the West 100th Street station Lieutenant McNiff discovered that the bag contained a large silver punch bowl, a silver claret pitcher and twenty-one other large silver pieces.

In one of these pitchers was found a note addressed to "My Dear Miss Titcomb," and expressing best birthday wishes. Miss Titcomb was looked up in the City Directoy and the police asked her about the robbery. That was the first she had heard of it.

Investigation showed that thieves had entered the house, probably on Friday afternoon, while Yorma and the wolf-hounds were napping and while Miss Titcomb was absent. Yorma recalled that that was the only time he had taken a nap and that the dogs probably had been snoozing at the same time. He also recalled that that evening he wished to use a large silver fruit basket, but could not find it, and believed Miss Titcomb had put it aside.

Miss Titcomb formerly was the wife of Nat M. Wills, a comedian. She had been living alone in the large dwelling in West Ninety-seventh street.

Tea is a War Munition.

Tea is being used as the most portable beverage ration in the trenches in Europe. The belligerent Governments are buying immense quantities and the troops are acquiring a taste for tea that will greatly increase the future consumption. Cheap tea is a thing of the past now that the new demand has arisen, and rising prices may be expected for some time.

Ten German Army Corps Moving Westward To Reach French Coast

Will Try to Repeat Tactics in Galicia--Austro-German Onrush is Losing Momentum in the East

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—"Break through to Calais—now!" is the Kaiser's latest order to his troops in the western zone, according to reports received here from Zurich, Paris and Amsterdam. That credence is placed in the reports, indicating a new and serious offensive, is proved by the prominence given in the London newspapers to the despatches. One of these, from Burich, goes so far as to state that ten German army corps are moving westward after a season of rest from their work in Galicia.

In support of this belief G. F. Steward, of the Daily News, in a Rotterdam despatch says:

"Reinforcements are expected by the Germans during the next few days in preparation for a new attempt to break through to Calais. In the main they represent new armies of young men, many of whom are volunteers who were advertised to be ready for the front by July. Travellers who have returned from Germany this last week state that the places where they went swarmed with men of the new formations ready to take the field."

The military men here in discussing the reports of a savage attack on the Allies, with Calais as the objective, see evidences of a German plan to [illegible] employed against the Russians, regardless of the cost in human life, but that the Kaiser will reach Calais nobody believes possible.

In the meantime Austro-German onrush in the eastern zone seems to be losing its momentum. The Russians have braced themselves and are holding at most points along their line, although the Austrians tell of continued progress to the northeast of Krasnik and further east, along the River Vieprz, in the neighbourhood of Tarnogera.

This is a critical sector so far as a northward blow at Warsaw is concerned, but it is evident that the Russians are stiffening their resistance after their long retreat, and the British press, for the first time in weeks, takes a more cheerful view of the eastern situation.

It is noteworthy that Berlin's official communication speaks only of a gain on the Northern Poland front, leaving the southeastern field entirely to the Austrians, who in their official statement emphasize that an advance on the centre between the Vistula and the Bug was made by "Austrians."

The quiet which had prevailed on the British front in Flanders so long has been broken by a British gain of German trenches to the north of Ypres. The advance was made after typical trench warfare tactics, backed by French artillery.

This part of the western front still holds its reputation as a gas area, Field Marshal French again recounting how the Germans have been bombarding Ypres with gas shells.

BERLIN, July 8.—The War Office admits that the Russians have administered serious check to the advance towards Warsaw.

LONDON, July 8.—Canadians have taken a leading part in recent British advances, and casualties are fairly heavy.

PETROGRAD, July 8.—An enormous new Russian force has appeared against the flanks of Germanic armies and a turning movement is expected.

NEW YORK, July 8. — A wireless message from the captain of the steamer Saxonia says the steamer has been thoroughly searched, but no explosives were found aboard.

Few Cases Where Amputation Is Needed

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, Tuesday.— In only 782 cases has it been necessary to amputate one or more limbs of British soldiers admitted to hospitals in England and France since the commencement of the war to the present time, according to a reply made to-day by Mr. Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under Secretary of War, to a question in the House of Commons.

Havelock Auto Fine Finally Remitted

In the report of the latest meeting of the Havelock Council the following reference appears in regard to the automobile fine which Judge Huycke strongly denounced:

The Reeve brought up the matter of rebating the now famous (or infamous Payne fine and after considerable discussion, wherein all the members of the Council declared that it was spite work and shouldn't be encouraged, the fine amounting in all to $8.00, was rebated, and a copy of the resolution ordered sent to Judge Huycke. In connection with this matter Coun. Lynch voiced popular opinion when he said that the other auto fines laid through spite, should also be remitted.

Norwood Lady Makes Record Catch of Fish

Mrs. A. B. Greenbank, while visiting friends at Bewdley last week, made a record catch of muskallonge one day at Rice Lake capturng on the trawl two beauties, weighing 28 and 18 pounds each. Mrs. Greenbank brought the larger fish home with her on Saturday and it was the admiration of all who saw it. The catch is certainly one to be proud of, and, we think, will stand considerable competition before it is beaten. — Norwood Register.

German Attacks on British Positions Have Been a Total Failure

Italian Armoured Cruiser "Amalfi" Has Been Torpedoed By an Austrian Submarine--Majority of Crew Were Saved.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—Official reports from General French to-day confirm the fact that German attacks on British positions yesterday were a total failure.

ROME, July 8.—The Italian armoured cruiser Amalfi was torpedoed and sunk by an Austrian submarine in the Adriatic yesterday.

The Amalfi is the first large fighting ship lost by either side since the beginning of the Austro-Italian war. The majority of the crew of about 684 man was saved. WASHINGTON, July 8.—It is now believed that Holt's escapades were part of a great plot to demoralize the Allies' interests in the United States.

HAVRE, France, July 8.—Five ships filled with ammunition for the Allies reaching here lately, have had bombs secreted in the hold, but they failed to explode.

A widespread plot is believed to exist in the United States to destroy all munition ships leaving there.

LONDON, July 8.—Gen. Ian Hamilton to-night confirmed reports of a severe defeat inflicted on the Turks, and said British losses were negligible.

ROME, July 8.—Austrians have abandoned their trenches in front of Goritz and the Italian occupation of the city is believed imminent.

PARIS, July 8.—The French War Office announced last night that all ground lost to Germans yesterday was recovered yesterday by French artillery and infantry.

TWELVE DEAD AND MANY MORE ARE MISSING

Heavy Toll and Much Destruction of Property as Result of Tornado That Swept Cincinnati Last Night

TRAINS BLOWN FROM TRACK

Special to The Examiner:

CINCINNATI, O., July 8.—Twelve known dead, more than a score known to be missing, scores injured, many buried under ruins of buildings and in hulks of steamboats that sank, that is the toll of a tornado that swept Cincinnati about 9:30 o'clock last night. Four coaches of the Pennsylvania Railway passenger train were blown from the track and rolled down a steep embankment at Beechmont, Linwood, a suburb. Police and fire departments have been so busy digging for the dead and injured that no accurate account has yet been made of the financial loss. It is thought it will amount to close to a million dollars, and it all happened in ten minutes.

To Control Liquor Sale

Britain to Take Over Supply of Intoxicants Where War Material is Made

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 8.—Under the powers conferred by the Defence of the Realm Act the British Government to-day, by an order in Council, decided to take over the control of the sale and supply of intoxicating liquors in many districts where war material is being made and loaded, unloaded or otherwise dealt with.

The districts affected include the city of Bristol and surrounding towns and Avonmouth, Newhaven, Southampton, Newport, Cardiff, Barrow in Furness, Liverpool and adjoining towns, and most of the munition and shipbuilding centres in Yorkshire.

Members of Parliament of all parties have undertaken a campaign to thank the employers and workmen on munition contracts for the work they have already done, and to urge upon them the vital importance of turning out as great a quantity of munitions as the country is capable of producing.

Just One Application and the Hairs Vanish

(Modes of To-day)

A harmless, yet very effective, treatment is here given for the quick removal of hairy growths: Mix enough powdered delatone and water to cover the undesirable hairs, apply paste and after 2 or 3 minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs have completely vanished. One application usually is sufficient, but to be certain of results, buy the delatone in an original package.

DIVES TO DEATH AFTER MOTHER'S PREMONITION

NEW YORK, July 7.—Wm. Lancaster, who was graduated at the head of his class in the Belleville High school, a week ago, and who was to have entered Princeton University in the Autumn, was killed by diving into the mud in Greenwood Lake.

With half a dozen other boys of his own age—eighteen years—he went to Greenwood Lake last Friday to live in tents. He and Henry Denison, a son of C. L. Denison, formerly Mayor of Belleville, were in a rowboat when Lancaster dived from the bow.

Apparently the water was not as deep as he had believed it to be. His head and shoulders went into the mud while his feet extended above the surface of the water. Denison tried to pull him out by seizing his feet, but failed. Other friends hurried out in boats and after sixteen minutes of combined effort they drew the young man out from the mud and water. He was then dead.

Mrs. John Lancaster, mother of the young man, said that the night before she had a premonition that something would happen to him and had left her bed to write a letter asking him to return home at once. He was diving for his last swim before starting for home in obedience to that wish when he was killed. The fact that he was president of the senior class in high school, besides leading his class in all studies, indicated that he probably was the most popular young man in Belleville.

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

This furnished the Begum with so much thinkin' that we all filed out before she had a come-back ready. We went down back of Crusader's stable and shook hands and danced a few steps and let ourselves out consid'able. "We've guessed her number, boys," sez I, "and after this, if she's able to fluster us again, we'd better put on baby-clothes and hire a nurse-gel to look after us."

"You got to prove it first," sez I, "or if some other feller is able to prove it before you do, you have to split with him."

Her hair was the best-lookin' feature she had, but it didn't quite seem to fit her; it was too soft and wavy and gentle, like what ya'd look for on a regular home-stayin' woman, and then it was somethin' on the pinto order, too. The main bunch of it was brown, but part was nearly white and part a sort of yellow; and then the' seemed to be too much of it in some places and not enough in others. Anyhow, she didn't deliver any bunk-shack lectures that evenin', which was a victory in itself.

"Be careful, boys, about tippin' our hands to Isaac," sez I. "Him an' her are gaited some alike and she's the lead-hoss, so don't overflow in his presence."

Next mornin' the boys filed in to breakfast with sober and respectful faces, and they kept their eyes on their plates for the most part; but when they did raise 'em they allus aimed 'em at the Begum's hair until she was beside herself.

"Is there any question you wish to ask about my hair?" she demanded of Red after a time.

"Then why do you stare at it?" she sez, her eyes glitterin'.

"I didn't mean to, ma'am," sez Red. "I made up my mind this mornin' that I wouldn't look at it once; but some way my eyes just wandered there through curiosity.

This didn't seem to soothe her a mite and she acted put out through the meal. At supper she jerked Missourie back on his haunches and asked him what he meant by lookin' at her hair all the time. Missourie was the oldest of us and some the toughest. "Why, to tell you the truth, ma'am," sez he, "we thought that you bein' from the East would know more about styles and fashions and such-like than we would. Red here don't just feel satisfied with the colour of his whiskers and we all thought if he could dye 'em—"

"Do you think my hair is dyed?"

"Well, we don't all of us think it's dyed," sez Missourie; "but we all thought 'at you'd know about how hair-dyin' was done and whether or not it hurt."

She acted just like any woman would; she pursed up her lips as though she never would speak again, she tilted back her head, and gave it a few jerky jerks, and then she said: "I most certainly know nothing about hair-dye through personal experience, but I do know, of course, that it is not painful. I also know that whiskers are most unsanitary, and instead of dyeing them, they should be shaved entirely off."

One of her most accusin' lectures was about unsanitary conditions among the poor and when we looked at Red's whiskers and thought of all the horrible things she had told about flies and garbage and such-like, we mighty nigh choked to death in keepin' from laughin' right out.

"I heard tell once about a feller's hair explodin' after he dyed it black and got too close to a candle flame," sez Windy Jones.

"I allus doubted that," sez Slim Jones; "but a gel down in San Tonya told me once that she had the headache steady after she'd dyed her hair, and she dyed hers just a plain yaller all over."

It was surprisin' how the boys had thawed out. This was the first time the Jones brothers had spoke at table since the Begum had took charge of us, and when Shorty saw them get away with a remark apiece, he batted his eyes a time or two and sez: "If Red's whiskers had to be dyed, ma'am, what colour would you pick out to make them look the most human?"

"I have told you that I would have them shaved off," sez she, bitterly.

"The's somethin' you put on hair to make it curl, too, ain't the'?" sez Missourie.

The Begum rose and swept out of the mess-hall with her jaws set and her chin lookin' more like a snowplough than usual. If she had struck the door-jam, she would sure have shattered it.

While we were noonin' that day we all discussed how surprised we were that she had been as easy whipped as she was, and Phil McLaughlin he put the answer into words. "What she's been doin' all her life," sez he, "was to walk up and down on streets where all the houses were made out o' glass until she got the idy that she could throw stones better'n anybody. She could rawhide the poor about their conditions because she never had been poor, she could jump on the dead Hindus for wantin' company, because she never had been a dead Hindu, and this has been her game all the way. What I want to know is, is she a widder herself?"

"Well, if she ain't, and we keep this lick up much longer," sez Red, "old man Hollis'll have her back on his hands in short order."

Nothin' but the fear o' starvation had drove the boys in to their meals for days, but now they looked forward to 'em as eager as colts. Whenever she'd perk up a little and start to framin' out some duties we ort to perform, all we had to do was to glance at her hair and she'd wilt like snow before a chinook. She thought us too stupid to be anything but innocent, and it never once occurred to her that it might be a put-up job.

When she savvied that a bunch of mavericks like us could see something wrong with her hair, she fell to studyin' about what all those poor cusses she'd been lecturin' to might have thought about it and it gave her he shakes.

There's allus two things that fill me with wonder whenever I go to studyin' about humans: one is how everlastin'ly different they all are, and the other is, how blame much they are alike.

CHAPTER XXVIII.
OLD MAN KASTLE RECEIVES.

Friar Tuck was allus huntin' for what he called the child-spirit, and he allus bulged out with joy whenever he found it. You might think that actin' like a regular grown-up human and like a child was so altogether different that the'd be no mistakin' it; but unless you've trailed around some with the Friar, you most likely don't know what the child-spirit is, any way.

He sez that children live in eternity right now, and that mature folks live in time and that's the main difference. He sez if you're livin' in time, time is what you're allus pressed for, and so you don't dare to sing and dance and sit around and wonder about things for fear you're goin' to lose a little time; and the consequence is that you scrambde and scratch and dig after time until you get stiff-jointed and can't use all the time you've got. A child, on the other hand, don't care a hang for time; but every second is crowded so full o' merricles that the child has to hop around like a terrier in a ratden in order to try out everything 'at attracts him.

The Friar sez that emotions grow with exercise the same as everything else, and the child exercises all his emotions which keeps him balanced and chockful o' life, while a mature adult keeps plannin' on what he's goin' to get later out of what he does now, until he finally settles down to bein' a regular dog-in-the-manger grasper.

Well, as I glance back over my life I can easy see that what has drawn me to folks most was the fact that they had managed to keep this child-spirit alive in 'em, and no one had done a better job o' this 'n old Josiah Cornell, the hermit.

He sat at his front door lookin' like a wood image; but all the time he was playin' games, and he kept exercisin' his different emotions one after another until when he did let one go, it swung out free and hearty and hilarious like that of a child. A child don't value a thing because of what he actually can sell it for; but on account of what he is able to pretend it is worth, and so did old Josiah.

He got a world o' joy in keepin' folks on the outside and guessin' on what was inside; but when it struck him as a good plan to take 'em inside, he didn't do it grumblin'; he turned the whole place over to 'em and managed to get more joy out o' this than out of the other way he'd been playin' the game.

He used to study and plan so as to make Kate's father feel independent and bossy, and when Kate's father first came to those parts he didn't have enough of the child-spirit in him to satisfy a rattlesnake. A child don't allus remember to pay ya in thanks, but he does show his appreciation by lettin' out his enjoyment to the full limit. A hardened human, on the other hand, hates to pay out anything, and he'll even try hard to hoard up his gratitude; and this was one of the things that Kate's father used to practise consid'able.

Old Josiah had sacrificed a heap in turnin' over his house and goin' to live in one of the shanties; but because he had the child-spirit, he made this into a game and it rejoiced him exceedin'; but Kate's father found consid'able sport in kickin' at bein' tied up in an out of the way spot where he couldn't even know what was goin' on in the world.

When the weather was fine he sat at the open door or even took a walk with Kate or old Josiah helpin' him, and sometimes he'd talk a few words to me; but he allus treated me as though I was one of the lower animals, and nothin' freezes me up so tight.

"It heals like magic" is a favourite expression where Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic, it prevents blood poisoning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

His Mother's Gift

It Came to Him on St. Patrick's Day.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Emmet Doolan, a young man living in County Tipperary, Ireland, was one day walking on the bank of the river Suir doing a hard job of thinking. His eyes were on the ground before him, and so intent was he on the subject that he did not even hear a bird chirping in a tree above his head. Suddenly he was stopped both in his progress and his reverie by a girl who stood directly before him and was looking at him with a merry face.

"What are you thinking about, Emmet, that you can't see a yard before you?"

A change came over the young man's face at sight of the cheery maiden before him. His own lighted up with a momentary pleasure.

"I'm goin' to America, Eileen," he said, "and, considerin' that I haven't a penny to me name, I was wonderin' how I was goin' to get there."

It was now the girl's turn to look sober. The twinkle left her eye, and the smile left her lips.

"And what are you goin' to America for, Emmet?" she asked in a tremulous voice.

"To make me fortune."

"And leave your poor old father?"

"Yes."

"And leave your mother, also? Is she to be without the boy she loves so well?"

"Yes, I must leave both father and mother. I'm doin' 'em no good here, and once in America, where they say there's plenty of work for all, I may be able to send 'em enough to make 'em comfortable."

They walked to the bank of the river and sat down on the turf under a tree. Eileen had spoken one word for Emmet's parents and two for herself. The two had grown up together, and, though they had not been aware of it, this intention of Emmet to put 3,000 miles of ocean between them had revealed it to Eileen and had given a glimmer of it to Emmet. The mind of man full of plans for conquest does not so readily settle upon the sentimental features of life as the woman whose inactive sphere gives her more opportunity. Eileen sat mute and dejected.

"You don't approve of my plan?" said Emmet. "Will you tell me why?"

To this there was no answer.

"You're thinkin' maybe that it's foolish for a man to talk about goin' to a foreign country when he has no money to pay his way."

Still there was no reply. Eileen sat looking down on the gently flowing river beneath them, apparently as much wrapped in feeling as Emmet had been in thought when they met.

"If it's leavin' father and mother you're thinkin' of I believe I can do 'em more service by goin' where I'll get plenty of work and good pay than stayin' here, where there's little work and poor pay."

Even this suggestion failed to elicit any word from Eileen. Emmet was looking down upon her and saw that her eyes were wet. "Tell me, Eileen," he said softly, "why you oppose my goin' to America."

She looked up at him, and at last he received his answer. "I don't want you to go."

The few words, spoken almost in a whisper, revealed to the man not only that the girl loved him, but revealed to him that she was as much to him as he was to her. It was the only proposition ever made between them that their lives should be linked, and, singularly enough, it came from the girl. But it sufficed for these two lowly creatures, and it enabled Emmet to speak more plainly—to tell her that he would not only send his parents the wherewithal to make them comfortable, but would work hard and save every penny that he might have enough beyond what he needed for them to send for her, and they would found a home in the new country where—so they believed—all grew rich.

How Emmet Doolan managed to get to America without the wherewithal to pay his way concerns this story only so far as to show that a man who could accomplish such a feat was bound to succeed. And Emmet did succeed in time, though he found it uphill work. Had his mind not been fixed on a definite purpose he would probably not have had the stimulus to work and pinch that he might accomplish it and attain his goal.

Eileen was not the girl to let her lover do all that they required. She obtained a position as lady's maid in the home of a wealthy family in Dublin, where she received good wages, nearly all of which she saved. Long before Emmet was able to send his father and mother any funds Eileen was sending them small amounts, which she permitted them to think came from their son in America. They discovered the deception in time, but not till Emmet himself began to remit.

Of the two lovers Eileen advanced the more rapidly so far as savings were concerned. Emmet had his trade to learn, and it was hard snatching at times even to make a living for himself. He was not only a faithful worker, but had a mechanical bent which served him well. Even as a helper he managed to save a little, though he sometimes went hungry to do so. But when he became so proficient in his trade as to command the regular union wage his finances began to improve rapidly.

All this took time. It was several years before he was able to earn his $4 a day, and even then there was not always work to do. It was not till Emmet had been in America four years that he began to put aside a fund to bring Eileen to him. This fund he started at the beginning of a new year and calculated that he would have enough by the following autumn to buy Eileen's ticket across the water. Unfortunately he was laid up by illness soon after he began to put aside this fund and was idle for two months.

Eileen received a letter early in January telling her of her lover's intentions and another shortly afterward that he was laid up with an illness. She had saved enough money to pay her way to America and made up her mind to go to Emmet of her own accord since he was not able to send for her. She came to this resolution in February, but it was March before she could make her arrangements to depart. Then, too, she must go home to say goodby to her parents and receive a blessing from Emmet's father and mother to take to him. However, she got away at last, anxious to reach her lover, who was still an invalid.

Eileen's intention was to surprise Emmet, and in none of her letters did she give him the slightest hint of her coming. She wrote him that she longed to be able to nurse him back to health, and he replied gratefully that if she were with him he would recover more rapidly, but his greatest disappointment was that he was using up the fund he had started with which to bring her to him in necessary expenses, including doctor's bills.

The last letter Emmet received from home before Eileen sailed was from his mother. She was a very pious woman and had often written her son to be sure not to neglect his church duties. In this letter she told him that she was sending him a gift that he would receive on or about St. Patrick's day. She believed that it would make him well, for she sent with it her blessing.

Emmet was very curious to know what this gift was his mother was sending him and wondered how it would come. He saw no way except by express, and, although his mother had his address, he sent a postcard to each express company's local office that it might not be delayed for want of his street and number.

On the morning of St. Patrick's day Emmet's gift had not arrived. There was a telephone in the house in which he lived, and since he was too weak to leave his bed he asked his landlady to telephone the express offices to ask if any package had been received for him. Every office declared that nothing had been received for him, and he was disappointed. About 11 o'clock in the morning the landlady came to his room and said to him:

"Your St. Patrick's day gift from Ireland has arrived. Shall I bring it up?"

"Of course. Bring it up at once."

"I don't know that I'm able to carry it."

"Is it very heavy?"

"I think it must weigh about 100 pounds."

"Well, well! I suppose it must stay there till I can get up and handle it myself."

"Maybe it can come of itself."

Before Emmet could reply to this apparently absurd proposition the door was flung open, and Eileen ran to Emmet's bed and, kneeling beside it, threw her arms about him.

"I'm the gift your mother sent you, Emmet," she said. "Both she and your father hoped I would arrive on St. Patrick's day. They said they'd be thinkin' of us all this blessed day as bein' together."

"Thanks be to God!" was all the invalid could say, clasping his arms about Eileen.

"That I will. I'm thinkin' I'm well already. But how did you manage about the money for your passage, Eileen, seein' I had none to send you?"

"I saved it from my wages."

At that moment there came strains of martial music from without.

"It's the parade," said Emmet. "I'm thinkin' I'll get up and we'll have a look at it."

"Are you strong enough?"

"Strong enough? I could carry an ox on me back now."

Emmet, wrapped in the bedclothing, with Eileen's assistance, managed to get to a window, where a chair was placed for him. The arrival of his love, the sight of the paraders moving by, the sound of bugle and beat of drum, were so inspiring that he said if he had known how strong he was he would be marching with them, but Eileen needed to hold him in his chair to keep him from starting up. She managed to keep him quiet by giving him a green flag to wave to the boys below, while with the other hand he held hers under the window sill, where they could not be seen.

Under such a stimulus Emmet could not be kept in bed. He was soon up for good, the banns between him and Eileen were published in the church and they were duly married, but this was not till Emmet had returned to work and they had hired rooms, which they entered immediately after the wedding.

All this occurred years ago. Emmet is now a contractor and has built many a structure of which he may be justly proud and which together have made him prosperous. He and Eileen have a large family. The holiday the children enjoy most is Christmas, but for their parents St. Patrick's day is nearest to their hearts.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed B. C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, Monday, July 5, 1915.—The optimistic feeling that always prevails in an agricultural country when the crops begin to be harvested is now much in evidence in Canada. Haying is becoming general. Fruit has been coming to market for some time, and in a comparatively few weeks wheat will be ready for the binder. Pastures are good, the milk flow has been keeping up well and cheese have been exceptional.

During the past two or three weeks, too, the cattle market has been steadily improving. Hence the optimism of the countryside.

City business is undeniably dull. A few industries continues to profit from war orders but on the whole the volume of trade declines. Bank clearances, for instance, are many thousands of dollars lower than for the corresponding weeks last year. It remains to be seen what effect the marketing of the new crop will have on city industry.

WHEAT

The market continues to improve but price advances have not been radical. Many speculators lost heavily in the record declines of the last few months and they are dealing carefully. Trade journals on the other side of the line are not optimistic as to future conditions. A big crop will be harvested this year in both hemispheres and these journals continually point out the danger to the wheat market should Russian supplies be suddenly released. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.38; No. 3, $1.35; Ontario wheat $1.12 to $1.14.

COARSE GRAINS

Oats and corn have both advanced strongly in the week, the cause, buying for export. The following quotations rule: Oats, C.W., No. 2, 63¾c; No. 3, 62c; Extra No. 1 feed, 62c; Ontario oats, 55c to 57c; corn, American, 81c; Canadian, 79c; peas, $1.50 to $1.60; barley, malting, 70c to 75c; feed, 65c; buckwheat, 74c; rye, $1.05 to $1.10. On the Montreal market quotations rule as follows: Oats, C.W., No. 3, 61½c; extra No. 1 feed, 61½c; local white, 59c to 61c; corn, American, 80c to 81c; barley, 73c; buckwheat, 79c to 80c.

MILL FEEDS

Both bran and shorts are scarce, and it is believed that buyers are collecting supplies for European account. Quotations: Bran, $25; shorts, $28; middlings, $29; feed flour, bag, $1.85; corn meal, 90 lb. sacks, $3.20; cotton seed meal, $35 to $36. The Montreal market quotes bran $26; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $35 to $40.

HAY AND STRAW

Even with the new crop already being cut and prospects for a good crop, the markets continue strong. We quote as follows: Baled Hay, No. 1, $16.50 to $18; No. 2, $14.50 to $16; baled straw, $7 to $8. At Montreal the market is apparently strong with No. 1 hay $21.50 to $22; No. 2, $20 to $21.50; No. 3, $19 to $19.50, and clover, $18.50 to $19.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Receipts of eggs continue to decline. Complaints are common as to inferior quality. This however is the same old complaint but buyers are making a greater effort than in past years to pay according to quality. The price in the country runs about 19c. On this market eggs in cartons are quoted 24c to 25c, selects, 23c to 24c; No. 1, 21c to 22c; and No. 2, 18c to 19c. On the Montreal market straight gathered stock sells at 21c, selected at 24c to 25c.

Poultry quotations follow: Old fowl, live, 11c to 12c; dressed, 14c to 16c; spring broilers, dressed, 17c to 22c; old turkeys, live, 16c to 20c; turkeys, dressed, 23c to 25c; ducks, dressed, 17 to 18.

HIDES AND WOOL

Hide quotations mount steadily upwards. Quotations: Hides, flat, cured, 17c to 19c; part cured, 16 to 17c; calf skins, cured, 16c to 18c; part cured, 15c to 17c; deacons, 75c to $1.10 each; horse hides, No. 1, $3.75 to $4.25; No. 2, $2.25 to $3 each; sheep skins, 75c to $2; lambs, 30c to 60c; horse hair, 25c to 45c.

Wool, too, is on the up grade: Washed combing fleece (coarse), 25c to 28c; washed medium, 28c to 30c; tub-washed, coarse, 26c to 30c; fine, 25c to 28c; washed fleece, fine, 30c to 31c; washed rejects, 22c to 25c; unwashed combing fleece (coarse), 27c to 29c; unwashed medium, 29c to 30c; unwashed fine fleece, 29c to 30c.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Cherries, 11 qt. bkt., sweet, 75c to $1.40; sour, 45c to 80c; strawberries, box, 75c to warm, 55c; new, bbl., $2.75.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The butter market is stronger than for some time, firmness being attributed to the desire of cold storage men to get additional supplies of June creamery. Creamery butter sells around 28½c and pasteurized butter has sold up to 29½c. The trade is limited largely to local requirements; the quality is not good enough to enter to the Old Country market, and Alberta and Saskatchewan are supplying the coast demand at 26c to 26½c f.o.b. Exports from Montreal are largely United States butter. On this market, creamery prints command 28c to 29c; solids, 28c; dairy butter, 23c to 25c.

The cheese market is unsettled. Finest Western is quoted at Montreal at 16½c to 16½c. There is a tendency, however, on the part of Old Country dealers to follow advances on this side of the [illegible]

DAIRY BOARDS

Iroquois, July 2.—670 cheese were boarded. All sold on curb at 15½c. Four buyers were present.

Picton, July 2.—1,890 cheese, all colored, 1,320 sold at 15½c; 435 at 15 7-16c, and the balance at 15½c.

Listowel, July 2.—3,149 white cheese were boarded. The best bid on the board was 15½c, and this was the prevailing price on the street.

Perth, July 2.—860 boxes white and 150 boxes colored cheese boarded here to-day. All sold at 16c.

Belleville, July 4.—2,335 cheese offered; 465 sales made at 15½c; balance at 15 5-16c.

St. Hyacinthe, Que., July 4.—Two lots of butter sold at 28c. Cheese at 14½c.

Cowansville, Que., July 4.—825 packages butter and 99 boxes cheese. All the butter except one factory sold at 28½c. For cheese 15c was offered; not sold.

LIVE STOCK

The brisk trading which has characterised the live stock markets for the past two or three weeks was further accentuated this week by the heavy buyings of Morris & Co., of Chicago, for the French government. Local commissioners also purchased for the same purpose. As a result of this demand prices firmed up 15c or more a cwt. all the way around, in spite of increased receipts of 1,500 head over last week, and 2,000 in excess of the corresponding week a year ago. Canners and cutters too were in exceptionally good demand.

Heavy choice steers, $8.50 to $9; handy choice steers, $8.35 to $8.65; butcher steers, good, $8 to $8.25; common to medium, $7 to $7.85; heifers, $7 to $8.25; cows, choice, $6.75 to $7.25; common to good, $4.75 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $5.25 to $7.50; feeders, $6.75 to $7.75; stockers, $5.50 to $7; canners and cutters, $4 to $5.50.

Choice milch cows are in good demand at $75 to $90; medium to good, $55 to $75; common, $45 to $55; springers, $50 to $80. Calves range from $4.50 to $10; bob calves, $2 to $5 each.

Mutton declined towards the end of the week. Present quotations are: Lambs, yearlings, light, $6.50 to $7.75; spring lambs, cwt., $9.50 to $11; light ewes, $5 to $6.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $4 to $5.50; culls, $3 to $4.25.

German Submarines Practically Are Submerged Light Cruisers

LONDON, July 7.—While the "man in the street" regards with but passing interest the fact that during the last few weeks German submarines have been using guns more frequently than bombs and torpedoes in their attacks upon merchant ships, in naval circles it has been a matter of more than casual interest, as it has conveyed important information to those with some knowledge of the subject.

Discussing Germany's new submarines and their methods, a leading authority on naval matters, said: 'When war broke out Germany, like the other sea Powers, had a certain number of submarines that carried guns. These, however, were small weapons. The calibre of the piece and the way in which it was mounted made it ineffective for such purposes as sinking a ship. Really, these submarine weapons, whether placed outside the boat or on a rising carriage, were little more than experiments. The recent activities of Admiral von Tirpitz's undersea pirates show that this experiment has been carried a big step forward by them. Germany is now using much larger submarines, and these are armed with a 4-inch quick firing gun, which bears about the same relation to the earlier submarine weapons that the 17-inch howitzer does to the ordinary field pieces.

"In addition to introducing this big gun into their submarines, the Germans have mounted it in a very ingenious manner. Gun, platform, etc. are carried snugly inside the boat while she is cruising, and the method of bringing it into action is very quick and efficient. Two men take their seats on the elevator platform beside the gun. A pull on a lever, and the platform shoots up, carrying the gun with it. As it rises from the boat the gun lifts off a hatchway, which automatically forms a protective shield for the gun and the men who work it. One of these men trains the weapon around to whatever direction is required, while the other elevates or depresses, and also fires it. Another pull of the lever and down drops the gun again, the hatchway closes automatically above it, and the submarine is ready to dive.

For attacking merchant vessels this 4-inch gun comes much cheaper than torpedoes would and in some ways it is more effective. A torpedo costs thousands of dollars, and it may miss its mark. Scores of German torpedoes have done so. But a round for a 4-inch gun costs little, and if the first shot fails a second can be sent quickly after it. Besides this, the gun has a long range. It fires a thirty-one-pound projectile with sufficient velocity to penetrate ten inches of iron at close range, which means that the shell will carry a long way, and it is more difficult for a ship to escape from a submarine thus armed than from one using torpedoes only, particularly so as the Germans have adopted for use in their submarines a torpedo that has short range, but carries an unusually powerful charge of explosives. Armed with this 4-inch gun, the U boat practically becomes a submerged light cruiser."

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED

SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

This cure will interest a great many people who are suffering as Mr. Maxwell was with kidney and urinary troubles. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S AND MISSES' COLLARS.

By Anabel Worthington.

No dress of to-day is complete without some sort of fancy collar as a finish at the neck. In some cases these have cuffs to correspond and in others they have not. This depends upon the costume, for when worn with a coat the cuff seems essential, but when used as a finish for a more dressy frock or for a waist the cuff is not at all necessary.

In the models shown we have considerable variety. No. 1 is perhaps the favorite for the waist, which follows the base of the throat, but in this hot weather there are fewer of these seen than of the looser types. No. 2 is one of the great favorites, coming down just low enough in front, with ends sloped away in points, while the back is deep and rounding. This is a style which is as good for soft and limp materials as it is for linen or other more substantial fabrics.

No. 3 is a novelty and is known variously as the Quaker collar and the Marie Odile, after the heroine of one of the strongest plays of the winter season. It is wide and has a suggestion of a man's gulmpe. It is a collar which is very handsome in linen and very dainty in transparent lawn. It is accompanied in the pattern by cuffs of corresponding shape.

No. 4 is for necks which have a long, narrow opening. The back stands up close to the throat and then turns over.

The collar pattern, No. 7,245, is cut in one size only. To make them requires:—No. 1, ⅓ yard 20 or more inches wide and 1½ yards of edging. No. 2, ⅓ yard of 36 inch material. No. 3, ¾ yard of 36 inch material. No. 4, ½ yard of 20 or more inches in width.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

KRUPP'S IN WAR AN INFERNO ON EARTH, DEVOURING MEN ALIVE

LONDON, July 5.—It would be difficult to imagine a more vivid and throbbing picture than that presented to the mind of a stranger at Krupp's, the greatest arms and ammunition factory in the world. A travelltr portrays to a correspondent at the headquarters of the French army the feverish scenes at Essen, and conveys the impression that he has met one of the German military technicians who are—some of them—consulting chemical advisers to the spirit alone carries them through to the end of their task.

Some of the men no longer are able to retain any food. They are shadows. They work on all the same, not realizing their condition. "After the war we will take a rest," they say, allured by the system of bonuses. To these no coffee is served hot, but milk several times a day, as an antidote to the poison they have absorbed.

Medical specialists patch up the men examined by means of special hypodermic injections. Chemistry kills them and chemistry keeps them alive. The machinery of the organism of these men is nothing but threads. The tissues, according to medical testimony, are being eaten slowly by poison.

But philosophical speculation is no part of Krupp's business. It is a splendid year—the record year of the national industry of war. Each will have his share, from the humblest stockers, puddlers and hammerers, to the officer-engineers, and staff generals, up to the Kaiser himself, who will receive his dividends on the 200 odd millions (of marks) entrusted by him to the Krupps. At Essen the question of victory is of minor moment. Munitions are being expended and the bill is growing. Even in defeat the Empire will pay. And to-morrow it will refill the arsenals which were crammed by forty-four years of frantic labour and emptied in seven months.

The guns are tested on the ground for target practice. There is a perpetual tumult of artillery rolling along the sooty, fir-clad slopes of the Fichtengebirge, where on holidays the Cyclops rest their scorched, listless eyes on the Dantesque panorama of the town. In the midst of this inferno the Grand Palace, the Essener-Hof, where the Austrian, Bulgarian and Turkish officers are entertained as the guests of the firm, is a blaze of light. These representatives of their respective governments have the right to watch over the execution of their orders. All the luxuries of modern life are theirs.

A pleasant existence, plaintive Tzigane music, champagne, choice flowers and fruits, costing Bertha Krupp's consort and the firm $100,000 a year on merry-making. What a percentage on all this suffering and crime! This year the firm can afford more, for the downpour of steel is producing milliards daily.

Ever since last August, he says, it has been an intense, fantastic life of unceasing toil day and night. A molten mass of carbide flows in an endless stream from the puddling furnace to the crucible, and thence to the stamp hammers which are mounted on three platforms, one of bronze, one of armoured beton and one of massive oak—the heart of oak still used by the Hohenzollerns for their coffins. In the midst of these streams of lava the workmen are testing the texture of the alloy which is to yield steel, faultless, close grained and clean as the flesh of a child. Naked Cyclops they are, ill-protected by their leathern bucklers, their baked skin as brittle as glass thread.

See them at the coffee hour. They fling themselves upon the men who bring the hugs jars of hot liquid and dispose of their portion at one draught. This coffee, which would scald the throat of any ordinary human being, cools the fever of these men. Reinforced by the regulation allowance of sugar, it readjusts and restores the nerves.

To construct the sixteen-inch gun a special plant is necessary. The formidable equipment of the works is but a thin shell for the hatching of such monsters. Fifty ton masses of steel are surrounded by a brazier which keeps them simmering. Then elephantic cranes catch up the blocks and roll along with them on rails through the city of fire to the hammers. One can imagine these instruments in operation. The reverberations are such that it seems as if all Essen is being bombarded by howitzers.

Inferno on Earth.

Essen long has been accustomed to the noise of munitions in the making. It well remembers the manufacture of the famous 14.5 guns for Wilhelmshaven and the effect of the periods of trial. But the cannon of this war have been more colossal still, and the wonder is that human nerves, even of the giants who are building them, can endure the thunder.

At the rolling shops of Solingen the masses of steel are retailed by the pound. There sabres and bayonets are tempered. But it is not the men employed in casting operations that are the most to be pitied. It is the pyrotechny factory which is the real inferno on earth. The army of chemists, artisans, makers of shells and of incendiary powder are devoured almost by the atmosphere of the workshops, in which the acids vaporize a more subtle fire, the artificial fire of men. The air of the munition factories is, as it were, a cancer that fastens on to each individual, eating him minute by minute, organ by organ and only relaxing its grip when he is dead. Truly a place where all hope must be abandoned! There the men no longer seem made of flesh and blood and muscle. They remain nerves and intelligence—the deadly reactions fight for their possession and their

Dominion Day Celebration at Hastings

Special to The Examiner:

HASTINGS, July 6.—A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday last at the R. C. Church, Norwood, the participants in the important event being Miss Olivia O'Shea of Norwood and Mr. T. Coughlin, druggist and stationer, Hastings. The ceremony being performed, the guests wended their way to the home of the bride and were entertained at a very dainty dejeuner. After a short season of social intercourse with friends the happy couple were driven to the C. P. R. station where they boarded the train for points west, where they will spend their honeymoon and, returning, will take up residence in Hastings, where the groom has a very lucrative position. The young couple are held in very high esteem, as testified by the many and beautiful wedding gifts presented to the young bride. Mr. and Mrs. Coughlan are assured of a hearty welcome back to Hastings, and their many friends extend heartfelt congratulations.

The Dominion Day celebration passed off very creditably to the committees in charge. The water sports, consisting of boat races, swimming, etc., were watched with interest by a crowd of spectators lined up on the shore, and called for numbers outbursts of applause. After dinner, every eye was anxiously awaiting the Calithumpian procession which appeared on the scene in due season, and caused considerable amusement, after which the lacrosse match between Norwood and Hastings was called, resulting in a score of 7—6, in favour of the locals. Other sports were indulged in until the day wore on and the people turned homeward.

Rev. and Mrs. Snell, formerly of Blackstock, arrived in town on Wednesday to take charge of the Hastings Circuit.

Mr. Frank Hill of Washago has been renewing acquaintances in town.

Thursday was observed as Tag Day by the members of the I.O.D.E. and the proceeds neared the $100 mark, to be applied to the Patriotic Fund.

The friends of the Elgin Sunday School met on Friday on the school grounds to spend a day with the children. Abundance of good things were provided for the inner man and dinner and tea were served on the grounds. A silver collection was taken and the funds of the school considerably enlarged. The children were treated to auto rides and otherwise amused. A very pleasant day was spent.

The hoir of the Methodist Church held their annual outing on Tuesday last, and, as usual, thoroughly enjoyed it.

The vacancy in the Union Bank, caused by the removal of Mr. Keith Waters, has been supplied by Mr. H. Ennis of Norwood.

Mr. Frank Hill, formerly of Hastings, but now of Washago, has been holidaying with friends here.

Quite a party, under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church of Norwood, were taken Monday, per steamer Rainbow, for a trip to Gore's Landing. During the day the wind rose very high and the lake became rough. Some of the passengers were somewhat timid, but all reached home safely.

Mr. Tom Hill of Peterborough spent Dominion Day with his parents here.

Berlin Shows Big Population Decrease

The Berliner Tageblatt prints some interesting figures showing a marked decrease in the population of Berlin. On April 1, this year, the population of Berlin proper was 1,858,719, against 2,061,733 at the beginning of the same month in 1914. During the month of April, this year, there was a further decrease of 14,574 persons. Of these 13,131 were males and 1,443 females. Of course, says the Tageblatt, this decrease can really be attributed to the fact that so many of Berlin's citizens are at the front.

There also has been considerable decrease in traffic. Figures just prepared show that in April, this year, the street railways carried 47,642,723 passengers, which is five millions and a half less than in April, 1914. The elevated and underground roads carried 6,234,750 passengers, being a decrease of 1,600,000 compared with the same period in the previous year. Taxicabs and other vehicles carried 1,663,986 persons, being a decrease of nearly five millions.

FIERCE FIGHTING ON WESTERN FRONT

RUSSIANS HAVE BROUGHT FOE TO A HALT

GERMANS AND FRENCH LOCKED IN FIERCE INFANTRY BATTLE

French Battalion Slaughtered Defenders of German Trench and Captured Earth-Works, Not a Single Teuton Escaping---Both Sides Bringing Up Reinforcements in the St. Mihiel District.

SOISSON IS BOMBARDED ONCE MORE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 8.—In a bloody bayonet struggle north of Souchez Railway Station, a French battalion slaughtered the defenders of a German trench and occupied the earthworks, permitting an approach to the village itself. The despatches from the front this afternoon reported that not a single Teuton soldier escaped alive.

The village lies to the north of the Gothenne-Lens road, the Germans and French are locked in a fierce infantry struggle. The battling began early yesterday, following a heavy bombardment from batteries on both sides, and continued throughout the night.

Both sides are bringing up reinforcements around the German wedge at St. Mihiel. The enemy is making desperate attempts to reach the French positions at the tip of the Salient. The official communique this afternoon reported "lively fighting in the entire region between the Meuse and Moselle." Soissons was heavily bombarded by the Germans during the night, but no serious military damage was done.

BERLIN, July 8.—Official despatches to-day admitted that Russian reinforcements have caused a redistribution of the Austro-German forces between the Bug and the Vistula, and have temporarily halted the German advance toward Ludin. General Mackensen reported, however, that some of the enemy positions west of the Upper Vistula were stormed.

GENEVA, July 8.—By a daring midnight attack, Italian Alpinists have captured Mentemontiello, driving the enemy down the northern slopes. The Alpine troops roped themselves together in long chains and made their way up a path by clinging to the rocky projections. The Austrians were attacked in the rear and taken by surprise.

RUSSIAN FLEET ACTIVE.

SEBASTOPOL, July 8.—The Russian Black Sea Fleet sank five Turkish sailing vessels and four galleys carrying coal to Constantinople, and heavily bombarded a hostile submarine off Bosphorus, it was officially announced here to-day. The coal vessels were sent to the bottom off the coaling port of Zunguldak. "Our destroyers directed a heavy and accurate fire against an enemy submarine, which fired a torpedo fruitlessly," said the official statement. "The submarine dived and its fate is unknown."

ITALIANS ADVANCING.

ROME, July 8.—"Our advance around Goritz and over Car Sic Plateau is proceeding satisfactorily," General Cadorna reported to-day. "Since July 4 we have taken 1,400 prisoners."

TURKISH LOSSES HEAVY.

ATHENS, July 8.—The Turkish casualties in the last three days' fighting at the Dardanelles totalled more than 20,000, according to Tenedos despatches to-day.

SACRIFICE OF FALABA'S VICTIMS WAS DELIBERATE

Lord Mersey's Findings State That Submarine Commander Planned to Take the Lives of Passengers and Crew

LINER WAS UNARMED

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 8.—The Elder liner Falaba, torpedoed March 28, with the loss of 111 lives, was unarmed and carried no greater cargo of war munitions than on ordinary trips in peace times, Lord Mersey reported to-day in his official findings. Included in the general cargo were thirteen tons of cartridges and gun powder.

"The scope of the inquiry did not authorize the determination of enemy rights," said the official finding, "but we hold that the submarine did not give women and children aboard the Falaba a reasonable opportunity to escape. We conclude that the submarine's commander not only to sink the Falaba, but to sacrifice the lives of passengers and crew. The evidence indicated the submarine's crew laughed and jeered while their victims were struggling in the water."

May Intern The Suspect

Eugene Nieder Will Likely Be Sent to a Detention Camp After Passing Through Magistrate Langley's Court

Magistrate Langley stated to-day that it was likely that Eugene Nieder, a German spy suspect, would be interned. Nieder was arrested by Chief Webster of Lakefield, a week ago, and appeared before Magistrate Langley. He was remanded until July 13th, but the authorities have taken the matter up, and will intern the stranger who has apparently served in the German Army.

BOYS GUILTY OF HOUSEBREAKING

Three youthful prisoners admitted being guilty to a charge of housebreaking, when they appeared in Juvenile Court this morning. The Press table held the exhibits — one dozen soda bottles, three soda syphons—all empty. The lads had entered a store and stolen the bottle and drank the contents, or most of it.

Since the time they were arrested they have been at the Children's Shelter, and one at least has proved a troublesome ward. They range in ages 8, 10, and 13 years, respectively. The 10-year-old lad seemed to be the ringleader, and in fact has quite a record in the Toronto Police Court. He ran away from his home in Toronto and came to Peterborough. He has been staying with his grandmother here, and has caused her quite a lot of annoyance. While at the Shelter he made his escape three times. He even went so far as to pull nails out of a window which Mr. Henry had placed there to keep it closed so that he could not get out.

The youngster quite brazenly informed the Magistrate when asked about his Toronto record, that he had been in Police Court there seven times for theft. He said he ran away from his home.

The boys were remanded to the Children's Shelter for a week while the authorities will decide what to do with them. It is likely the Toronto lad will be returned to his home.

SEVENTEEN KILLED WHEN TROLLEY-CAR JUMPED THE RAILS

Terrible Accident Near Queenston Heights Bringing Death and Injury to Sunday School Excursionists—Motorman Lost Control of His Car on the Greasy Rails

TORONTO, July 8th—Running wild at close to 50 miles an hour, an International Railway car filled with Toronto picnickers jumped the rails on the curve just above Queenston last evening, and as a result at least 17 people are dead and 90 suffering from injuries. Three dead and 52 injured reached Toronto at 11 o'clock last night and the rest are being cared for at Niagara Falls.

The accident happened about seven o'clock. The car, one of a number carrying members of St. John's Presbyterian and Woodgreen Methodist church Sunday schools, had been making good time from the Heights. Some time before reaching the village the wheels began to slip on the rain-swept rails and the motorman apparently lost control. Coming down the slope the car began to gather speed, slowly at first and then with increasing impetus. At first the picnicers, especially the children, enjoyed the sensation, and even a moment or two before the car took its terrifying leap few of those on board had any idea that something was wrong. At what is known as the second curve, where the line takes a sharp turn to the north and a downward dip occurs in the grade, the car, without warning, left the rails, turning right over and crashing with tremendous force into a tree and guy pole on the side of the small ravine parelleling the track.

A Veritable Horror.

According to those who survived the smash-up the scene that followed was a veritable horror. Ten people were killed out right, three were so badly injured that they did not survive the long trip to the hospitals at Niagara Falls and Toronto, while a score more were seriously hurt. The worst of the impact came to the people in the rear-end of the car, which was swung around into the pole and tree. The crash practically broke the car in half, the tree, which was smashed, ripping its way through into the car, crushing a score of people. The people in the other end of the car were not so seriously hurt, but hardly a person on board escaped without injury of some sort.

The fact that so large a proportion of the passengers were women and children added to the horror. For a few minutes the shrieks of the injured children unnerved those who went at once to the rescue. The few uninjured or only slightly hurt climbed out up through the side of the overturned car and began to help the injured out. The car door was then broken out and the jumbled pile of dead and injured were quickly removed. One or two who were thrown out when the car turned were caught under the car and crushed.

Help arrived from Queenston Village almost at once, and doctors, ambulances and cars were sent to the spot from Niagara Falls. The most seriously injured who could stand the journey to Niagara Falls were given first aid treatment and sent on to the Falls, where the whole medical force of the city and assistants from across the line volunteered for service.

The rest, 53 in number, were placed upon improvised stretchers and carried down to the dock. About half of this number were unable to walk, the rest being able to get along with assistance. Word of the accident was sent to Toronto by the Canada Steamship Line officials at Queenston and arrangements were at once made there to have the injured taken to the General Hospital, two score of ambulances and motor cars being enlisted.

After the Chippewa with its load of suffering humanity left the dock several of the injured were found to be dying. Before the steamer got to the Niagara camp one of the injured, C. L. Watt, 43 Sanford Avenue, was found to be in such bad shape that it was necessary to put him off the boat at once for emergency treatment. It was not believed that he had much chance of recovery. The steamer lost a precious half-hour in stopping, but the engineers were ordered to send the ship along to the limit of her speed, and despite the rough weather and heavy winds, fast time was made back to the boat was well under way again three of the injured, all elderly ladies, Mrs. Westney of Bain Avenue; Mrs. Hart, of Broadview Avenue, a sister of Governor Chambers of the Toronto Jail, and Mrs. Sloan, of Fairview Boulevard, succumbed.

All three were accompanied by relatives, but word of their deaths was at once sent to Toronto by wireless, and the steamship officials performed a similar service for all the injured who wanted word sent to relatives.

As the steamer pulled into the dock at Yonge street a crowd of several hundred people waited silently. Many of them were relatives and friends who had received word, and here and there stood a woman weeping. Probably the greater part of the crowd was made up of parents who had come down to the dock to meet their children who had spent the day picnicing. They came down to the wharf unaware that anything untoward had happened, but the sight of the waiting ambulances and the whispered word that was soon passed around by the few who knew what had occurred spread fear and anxiety through the waiting throng.

Inquest to be Held.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 8. — Dr. Green of St. Catharines, the coroner who is in charge of the wreck inquiry, has called an inquest to be held at the schoolhouse at Queenston, and will make strict inquiry into the charge that the car was overcrowded and that the equipment was not sufficient to hold the heavily-loaded car upon a steep grade or curve." "Every phase will be inquired into and blame centred where it properly belongs," said Coroner Green.

Additional Dead.

TORONTO, July 8.—Following are additional dead, identified this morning among the victims of the Queenston trolley disaster: Rena Wiggins aged 15, Margaret Tomlin, 18, and Rosie Chanter, 14, all of Toronto.

Worse Than the Battle.

TORONTO, July 8.—The British loss in the Battle of Queenston Heights was only 11 killed and 69 wounded. The loss in last night's trolley accident at the Heights was larger, 16 killed and 97 wounded.

The American loss at the Battle of Queenston Heights was 20 killed and 100 wounded.

THE AUSTRO-GERMAN DRIVE IS HALTED

Within a Few Weeks Russians Expect to Take Offensive on All Fronts—Fresh Supplies of Ammunition Reach Grand Duke's Army.

ALL ATTACKS REPULSED

Special Cable:

PETROGRAD, July 8.—Fresh supplies of ammunition for the Grand Duke's armies have halted the Austro-German drive on Warsaw, and Von Linsingen's eastward sweep through Galicia. Within a few weeks officials declared to-day the Slav armies will be prepared to resume the offensive on all fronts. The official statement issued early to-day stated the fact that Russian shell fire halted Mackensen's advance between the Bug and the Vistula, in several sectors along the front. The Slavs took the offensive, capturing two thousand prisoners in the fighting around Krasnik. Every attack by the Austro-Germans in Galicia in the past 24 hours has been repulsed.

"MINNEHAHA" IS ON FIRE AND IS MAKING FOR LAND

Blaze on Big Transport Carrying Ammunition and Supplies for the British Army—Sailed From New York on Sunday

FIRE A SMALL ONE

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The Atlantic transport line issued a statement today that a wireless message had been received from the Captain of the "Minnehaha," saying that his ship was afire and making for Halifax. The blaze was a small one and was confined to hold No. 3. The vessel was 570 miles off Halifax. The Minnehaha cleared from New York for Liverpool, Sunday, and is said to have carried a large cargo of ammunition and supplies for the British Army. The Minnehaha is one of the largest vessels of the Atlantic Transport line. She is a steel twin-screw steamer, displacing 13,714 tons and 600 feet in length, with a 65 foot-beam.

Caused by Explosion.

New York, July 8.—The fire that attacked the big liner "Minnehaha," carrying ammunition to England, was caused by an explosion, Captain Claret wirelassed to the Atlantic Transport Company's offices here, this afternoon. The blaze is now under control, the Minnehaha's Commander's message says. This message lent colour to the possibility that "the dynamite trunk" of Frank Holt, Morgan's assailant, found its way aboard the ammunition cruiser, before she cleared from New York for Liverpool Sunday afternoon.

No Official Word Yet of Pte. Shearman

Has Not Been Heard of Since the Langemarck Battle

The relatives of Mr. H. L. Shearman, who went to the front with the First Contingent, as a member of the 48th Highlanders, have been making every effort to get information regarding him since the Langemarck fight in which the Canadians performed so nobly, but so far no official report has been received from Ottawa. Letters sent him have, however, been returned endorsed "Dead," and hope for his safety has been given up. Mr J. L. Wood, uncle of the young man, has had a number of his letters returned so marked by officers of the company in which Shearman was placed.

Mr. Shearman was a resident of Peterborough for several years, and was a fine type of young man, loyal, big-hearted, and whole-souled, in anything he undertook, and the friends he made here will regret his death. Another son of Mrs. Shearman, who resides in Ottawa, has been reported a prisoner in Germany.

TROLLEY WAS OVERCROWDED

Was Only Built to Seat 80 but Twice That Number Were on Board

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, July 8. — The sixteen killed and 120 more or less injured, besides the twenty-five or thirty who escaped unhurt, were crowded on a trolley car built to seat eighty, which ran away from the historic Queenston Heights last evening, jumped the tracks and plunged the whole of the jolly Sabbath school excursionists into an indescribable chaos of death and confusion. This evidence of unheard-of overcrowding was the feature of the later news of the tragedy today. Provincial authorities are taking action to secure a complete investigation of the terrible affair to place the responsibility for it. It is admitted that Motorman Sidney Boyd stuck to his post like a hero and turned over with his car into what looked like certain death. He did his best and kept his head, but all his efforts were unavailable.

First Thursday Half Holiday

The first Thursday half-holiday this afternoon found practically all the stores closed, and most of the clerks tripped to the river, many selecting the outing to Rice Lake as a diversion. Many of the business men chose the roads to Chemong, Buckhorn and Stony Lake, and the main street would have been as deserted as a Sunday morning had it not been for the excursionists who arrived this morning.

PUPILS ARE SUCCESSFUL

The following five pupils of Miss Dean, of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, have been successful in their recent examination in the Toronto Conservatory of Music:

Elementary Theory—Jean Elliott and Dorothy Ferguson, with first-class honours.

Primary Piano—Thelma Darling, first-class honours.

PARENTS MUST AWAKEN TO SENSE OF DUTY

THE CALL TO DUTY.

To the Editor of The Globe,—For some weeks past I have been noticing with dismay the wretched response with which young men, not only of this city, but also of our great Dominion, have been answering the country's call for recruits. Some attribute the cause to the Militia Department at Ottawa, others to the young men themselves. Whatever or wherever the fault is, it is indeed a grievous one. The fate not only of ourselves, but even of those unborn generations lies in our hands. We should consider their welfare even a great deal more than our own.

In considering these facts I asked some young men with whom I am acquainted if they were thinking of going to the war; imagining they might hang their heads and bring forth some petty excuses. Imagine my astonishment when, with some few exceptions, I learned it was the parents of the young men who would not give their consent. Nearly all were willing, some even anxious to go, but invariably this one tie held them back from doing their duty.

I think, sir, it is asking a great deal of the young men to go without the consent of their parents, to whom the owe so much, while the youth of our country, including those of the ages of eighteen, nineteen and twenty, will not be accepted unless they have the written consent of their mothers.

"The Women of England Say Go," says a poster But, alas! many of the women of Canada are blind to the needs of their country. They may say "go" all right, but it is "go" to some other woman's son.

Nor do the fathers of the young men encourage their sons to enlist. I am firmly convinced, sir, that if the parents, and particularly the mothers of our young men, would say, "Go and do your duty for your God and King," there would be a wave of our youth to the recruiting offices which would fill our battalions to overflowing.

HORSES AND DRIVERS.

There are few things more humanly heart-harrowing than the sight of an abused horse, which helpless in cruel hands, is forced to submit to ill-treatment patiently—it is assumed—for he cannot voice his feelings. We have no organization in Peterborough for the protection of the interest of the horse. We see drivers abuse over-driven and overloaded horses, and there is nobody, except in rare instances of unusual depravity, to interfere. Yet the need of interference is constant. We need interposition in the case of the usual and common thoughtlessness of horses. Delivery vehicles are often turned over to boys; boys are thoughtless, and in addition to that, have not the judgment, to tell them when a horse is subjected to more exertion than he should be required to stand. Thoughtlessness and defective judgment are as bad in effect as overt cruelty. A woman, with all her tenderness of heart and other angelic adjuncts is, as a rule, one of the most cruel of horse drivers. She doesn't know what he can stand. She is apt to guage his capacity for work and exertion by the capacity of the men she has authority over, and can kick verbally when spurred too hard. Some horse drivers are thoughtless; others overtly cruel. The horse needs protection in both cases. He needs protection especially in hot weather. In another part of this issue is printed "Hot Weather Rules for Horse Comfort." Owners of horses should cut them out and make their drivers commit them to memory. The driver of a delivery waggon should qualify for a position by learning these rules by heart, and solemnly promising to obey them. Considerations of humanity, of profit, of the value of the animal intrusted to a driver, should suggest good treatment of horses as the best policy.

AT THE TAIL OF THE LINE.

In the olden days, when education was taken perhaps more practically and seriously, if less scientifically than now, there were spelling tests or contests, and change of places in a class as a result of superior efficiency or inferior success. Somebody "went up head" and somebody was left at the tail of the class. We have similar contests now going on among the provinces of the Dominion, a laudable strife to see which province shall take the lead in good works and — sometimes—in administrative crookedness. The province of Ontario is not likely to go up head in the matter of temperance reform; she, rather, stands a good chance, as the proverbial Hibernian would say, of leading the tail of the procession.

On July 1st the province of Saskatchewan celebrated, the inauguration of "the dry spell," and indulged in considerable horn-blowing over the abolition of the "horn." Saskatchewan has abolished the bar at least while the war lasts, and probably longer. If abolition of drink facilities helps us in waging war more successfully, it will be probably found out by experience that it will help us to more effectively practice peace, which needs as level heads, as unbefuddled intellects, as unwasted physical energies, and as unwasted financial resources, as waging war.

In the matter of temperance reform, Saskatchewan leads progressive Ontario, though Ontario was a great and thriving province with a population of a million and a half, with the whole country covered with prosperous farms, and studded thickly with churches and schools, the agencies and evidences of the highest civilization, when Saskatchewan had no population worthy of a record in the census returns; when the whole province was practically given over to the buffalo and coyote, and the only structures were the tepee of the aboriginal Indian. As late as 1901, the first census recognition, Saskatchewan had a population of 91,279, as against Ontario's population in that year of 2,182,947. In the intervening ten years, between 1901 and 1911, Saskatchewan has increased its population more than five fold, and has shown an advance over Ontario in the matter of moral sentiment, patriotic spirit, and sense of responsibility, as great as she has shown over Ontario in increase of population. Witness the step she has taken, to increase her efficiency in war cooperation, by promoting the physical fitness of her people and converting the money resources of the people from a source of weakness and degradation to a source of strength and patriotic increase of capacity for provincial, national and imperial service.

Saskatchewan has advanced to the head of the class while Ontario bulks largely at the tail. Has Ontario done more in proportion to Saskatchewan in helping on the war in any way, to an extent to justify the retention of a handicap represented by the open bar, with its inevitable weakening of manhood, waste of labour efficiency, and waste of money?

Without statistics to refer to, it is probable that Saskatchewan has furnished more recruits to the overseas army, in proportion to population, than Ontario has done; and yet she was not satisfied at that; she prepares for increasing her contributions in all ways, strengthening her capacity by eliminating one of the greatest sources of weakness in waging war successfully, by banishing drink during the currency of the war. In Britain it is found that drink has held back, the British campaign, delayed the success of British arms, more than all the Zeppelins, submarines, and foul gases, of the Huns; and rigid government measures are now being taken to control the drink traffic in the neighbourhood of important works engaged in the production of war material. If there, why not everywhere? Drink in Britain is not only lessening munitions output at certain centres, but it is working a far worse evil to the manhood, the homes, and the prosperity of all the citizens of all the United Kingdom. It is doing the same in Ontario; and our rulers and legislators are taking no thought, contemplating no action, to even provide for war-time restriction of the evils of the drink traffic, but is complacently regarding a minor province head the procession.

DEVELOPMENT, NOT DONATION.

"The man who has a ship to sell today can," says the Philadelphia Ledger, "get a bigger price for it than would have been offered a year ago. The London Times has followed the history of one ship of 3,000 tons, built in 1899, and reports the astounding increase in its market value. In May of last year it was sold for $72,500; in August a purchaser paid $90,000 for it; in November it changed hands for $100,000, and early in this year it was sold for $125,000. The moral is obvious. The war is destroying ships that are needed in commerce. The man who has ships to sell when the war is ended and trade resumes its normal courses will reap a handsome profit, unless the law of supply and demand is repealed and the ordinary course of prices is reversed."

If the tenders, for warships for a Canadian navy, left undealt with when the Laurier Government, had to abandon them at the time they were retired of office, had been acted upon, Canada might have had a splendid shipbuilding plant of her own in addition to a fleet of her own, such as Australia has. We had and have, great natural facilities for shipbuilding — iron, coal, wood and workmen, all of our own. If the government had only let the opportunity loose, had released our potentialities in the matter of shipbuilding, we might have had in operation to-day an industry, whose existence would be justified the business prosperity, the unprecedented demand for ships now and after the war assures, and will assure. Development, not donation of our resources is the true national policy.

"WORK"

We workers belong to a noble army of men and women that enlisted many ages ago, and have been and will be faithful, persevering, courageous as long as life and time last.

The most stirring scenes in Jeremiah's life were connected with the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem.

David's psalms would never have had their beauty and strength, if it had not been for the long, lonely hours of watching and peril, spent on the mountains and in the valleys with his flock.

In the case of the various branches of the closing textile trade an individual industry is apt to be lost sight of in awarding contracts. We have in Canada, upwards of two hundred factories capable of manufacturing khaki shirtings, and the many other articles of clothing in great demand by the Allied armies in the field yet at the present time the majority of these mills are on short time, some are closed down, while large contracts for such supplies are being placed in the United States. The demand for these supplies is very urgent. Even in Canada there is a shortage of many lines, but orders from the Allied Governments are not to be had, and only a small number have been placed since early in the year.

The Canadian mills are capable of manufacturing goods equal in quality and price to the best produced in the world. Their capacity is much more than sufficient for the supplies required for the Canadian overseas forces, and in face of the urgent demand for clothing supplies they should be operating to capacity night and day. There are ample supplies of ray material available, and as ordinary domestic business has fallen off forty to fifty per cent., the manufacturers are eager to cater to the needs of the Allied armies. In every way conditions are most favourable to the placing of army contracts in this field. The contracts placed in Canada by the Allied Governments for such supplies have, however, been very small, while large orders have been and are being placed in the United States.

On the other hand, the business to be obtained in furnishing supplies for the Canadian forces is considerable. Canada now has nearly one hundred and fifty thousand men in the field, and these men, whether in France, England or Canada have to be clothed by the Canadian Government. The supplies now on hand are far from sufficient for a winter campaign, but instead of having the mills get busy now on these contracts, the orders have been held up. These contracts have to be placed eventually, while every delay means that when they are finally given out they will have to be rushed, and efficiency will not be obtained. Such was the case last fall, and a repetition of what occurred then appears to be imminent. The action is unbusinesslike, and should be remedied immediately by those in authority. These contracts would have meant activity instead of idleness during the past months, and undoubtedly would have enabled the mills to go after other business with much more confidence. The mills have been forced to hold back in the matter of purchasing raw materials, and in the rising market of the past few months, and in many other ways the industry has suffered.

The Purchasing Commission has given poor satisfaction, and has frequently shown itself to be very indifferent judges of existing conditions. Events prove that the war will last for many months longer, and nothing should be spared to assure the Canadian troops of ample clothing and other necessities. What if we have a few thousands of dollars worth of khaki cloth on hand when the war is over? A paltry saving now will do a harm that can never be righted, and would bring about a repetition of last fall's fiasco in the purchasing of clothing supplies. Such a policy would undoubtedly create more bad odour in connection with a phase of Canadian national life than has already been widely advertised. It is to be hoped that wisdom will prevail with those who have to do with the handling of this business.—Journal of Commerce.

Germans Force Cardinal Mercier To Walk When Going to Brussels

NEW YORK, July 6.—Information received in New York tells of new indignities inflicted upon Cardinal Mercier, the aged Roman Catholic prelate of Belgium, who has been in the hadgraces of the German military authorities since he published his famous pastoral letter directing the Belgians not to recognize the Germans as the rulers of Belgium.

Cardinal Mercier, who has been recently in the city of Mechlin, Belgium, obtained the permission of the German military authorities to go to Brussels. But as no carriages are allowed to be driven around in Mechlin and the Germans refused to allow the Cardinal to hire one, the aged prelate was compelled to walk a large part of the way from Mechlin to Brussels. As Mechlin is completely isolated from the rest of the world, except Germany, it is said that the peoples of neutral countries have only had an inkling of the abuses which the Germans have inflicted upon the resident of that city.

Clever schemes on the part of the Germans to give reasons for the arrest of many Belgians who are objectionable to the Germans have also come to light. A favourite ruse is for a German soldier to ask a Belgian in what direction is Holland. If the Belgian gives the desired information he is forthwith arrested on charge of aiding a German soldier to desert. If he refuses to answer the question the Belgian is at once arrested for disobeying the order of a German soldier.

Excellent impersonations of Belgians are also used, it is said, to cause the arrest of persons whose conduct is disagreeable to the Germans. An instance of this is cited in the case of an aged priest in Calmpthout. He was approached by two men who spoke French fluently and was asked the direction toward Holland. On receiving the desired information they left after giving profound thanks. During the night, however, these same men, this time dressed as German officers, arrested the aged priest and sent him to prison in Germany for giving information tending to aid a German soldier to desert.

It is said that practically all of the mayors of the important cities in Belgium have been made prisoners by the Germans.

STORING THE WINTER CLOTHING

"Aunt Fanny," Peterboro Co., Ont.

STORING the winter clothes for summer is a task that we should not neglect. We often set the articles aside for the time being, promising ourselves that we will pack them at a more opportune moment. In the rush of other work, however, they are finally hurriedly placed in boxes or trunks, and when cool weather comes again, these boxes or trunks have to be turned topsy-turvy before we can locate the particular article for which we are searching. I like to set aside a half day for the putting away of winter clothing. A sunshiny day with a nice breeze is ideal, as I like to hang the garments in the sun for several hours before packing. I find it a good plan too to see that all articles are mended before putting away and marked so that one can tell at a glance, just to which member of the family each article belongs. Large articles, such as winter coats, I brush well and sew up in newspapers. Some people put them in cotton sacks and add a few moth balls, but I do not like the odor of the moth balls and prefer the newspapers, making it a point to see that they are tightly sealed.

Time and time again I have experienced the difficulty of not knowing what to do with some of the cold-weather clothing. Some garments have become shrunken, or else the children have outgrown them, although they are still perfectly good. Others cannot be used the following year, as they will be out of date. At times I have been tempted to pack such articles away, thinking that at some future date I would look them over and try to put them to some use. At other times I have been tempted to shut my eyes, blindfold my conscience and throw them in the fire where they will be out of the way entirely. Neither of these plans, however, display good common-sense. I have at last discovered a way out of the difficulty.

Every year as I go through the wardrobe I pick out what I consider of no further use in the home, pack it in a box and send off to some charity organization. We who live in the country waste a good deal of clothing because we do not realize the good use to which such cast-off garments might be put in the nearly city or town where there are so many people in [illegible] circumstances. I hope in future, some of my sisters who have heretofore been in a quandary as to how to dispose of discarded clothing, will try out my suggestion. I consider it a worthy cause.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

GREAT INTEREST IN SATURDAY'S BALL GAME

Saturday's game between East City and the Thistles is the big topic of conversation among City League fans, so much hinges on the result, and the last game between the two was so exciting that the fans are looking forward to the best game of the year. The teams will meet in the second game of the double-header, the Empires and Classics furnishing the opposition in the 2 o'clock session. The first game will be a worthy curtain-raiser to the battle between the two leading teams, and altogether the bill is one of the best the City League has offered the public. A big crowd of fans is expected.

CITY TENNIS LEAGUE WILL BE ORGANIZED

A meeting of the representatives of all the tennis clubs in the city is called for to-morrow night in the Y. M. C. A., when a city tennis league will be organized, to play for the F. D. Kerr Cup. Every local club is asked to have a representative. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock sharp.

BASEBALL

The Empires City League club will practice at Riverside Park to-night at 6.30. All players are asked to turn out in preparation for Saturday's game with the Classics.

Worth Knowing

BEETS, kohlrabi, and onions are often transplanted to advantage.

Cannas require a rich soil, plenty of water, and sun for their best development.

Keep the blossoms picked from spring-set strawberries if you want strong plants.

Go over the rose bushes often and see that no slugs or leaf miners are working on them.

Watch for potato beetles. Picking the old ones as they appear lessens the crop (of bugs) later in the season.

The aphis, or green bug, on sweet peas may be kept in check by spraying with nicoticide, or with soap and water.

See that pans of water are placed so that birds can get to them easily these hot days. They enjoy the water and you will enjoy the birds.

Double-cropping may be followed to advantage in a small garden. Beans, corn, cucumbers, tomatoes, and late celery follow the early crops very nicely.

Pull up the old strawberry bed as soon as it has fruited. Some late vegetable crop, such as late celery, cabbages, or turnips, may be planted on the land.

Keep buckthorn hedges clipped, if smooth, even hedges are desired. They should be gone over as soon as the shoots become five or six inches long.

Scissors supplied with a guard have been patented by an Indiana inventor to cut buttons from garments without cutting cloth.

Acreage Under Cultivation in France Shows a Big Decrease

PARIS, July 7.—According to an announcement given out in Paris by the Ministry of Agriculture, France has less corn, fodder beets, sugar beets and potatoes under cultivation to-day than she did a year ago, while the contrary is true of beets for the making of alcohol. In this case the acreage in grapes also is less, but here the difference is very slight, being about fifty thousand acres.

	1915.	1914.
Corn	768,289	1,140,942
Alcohol beets	50,886	14,538
Fodder beets	1,168,184	1,549,135
Grapes	4,043,929	4,094,857

The foregoing applies to the whole of France, no distinction being made between invaded and uninvaded territory.

Observing this difference the following figures are given:

Invaded Territory.

Potatoes	272,906	437,385
Sugar beets	143,993	512,006

Not Invaded.

	1915.	1914.
Potatoes	3,945,120	3,343,516
Sugar beets	64,271	86,565

GERMANY HAS STILL AT LEAST 3,000,000 MEN OF MILITARY AGE

LONDON, July 8.— Germany still has at least 3,000,000 men of effective military age — nineteen to thirty-eight years—who have not yet actually gone under arms, says Sir Leo Chiozza Money, member of Parliament, author and journalist, in a public appeal to the British Government to take up conscription.

All stories that Germany has used up her military men are absurd, he adds. The German Empire, he points out, had a population of 67,500,000 when the war began, as against a population of 46,000,000 in the United Kingdom.

Doubts 7,000,00 Joined the Colours.

He estimates that Germany had when war opened, 10,000,000 men between the ages of nineteen and thirty-eight, or 13,000,000 men between the ages of nineteen and forty-five. He doubts if as many as 7,000,000 Germans ever have been under arms in this conflict.

Germany, he declares, has 3,000,000 working males under nineteen, as well as many millions over forty-five, together with working women and girls of all ages, all of whom are helping carry on the empire's industrial life while the men are at the front.

"If we rid our minds," says Sir Leo, "of vague conceptions and look at the hard facts we can easily understand how it is that German organization can at once and the same time put enormous armies in the field on several fronts and yet have left a working population of both sexes easily able to pour out food and munitions of war, and, within fairly wide limits, create wealth also."

Fault of Volunteer System.

The practical harm of the present system of volunteer enlisting in England, according to Sir Leo, is that it is all haphazard, the result being that too few single men, too many married men over thirty-eight, and too many men skilled in making ships, ammunition or supplies, are being recruited to the front.

There are still in the British isles, he says, 3,500,000 men of active military age who are not utilized either as fighting men or as suppliers of fighting men.

"War," he goes on, "is a game in which age tells even more than in cricket, and on every possible ground it is unwise to send a man aged forty as a soldier to France while youth is not doing its share.

"Our indiscriminate recruiting of married men is creating grave social problems for the future and building up enormous liabilities for the State. It is bad to make pensioners; it is worse to make orphans.

Plenty of Unmarried Men.

"And how many unmarried men have we? Of men aged nineteen to thirty-eight, who number about 7,250,000, the unmarried number about 3,700,000. Yet, in a further appeal for a mere 500,000 men the War Office raises the age of enlistment to forty."

Sir Leo instances the case of a Birmingham firm making army supplies which we cleare of men by the recruiting sergeant at the very time the firm was being specially urged by the Government to do more work.

He shows letters from the front, from boiler makers, ship riveters, naval engineers, brass moulders and the like, who were recruited in England.

All this, he points out, in the face of the clamour that Britain is actually suffering from a shortage of shells and other ammunition.

"Keeping command of the seas," he says, "is a great service, but it cannot end this war, and a very long war would endanger our command of the seas.

"It is not the case that Continental powers put the whole of their population into the army, but it is true that Germany is in proportion to her population maintaining many more soldiers than we are, and also producing much more war material than we are."

ITALIAN KING NO PLEASURE-SEEKER

From Childhood King Victor Emmanuel Took a Stern View of His Responsibilities as Ruler

The action of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy in deciding to share his soldiers' hardships when his country plunged into the war was received with the wildest enthusiasm and the House of Savoy was never more popular than to-day. The King is a gallant horseman and this is a source of gratification to the Italians, for their cavalry is not surpassed anywhere in the world. In person King Victor Emmanuel is thoroughly Italian. His short, powerful figure, sweeping moustachios and cast of countenance are of a general type often observed throughout Italy. He is fairer, however, than most of his people, however, and blue-eyed.

"Certainly King Victor Emmanuel is the right man in the right place—the King Italy needs in this supreme moment," said the poet Gabriele d'Annunzio after an interview with the monarch. "It would be impossible to imagine a better informed man," he continued. "On hearing him speak one might almost receive the impression at one moment that he was in Paris conversing with a statesman thoroughly conversant with the subject from the French viewpoint; at others, in Berlin, talking with a Minister of the German Emperor, or in London, in Vienna or Petrograd. The Balkans and Eastern Mediterranean are so familiar to him that he might have lived there all his life. His lucidity of mind is astounding, and only surpassed by his unpretentious manner, which puts one completely at ease."

When the King was a child he suffered so badly from rickets that he could not walk upstairs and had to be carried. Rarely has a sicklier crown prince been seen. King Humbert placed him under a stern military tutor, Colonel Osio, who put the little prince through a most rigorous course. He slept always in a cold room and took a cold bath at daybreak. Then came a frugal breakfast. Lessons followed, with special emphasis on those he disliked most.

KING VICTOR EMMANUEL

Before the morning was over the prince was in the saddle. No matter how bad the weather, he rode daily. Often he returned to the palace soaked to the skin from a violent rainstorm. He disliked music, a predilection which he retains. When he was ten years old he remarked to his piano teacher, Signora Cerasoli: "Don't you think that twenty trumpets are more effective than that piano of yours?"

In his military studies he made rapid progress. He submitted to all Colonel Osio's harshness without a murmur. He often relates as one of the pleasantest memories of his life, his impressions when King Humbert first entrusted to him the command of a company of foot, at the annual review of the Roman garrison. "The excitement interfered so greatly with my power of sight," he once said, "that the only people I recognized in the cheering crowd were my dentist and my professor of mathematics."

Then a few years later he received the command of the army corps at Naples. Frivolous and light headed Neapolitan society looked forward to a worldly-minded prince and rejoiced; but it soon discovered its mistake. The Prince, scorning pleasure, devoted himself exclusively to his profession and left his barracks only to go straight back to the Capodimonte Palace, where he spent his spare time in perfecting himself in the study of military tactics. Then on July 29, 1900, his father was assassinated at Monza by the anarchist Bresci. The son stepped into the gap immediately. When the Prime Minister suggested that a proclamation should be addressed to the people and gave a copy to the King, Victor Emmanuel told the Minister that he had already written the proclamation himself.

The King and Queen lead a very simple and informal life for the most part. The King does not spend much on his table and the Italians often complain that his wines are an injustice to the country. What he saves on his cellar the King probably spends on charity for he is the leader in every good cause.

As an illustration of his actions in an emergency an incident of the Calabrian earthquake of 1906 may be cited. So freely did he expose himself that someone ventured to remonstrate with him.

"Why run these unnecessary risks?" urged the courtier.

"It is my trade," answered the King grimly.

Death and Sorrow Stalk Through Poland, The Land of Sorrow

Millions in the Russian Kingdom and Galicia are Wandering Homeless and Without Food in a Living Nightmare of War Horrors and Desolation.

WARSAW, July 9.—The devastation of property and the suffering of millions of human being in Poland is increased so stupendously from day to day that, with communication demoralized, it is becoming increasingly difficult to gather anything like a comprehensive summary of the havoc which the war is causing. It is evident from facts now at hand that of all the regions suffering from the conflict Poland not only is the worst sufferer at present, but that it will require more time than any other country to recover from the effects of the war.

The case of the Belgians, which aroused world-wide sympathy and unparalleled generosity for their assistance, is plainly not so bad as the case of the Poles, which as yet has not been so thoroughly understood by the outside world and which, by reason of this lack of information or other causes, has not attracted the interest that was aroused by the plight of Belgium. In comparison, however, the Belgians had an easy time in escaping the horrors of war by flight to England and France, but with the Poles it has been a case of facing a gun, no matter in which direction one might turn. In the case of Belgium the sweep of war was swift and final, while with Poland it has been, and still is, a matter of being swept in one direction and then the other. The area and population affected in Poland also is more than ten times that of Belgium, considering both Poland in Russia and Galicia. Austrian Poland, equally devastated by the war.

While at least three large committees are at work on the relief of the conditions in Poland, they have, unlike the Belgian committees, been handicapped by the fact that the war has been waged actively there ever since the European conflict began, and that it is even more fierce to-day.

In attempting a summary of the situation the Associated Press has had access to some of the reports made by the Central Citizens' Committee in Warsaw, the Committee for the Relief of the Kingdom of Poland, and the General Relief Committee for Poland in Geneva, Switzerland, as well as a mass of private correspondence, covering mainly the period between January 1 and April 15. It appears from these that out of eleven provinces or governments of the kingdom of Poland, only one, the province of Siedlce, has escaped invasion. The devastated territory of the kingdom amounts to more than forty thousand square miles, in which two hundred cities and towns and nine thousand villages have been partly or entirely destroyed. Five thousand villages have been razed to the ground.

Railroads Torn Up.

Railroad lines for a distance of one thousand miles have been torn up. Even the plain soil has been rendered unfit for agricultural purposes by innumerable trenches and big holes bored into it by the projectiles of heavy artillery. The agricultural production of this part of Poland, representing a value of $500,000,000 a year, has been stopped in its entirety for lack of funds, seeds, farmhands and cattle.

An agricultural population of seven million people are starving. They hide themselves in forests or under the ruins of what were their dwellings, having as food only roots, bark, rind and decaying carcasses of horses killed on the battlefields.

The fate of the cities and industrial regions is no better. Some of them suffered depopulation, some were flooded by a tremendous wave of refugees who had deserted the fighting zone. Eighty per cent. of this class of refugees are Jews.

The city of Kalisz, capital of the province of the same name, which before the war had a population of nearly 80,000, now numbers 10,000 inhabitants. Warsaw, the capital of the kingdom, twice as large as Brussels harbours at the present more than 900,000 refugees.

The city of Lodz (500,000 inhabitants), the centre of the great Polish textile industry, twice captured by the Russian and German armies, resembles a cemetery. Important industrial centres like Chenstohova, Sosnoviec and the coal basin of Dombrova have shared the same fate. The industrial output of the kingdom of Poland, valued at $100,000,000 a year, has been annihilated. Three millions of people earning their daily bread in factories and mines are starving. The coal mines, though not in the fighting zone, have been flooded by the Germans for strategical reasons, and all the costly machinery destroyed. The kingdom that used all of its monthly output of 30,000 carloads receives now less than 100 carloads of coal from the distant Don basin in Southern Russia. Meanwhile 50,000 miners in Dombrova and the adjoining mines have lost their work for "strategical reasons." All commerce of the kingdom with the Russian Empire practically has been stopped, as much on account of a lack of transportation facilities as because of the interrupted international relations. These commercial transactions between the kingdom and the empire amounted for the year preceding the war to 1,000,000,000 rubles or $500,000,000.

The same conditions prevail in the banking business. The transactions of the big corporations, of mutual credit associations and of savings banks have been limited to the paying out of deposits. The notes portefeuil of local banks, representing a nominal value of many hundred million rubles, bear no interest whatever, having, temporarily at least, the mere value of millions of "scraps of paper."

Hunger and Ruin Everywhere.

The total of material losses in movable and immovable properties is valued at $700,000,000.

On all sides there are hunger, disease and ruin. Out of a total of 1,500,000 horses in this part of Poland 800,000 have been requisitioned by both fighting armies. Not less than 2,000,000 cattle have been confiscated for the same purpose. Milk is scarce and the mortality among infant shows a terrific increase. Sanitary conditions are worse than deplorable. Insufficient nourishment, a fatal congestion of population in certain cities reputed to be safe from immediate war dangers (in some temporary asylums in Warsaw sixty persons sleep in rooms of forty by thirty feet) and a lack of medical help aggravate daily the evil conditions. In the country they are still worse, the proximity of shallow graves infesting the air and water of wells with poisonous germs. Especially in the provinces of Lublin and Suwalki the graves of fallen soldiers frequently have been dug in the immediate neighborhood of human dwellings.

The conditions in Galicia (Austrian Poland) may be still worse.

Embracing eighty-two counties, Galicia has an area of 30,000 square miles and a population of more than eight millions. All of her territory, excepting Cracow and its immediate vicinity, has suffered. The country extending from the Russian frontier, from Podvolocziska up west to Bochnia, for a distance of 450 miles, has been destroyed by fire and cannon. The wave came from the east, was repulsed and returned again. Many places were subjected to these invasions as many as seven times. A hundred cities and towns and 6,000 villages suffered cruelly; 2,500 villages virtually have disappeared from sight. Eight hundred thousand horses and 1,500,000 cattle have been taken away by the armies, as well as almost all provisions, like corn, potatoes and fodder.

The total agricultural production of Galicia valued at $200,000,000 yearly, and the industrial output, worth $100,000,00 a year, have been destroyed. The loss will be increased greatly if the reports that the withdrawing Russian army has set fire to the Carpathian oil wells prove true.

Cities like Tarnopol, Tarnow, Brody, Nisko, Stry, Kalusz, Sambor and Przmysl are but heaps of ruins. Gloomy looking smokestacks rising out of piles of bricks are the only witnesses of the fact that human beings once resided there.

Cracow, the ancient capital of the Polish kings (200,000 inhabitants) and an architectural jewel among the cities of mediaeval Europe, was not touched immediately by the war, but its inhabitants were ordered to leave and had to flee to Austrian Silesia, Vienna or Bohemia. More than a million Galicians actually are living as refugees in various parts of Austria-Hungary and are suffering there severely.

Where Brother Kills Brother.

In the counties of Permysl, Rzesnow and Jaroslav people are dying from hunger by the hundreds. The counties of Ciessanov and Dovromil in Eastern Galicia, and those of Lancut, Przeworsk, Nisko, Tarnobrzeg, Jaslo and Krosno, in Western Galicia, are devastated so thoroughly that they look as if they had been destroyed by some terrific earthquake No human dwellings, no roads, no cultivated fields. Among heaps of ruins dogs are running wild with hunger and flocks of crows and ravens in search of food are digging out with their beaks the shallow graves of Russian and Teutonic soldiers. Frequently these are the graves of Polish brothers that killed one another, having been forced into the two opposed armies by the invaders.

Out of a total area of Galicia only seven per cent. has been untouched by the war, twenty-three per cent. has been partly and seventy per cent totally ruined, transformed into a vast cemetery.

Conditions prevailing among professional men are particularly distressing. Men posessing college and university education and degrees, officials, teachers, writers, etc., have no means whatever to earn their daily bread. Expelled from administrative positions they held under one government and replaced by officers imported by the invader; removed from positions in closed scientific institutions or in trades that are now useless, these men simply are facing starvation. On the streets of Warsaw and Lemberg one meets well dressed and intelligent looking men who are selling newspapers, unloading coal or trucks, doing all kinds of menial or manual work to earn a few cents for a meal. It is obvious they must exert themselves to the utmost to perform tasks are beyond their normal physical strength.

A lawyer in Warsaw recently received a letter from his brother, a practising physician in Lodz. In normal times a letter from Lodz reaches Warsaw in six hours. But now, Lodz being occupied by the Germans, no correspondence is allowed to be sent to the "enemy's" country. Thus the letter in question was taken by the physician's friend, who was just starting for Copenhagen, and mailed from there to Warsaw. It reached the Polish capital in thirteen days. Here are a few excerpts from this correspondence:

"The economic conditions in Lodz daily are growing worse. The gentlemen from Mr. Rockefeller's committee arrived here via Berlin. They organized a few free stations to distribute food products, but the increased delivery was of little advantage to our population, who in their great majority, have no means to acquire food imported from Germany. Seventy-five per cent. of the inhabitants of Lodz eat potatoes only. I mean seventy-five per cent of those who can buy potatoes, for there are many who cannot afford even that.

Three Whole Towns Blown Up.

"Meat and bread are eaten only by very rich people. Few citizens are able to pay their rent. The Legal Citizens' Committee, who actually performs the duties of non-existing civil courts, reject all complaints of landlords claiming due rents. Sanitary conditions here are simply terrible. They were always bad, but they are much worse now."

In the mining region of Dombrova typhoid fever and hunger typhus are spreading rapidly. In the beginning the Germans tried to overcome the epidemic. But having in that region only two military surgeons they soon dropped every effort in that line, and left the unfortunate population to their fate. Recent news from the townships of Sosnoviec, Myszkov and Zawiercie says more than two hundred persons succumbed there to typhoid fever within two weeks.

The devastation of Poland is the worst between Lodz and Warsaw. Every house that for some reason or chance has been left intact by the Germans is being razed to the ground by the Russians "for strategical reasons."

An army officer enters a once prosperous village and informs its inhabitants that they will have thirty minutes time to evacuate their home. Panic stricken, every one seizes what he can. They flee, carrying infants in their arms and helping the old and invalid. Meanwhile the soldiers have already begun with the work of destruction. The houses are being set afire or blown up with dynamite. On the shore of the nearby rivers some hundred miserable beings look at the flames and weep. They do not feel the cold or the rain that soaks their ragged clothing. They see only the flames that devour their homes, they hear only the thunder of dynamite explosions that destroy what was dearest to them, to their fathers and grandfathers, the fruit of generations of labour — and they cry.

Two hundred villages surrounding the big cities of Warsaw and Lodz have thus been destroyed, because—a friendly army needed more space for shooting.

When his house is burned down the peasant returns to the ruins and hides among them. At night, when no sentinel can see him, he creeps to the weeping willows that stand mournfully on the shore of the nearby river and chews their bark or roots to stay the hunger that gnaws him. But they are shooting at night, too. And this is how it happens that, when the sun has risen, bodies of peasants are found lying on the vast Polish plain.

THAW'S WIFE REFUSES TO BE A WITNESS

PLATTSBURGH, July 8.—"I shall not testify," said Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw as she left for New York. "I shall take advantage of my constitutional rights. A wife need not testify against her husband, I do not consider that it is necessary for me to say more than I have."

Then Mrs. Thaw wrote the following statement as a reason for her decision to refuse to answer questions that either Mr. O'Brien or Mr. Stanchfield may put to her:

"No, I will not testify against Harry Thaw, and would not be in New York had I not been served with a perfectly good subpoena. One must obey the law, and I do not desire him sent to Matteawan, but repeat with emphasis that he is dangerous when drunk.

"To many unthinking people who imagine I still owe Thaw a debt, I would say I paid in full and with interest, when I voluntarily sacrificed more than my life for him."

"Whether Thaw is freed or not," said Mrs. Thaw, "that decision will not forever dispose of the problem that Harry Thaw and his case presents."

Mrs. Thaw said that she would confer with Mr. Cook, and Mr. Cook, it is said, will build much of his later examination on what she tells him.

Mrs. Thaw is coming to New York alone. Her son Russell is remaining at Lake Chateaugay with Jack Clifford.

On her way to Lyon Mountain where she took the train for New York, Mrs. Thaw was almost thrown out of the motor boat. A tremendous gale, the worst on the lake in twenty years, the motor boat Emma B. nearly capsized. She took the train drenched.

Mr. Thaw said many other things, which The American correspondent refrains from telegraphing, since Justice Hendricks has requested the newspapers to publish nothing that might prejudice the minds of jurors.

NEW SERVICE BETWEEN THE EAST AND WEST IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

An important railway announcement is made to-day. The Dominion is to have a new service between Eastern and Western Canada.

Fast passenger service is to be inaugurated on July 13th between Toronto and Winnipeg over the Canadian Government Railway (The Transcontinental), the Grand Trunk System, and the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway.

These three railways are combining to make this new service of a superior class in every respect. "The National" is the appropriate name which has been chosen for the principal trains on both its east and west bound journeys.

This train will leave Toronto each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and Winnipeg on each Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday, its equipment consisting of colonist sleeping cars, electric lighted first-class coaches, tourist and standard sleeping cars, and dining car, which will be operated through without change.

The mileage by this new route between Toronto and Winnipeg is 1,257 miles and "The National" will make a fast run, covering the distance in forty-two hours. Westbound passengers leave Toronto at 10.45 p.m. and travelling over the Grand Trunk lines are at North Bay at 7.00 o'clock next morning. A splendid daylight run is then made over the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, through the scenic beauties of Timagami and the interesting Cobalt district.

Cochrane is reached at 4.25 p.m., and "The National" there begins its journey over the main line of Canada's Transcontinental with its solid roadbed, little curvature and no noticeable gradients, all contributing to the greatest degree of comfort by day or night. It traverses a country of wonderful possibilities in which tens of thousands of settlers will carve out their homes in the future.

The region between Cochrane and Winnipeg is one possessing great attractions for the sportsman as well as the settler, for here are situated some of the finest fishing waters in the continent, while big game abound in the forests. There is an ever changing panorama of beauty. Great rivers, flowing north and south, have their source in this height of land country and here the Indian, unspoiled by civilization, still makes his home. It is indeed virgin territory, for its natural loveliness has not yet been marred by fire or the lumberman.

Before entering the Province of Manitoba the train runs through the famous Nibigami (country of lakes) region, another of Canada's magnificent holiday resorts reaching Winnipeg at 3.50 p.m.

Eastbound "The National" leaves Winnipeg at 5.15 p.m., arriving Cochrane at 6.15 p.m. next day and Toronto eighteen hours later—arrival in the Queen City being timed at 12.05 noon.

At Winnipeg the Grand Trunk Pacific lines afford splendid connections for all important points in Western Canada, the Pacific Coast, California, etc., and also furnish a new short route to Alaska, and the Yukon, traversing the Canadian Rockies and other marvels of scenic interest.

The opening of this new route makes an epoch in the history of Canada as the new service will provide for fast through travel from Halifax to Prince Rupert, Vancouver, Victoria other Pacific Coast cities, via an all-Canadian route, the Canadian Government Railways (Intercolonial Railway) in the East connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway System in a Union Station, (Bonaventure) Montreal, thence Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, Transcontinental Railway and Grand Trunk Pacific connecting in the Union Station at Winnipeg, forms a continuous band of steel from ocean to ocean.

Publications pertaining to this new route with ocean to ocean map may be procured from all principal ticket agents and passenger representatives of the Canadian Government railways and Grand Trunk System.

MORE ABOUT THE ROAD OIL

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Answering Mr. James Clancy's letter, agent for Imperial Oil Co., I might say in reply that I did not know that the city had been using the above company's oil, until one day I was accosted on the street with the following remark: "What have you got in that oil over in East City that it has such an odor?" I then took steps to find out what was wrong in the matter and learned from the City Engineer, much to my surprise that they had purchased a car of cheaper oil from The Imperial Co. With reference to the price of the oil we quoted the City of Peterborough two prices, one on an imported oil, from the United States, which was exactly the same price as the Imperial Oil Company's (and which had no objectionable odor to it), on our high-class oil, which is "made in Canada," and has no equal, we gave the city a guarantee that it was free from any substance that would be injurious to tires (or nostrils).

I notice upon reading over Mr. Clancy's letter that he claims to have saved the city $61.00 (plus scents). I might mention here that the ordinary tank car usually runs around 5,000 gallons, and as Mr. Clancy's car ran 8,000 gallons, the largest tank made, one can easily see that he would save the city more on a larger tank than on a smaller one; Mr. Clancy evidently thought one such tank would be a "great plenty," so he made it good and large with lots of aromas (how 'bout that East City-)

As far as the heavy taxes are concerned which he claims they are paying, we all know this particular company would not be here unless they were making lots of money out of the people and, as for influencing any single alderman, it was not necessary, as it was left solely with the City Engineer, and the chairman of the Board of Works. In conclusion I might say if the agent thought his oil was so good why did he not state his case to the Automobile Association the night they met the Council to object to the use of road oil.

I do not wish to carry this matter any farther, but thought Mr. Clancy would like an answer to his letter.

Yours truly,
J. M. PRITCHARD,
Agent British American Oil Co.

THE TEETH AND GUMS.

A safe and simple tooth powder is precipitated chalk and orris root, which any druggist will mix for you in small quantities. Another equally safe but less pleasing powder is finely shaved castile soap, part, and precipitated chalk, two parts. If this powder is used every morning, and then if after each meal and before retiring the teeth are brushed with tepid water containing an antiseptic like listerine of glycothymolin decay can be warded off.

If the gums are not firm and of good colour, try the following aromatic lotion:

Gum mastic (powdered), 2 drams.
Gum arabic (powdered) 2 1-2 drams.
Balsam of Peru, 1-2 dram.
Rose water, 5 ounces.

Rub this in a bowl with a wooden spoon until it forms an emulsion, then stirring continually, add three drams tincture if myrth.

Havelock Boy With 21st Battalion Near Folkstone Writes Interesting Letter

Dear Mr. Lancaster,—I promised to write you and the opportunity has now come, reason: Four of the fellows in my section are down with mumps; result: All quarantined and plenty of time to spare. Of myself, I have little to say, except that I am well and happy, and the other five fellows from Havelock, who have the honour to represent Havelock in the 2nd Contingent, are, I believe, likewise. Pte. C. Holdcroft is certainly in his element, driving one of the large transport motor waggons, and frequently makes trips to our camp with rations and supplies; result: Corp. Southgate becomes the happy possessor of two or three loaves of bread, and other "eats" smuggled behind the transport sergeant's back, by Private C. Holdcroft; final result: Machine Gun Section has new bread for dinner and the Corporal gets accused of "scouting for eats," which is my peculiar pastime.

If you were to ask for my impression of England just now I am afraid it would take much time and thought for me to give you a satisfactory answer. The morbid magic wand of war has changed everyone who has a soul and the majority of people are alive to the danger that threatens the Empire. I say danger; though immediate danger is now passed, and God be thanked, there is danger as long as ambition is left in Germany to prosecute her hate against the Empire by ruthless barbarism. From the oldest man to the youngest school boy, all classes and grades, realize that we are not fighting a war of counter hate, born of ambition, but a war to preserve our freedom, and that of our descendants, to protect the weak and punish the murderers of innocent women and children. This is the secret why men are cheerfully dying in France to-day, and the women of the Empire giving up all that means anything to them in this life.

Folkestone, which is the nearest town to the various Canadian camps, is full of melancholy evidences of the reality of war. Hour after hour trains rush through bringing wounded soldiers to London and taking fresh troops to the firing line. From the promenade of this beautiful seaside resort you can see the white cliffs of France, hear the booming of the heavy guns and watch the Allies' aeroplanes continually crossing the Channel with despatches. The town is overcrowded with wounded soldiers (Canadian and Belgian) and there are thousands of refugees living on the hospitality of the English people, who appear to esteem it a pleasure to do something, as they, themselves, term it. Refugees and soldiers alike all have the same story to tell of Germany—inhuman treatment, barbarism and hate. My brother, who for the past four months has had the honour of dropping bombs and darts on cities of Belgium occupied by the Germans, tells me these stories are true, for he has seen things which are not fit to be published and which make the heart ache.

I had the honour to visit a hospital on the east coast last week, which was occupied by British soldiers and a few Canadian soldiers. Here one of the wounded fellows told me his chum saw the crucified Canadian while bringing in some wounded, but was not allowed to touch him.

The English people appear so appreciate what the Canadians are doing and I hope the Canadian people appreciate what the Mother Country is doing also, for God knows they are making some awful sacrifices in the cause of right and freedom for the Empire.

Good-bye, with kindest regards, from

CORP. SOUTHGATE.

The following letter was received this week by Rev. James Skene and is self explanatory. It is to be hoped that Mr. Merrell's request will be acted upon by our local Women's Relief Committee and a big box of supplies sent to the Canadian Hospital:

Temporary Tent Hospital.
Kent, June 14, 1915.

Dear Mr. Skene — I have arrived safely and am now in charge of the above hospital for this month. We go to our own hospital in France the first week in July. We had a very fine ocean voyage and so far have had a pleasant time. Kent County is very historic and interesting. We are now situated on the sea coast opposite Calais.

War is horrible and here we see many sad sights. Homes mourn the loss of dear ones who have sacrificed their lives for the Empire. We have over 200 patients here but most of them are convalescent now. Our Canadian Kingston city wave us a the cruelties of the enemy. Our patients tell us of their experiences, which are terrible. They have certainly been heroes.

When on my last visit home before leaving for overseas, mother told me that the Havelock people were preparing boxes and providing money for different Red Cross purposes, but I think it would appeal to them in favour if they could be asked for a subscription and articles of comfort for our own hospital which is purely Canadian. Kinston cigty gave us a great deal of clothing, games, water bottles, books, etc., for our convalescent room, or anything which would add to the comfort of our wounded heroes. I have charge of all hospital supplies here and will use whatever you may send to the best of advantage.

Hoping to receive a reply, I remain

Yours truly,
A. RAY MERRELL.

Lt.-Col. Brennan of South Africa Has Narrow Escape

(From Havelock Standard.)

Mrs. A. Breault of town has received another very interesting letter from her brother, Lt.-Col. F. Brennan, officer commanding the South African Irish Regiment, engaged in active service in German West Africa, where Great Britain is waging a campaign of no small extent, although we sometimes almost forget about it in watching the trend of operations in Europe. Col. Brennan gives a good outline of the progress made against the enemy in West Africa, which appears to be very favourable, judging from the extent of territory gained. The Colonel mentions some sharp encounters with losses on both sides. He corroborates the reports as to the enemy poisoning the water supply and says that on the day of writing he saw taken from a well a portion of a decomposed sheep. He says that many mines are placed by the enemy on the roads and relates a narrow escape he had. The car in which he was riding passed over a narrow stretch of road which was found afterwards to contain ten mines. One of the wheels of the car touched a connecting pin of the mine, while another was only an inch from a danger spot. In his own words the Col. says: "An eighth of an inch farther and there would have been no funeral necessary for me and my companions, and it is certain that never again will I get so near death and escape. There were ten boxes of dynamite and blasting gelatine in the mines. It was estimated by experts, many of whom we have in our reigments, which contain so many miners, that the explosion would have killed everyone within one hundred yards. The same day this incident took place we had men blown to pieces, blinded and deformed for life. This awakens in the men a desire for a chance to repay the enemy. They have done dirty things from a soldier's standpoint — even tried to spread infections—yet they left their women, children and civilian population to our tender mercy."

In concluding the Colonel says: "The weather is now getting cold, like you have at home in November. Sleeping out is not a luxury, especially as we have no tents or covering of any kind, except one or two blankets per man."

Houses and Stables Went Down the River

Edmonton Man Writing to His Sister Here Tells of Exciting Days of the Flood--Loss a Heavy One

The following are extracts from a letter, under date of June 29, received from Mr. C. S. Wallis of Edmonton, Alta., formerly of this city, to his sister, Mrs. Roger, of 1309 Park street:

"We had a very exciting day here yesterday. On Sunday evening the river (North Saskatchewan) commenced rising, and warning came from "Rocky Mountain" House that a great flood was sweeping down the river. Sure enough, yesterday morning the river was up some 30 feet and rising rapidly. By 10 a.m. about 20 houses had gone down the river, and during the day as the water rose, houses along the flats kept slipping away. Then the lumber yards began to lose their piles of boards, which began to jam along the government low level bridge. The climax was reached about 10 p.m., when a large stable came down and rammed the bridge. The government gave orders to have a loaded train run on the bridge and keep it solid. All day long hundreds of people worked to try and save as much as they could for the poor people whose houses had vanished down stream. It was a very sad sight to see house after house floating away, only to be smashed into kindling wood against the government bridge. By six p.m. the electric light engines were drowned and then the pumping station followed, and by 10 p.m. all power was stopped and the city was in darkness. To make matters worse heavy showers of rain made everything more gloomy than ever and candles were all exhausted, so that everyone had to go to bed in the dark.

The morning papers are trying to estimate the damage, but it will take some time to do so. Somewhere in the neighbourhood of 2,000 people are homeless. The river must have risen about 40 feet. It stopped rising about 8 a.m. and is now down some 7 or 8 feet from its highest. There must have been between 20 and 30 thousand people on the high banks of the river watching the flood, and it was near midnight before they went home. As the waters recede to-day the scenes of desolation are more marked. At least two large saw mills are completely wrecked, and power, water and light are still shut off. We have just received word from Ottawa that two more regiments are to be raised here, and recruiting has already commenced.

We have already sent away over 9,000 men. We would be doing well to get 2,000 more with harvest coming on. It might be hard on the farmers.

The Grand Trunk Pacific people are getting their new hotel in readiness for opening. Doubtless they will have articles written about it. When they do so I will send you a clipping.

Tribute to a Sportsman.

Plan Vacations for the Tired Mothers

This is the season when the average male worker is busy with time-tables or brushing up his fishing accoutrements. He regards a vacation as an efficiency factor.

But what about the tens of thousands of tired working women and girls who dare hardly drop a week from the routine of office or factory in the fight for a bare living?

What about the tired mothers, the household drudges, battling fifty-two weeks in the year with the problems of feeding, clothing and schooling children on the slenderest of incomes?

Vacation for these slaves of an ill-balanced social system are like a gift direct from heaven. A week or two of absolute rest, where there are trees and flowers, a running brook or placid lake, fresh air and good food, is worth a thousand sermons on the blessings of contentment with one's lot.

There are dozens of opportunities for the well-to-do, who are customarily lavish with vacation funds, to donate a few dollars to one or other of these organized associations for giving free vacations to the poor.

Don't leave on your own vacation until you have helped some tired mother to get herself and her children into the country, for a week at least.

It may take a little personal trouble to be human to this extent — but it pays.

THE FIRST STRAWBERRIES.

Good management and economy will use the first berries sparing in desserts, cooked and sweetened, and wait for the sweet, ripe berries that come later, to serve with cream and sugar.

A hot cottage pudding with a strawberry sauce is an excellent dessert in which to use early berries, as their sourness is wholly concealed.

Strawberry Sauce For Puddings.—Make a hard sauce of butter and sugar, add the whipped white of one egg and a cup of strawberries mashed to a pulp; cream thoroughly together and serve.

Strawberry Short Cake.—Four cups of sifted flour, one teaspoon of butter, three teaspoons of baking powder, milk, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of lard, strawberries.

Strawberry Sponge.— Soak half a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water. Mash a box of strawberries through a colander and add the juice of a lemon and two-thirds of a cup of sugar. Melt the gelatine and add the strawberry juice. Stir until it begins to thicken, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and turn into a mold. Serve ice cold with whipped cream, or with a soft custard made of the yolks of two eggs and a half a pint of milk.

Strawberry Mousse.—Whip a pint of cream very stiff, and drain in a sieve until all the liquid has run off. Mix with this a cup of strawberry pulp well sweetened with powdered sugar and drained of the juice. Add a flavouring of vanilla and turn into a mold Pack in ice and salt for four

The Otonabee Was Damaged

LINDSAY, July 8.—A peculiar accident happened on Tuesday at the Balsover swing bridge over the Trent Valley Canal. The steamer Otonabee was passing up the canal with an excursion, and the bridge at Balsover was opened for her. At this point the water is said to be very shallow and the big boat veered suddenly when just about to enter the bridge and ran full tilt into the structure. The bridge tender who was working the opening apparatus was thrown to the ground by the shock of the collision and suffered rather severe injuries.

The boat itself was badly damaged. The upper works, including the upper deck at the bow will have to undergo heavy repairs. No one on board the big steamer was hurt.

Card With a Supposed Threat Picked Up on the Court House Hill To-day

Doubtless It is Only a Hoax, But the Fact Remains It Was Found This Morning by a Lawyer Going to the Office of the Clerk of the County Court.

"Do not waste time. We will surprise them to-night for sure. Von Kluck."

The above sentences were inscribed on a calling card found on the Court House hill this morning by a lawyer. He was going up to Mr. Sherry's office and chanced to notice the card which certainly had not been exposed to last night's rain.

The lawyer regarded the "message" as a joke, although he observed that in the present times one is at a loss to decide what may or may not prove only a hoax. He remarked that there are some persons of German descent and nativity in Peterborough, and it might be that some one intended to liberate Eugene Nieder, the suspect spy now in the Court House, or might have designs upon the office and person of Mr. J. H. Burnham, the local Federal member. The card was found at a point half way up the hill on Brock street.

Those who have seen the card merely laugh at it, say it is a joke, and let it go at that.

1400 Men Needed In This District

New Battalion to be Formed as Soon as the 59th is Completed

KINGSTON, July 7.— The initial step for the formation of an Eastern Ontario branch of the Speakers' Patriotic League were taken at a meeting of citizens, held in the City Council chamber to-night, called by Mayor Sutherland, who presided. An Executive committee was appointed to get in communication with all the places included in the third military division, with the object of having leagues formed in these places to co-operate in the work.

Mayor Sutherland was appointed Convener, W. L. Grant Secretary, and Hugh MacPherson Treasurer. Prof. W. L. Mulloy, hero of the South African war, will act as an Oragnizing Secretary. Col. T. D. R. Hemming, commanding the Barriefield Camp, stated that recruiting was not going on as well as it should. He needed 1,400 men inside of two weeks, but the recruiting was very slow, in spite of the efforts of recruiting officers. He stated further that 300 men were still needed for the 59th Overseas Battalion, and that as soon as this battalion was completed he would start recruiting for another battalion.

INSPECTION IS NEEDED

"People Are Being Murdered" Says Mayor Church

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 8. —Referring to the accident at Queenston Heights yesterday, Mayor Church at the Board of Control meeting this morning, said there was no adequate inspection by the Ontario Railway Board of the radial railways of this province, and people were being "murdered" as a result. The Board of Control passed a resolution to the Attorney General, Hon. Isaac Lucas, demanding a full investigatoin and the fixing of the responsibility for the disaster.

In Writing To Soldiers

OTTAWA, July 7.— The Postoffice Department calls attention to the fact that letters addressed to soldiers at the front should be signed by the writers in full. Where letters signed by Christian name only cannot be delivered owing to the addresses being missing, wounded, or dead, it is impossible for the Canadian postal service to return them to the senders. In view of this, the public is urged to fully sign all letters addressed to soldiers at the front, and in addition to this to indicate the name and address of the sender on the upper left hand corner of the address side of the envelope. In this way the return of letters, should necessity arise, will be absolutely insured.

THE RUSSIANS SKILLFULLY EVADE FIGHT

PETROGRAD, July 8.—The Russian waiting game has been justified. They have evaded a general engagement while conditions were unfavourable, and meanwhile weakened the Teutons and given the allies time to strike hard.

The military critic of the Novoe Vremya correctly explains the withdrawal on the Bug and Dniester fronts as a manoeuvre deliberately undertaken with the object of accepting battle under conditions best calculated to ensure Russian success.

On the Vistula front the ground which offers Russians the greatest advantages is that with Brest-Litowsk as a base, with Ivangorod on the right bank and a strong army occupying flank and rear positions in relation to the right flank of the army of General Bohmermolli.

The Russian steady movement northward from Zamos and southward from Grubieszow compels the Teutons to expend ever increasing forces on lengthening their line of communications, thereby weakening the main body at the moment of decisive encounter. On the other hand it is equally important for the Germans to expedite a general engagement.

This imperative need of haste explains the transfer of a portion of Mackensen's army to the left bank of the Wieprz River in order to join the army of the Archduke Joseph Perdinand, which already has reached the Krasnik positions.

The Germans are making desperate efforts to seize the crossings of the Vistula at Jozefow and further north, in the region of Solec, in order to overpower the Russian right flank at Krasnik.

The result of the battle on the entire front, between the Vistula and the Bug, is not yet certain, but that the Teutons desire to develop a big engagement before the Russians occupy their ultimate positions is manifest.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The total amount subscribed toward the Y. M. C. A. $12,000 fund is now $11,146.50, leaving $33.50 still required to make binding a conditional pledge of $500. The Mothers' Club and Y.M.C.A. Ladies' Auxiliary have each pledged $50 toward the fund.

The men in charge of the canvass are determined to fully complete the effort and soon afterwards have a jubilation of the workers. Obtaining the last $1,500 has been a very hard grind and has been secured only with the greatest effort, but those in charge have felt that for the credit of Peterborough the effort should not cease until the amount asked for was fully subscribed.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors, held recently, the matter of completing the plans for the proposed alterations and receiving tenders, was placed in the hands of the Property Committee, Mr. J. H. Connal, Chairman. It was hoped to get the plans in shape, so that tenders could be secured this week, but a postponement of securing tenders has been necessary that the plans and specifications might be fully completed. Tenders will be called for next week and as far as possible the Association will carry out the building changes with a view to increasing the annual income as well as making more efficient the work of the Association.

The steamer Manita that was to have brought the boy campers back from Sandy Point Saturday afternoon has cancelled its return trip, so an effort is being made to secure automobiles to bring the boys back to Peterborough Saturday afternoon.

The General Secretary's family propose to camp at Sandy Point for about two weeks, beginning with Monday next.

Boys' Secretary G. L. Galley is planning to attend the Y.M.C.A. Summer School at Lake Couchiching from July 27th to Aug. 13.

Mr. Carson is also planning to be at the Couchiching Summer School at the same time, as he is one of the instructors in physical work.

Ounce of Prevention.

Insurance amounting to $40,000 will be placed on the Brantford waterworks property, against bomb, insurrection or riot. "DE LUXE" SECTION OF CHEMONG ROAD

"They may be good farmers, but they were never intended for road builders," was the comment of an old gentleman who has occasion to travel over the newly treated section of the Chemong Road. Yards and yards of broken stone had been strewn along it and the sides plowed up with strange results. The comment of the McKee-Jobe work was not exactly complimentary, although it was admitted that the highway may some day be restored to a semblance of a "good road." The other night, it was stated, several automobiles floundered into the ploughed part and horses struggled for hours to unloosen them.

Hot Weather Rules For Horse Comfort

1. Load lightly, and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
5. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge. Use vinegar water if possible. Do not turn the hose on him.
6. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm; and add a tablespoonful of saltpetre.
7. Do not use a horse-hat, unless it is a canvas top hat. The ordinary felt shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs, and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water or, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sunstroke and needs attention at once.
12. If it is so hot that the horse sweats in the stable at night, tie him outside with bedding under him. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot well stand the next day's heat. —Bulletin of Boston Work Horse Relief Association.

When Electricity Was In Its Infancy

Professor Francis B. Crocker in an article in the Scientific American tells of the days when electricity was really in its infancy. He says that in 1874 he and Dr. Wheeler first turned their attention to the study. It was only the play of two boys who had the same bent, but, he adds, "we actually began to make crude forms of electric batteries."

In the early days general knowledge of electricity was very limited. Not one person in 10,000 knew anything about the subject. "Even the books were largely confined to frictional or static electricity," says Professor Crocker. "For many years after that time there was a general notion that the dynamo acted by friction.

"When we first began to study electricity the telegraph was the only practical application. It was before the telephone was invented or any commercial forms of dynamo-electric generator or motor, arc or incandescent lamps, electric railway, power transmission or electro-chemical apparatus were used or even seriously considered.

"At that time the only important electric plant in New York city was the main Western Union Telegraph office on Broadway at Dey street, in which one whole floor was filled with cells of gravity battery. The maximum output was about one-eighth watt per cell, and there were, I think, 20,000 cells, which would give a total of 2 1-2 kilowatts. Yet that was the largest electrical generating plant in commercial operation in America.

"The telephone was first exhibited at the Philadelphia exposition in 1876. For a long time the telephone was regarded as merely an interesting toy. A friend of ours who owned the exclusive rights for New York city and vicinity sold them for $20,000 and thought he had done well.

The first arc lamps were those of Brush, Weston and Thomson-Houston. I remember that one of the first practically used in New York was in the Equitable building, where it was visited by thousands as a great curiosity. The "subdivision of the electric light" had been a great bugbear until Brush was able to run a number of arc lamps in series on the same circuit without interference between them. Before that time each lamp had to have its own generator."

The first successful incandescent lamp Professor Crocker saw at Menlo park. "There were only a few of them in Edison's laboratory. They could all have been easily put in a small basket. When they were brought out publicly they created a great sensation, and the gas stocks tumbled in price to the extent of millions of dollars throughout the country, and the Edison company's stock went up to $2500 per share; that is, 25 times the par value. They reached this enormous figure on the theory that the Edison stock had gained all the gas stocks had lost!

"Edison 'subdivided' the electric lights by putting his incandescent lamps in parallel. He devised the safety fuse, but at first it was single pole that is, in one wire only. At that time the sockets, switches and fuse blocks had wooden bases which were so many pieces of kindling wood for starting fires. The so-called 'underwriters' wire,' then generally used, was miserably insulated and for that reason soon came to be known as the 'undertaker's wire.'

"Long after electric lighting started there were practically no motors. Central stations objected to having them on their circuits for fear of affecting the lights. It took years to overcome this prejudice. To-day the motor load is considered much more desirable than the lighting load because it lasts longer and is more nearly constant. Motors about the time the Crocker-Wheeler company was started in 1885, which was about 10 years after electric lighting was introduced. At first it was hard to convince people of their value. People would ask, "Why turn the mechanical power of steam, gas or water into mechanical power?" That simple question seemed almost unanswerable.

"When each new application of electricity came out and for application in general the public has always taken the wrong view or applied the wrong test. The new way was expected to be cheaper immediately, and nearly every one thought that the whole story. In point of fact electric lighting from central stations cost more than gas light up to the advent of tungsten lamps, certainly more than from kerosene oil. Convenience, cleanliness and many such advantages are really the reasons why it was preferred. The same is true of electric motors. Each new application of electric drive had to overcome the same old opposition.

"It was awfully hard to get people to try the first motor, but in a year or two you could not take away their electric drive for love or money. The first induction motors were described in Tesla's paper at the A. I. E. E. meeting in May, 1888. I remember distinctly seeing there the only induction motor in the world—two small specimens lying on a table. Tesla did not invent the polyphase system or generator, or even the rotary field. Deprez in 1883 laid down the theory. Charles S. Bradley applied for a patient in May, 1887, a year ahead of Tesla. This patient covered too, a rotary converter and the double current machine, that is, it may be employed as a double current, single or polyphase generator or motor.

"The electric railway also came in about that time, that is, 1888 and 1889. At first there was much trouble with burning out of motor armatures. I remember that in one case a man in charge of repairing them was asked if they did not often burn out. He answered, 'Oh, no, only three to-day,' and it was then about noon! In all the earlier forms of electric motors, even those used for traction, the working parts, coils, and connections were much exposed, with little or no protection. The partly and wholly enclosed types of machine were not generally adopted until ten or 15 years after motors had been in commercial use.

"I was present when the first important power transmission system in the country was started. The power was generated at Niagara Falls and transmitted to Buffalo, the line being less than 20 miles long, but it was considered long distance transmission. The pressure used at first was 11,000 volts, which later was raised to 22,000 volts. The former voltage ranked as the highest in the world at that time in commercial service, and was regarded as so extraordinary that all sorts of precautions and special arrangements were required to handle it. It seemed to involve as many problems then as the 110,000 volts of to-day.

TWO OF A KIND

A PRIVATE, anxious to secure leave of absence, sought his captain with a most convincing tale about a sick wife breaking her heart for his presence. The officer, familiar with the soldier's ways, replied: "I am afraid you are not telling the truth. I have received a letter from your wife urging me not to let you go home because you get drunk, break up the furniture and maltreat her shamefully." The private saluted and started to leave the room. He paused at the door, asking, "Sor, may I speak to you, not as an officer, but as mon to mon?" "Yes, what is it?" "What I am saying is this," approaching the captain and lowering his voice: "You and I are two of the most illigant liars the Lord ever made. I am not married at all."—Boise, Idaho, Gem Worker.

MANY ARE KILLED AT FRONT BY MINUTE METAL PIECES OR BY SHOCK ALONE

(By James J. Walsh, M.D., Ph.D.)

This is above all a war of artillery, and surgeons have had more and more varied experience with regard to shell wounds particularly, than ever before. Some of the details are not only interesting but rather surprising because of their unexpectedness.

At the beginning of the war there was more than one circumstantially detailed rumour that asphyxiating bombs were being used, especially by the French. Turpinite was said at one time to be the secret explosive which produced serious results quite disproportionate to the mere force of the explosion. Shells loaded with it or with some cognate substance were declared to set free on explosion a deadly gas the nature of which was not quite understood and which had no colour and no odour, yet produced a very fatal effect. Literally scores of men in the neighborhood of these exploding bombs died apparently without any serious wound and at most with what seemed to be a few insignificant and more or less superficial scratches.

No wonder the asphyxiating bombs theory, especially because of its sensationalism, was generally accepted. There was no confirmation of it, however, on medical investigation, and a number of autopsies made by careful German pathologists showed that in every case there was an adequate reason for the death. Some serious injury to a vital tissue had been inflicted by the bomb, though very often there was only the very slightest evidence of it on the surface of the bodies of the victims of these casualties. The wounds of entrance for small bits of projectiles were in many cases apparently so trivial as to make it almost impossible to think that they could represent the immediate cause of the fatality.

WOUNDS FROM SMALL SLIVERS

The secret was that the bombs were burst into a great many small pieces by the high explosive within them. In not a few cases pieces of metal scarcely thicker than a thin sheet of cardboard were driven deeply into the brain, producing a mortal wound, or inflicting similar fatal wounds on the heart and large blood vessels. The high velocity produced by the explosion gave these slight missiles a penetrating power almost beyond belief.

The occurrences were not, however, without example in other circumstances. In cyclones and tornadoes in this country it has sometimes been noted that light splinters of wood have been driven deeply even into solid beams of trees by the force of the wind. There is even a story of straws being made to penetrate rather hard material when driven at extremely high velocity by a cyclonic wind. Such specimens have often been exhibited. With the knowledge of these occurrences it is easy to understand just how minute and apparently friable portions of metal might be driven rather deeply into the human frame.

We have come to a time in the war when gas is being used to a considerable extent but there are no more stories of the employment of gas bombs in the way that we heard so much of in the beginning of the war. The sensational news value of the story has disappeared before the careful autopsies made to determine the cause of death in a number of these at first apparently so mysterious fatalities. Such gas bombs were given a different status, I believe, by the rules of the Hague Convention, from the use of gas directly, but there is apparently no evidence left now that they were used in the way accredited by rumour.

SHELL SHOCK

Other very interesting effects produced by shells without there necessarily being any serious physical injury connected with them, have been studied rather carefully in the present war by the neurologists who have found abundant opportunity for the investigation of some very bizarre consequences of being in the neighborhood of huge bursting shells. Sir William Osler has recently told the story of the serious nervous conditions that develop in soldiers from what he calls "shell shock" without actual injury. This is the condition that in less severe form used to be ascribed to the effect of "the wind" of such missiles.

Close proximity to the explosion of a large shell may cause loss of consciousness or a dazed condition which lasts for some hours or longer with paralyis of the legs persisting for days or even for weeks and yet without any physical injury. There is even no absolute injury of the central nervous system but only a severe functional disturbance of it for the paralysis gradually disappears.

In very severe cases, where the intense shock of the exploding shell was followed by partial burial of the wounded beneath the earth and debris thrown up by the explosion, there is a much more serious type of paralysis, with the legs utterly beyond control, completely flaccid, with all the reflexes gone—"flail legs," as the neurologists call them. It is probable that in most of these cases there are slight ruptures of arteries in the spinal cord from the shock, with consequent hemorrhage, yet even some of these patients get better so completely as to leave the impression that the original injury to the central nervous system is only a concussion—that is a shaking up of the nerve cells and fibres which disturbed their function, though there was no actual tissue destruction of any kind.

"Shell shock" may produce blindness without any physical injury to the eye. Very often the victims regain their sight completely afterward. Sometimes only one eye is affected. Men who have been very close to a shell that burst unexpectedly at night with a brilliant glare have suffered from this passing blindness. Temporary deafness of a similar character has been noted in certain cases, and it seems evident that the sensory nerves can be so shocked as to refuse to carry impulses for a considerable time afterward. Not infrequently there are curious disturbances of general sensation, that is, of touch, so that there is no feeling over a portion of the body, and sometimes the anaesthetic patches on legs or arms are shaped like a glove or stocking, showing that the effects produced are the same as those seen in a functional neurosis or hysteria.

Psychic Knockout.

Sir William Osler has described a series of cases of what is called "psychic knockout." This is a condition of stupor with loss of memory and complete speechlessness due to shell shock. Sometimes the disturbance of speech causes only a marked stammer in persons who have never exhibited that tendency before. Sometimes the victims seem to be utterly incapable of making the effort to think out words and co-ordinate muscles of their articulation. The patients are conscious but salient for days or even weeks.

They often are left in a condition of extreme nervous irritability, in which any sudden sound may give rise to a violent start, followed by a marked tremor. This state may last for weeks. Letters from that explosions near them in the hospital cause a serious setback in their condition. The awful sound of cannonading and bursting shells have cut off all their inhibition to react to loud sounds.

There is the feeling that in a certain number of cases where the shell explosion is utterly unexpected the psychic knocking may actually be fatal without any physical injury being present to account for the death. The men are startled to death, for one can scarcely say that they are scared to death, since scare is a psychic condition, and these effects are produced before the psyche becomes conscious of what has happened.

In one of the cases described by Sir William Osler the affected soldier had been watching big German shells exploding over a distance, roughly, seventy yards in the rear of the service trench in which he was on duty. As each shell went over them, to explode fifty or sixty feet beyond, the English soldiers would crouch against the back of the trench in which they were and, thus be safest from hurled fragments. One of the shells, however, dropped almost directly in the service trench, killing many and seriously disturbing the mental state of those who had not expected it. Some very curious effects were produced on the memory of one of the soldiers. For hours afterward, though he remained on duty, he had no connected memory as to what happened to him. A number of things occurred which he remembered, but not as having occurred at that time.

"The events are like the beads of a broken necklace which have slipped from the thread and are lying loose on his memory table. The discontinuity of memory would remind one of the disconuity of vision described by Tyndall, the English physicist, when recovering from the shock of the full charge of a huge battery of Leyden jars which he received inadvertently. As he came to his own hands and feet seemed not to be attached to his body because of this discontinuity of vision.

This patient was not able to walk for days afterward, and then only with feet far apart, the arms out, balancing himself. He always had to make several attempts with the foot he wanted to carry forward before he could take a step. He had a curious illusion of sight by which whenever he turned to the right the horizon rushed past him with an unsteadying effect. This seems to have been due, as was also his disturbance of gait, to shell shock affecting the cerebellum —that is the hinder portion of the brain which has so much to do with enabling us to maintain equilibrium.

In a word, human nature has been outdone in this present war by the improvements in high explosives. The effects upon the nervous system of the awful explosions are quite sufficient of themselves to explain many deaths without the necessity of appealing to added poisonous agents, as has sometimes been done, for it is very probable that all chemical substances would be as seriously disturbed and disintegrated by the intense heat and the explosion as are human tissues.

To dry a shaving brush and protect it from dust there has been patented a celluloid cyclinder, perforated for the circulation of air.

Isaiah. No. 2

ONE of the vivid pictures we have of Isaiah is his going about Jerusalem, barefoot and half-clothed, the symbol of the degradation which lay before his people.

As the Assyrian Empire more and more threatened the Hebrews with overthrow, clearer and more positive became his prophecies regarding the Messiah, the Restorer of Israel. But before that, would lie many years of suffering. A son was born to Isaiah's wife, who was also endowed with powers of prophecy. To this child was given the name of Hastenbooty Speedspoil. Isaiah declared that before the baby would talk, the wealth of Damascus and Samaria should be carried away by the invaders. But though the greater part of his nation would be destroyed or taken captives, yet the remnant should return. In about three hundred years Nehemiah was chosen to lead this remnant back to Jerusalem.

He foretold the conversion of Africa, which has been so wonderfully fulfilled.

Of the fate of the mighty Babylon he said: "A grievous vision is declared unto me. I was dismayed at the seeing of it. Within a year all the glory of Kedar shall fail—for the Lord God of Israel has spoken it." Vs. 21. What of Babylon now and all of its former glory?

Sennacherib, the new Assyrian King, crushed the allies one by one and stretched out his arm to take Jerusalem, but there he failed. On that mysterious night his host was slain. Verses 36 and 37.

Thus was Hezekiah's prayer answered and Isaiah's calm trust miraculously vindicated.

His enemies, the prophets and priests, often expressed scorn for Isaiah's style, which they said was as plain and simple as if he were dealing with little children. But with this simplicity, there was a calm majesty of style, stern and threatening, yet tender and comforting.—I. H. N.

ALL GERMAN SOUTH AFRICA IN HANDS OF THE BRITISH

Roumania, it is Now Believed, Will Soon Enter the War

Russians Now Have the Advantage of Position And Halt German Drive

Reinforced and With Fresh Supplies of Ammunition They Again Take the Offensive and Defeat the Austro-Germans Near Krasnik, Inflicting Heavy Losses.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9.—The Russians have at last checked the German drive in Southern Poland and now have the advantage of position. The Kaiser's attempt to move on Warsaw by way of Lublin has been halted and, with strong reinforcements and fresh supplies of ammunition, the Russians are again taking the offensive.

The battle now centres around Krasnik, about twenty miles south of the railway leading from Warsaw, through Lublin to the River Bug. Here the Russians say they have inflicted a serious defeat on the Austro-German army. The Austrians themselves, though not admitting a reverse, say that the battle has been "invigorated by the participation of strong Russian reserves." Despatches received in Geneva from Austrian sources say that the Russians have inflicted heavy losses on the invaders and that thousands of wounded are constantly arriving in Lemberg, Permysl and Jaroslav.

From the Russian frontier to the Warsaw-Lublin railway the region is wild and uncultivated, with scarcely any roads and no railways until Lublin is reached. It offers almost insurmountable obstacles to the advance of the Austro-German army over a hundred mile front with the immense amount of supplies and ammunition that would have to be brought up for such a force. On the other hand, the Russians, have behind them a splendid system of railways, on which they can quickly move troops and guns to the threatened areas.

The much heralded German onslaught in the west thus far has been confined to the Woevre region, where the army of the German Crown Prince is on the offensive and making efforts to regain the ground which it lost to the French in April, when the latter attempted to force the withdrawal of what is known as the St. Mihiel wedge. The Germans have won some trenches at the tip of the wedge, but at other points, according to French accounts, they were repulsed with heavy losses.

Artillery combats continue from Arras to the sea, and it is stated that as a result of the German bombardment Arras is in flames and its cathedral destroyed. The Germans also say they have retaken the trenches which they lost to the British north of Ypres Wednesday. However, the fighting here appears to be of a desultory nature, despite reports from Holland of the arrival of large German reinforcements for another effort to reach Calais.

The Gallipoli peninsula again has been the scene of very severe fighting, the Turks on Sunday having made their third attempt within a week to regain the ground which the Allies took from them in their last attack. Sunday's offensive, like those which preceded, resulted, according to British and French reports issued last night, in the complete discomfiture of the Turks, who are said to have suffered again severely.

The Allies are only six miles from their goal—the Narrows of the Dardanelles—bu the country between is strongly fortified and a gain of a few hundred yards is all that can be expected at one time. There is talk of a new combined general attack by the land and sea forces.

LONDON, July 9.—The Press Bureau this afternoon officially announced that the submarine which attacked a German warship in the Baltic recently as given out by Petrograd was a British boat.

PARIS, July 9.—A bulletin from the front late last night says the French have made good progress at several points along the line yesterday.

PETROGRAD, July 9.—It is thought here that the Russian army is about to deal a crushing blow to the advancing forces of Germany and Austria. Good news is expected to-day.

All German South Africa Now in Hands of British Surrender of Enemy's Forces

Roumanian Government Has Contracted a New Loan of $20,000,000--This is Thought to Mean Roumania's Entrance Into the War on the Side of the Allies.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, July 9.—All German South Africa is now in the hands of the British. General Botha has accepted the surrender of all the enemy's military forces.

LONDON, July 9.—The liner Adriatic, with Premier Borden aboard, which arrived safely last night, saw nothing of submarines.

PARIS, July 9.—Private messages from Berlin admit the Russians are securing a great advantage in the fighting in the eastern front, many Germans being captured.

LONDON, July 9.—The Ross Rifle was again discussed in the British House of Commons without definite information obtained.

ATHENS, July 9.—A German officer of high rank was among the five hundred prisoners taken by Allied troops at the Dardanelles in Tuesday's fighting, Mytilene despatches reported to-day.

BUCHAREST, July 9.—The Roumanian Government has contracted through the National Bank a new loan of $20,000,000 at three per cent., payable in two years. No explanation of the use to which the funds are to be put was made public. It is thought here this means Roumania's entrance into the war on the side of the Allies.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The White Star Line office last night stated a cable had arrived from the London office stating that the Adriatic arrived at Liverpool on Thursday afternoon. No information regarding delay is now available.

NEW YORK, The British steamer Vimeira, bound for Australia, was held up here to-day by the destroyer "Drayton," after a thrilling chase down the bay. The vessel was taken into Stapleton for investigation of the cargo, no reasons being given for detention.

Rumours of Discord With War Office

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9. — Rumours of discord between the British War Office, of which Lord Kitchener is the head, and the British Army, of which Field-Marshal Sir John French is the field commander, were given official recognition Tuesday for the first time.

Sir Arthur Basil Markham gave notice that he would question Premier Asquith in the House of Commons Wednesday on these points:

1. Whether the Government can give assurance that complete confidence and co-operation exists between officers at the front and Lord Kitchener.

2. In view of the belief that unity does not prevail, what steps will be taken to end the discord.

At the same time W. J. P. Mason, a member of the House of Commons, served notice that he would ask the Premier on Wednesday whether, in order to prevent another war, the Government will support the creation of an international tribunal of world powers, empowered to enforce its decrees in the event of future disputes between nations. This would take the place of The Hague tribunal.

WESTERN CROP REPORTS.

Winnipeg, Man., July 9. —The report of crop conditions, issued on July 7, by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, show that all along their line there is every indication of more than the average crop, providing warm weather continues. From almost every district reports show there has been an abundance of rain, but growth has been a little delayed by the unusually cool weather.

Are Winning On Carnia Plateau

Special Cable:

ROME, July 8.—The official statement issued last night at the headquarters of the Italian general staff was as follows:

"An attack against our positions at Passo Di Campo in the val D'Aone was repulsed with heavy loss.

"In Cadore our heavy artillery opened fire on the enemy's defensive works at Cortal in the upper valley of Cordevole. At Da Tagliata and Tresassia in val Porsia, serious damage was done.

"In Carnia, we repulsed attacks against our positions at Passo Pramisio Monte Scharnitz and in the direction of Val Grande.

"Combats continue on the Carnic plateau where we are making slow, but constant progress. Between July 4 and July 7, we took 1,466 prisoners.

"On the night of July 6, an Italian dirigible effectively bombarded the railroad junction north of Opcina (northeast of Trieste.) Aeroplanes dropped bombs yesterday on the Austrian aviation field near Aisovissa, east of Gorizia, causing fires, and also on the railroad station at Nabresina. Our aviators were obliged to alight, but returned unharmed."

YEAR IN PRISON FOR THE FOOD SPECULATORS

Special to The Examiner:

MUNICH, via London, July 9. — The military authorities of Bavaria to-day issued an ordinance providing for a maximum of one year's imprisonment for dealers charging excessive prices for articles of daily consumption, including food and heating and lighting substances.

A similar penalty is to be inflicted on those withholding stocks from sale to produce higher prices and on retailers refusing to sell to intending customers.

TO PROHIBIT SLAUGHTER OF YOUNG STOCK

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9.—Lord Selborne, president of the Board of Agriculture, in moving in the House of Lords the second reading of the bill which empowers the government to prohibit the slaughter of young stock so as to preserve the meat supply, expressed the opinion that the Germans were putting their whole shipbuilding strength into the construction of submarines, German submarines, he said were taking a steady toll of British ships, and as the war continued it was probable that more submarines would be engaged in this task.

It would not be the fault of the German Admiralty, he continued, if they failed to deal a fatal blow at the carrying trade which supplies Great Britain with food. As it was, even if there was no diminution of the overseas supply of meat, there would probably be less for the use of the civil population.

The Bill passed the second reading.

DID EVERYTHING HE COULD TO PREVENT THE ACCIDENT

Special to The Examiner.

NIAGARA FALLS, July 9.—Sydney Boyt, the motorman in charge of the trolley car which leaped the rails at Queenston, and who was brought to the local hospital for treatment, has issued a short statement concerning his attempts to maintain control of the doomed car.

"Going past Brock's monument where there is a steep grade, the car began to skid," he said. "I knew that the car was getting away from me and time after time I did everything within my power to bring her to a stop. We passed the next to the last curve safely, although we were going very fast, but the car was gaining speed all the time and I fully realized what was going to happen when we struck the last sharp turn.

"If we did round it in safety, I knew that we would crash into the station at the bottom and probably would shoot into the river, as there was nothing to stop it.

"I did not lose my head, and I kept trying to the very last to apply the brake.

"I felt the car leave the rails, and thought my last moment had come. The next instant I was lying covered with debris. I did not feel injured and my only thoughts were for the safety of the passengers.

"It is like a nightmare to me now, and I cannot begin to realize the serious extent of the accident. I did all that human power could under the circumstances, but all to no avail."

HUNS BURNED THE RUSSIAN WOUNDED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9.—The Times publishes the following:

"The war correspondent of the Novoe Vremya, writing from the Galician front, reports a case in which the Germans burned a large number of Russian wounded, together with the medical staff attending on them.

"'For some time,' he writes, 'persistent rumours circulated here seemed to me incredible, so terrible they were. Now, I hear on all hands that these humours are true and that an authentic report has been sent to Petrograd.

"We brought with us a large number of infectious cases from the Carpathian Mountains and left them temporarily in the Jesuit College at Chyrow. They fell into the hands of the Germans, who removed them to an isolated wooden barracks, together with the medical attendants, shut all the windows and doors, poured paraffin over the building and fired it. More than a hundred were thus burned alive.

"The Germans do not deny this fact. I have the authority of a number of our officers who have seen proclamations thrown over our positions by German aeroplanes, in which they point out that they were forced to resort to that cruelty by stern necessity in order not to carry infection into their army, and also to teach the Russians not to leave their sick and wounded behind them, thus burdening the German medical staff. The proclamation expresses the hope that the Russians will learn from the lesson."

Likely Broke Brake Chain

Cause of Trolley Tragedy, Says Electrical Expert

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 9.—Discussing the Queenston disaster, an electrical expert, who had his knowledge from a victim at the General Hospital, gave it as his opinion that the cause was a broken chain.

"On an incline such as the one at Queenston," he said, "it would be exceedingly difficult to stop a heavy car without brakes. If the power was on I doubt if a reverse would have stopped the car, for immediately the car is plugged it begins to skid and goes faster than ever. But there is no evidence of skidding here, so that if the trolley was off, without his brakes the motorman would not be able to stop, and the momentum from what I hear, were not 'greasy.' from what I hear were not 'greasy.' When a rail is good and wet it is not slippery; therefore in this case the rails would not count."

TORONTO, July 8.— Nearly two years have passed since the July day when Robert Aull, Jr., of St. Louis, Mo., wedded Doris Reid, daughter of George P. Reid, at Cobourg. The courts refused to interfere with the hastily-tied matrimonial knot, though the bride's father brought action. Mrs. Robert Aull, Jr., returned to Toronto, and her husband departed for parts unknown. This morning the matter was recalled when by consent, before Mr. Justice Clute, the bridegroom's solicitor and the lawyers for the bride's father had a motion to dispose of the costs enlarged.

Thomas F. Hall, solicitor, of Cobourg, produced his written retainer to act for Robert Aull, Jr., in the action and he contended that having succeeded in his action he is entitled to have his costs paid by Mr. Reid. The matter will come up again in a week.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WILSON

I used to speak slightin' of him once in a while to old Josiah; but he'd shake his head and say: "Boys allus want to make over everything in the whole world exceptin' themselves. This man has been proud and he has been high; and now he has to be helped in everything he does. To my mind he stands it mighty well. All the time he is hungerin' for news of his boy and drivin' spikes of torment into himself for havin' turned him adrift; but just because he knows this hurts Kate, he hardly ever mentions it.

"He has had his mail sent care of me, but he gets mighty little of it, and there's a steady heartache all the time he's waitin' for it, and a fierce heart throb whenever it comes. Judge him if ya want to, but put yourself in his place first."

On the Sunday afternoon after we had started the campaign on the Begum's hair, I got tired o' loafin' around the grove and bein' pestered by Isaac. He had sprouted a prodigious interest in Tom Smith, and kept devilin' somebody to go and pump Big Jeff as to what had become of him. I thought it was all on account of his havin' been the cause o' Tom Smith's bein' led away by Baldy Hagus, but I knew what had become of Tom Smith, and I was tryin' my best to think up some way that would leave him free to marry Kate.

Isaac had told the Begum about Tom Smith, and she had added him to her other mission work and was more of a pest than Isaac was. She asked me a lot about Tom Smith, and especially about his bad habits which I didn't think any of her real business and so I didn't take any pains to fill her ear on the subject.

"Did he swear badly?" sez she to me, that Sunday afternoon.

"Well," sez I, puttin' as stupid a look on my face as I could work up, "when he first came he did. He tried hard enough, but the more excited he got, the worse his cuss-words 'd mill around and tangle up. Red took him in hand, though, and before he left, he could swear about as good as any of us."

This seemed to shock her serious, and while she was sighin' about it, I slipped away and rode over to the Horse-shoe. I had got so by this time I had a sneakin' likin' for the Begum. She had grit and she had loads of it. She was scared to death at bein' where she was, and yet some inside voice of hers had yelled at her that this was where her duty lay, and she didn't care a hang how tough this was on the rest of the community; here she was goin' to stay until her duty got black in the face.

A two-year-old child could tell at a first glance that Baldy Hagus was open to bribery and hungry for it, and the Begum had bribed him to smuggle mail in and out for her. She had promised money and so Baldy was faithful and we couldn't get him to tell where she was writin' to, but we judged it was to some soul-savin' outfit in the East.

When I reached old Josiah's I found him perched at the door keepin' the fire goin' in his long-stemmed pipe and keepin' his gaze fixed intent on nothin' at all. Kate was just leadin' her father down the path to her own cabin where the swirl of the crick around the rocks made a pleasant restin' place.

I sat down and started my pipe and fixed my gaze on just what the old hermit was lookin' at, and we three, for of course the dog was there, sat like so many mountain peaks.

My thoughts rambled away until I plumb forgot where I was until Kate and her father came walkin' back. We spoke all around and Kate started to lead him into the house.

"I want to walk down that way," sez he.

"Oh, no," sez she, "you are already tired and you had better come in."

"I was tired," sez he, "but it seemed to rest me to walk here, and now I want to walk down there."

"There's nothin' much to see down there," sez old Josiah.

"No, father, there's nothin' to see down there," sez Kate.

The worst complaint I have again' lyin', is that it so blame seldom works. I knew right now, 'at the' was somethin' to see down there 'at they didn't want him to see, and I reckon he knew it, too; for he grabbed Kate's arm and headed down there with more vim 'n ever I'd seen him use, and the old hermit gave a peculiar whistle.

Kate's father took her straight towards a point where a little neck stuck into the crick. A tangle soon hid 'em from view; and old Josiah muttered: "I hope he was enough awake to hear my whistle; for he'll have to move some to keep from bein' seen."

Me and the old hermit sat with our ears stretched out to the utmost and presently we heard Kastle's high cackle givin' instructions as to what his wishes were. Then we heard the low murmur of aKte's voice and soon after that, Tom Smith came out of the tangle, walkin' proud and high, and Kate's father tottered close behind him, urgin' Kate along rather 'n assin' her for a crutch.

Tom Smith carried his head defiant and I was obliged to confess he reminded me somewhat of a hero. Old Josiah had claimed that all young men were jealous of all other young men provided the' was a young woman within a day's ride, and after he had said this I had tried my best to give Tom Smith the best opinion I could; so this time I owned up to myself that he really did fill the eye; but the next minute I had to bite my lips together to keep from laughin' right out.

The crick was shallow around this point, and as he hadn't had enough warnin' to make a clean get-away, he had ducked into the crick and had tried to hide his head in a clump. Kate's father was just the very one to peer into that clump the first thing, and when he had caught the outline of Tom Smith's face, he had been able to tell it was a live animal, but that was all. He had picked up a stone to throw into the clump and Kate had to grab his arm. Then he got close enough to make out what Tom Smith was, and had ordered him out as independent as a train conductor.

This was the first time Kate's father had ever set knowin' eyes on Tom Smith, and it would have been an embarrassin' moment at the best—which this decidedly wasn't. Tom Smith folded his arms and looked as nobly abused as was possible; but th' was mud even in his whiskers and muddy water tricklin' all over him, and I bet I wasn't jealous of him then.

"Do you know this man?" asked Kastle of old Josiah, who had just kept on with his smokin'.

"Why, yes," sez the old hermit.

"Who is he?"

"He's Tom Smith."

"Humph!" snorted Kastle. "That was the name he gave. Where is he from?"

"Down south-west o' here about twenty or twenty-five miles."

"What's his business?"

"Goats," sez old Josiah, "he's a goat-specialist. He knows more about goats 'n airy other man the' is I reckon."

"What was he doin' in that crick?"

"I didn't see him," sez the old hermit, examinin' Tom Smith; "but from his looks, I'd say he was cleanin' it out."

THE BATTLE FRONT

PETROGRAD, Russia, July 9, via London.

The number of head and arm wounds of the men at the front is enormous, for men in trenches expose only their heads and arms. Many hundreds are hit in the head and death does not result from the wound. Occasionally one may see the slightly wounded walk back with heads bound up or arms in slings. Motor trucks loaded with wounded tear along the roads leading back from the extreme front. Perhaps forty per cent. of the wounded are back on the firing line after three months' care and rest in a hospital. It all depends on a man's health and blood. If the blood is pure and good, the soldier gets the first aid, proper treatment and his wounds heal by first intention.

Good blood is everything to every man. It means fresh strong nerves, good digestion, good circulation. Those who have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery marvel at the way it checks blood diseases. See a man to-day with skin all broken out; see him a few weeks later after using the "Discovery," his skin is all cleared up, eyes bright, and he is contented with himself.

The formation of good health is good blood! Are you pale? Are you weak? Are you no longer ambitious or energetic? Have you pimples or boils? Do you suffer from headaches, low spirits? Then you are anaemic—your blood is thin, lacking in healthy, strength-giving red corpuscles. Then your blood is impure—and your liver is not up to its task of clearing the blood from the poisons accumulated.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a temperance remedy that will restore to you rich, health-giving blood—a remedy proved by experience (in tablet or liquid form). It is a glyceric extract of roots from our forests, known to science as those which will best give the stomach, liver and bowels needed help.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada, at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Escape of Ruth.

AFTER his experience in rescuing John Dorr from the hands of the outraged priests of Bhala, Sir Donald Faversham prepared to start the new day. He could not well realize just what had happened in the twenty-four hours that had just ended. It needed the commonplace details of a morning's toilet to make things seem actual.

And what facts they were that changed his whole future!

Ruth had promised to marry him!

Faversham belonged to that great class of Englishmen who unite the virtues of careful training with an adaptability to circumstance which has made Great Britain the colossus of the world.

He was as formal in many ways as a clock. In others he could amaze the most impulsive and impressionable adventurer.

When he first met Ruth he had had not the faintest notion of wooing her. His admiration had been frank and unreserved, but without any underlying depth of feeling.

His volunteering to join John Dorr and Ruth in this wild search for the missing idol had been what he called a lark.

"I suppose I was very foolish," John confessed ruefully.

It was only long association with her, the constant view of her pretty innocence and an occasional glimpse of her profounder and womanly nature that had touched his heart and wakened in him feelings that he had refrained from confessing to himself.

Then came the moment when she had turned to him for help and he had been the single person in the world who could save John Dorr.

Sharp and brief as had been the struggle in his own mind, it had brought him to an acknowledgment of the fact that she was the only woman he wanted for his wife.

On the very tick of her hour of trouble he had ventured to ask his reward for service.

She had promised, and now he, baronet and retired officer of the British army, shook like a boy at the thought of the happiness that awaited him.

They met at breakfast. Dorr still showing the effects of his night's adventures, Ruth bright eyed from want of sleep and Sir Donald alone presenting the appearance of one who had begun the day aright after a sound night's rest.

Their natural topic of conversation was of Dorr's attempt to capture the idol and Sir Donald's rescue of him.

John could give little satisfaction to Ruth's minute inquiries, and the Englishman confessed that he himself, though much more familiar with the native ways and native temples, had not much notion of exactly how it had all come about nor how he had found Dorr and extricated him.

"The only thing I gather from it all is this," he said amiably. "You had better take my advice in this country and not try to perform any of your western feats. India is a very old country, and they resent here anything that doesn't follow the good old lines."

"I suppose I was very foolish," John confessed ruefully. "But when I saw that image right within reach I simply couldn't resist the temptation to grab it and try to escape."

Sir Donald looked at Ruth meaningly. "I can't say that I'm a bit sorry, old chap," he told Dorr. "After all, as you say, it's an ill wind that blows no one any good."

Instantly Ruth caught his meaning, and her eyes fell. Yes, she had promised, and this brave gentleman who had risked his life for her sake should not be without his reward.

But—she stared miserably at her plate until John rallied her and swore that he would yet get the plans.

"And here comes the fellow who will tell us what really did happen," Sir Donald remarked, pointing to a mucn bedraggled native who had entered the compound and was evidently waiting for some one.

"That's my old servant," he continued. "If you will excuse me I'll go and hear what he has to tell us."

Ruth and John watched the two of them for some time, the tall, carefully dressed Englishman and the dirty native.

They could see that the latter was much excited, and toward the last Sir Donald himself seemed to lose a little of his aplomb.

Finally they saw him nod curtly to the native, who squatted down on the pavement. A moment later he had rejoined them. His usually placid face bore an expression of anxiety.

"What can be the matter?" demanded Ruth.

"Not anything for you to worry about," replied Faversham. "I'm sure I can arrange everything presently; but you certainly stirred up the priests, Dorr."

"Well, what do they intend to do?" inquired John, undisturbed, except that he did not understand a glance exchanged by Ruth and Sir Donald.

"It seems they have started a kind of holy war against us," the baronet answered grimly. "You desecrated their idols and they've excited a lot of the people against you and"—

"And what?" demanded John impatiently.

With a meaning look toward Ruth, Sir Donald faced Dorr. "This is not a place for Miss Gallon," he said formally. "The truth of the matter is, we are known to be stopping here and the mob will undoubtedly visit us shortly."

"But the police!"

Sir Donald looked very uncomfortable indeed. "My dear fellow, don't you realize that what you and I did last night was purely and simply indefensible? We tried to rob a temple, to be frank about it."

"I tried to recover some papers belonging to us," he protested.

"We would have a stiff time trying to prove that to the officials here," was the reply. "As a matter of fact, I can't afford to bring this up. I'm still practically an officer and I should have a deuce of a time clearing myself. You can't afford to call in the police because you're an American, and you broke British law, and I very much fear killed a British subject or two."

"I see," Dorr assented thoughtfully. "But what are we to do?"

"Precisely, precisely the question," said Sir Donald. "You and I could slip away, but there is the young lady to consider."

"And the plans," said John doggedly.

"And I, as her guardian, have to think of her best interests," was the retort.

Faversham tugged at his mustache in perplexity. Then he said quietly, "I think Miss Gallon has really put her interests in my charge."

"What—what do you mean?" stammered Dorr.

At this moment there came from the street outside the sound of cries and yells and trampling feet. The two men looked at each other. With one accord they withdrew inside the hallway.

"That's the mob coming!" Sir Donald said hoarsely. "Now for it!"

"We must save Ruth at all events!"

"Certainly," said Faversham coldly. "But I must plan quickly. Ah, here comes my faithful Achmet!"

The servant spoke rapidly in the vernacular, and Sir Donald answered in the same tongue. Then he turned to John.

Ruth responded to the summons without a tremor, and when a few hurried words had informed her of what was afoot she turned to the Englishman and said simply, "What shall we do?"

"I am going to put you in charge of my old servant Achmet," he told her. "I trust him, and he will see you safe. Dorr and I shall have to go a separate way."

By this time the mob had filled the street without and was yelling for vengeance on the sacrilegious white men, punctuating its demands with an occasional stone against the wall.

Achmet bowed low before Ruth and with a gesture indicated that she was to follow him. She hesitated.

Sir Donald curtly said, "Hurry!"

She impulsively turned to John, and he saw her eyes filled with anxiety for him. That satisfied his wounded heart, and he urged her on.

When she had disappeared in the wake of the hastening servant Sir Donald glanced at Dorr and then said abruptly: "Come ahead! We'll try a back way out."

She Impulsively Turned to John.

"We shan't interfere with Ruth's getting away, shall we?" John responded.

There was a glimmer of admiration in Faversham's eyes as he shook his head.

"No. Achmet will take her his own way. We go an entirely different one—if we escape the mob."

He had hardly spoken when the outer gate swung inward and there was a wild crush of struggling bodies between the high pillars. A stone struck the floor between the two Europeans.

"Come with me," said Faversham and drew Dorr around a corner and then inside a small entry. Another entry giving off this offered escape and they darted down it. An instant later they were in an empty courtyard.

"I know where I am now," Faversham said coolly and opened a gate in the opposite wall which led into a garden. Five minutes later the two men were strolling along a quiet lane out of sight and sound of the mob.

"They will destroy all our things," Dorr suggested.

"No. The hotelkeeper and the police will see to it that they don't. All they wanted was you and me." Failing to catch us, they will disperse."

"But where shall we find Ruth?" John went on eagerly.

"Achmet will take her to a camp of beggars outside the city," he answered.

"Safer than with a regiment of soldiers," was the response. "I know where the place is. Let's go to it. I guarantee that we shall find Miss Gallon safe and sound. I know Achmet of old. He is specially trustworthy because he is a Mohammedan and he doesn't respect idols any more than you and I do."

They finally reached the camp up the bank of the river and Achmet exclaimed before them.

"Where is the maiden?" demanded Faversham.

"I heard your voices," she said, laughing. "Achmet thought I ought to get out right away, but I wanted to surprise you."

"And that is the way you got out of the hotel?" demanded John.

"Yes, Achmet tucked me into this basket and carried me right through all those terrible people."

"What is to be done now?" John demanded presently.

"I'll have Achmet get our belongings," said Faversham. "This gang here is his, he says. We can't do better than stick with them for awhile. I believe they are going up into the hills anyway. So much the better for us. Bhala is no spot for you and me just now."

"But the idol and the plans!" protested John. "We know where it is today. Tomorrow it may be a hundred miles away or hidden past our ever finding it!"

"That is true," said Sir Donald. "But the safety of Miss Gallon is paramount. I will do what I can. Possibly I'll be able to do more than you think."

With this Dorr had to be content, but later when he and Ruth were alone he brought the subject up again.

To his amazement, Ruth seemed little interested and her manner was an odd mixture of reserve and timidity.

Gone was the old frankness and intimacy.

At last John said quietly, "I hope you don't think I was wholly careless of your safety last night. My only object was to get back your papers."

PTE. PHIPPS DOING WELL

Red Cross Nurse Writes His Mother in Peterboro' About His Treatment

Mrs. A. W. Phipps, 2 Fradette avenue, has received the following letter from a visitor of the Canadian Red Cross in connection with her son, Pte. A. W. Phipps of the 57th detachment in the 2nd Battalion who was wounded at St. Julien:

Westcliffe Road,
Broadstairs,
Kent, June 4.

Dear Mrs. Phipps,—I expect you will wonder who this letter is from, but I must introduce myself by telling you I am the Canadian Red Cross Society's visitor in Broadstairs, and I go every week to see your son, Pte. A. W. Phipps, in the Yarrow Military Hospital. I thought perhaps you would like just a few lines about him, and yesterday he gave me your address and told me he had just had a long letter from you which he was delighted to get. He is getting on so nicely and looks so much better than when he first came to the Hospital, when of course, he was weak from loss of blood—in fact he looks splendid and said yesterday his wounded leg was doing finely. He is carried down into the garden all the fine days and we are having lovely weather just now and hope it will last. The gardens at the hospital are lovely. He had a very festive day yesterday as he had been for a long motor drive in the afternoon to Canterbury and back and he was just having a good tea when I saw him. There was a concert afterwards which he was going to stay down for. He always seems very gay and cheerful and very plucky over the pain, which I am glad to say he says is getting better, and he tells me he has a good appetite.

I like going to see the Canadians so much. There are four in the hospital at present, but none of them are in your boy's battalion. I have such a pretty badge to wear, which it will always be so nice to keep when this terrible war is over.

I hope these few lines will reassure you about your boy, and I know what a terribly anxious time you must have been having, and England must seem such a long way away.

The Canadians have been so splendid and I don't know what would have happened without them. With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
(Miss) Gladys Clark.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Restore the nerves by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EMPIRE'S POWER IN WAR.

Balfour Says a New Feature of British Union Appears.

LONDON, July 8. — Hon. Arthur Balfour, unveiling to-day a memorial to Joseph Chamberlain, at the Guild Hall, said the common feeling of Empire among all our free feeling of Empire among all our free self-governing dominions was absolutely novel in history and had no parallel. It was a creation scarcely dreamt of by our grandfathers, and yet was now in actual operation before our eyes.

When they welcomed the contingents of gallant men from Canada Australia, New Zealand, and the Cape they could not forget the spirit which had produced this marvellous result.

That the British Empire stood for peace had been admitted sometimes with admiration, sometimes with scorn, but that the British Empire when attacked, might stand for war before their eyes.

THE EFFECTS OF THE SHOCK OF BATTLE

Soldiers Suffer in Different Ways From Various Forms of Nervous and Mental Disease---Ontario Physicians Recommend an Expedition to Give Special Treatment to Such Men and Also Proposed That They Should Be Cared For in Canada.

At the meeting of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons, held in Toronto last week, the following resolution was carried amidst much enthusiasm:

"Whereas it has become known to members of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario that many of our soldiers in Europe are now suffering in special ways from various forms of nervous and mental trouble, due to the terrible shock of war. Whereas these various forms of nervous and mental diseases require special treatment, and that efforts are being put forth by those in authority to give this special treatment so far as the circumstances and conditions of war permit. Nevertheless, these circumstances and conditions are such as to render adequate treatment impossible and in consequence many of our brave young men are not receiving the care and chance for life and health which properly specialized and experienced medical treatment and nursing might give them;

"Therefore, be it resolved that this Council respectfully but urgently request the Government of this Province to at once equip an expedition of experienced and specially trained physicians and nurses from its public institutions and others specially qualified for such work, and despatch them without delay with proper and full equipment to minister to those afflicted and restore them to convalescence and health; or, where this is impossible or likely to be unduly prolonged, request the War Office to send them home to Canada, when suitable accommodation such as that soon available at Whitby be prepared for their reception, and that this special treatment and nursing be there continued so long as may be required under the favourable conditions that such location, surroundings, and accommodation afford; and that a copy of this resolution be sent to Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario."

It is earnestly to be hoped the Government will give serious attention to the strong recommendation of the Medical Council. The Council has touched upon a subject that has not received proper attention. This war differs from any incident of its character in the history of mankind. The huge mass of men engaged in the war arena, the power and strength of projectiles, the trench warfare, the aeroplane, the poisonous gases, the searchlights, all these are entirely out of proportion to any other war. It is the first time gases have been used. It marks the entrance of the searchlight on the field of battle and it introduces the submarine and the aerial method of warfare.

As a result of all these the soldier is subjected to danger, both persistent and continuous. There is no relaxation, no relief. By land and sea, day and night, from shells and mines and air, danger is ever present, and ever threatening. Thus it is that in this war we have a new type of ailment or of disability, or, if not altogether new, they are in number and variety far and away beyond anything heretofore recorded in the annals of war. The character of these diseases is nervous and mental. We find loss of sight, hearing and speech without any apparent reason therefor. We find various forms of paralysis of arms, limbs, of parts of the body in large or small areas. There is loss of function of various organs, always distressing and often quite obscure. Standing out prominently we find many forms of mental disease, loss of memory, excitement, depression. Among such vast armies as are engaged in this war we might well look for many cases of nervous and mental affections. But the strain and horrors to which the soldier is exposed by day and night have resulted in an increase in insanity beyond anything yet recorded.

Now provision should be made to meet this lamentable incident of modern warfare. To meet it properly we must provide physicians and nurses who are trained in nervous and mental work, and we must place at their disposal hospitals and equipment necessary for the proper nursing and treatment of these various diseases. It is proposed by this resolution that the Government of Ontario select from the Hospitals of the Insane of this Province an hospital unit of physicians and nurses who would proceed at once to the front to take charge of this work. The wisdom of this permits of no debate. The physicians and nurses so selected would know what to do and how to do it. The afflicted we have mentioned would receive immediately the scientific treatment necessary for their disease; no time would be wasted; no mistakes made.

In addition, the resolution suggests that, if the illness threatens to be prolonged, then these cases should as early as possible be sent home under scientific observation, and that the hospital at Whitby be set aside for their further treatment or for their convalescence. No one will gainsay the humanity and wisdom of this course. Whitby is an ideal institution for such a purpose. Its location, on the beautiful shore of Lake Ontario, is most charming and attractive. It has ground sufficient to afford recreation and employment so necessary in the treatment of nervous and mental affections. In architectural design and finish it is the last word in hospital life. There is not on this continent, nay, we may affirm, there is not in the world to-day an institution that in design and finish can measure up with this last contribution of Ontario to the world of science. What nobler conception of duty can there be than that we should dedicate this institution in all its virgin life and beauty to the services of those who go down on the field of battle, gloriously upholding the ideals of our life and our civilization, and whose sacrifices and devotion merit in return from us the best gifts we can bestow on these Canadian heroes.

There is another and a valuable feature of the situation that should not be lost to view. So far as we are able to judge, many of the ailments, both nervous and mental, caused by the war, and from which our soldiers are suffering, are not recorded in medical science. Ontario should see to it that she is no laggard in the scientific world and she should have in the war arena men whose time has been devoted to this work and whose experience would be invaluable, both in the scientific and in the clinical aspect of this new field of medicine.

The welfare of our soldiers demand this step should be taken. Our position in the world of science, and our schools and colleges call to us to step forth to take our place. The future welfare of the race depends in a large measure on our knowledge of these facts that determine the health and well-being of our people. In this moment we should do our part and do it well.

Throughout the Province the suggestions of the Medical Council have been received with universal acclaim. In following the course outlined the Government would receive in full measure the support of the people of this Province.

KAISER'S ANNUAL PINT OF BEER TO REGIMENT

Special to the Examiner.

LONDON, July 9.—For close upon half a century the First Royal Dragoons, of whom the Kaiser was the honorary colonel, have celebrated the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo by toasting the health of the king of Prussia in a pint of beer provided by that monarch. The old custom was broken this year and there were no cries of "Hoch, Hoch, the Kaiser!" as in previous years.

On several occasions—the last time at Shorncliffe in 1904—the Kaiser attended in person and went through the ceremony of addressing the regiment on parade, presenting it with a laurel wreath and entertaining the men to the time honoured "pint."

On the other occasions he has been represented by the German consul of the town in which the Dragoons happened to be stationed for the time being. The last ceremony took place in South Africa two months before the regiment sailed for England to take part in the present war.

Berlin is the home of nearly one-third of Germany's more than 300 music schools.

Turks Make Futile Attack On Allied Lines at Dardanelles

LONDON, July 8.— The Gallipoli Peninsula again has been the scene of very severe fighting, the Turks on Sunday having made their third attempt within a week to regain the ground which the allies took from them in their last attack. Sunday's offensive, like those which preceded, resulted, according to British and French reports issued to-night, in the complete discomfiture of the Turks, who are said to have suffered again severely.

The allies are only six miles from their goal, the Narrows of the Dardanelles, but the country between is strongly fortified, and a gain of a few hundred yards is all that can be expected at one time. There is talk of a new combined general attack by the land and the sea forces.

"Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton reports that the night of July 3-4 was quiet in the northern section, but at 4 a.m. the enemy started a heavy bombardment of the trenches. All the guns previously used against us and some new ones were in action, but the bombardment died away about 6 a.m. without doing much damage. During the bombardment about twenty 11.2 inch shells were dropped from a Turkish battleship in the straits.

"In the southern section, the Turks kept up a heavy musketry fire along the whole line during the night, and did not leave their trenches. At 4 a.m. their batteries started the most violent bombardment that has yet been experienced. At least 5,000 rounds of artillery ammunition were expended by them.

General Attack by Turks.

"Meanwhile this shelling of our lines on the peninsula proved the preliminary to a general attack on our front, with special efforts at certain points. The principal effort was made at the junction of the Royal Naval division section with that of the French.

"Here at 7.30 a.m. the Turks drove back our advanced troops and assaulted a portion of the line held by the Royal Naval division. Some fifty Turks gained a footing in our trench, where, nevertheless, some men of the Royal Naval division held on to our supports, and the men who had retired counter-attacked immediately and hurled the Turks out of the trench again.

"Another attack on the right of the 29th division section was practically wiped out by rifle and machine gun fire. On our left the Turks massed in a nullah, to the north-east of our newly-captured trenches, and attempted several attacks. None of these was able to get home owing to the steadiness of our troops and our effective artillery support. The bombardment died down towards 11 a.m., though it was resumed at intervals.

"Not only was the result a complete failure, but while our losses were negligible and no impression was made on our line, the enemy added a large number to his recent very heavy casualties. It seems plain from the disjointed nature of his attack that he is finding it difficult to drive his infantry forward to face our fire."

DON'T USE SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair don't use soap. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious as it dries the scalp and hair. Soap or anything else in pieces. You can get this at any drugstore and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Golden Text: Know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart and a willing hand. 1 Chron., 28:9.

1. Verses 1-4. David was seventy years old at this time, impotent and decrepit; how much aws he to blame for his bodily condition?

2. What can be said for his advisers, causing an old man, with "one foot in the grave" to marry this fair young maiden?

3. Why would you say or not that God was pleased in those days, with things which displease him in these days?

4. Verses 5-10. How do you explain the fact that Absalom and Adonijah, both sons of heathen mothers, and both very handsome men, turned traitors to their father and, apparently, to the plans of God?

5. Are unusual good looks and ability generally a help, or a hinderance, to character? Why?

6. If Absalom and Adonijah had not been pampered and petted by their father and mother, but properly trained, what would have been the probable effect upon their characters.

7. Here are two priests, one on the side of the usurper, and the other on the side of constituted authority What reason if any, is there to think that they were both men of God?

8. What is the degree of probability that because a man is a minister of the gospel to-day, he is also a man of God?

9. Would it have been possible then, and is it possible now for a man of God to take sides with those who are opposing the plans of God? Give your reasons.

10. Verses 11-21. Who was Bathsheba before she was the wife of David?

11. Notwithstanding the circumstances of David's marriage to Bathsheba, what reason is there to believe that she had been a true wife to David, and a good mother to Solomon, their son?

12. What reason is there to believe that God expects us to use just as much skill, and diplomacy, in carrying out his promise as if we were unaided by him?

13. Verses 22-31. What was the character of Nathan and what part did he take in the Uriah-David-Bathsheba matter? (See 2. Sam. 12: 1-13).

14. To what extent may we judge of the righteousness of a cause by the character of the men who advocate it?

15. Is a promise made under oath, of any greater moral obligation than a promise without an oath? Why?

16. Verses 32-53. Why did God through David select Solomon for the future king? (1 Chron., 22: 8-9.) (This is one of the questions to be answered in writing by the members of the club).

17. If a son has all the necessary qualities for a position, does God disqualify him for any sign on the part of his parents? Why?

18. Chap. 2: 1-12. What, if any, exceptions are there to the rule that righteousness is a guarantee of success to every individual, as well as to a king and his people?

19. What, notwithstanding all a man's ambitions in life, will be his chief concern at death?

20. What, for the most part, had been the character of David and of his reign?

21. What opinion would you express concerning David's parting instructions to Solomon concerning how he should deal with certain individuals?

Lesson for Sunday, July 18, 1915 Solomon Chooses Wisdom. 1 Kings, 3: 4-15.

WILL ARREST EVELYN THAW FOR CONTEMPT

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 9.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw Wednesday was declared in contempt to court, and will be brought back under arrest to testify for the State in Harry K. Thaw's sanity test unless she crosses into Canada.

Justice Hendrick Wednesday declared Thaw's actress wife in contempt, and said he would sign an attachment for her as soon as Attorney-General Frank Cook presented it to him. Cook said he would have the attachment ready at two o'clock.

Mrs. Thaw, even without the attachment, is subject to arrest, and a deputy sheriff will go at once to Malone, N.Y. Mrs. Thaw can be arrested anywhere in the United States but would be immune in Canada. However, those who know her best said she would return, as she has thirty weeks of vaudeville booking in and around New York for next fall, and the attachment against her will run for five years.

Certificate of Ill-Health.

Dr. Bernard Livingston, the physisian who Tuesday gave Mrs. Thaw a certificate of ill-health, which stated that for Mrs. Thaw to undergo examination on the witness stand would jeopardize her health, was the first witness Wednesday.

"You examined Mrs. Evelyn Thaw Tuesday?" asked Cook.

"I did," said the doctor.

"She was in New York under subpoena to appear in this court," said Cook, "and you gave her a certificate of ill-health, which she sent to me. I think I am entitled to know all about that. What kind of an examination did you make, and what did you find that justified your certificate?"

John B. Stanchfield objected but was overruled. Justice Hendrick then asked the witness:

"Did you think you were empowered to advise Mrs. Thaw not to come to court?"

"I did," replied the physician.

Livingston said he found Mrs. Thaw suffering from nervous trouble. On cross-examination, Livingston said the appointment to examine Mrs. Thaw was made by telephone by Dr. Austin Flint, the state's chief alienist, at whose home Mrs. Thaw spent part of the day Tuesday.

"I still consider Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw the most important witness the State can call," said Mr. Cook, "and I intend to fight to have her take the stand. Mrs. Thaw left New York city without my consent. I certainly am going to learn why she is unable to testify."

Thaw May Be Called.

Jubilant over the failure so far of the State to have his wife testify against him, Harry K. Thaw Wednesday planned to balk the State further in its effort to have him returned to Matteawan. The slayer of Stanford White was expected to take the stand as a witness for the State late Wednesday, but Thaw has suggested to his lawyers that he cannot be a witness against himself.

"They cannot convict me out of my own mouth, can they?" he asked.

John H. Stanchfield told him that that matter would be threshed out in court when Thaw is called to the stand.

Deputy General Cook's plans for Wednesday were to call his two alienists, Dr. Austin Flint and Dr. Carlos McDonald, and then Thaw himself.

Thre hundred miles of electric railroads, to be supplied with power by nearby waterfalls, are being built in the Pryenees.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON OR DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

For the busy hours of the morning, when the housewife has to attend to the ways of her household, such a garment as this has the double advantage that it may serve as a dress or be slipped on over one.

The lines of construction are those of the princess dress, with long seams from shoulder to hem, joining front and sides and back and sidebacks. This leaves a plain panel in the centre of both front and back. The closing is placed at the side of the front and extends from the shoulder to the hem. Large pockets are stitched in at the side front seams and are strong and serviceable. The neck is round and the sleeves long or short.

This is a style which demands firm materials, and linen, duck, beach cloth, panama and heavy gingham are all appropriate. The only ornamentation possible is the trimming of neck, sleeves and pockets with a band of contrasting material. The buttons also may make an ornamental note, but these should not be round or in any way shaped so that they will catch in things, for this garment is for use first and for ornament afterward.

The pattern, No. 7,264, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5¼ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 27 inch contrasting goods.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FRENCH ARE SUCCESSFUL IN VOSGES

Advance On 700 Yard Front And Take 1000 Prisoners

MARKED SUCCESS FOR THE FRENCH IN THE VOSGES

On a 700 Yard Front, the German Trenches Were Penetrated to a Depth of 600 Yards and Nearly 1000 Prisoners Were Taken---Arras is Being Battered to Pieces by German Shells But No Military Damage Has Been Done.

LOST TRENCHES RE-TAKEN FROM ENEMY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 9.—(Official Communique).—Arras is being systematically battered into ruins by the German shell fire. For 48 hours the Teutons have been bombarding the city from a long range, both day and night, with scarcely a moment's cessation.

Several sections of the city are reported in flames. The French soldiers have promptly extinguished all fires that threatened military works, but residences and public buildings are being wiped out by fire or falling before the crash of shells.

The bombardment has done no great damage of military importance. The German artillerymen have been unable to get the range of any of the stores of supplies for the armies north of Arras. But in addition to the cathedral, several fine public buildings have been pounded into heaps of wreckage. Both sides are using shells heavily in the region north of Arras, particularly near Souchez. Violent cannonading is going on in the Neuvron plateau.

"We have recaptured 150 yards of trenches lost to the enemy in the Le Pretre Forest region on July 4," said the communique. "The Germans attacked with liquid fire and aerial torpedoes at one point. They were at first successful, but later were ejected from our positions. We have had marked success at Fontenalle. In the Vosges our troops captured German works from the hill south-east of Fontenalle to the Launois Road. On a 700-yard front we made a gain of 600 yards deep, taking nearly 1,000 prisoners."

HALIFAX, N. S., July 9.—The steamer Minnehaha, with the fire out, arrived at quarantine here shortly before 11 o'clock. The vessel was not allowed to dock, and no one from shore permitted to go aboard the ship. Captain Claret made no statement before noon.

LONDON, July 9.—A series of explosions, the cause of which is as yet unknown, to-day almost totally destroyed the Curlis Powder Mills at Bounslow, Middlesex. It is not known how many were killed. One hundred men were at work in the mills.

ATHENS, July 9.—The Turkish arsenal at Cornedor was partially destroyed by an explosion of unknown origin early to-day. Despatches from Constantinople said the shock was felt there and caused a panic, the people believing the Russian Black Sea fleet had blown up a Bosphorus fort.

HULL, Eng., July 9.—The Wilson liner Guido was torpedoed and sunk off the north of Scotland to-day. The crew was saved.

The Guido was a 2,093-ton steel screw steamer, owned by T. Wilson, Sons and Co., of Hull, and was registered from that port. She was 310 feet long, 44 feet at her beam. She was built in 1913.

BRITISH IMPORTS GROW, EXPORTS DECREASE.

LONDON, July 8.—The British Board of Trade figures for the month of June show an increase in imports of $89,180,000. The principal increases were in food, raw material and cotton.

The exports showed a decrease of $33,195,000, chiefly in manufactured articles, of which $7,500,000 was in cotton textiles.

LONDON, July 9.—The Daily Chronicle says: "In some quarters it is rumoured that if Major-General Stanley B. Von Donop, Master General of Ordnance, does not resign, David Lloyd George will; and that if Major-General Von Donop does, Field-Marshal Lord Kitchener also will go."

The controversy also developed the fact that the mysterious Cabinet Munitions Committee was headed by Lord Kitchener. Von Donop, who has been Master of the British Ordnance, and is blamed by some for the ammunition shortage, is a first cousin to the Prussian General, Hans Von Donop. His being left in such an important position though a member of an old German family, has aroused a storm of protest.

AUSTRIANS USE SHIELDS AS EMPLOYED BY ROMAN LEGIONS.

LONDON, July 8.—Austin West, the Daily Chronicle correspondent at Turin, telegraphs:

"Reviving the methods of the Roman legions under Julius Caesar, the Austrians are adopting backshields and breastplates on their Alpine front. Some of their infantry use a portable steel screen, rectangular in shape, furnished with eye peepers, for protection against shrapnel shot and grenade splenters while climbing mountain slopes.

"A quantity of these has been picked up in front of the entrenchments north of Val Grande, between Monte Croce Pass and Friekofel, where the enemy suffered particularly grievous losses in a futile attack on Monday night.

"Austrian reinforcements continue to arrive at the Isonzo front and the Italians find themselves faced by superior numbers at certain points. They are, however, holding ground, making full use of their wonderful artillery, which is playing havoc with the Austrian entrenched positions and rendering ineffective the enemy's repeated attempts to regain lost ground."

ROUTES ARE SUGGESTED

LOCAL DELEGATES THERE

At a meeting in Campbellford of the Trent Valley District of the Hydro Electric Railway Association, yesterday, two routes for proposed roads were suggested. The different municipalities will be written and asked to pass a resolution to request the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario to make a report on the feasibility of the said routes.

As Campbellford was not represented at a former meeting the representatives there were written by Mayor Wm. Buller, President of the Trent Valley District of the Association, suggesting that they arrange for a meeting when all could get together. Yesterday was the day settled upon and Campbellford as the place of meeting. There were present from Peterborough Mayor Buller, City Clerk Armstrong, who is Secretary of the Association, and Ald. J. J. Duffus. In the absence of Ald. G. Walter Green, who is a member of the Executive, Ald. Duffus was asked to attend.

The Campbellford men present were C. L. Owen, Vice-Pres.; I. A. Humphries, a member of the Executive, and President of the Campbellford Board of Trade, Mayor W. J. Armstrong, Councillors Pallissen, Lynch and Fowlds, and T. J. Horkins and B. J. Lynch, members of the Campbellford Board of Trade.

Two Lines.

The first route proposed was to commence at Central Ontario Junction, and follow through the Township of Rawdon, Hastings County, to Campbellford, through the Townships of Seymour, Percy, Alnwick, and Haldimand to Cobourg. The other was to start at Peterborough and proceed through the Townships of North and South Monaghan, Cavan, Hope and Hamilton to Cobourg.

When each municipality through which the proposed roads would pass, has passed the necessary resolution, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission will be asked to make a full report, regarding the feasibility, the estimated cost of construction, the probable revenue, and the cost of operation. It is necessary, first however, that each municipality should pass the resolution.

The proposed routes would serve districts which are not at present receiving service from railroads, and should be heartily endorsed by the people. It is the intention that the two road should form a junction some distance from Cobourg and run to the Lake Shore Town on the one line.

New Record in Tea Prices.

Over eight million pounds of tea have been sunk in merchant ships during the war. This immense quantity could ill be spared at a time when the demand for tea throughout the world has reached a greater volume than ever. Anyway the cost of tea has risen to a higher level than history records for many years.

ARRANGING FOR CARING FOR THE CONVALESCENTS

Details in Regard to Their Distribution Have Been Completed and a Steady Homeward Movement is Now Expected

THE RIFLE QUESTION

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 9.—Hon. Senator Lougheed, the acting Minister of Militia, and other officers returned this morning from Quebec City, where they made arrangements for the care and distribution of the Canadian convalescents.

It is expected that from now on there will be a steady homeward movement of Canadian convalescents and disabled soldiers.

"We have been bending our energy toward meeting all criticism levelled against the Ross rifle," said Senator Lougheed, Acting Minister of Militia, this morning, "and we are quite confident that any drawbacks or defects can be quickly overcome and surmounted."

This is the reply given to the discussion of arms in the British House of Commons yesterday. It is understood that the chief trouble has been with the jamming of cartridges, this being due to the fact that there has been a slight difference between the British and Canadian ammunition. Difficulty has been exercised in the extraction of the empty shell, due to the fact that the cartridge rim on the earlier issue of British ammunition was soft, and that the extractor would tear through without securing a firm grip.

FREE SWIMMING CAMPAIGN AT THE Y. M. C. A

Three reasons why every boy and young man in Peterborough should know how to swim:

First: Because of the river and lakes here and near-by.

Third: Because of the service you may be able to render others in case of accident.

Realising these facts the Y.M.C.A. will open its pool to any boy and young man in the city free of charge next week. Lessons will be given from 10 to 11 a.m., for boys, and 7.30 to 8.30 for men.

Don't miss this opportunity. It's open to all.

Caught 12 Bass and 4 'Lunge

Mr. N. Nicholls and wife of this city drove out to Little Mud Lake (north of Selwyn) yesterday for an afternoon's fish. To say that success crowned their efforts is putting it mildly. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Nicholls of Selwyn, were also in the party. The afternoon's catch resulted in 12 bass and four fine lunge—a good record for a few hours' fishing.

MORE MEN ARE NEEDED

Recruiting Better Than it Was Ten Months Ago Kitchener Announces But the War is Going to Be a Long One

TRIBUTE TO CANADIANS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9.—Lord Kitchener received a tremendous popular ovation when he appeared at the Guild Hall this afternoon and addressed a great mass meeting. The hall itself was packed an hour before the War Lord arrived, and a crowd of 50,000 jammed the streets outside. The throngs were held back by the city and territorial regiments, and many men from the trenches were in the lines.

"The recruiting situation is immeasurably better than it was ten months ago," he said. "But let me emphasize the fact that we need men—more men—still more men. Make no mistake—this war is going to be a long one." Kitchener interposed in his address a tribute to "the gallant work of the Canadians in Flanders" that started an outburst of cheering. While the War Lord was speaking hundreds of recruiting sergeants worked throughout the crowds and secured many enlistments. Inside the hall were Ambassadors Page and many other diplomats.

"Our position to-day is as serious as at the beginning of the war," continued Lord Kitchener. "The Australians and New Zealanders at the Dardanelles have performed brilliant feats of arms, and South Africa is offering large forces to the Empire. It behooves every Englishman to do his duty."

G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., Got Fancy Quilt at Brailey's S. S. Strawberry Festival

The garden party under the auspices of Brailey's Sunday School, held on Thursday evening on the lawn of the Williamson residence, North Monaghan, was another of the successful events that have been held almost nightly in the city and surrounding townships. There was a large attendance of Peterborough people, most of whom motored out. Supper was served from 6 until 8 o'clock and proved an excellent one. The Salvation Army band provided a fine programme of music. During the evening a number of speeches were made by Mr. Geo. Gillespie, M.P.P., Mr. Oliver, Superintendent of the Lily Lake Sunday School, Messrs. R. J. Soden, R. C. Braund, Herb. Forester, Harry Webber, Harold Snowden, T. D. Young. A feature of the evening was the auction sale of a quilt upon which 116 names had been worked. They included local citizens in addition to many from North Monaghan. Mr. Gillespie was the highest bidder.

AUSTRIAN ARMY LOST 15,000 MEN ON KRASNIK ROAD

Lost Touch With Mackensen's Forces and Were Unexpectedly Attacked by the Russians Who Inflicted Heavy Losses on Them

DELAYED THE ADVANCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 9.— A Petrograd despatch says: "The Austrian army under Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, hurriedly pushing forward Monday on the high road from Krasnik to Lublin, under the impression that the Russians were in full retreat, lost touch with Field Marshall Von Mackensen's army on the right. The Archduke was vigorously attacked with disconcerting unexpectedness and lost no fewer than 15,000 men. This setback delayed the advance of the entire Austro-German forces, and it soon will be seen whether they will be able to pull themselves together."

PTE. SHEARMAN WAS KILLED IN ACTION APRIL 29

Nephew of Mr. J. L. Wood About Whom Nothing Has Been Heard For Two Months is Now Officially Reported

WELL KNOWN HERE

In yesterday's Examiner reference was made to the fact that no word had been heard of Pte. H. L. Shearman, of the 15th Battalion, since the battle of Langemarck. To-day his name appears on the official casualty list as one of those killed in action on April 29th, a week after the beginning of the big fight. Pte. Shearman, who is a nephew of Mr. J. L. Wood, city, was a resident of Peterborough for several years during which time he made many friends, who will learn with deep regret of his death.

GEORGE ST. CHOIR'S FINE OUTING

The wet weather recently has made picnics rather risky. Yesterday, however, changed the scene, when, after an all-night rain, Old Sol struggled through the mist, drove away the clouds, and shone to almost the limit.

One of the finest outings, we venture to say, took place yesterday, when the choir of George Street Methodist Church, about forty in number, paid a visit to McCracken's Landing, Stoney Lake.

Leaving Government Wharf at 8.15 on the Manita, the winding waters of the canal were traversed, through Clear Lake to Stoney Lake, arriving at McCracken's about one o'clock. Here dinner was waiting, to be partaken of heartily by the choristers.

Following this important ceremony—the writer spoke to many of the fair sex who were hardly able to sit up owing to aching voids—races were run off, baseball was played, and tugs-of-war tugged ere the return trip was commenced at 3.30. The trip home was as interesting as the outgoing part, and on reaching Lock No. 5 a halt was called, and proceedings ashore the company sat down to tea on the lawn, where another clearance was easily effected.

The Government Wharf was reached about nine o'clock, all feeling the better for the day's outing.

Prizes for the racing events were presented to the winners on the way home.

To the parental watchfulness of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Renwick, the arrangements of the committee, and goodness of the Weather Man, a great day was the verdict of all.

Let us not forget the kindly skipper and crew of the Manita in our thankfulness.

This Might Pass As Another Ford Story

Mr. J. T. O'Connell slowed his car up to the curb in front of his office on Hunter street. Shortly afterwards Mr. John Brightman drew up behind it, and the two cars had a few minutes' rest. A few minutes later Mr. O'Connell re-issued from his office, his mind more or less intent on some business, turned over the engine of the car and shot down the street. While he was away he had the tank filled with gasoline and after completing the business of that trip returned to the office.

"You're the man that took it, eh?" Mr. Brightman exclaimed, as he recognised his car, with Mr. O'Connell at the wheel. Just then it dawned on Mr. O'Connell that he had been buying "gas" for somebody else's car.

RECRUITING.

The Dominion Government has a hard row to hoe. It has been, and is still, confronted with an unusual and difficult situation, and in some respects it has met it well. But there is something else the ministers might do that they are not doing. Politicians are credited with a fondness for talking too much; but the politicians, comprising the membership of the cabinet, are silent when they should be speaking. In this great fight, if we are to prevent the Germans winning—which would be for us an unspeakable certainty—we must have more soldiers, and we depend for them upon recruiting. Recruiting for some reason is not, some say, as brisk as it might be. Why? Has there been a denfinite demand, a demand that amounted to a pointed appeal? The Government have sent out perfunctory circulars to Division commanders, stating that they are expected to recruit so many soldiers. There does not seem to be enough definiteness, enough pointed appeal. It seems that the recruiting campaign has developed into something like routine.

If there is lack of recruiting, it is due to lack of spirit? Not probably. The spirit is there, but it needs to be aroused; there needs more direct means employed to impress the necessity of more men, and the danger that will come from a failure to supply them. We have cabinet ministers doing practically nothing in the recess. Their deputies and office staff run their departments almost automatically. We have Opposition leaders doing practically nothing. If there is the need for more men that is asserted, why not get these ministers, with a prominent Opposition leader as a running mate, to hold rousing public meetings and make speeches that will make the welkin ring; let them wave the flag and show the need for strengthening the army in the field. Toronto is soon to have a big meeting in the interests of recruiting to be addressed by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, one of our greatest Canadian orators. Why not have Hon. Geo. P. Graham, a keen, incisive, compelling speaker, also speak from the same platform at the same time — drop party politics and let the common patriotism of our public men appeal to the common patriotism of our people? What a strong team it would make, what a drawing card, what a rousing thing it would be to have Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid on the same platform stimulating the recruiting spirit, and waving the flag, with each a hand on the staff. We are one in aim, why not be one in action?

We have had a good deal of flag-waving in the interests of the success of party; why not have a good deal of it in the interests of saving the Empire, saving our liberty and protecting our dearest interests, things far more important than any party and all parties? Nothing has been done specifically to stir recruiting in Peterborough. What we have done has been done by the spirit of the recruits themselves. We had one recruiting meeting held in a room large enough to hold only a corporal's guard, to listen to a splendidly stirring speech with nobody to whom it would practically appeal, to listen to it. If we need more men we must ask for them definitely and decidedly, not send out circulars with no pointed application. If we need the men it is said are needed, we must put earnestness, point, pith of appeal and conviction of duty, before the people in an enthusiastic, earnest way. If the military and government authorities wish to arouse enthusiasm, they must themselves show, or provide for showing, an enthusiasm that will breed enthusiasm.

An aeroplane that its two New Jersey inventors claim is automatic stabilising has four supporting planes, substantially cross shaped in cross section and tapering to a point at the front.

OIL ON THE STREETS.

In respect of a very important question, the kind of oil to use on the streets, the couplet of Pope may be re-dressed—

For brands of oil, let zealous agents fight;

There can be no doubt that the use of oil on the streets is a marked success. The dispute or misunderstanding about the quality of oil seems to arise from an exaggeration of the facts. It is true that the second application of oil is a little more odorous than the other; and that the unpleasant, but not unwholesome smell is not dissipated as rapidly as that of the other kind. After all, that is a mattter of unimportant detail. The chief thing is that the oil of either kind, placed properly on streets properly surfaced and prepared, admirably meets the aimed-at object—laying the dust—and also serves a splendid purpose in preventing the formation of mud.

That the oil keeps down the dust, or prevents its formation in a way to admit of its distribution by winds, is acknowledged with gratitude by housewives living in streets treated with oil.

A medical gentleman, who does a great deal of driving, is loud in the praise of oil treatment of the streets, It keeps down the dust. He says that there is less dust on the oil-treated streets than upon the asphalt-paved streets. A proof of this is found in the fact that an auto passing west on Charlotte street last night about eight o'clock, raised more dust than has been seen raised from the same cause on oiled streets.

There would, too, be a complete absence of dust in the oiled streets if the oil covered the whole driving surface. But upon nearly all our streets the street metal is applied only to the middle of the street, and this only is oiled—a margin of native mud next the sidewalk is left on each side of the street. Under the sun heat this being converted into dust and occasionally disturbed, accounts for the only dust, on oiled streets.

This brings out the fact that the driving surface of most of our residential streets is too wide to be kept in good condition. On each side of the street is left a plantation for the accommodation of mud and weeds. The city spent a good many hundred dollars in widening Babb's Lane, and to-day at one end of the street the full extent of the widening is overgrown with weeds, left undisturbed by wheels; showing that the driving surface would have been wide enough without further widening, which is not used for traffic.

If our residence streets had the width of the wheel surface reduced, provided with curbs, and the street metal applied the whole width, proper gutters could be formed, and with the whole roadway, properly crowned and treated with oil, we should practically have an end of dust, ideal streets at comparatively small expense.

And we should have an end, except, perhaps, in the worst of the fall season, of mud also. When oil is applied on roads properly prepared, properly crowned, so that the water can feerly escape into the gutters, the oil prevents the absorption of water, and the formation of mud. This is as great a boon almost as the destruction of dust; and it is killing two birds with one—dose of oil.

The same medical gentleman, says that he prefers to drive on an oiled street, with properly prepared surface. It in less noisy, than pavement, free from dust, and very much easier on a horses's feet. He says, however, that a great improvement could be made by steam-rollering the streets treated with gravel this season and removing the loose stones.

In a word it seems there is reason for claiming that oil on the streets is a great success, in many ways. The only objection, appears to be the temporary bad odor; an auto dealer says it will not injure motor tires; and if we can't afford attar of roses to sweeten the smell of the oil, we have ample compensation, in other decided advantages.

Finally, to crown, all the ladies approve of the oil, and feel that the City Council has conferred a boon upon them in protecting their curtains at open windows, and their verandah floors from dust. If ladies should be given the municipal vote, they will, in respect of one alderman, anyway, like Tiny Tim, "keep his memory Green."

A GOOD PRACTICE TO PERPETUATE.

The County Orange Lodge of Toronto has adopted a resolution requesting Orangemen, in celebrating the Twelfth of July, to use patriotic airs, and omit the party music usually played on that day. The suggestion will be heartily endorsed by public opinion generally as a graceful tribute to the cause for which the whole British Empire is at war. There is no party spirit implicated in the gigantic struggle the United Kingdom, the Dominions beyond the seas, and the Crown Colonies are making to preserve to the civilized world at large, and to all the nations embraced in it, the right to live freely according to their own ideas respectively. The celebration of the Twelth need not be less enthusiastic or inspiring because of this act of self-denial on the part of the celebrants; it is likely to be so much more so that one may be tempted to ask why the practice of playing tunes which appeal to all lovers of their country should not be made perpetual. —The Globe.

BUFFALO COMES UNDER COMMISSION FORM OF CITY GOVERNMENT

The City of Buffalo will at its next municipal election pass under the government of a Commission elected to administer its public services. There will be four Commissioners chosen at this first election, the present Mayor remaining in office to the end of his term. The election will take place very early in November, and the "primary" nomination will be made by plebiscite before the middle of October. The names of candidates for nomination at the primaries will be sent in by petition a month earlier, and this month will be the time of the real speaking campaign for the discussion of public questions of the day, of which an enterprising and progressive city like Buffalo has always on tap a plentiful supply. In order to eliminate ordinary party political influence there will be no designative marks or epithets of any kind on the ballot paper used at the primary, and the highest eight on this poll will be named on the ballot for the final choice of four Commissioners. Each elector at that election will be allowed to vote for four, and only four, and the eight names will be printed in alphabetical order without designations.

The avowed object in this complex election is to get rid of national politics as an influence in determining the selection of the men entrusted with the management of purely civic affairs. That influence is as widespread as the nation is, and it has been the outstanding weakness of the "American Commonwealth" for at least two generations. It has led to no end of corrupt practices, to a peculiarly vicious type of "boss" rule in municipal affairs, and to the subordination of grave civic interests to the exigencies of national party organizations. It has tended to make municipal government costly as well as inefficient, and it is not surprising that Buffalo, with a large foreign population, has become so tired of it that this new departure is to be made this year. The experiment will be watched in Canadian cities with interest and natural curiosity.—Globe.

The ten months' period of war has witnessed the loss of about 460,000 tons of warships, costing £35,000,000. Disregarding auxiliaries and armed merchantmen, the Allies have lost 181,000 tons of warships through the torpedo, 50,000 by mines, 27,000 by gunfire and 22,000 in divers ways. The Teutonic Allies lost 18,000 tons by torpedo, 28,000 tons by mines, 81,000 tons by gunfire and 28,000 tons miscellaneous. The Allies have lost nearly 80,000 tons in armed merchantmen and auxiliary classes, while the enemy's loss is about double.—Liverpool Journal of Commerce.

WELSH PROUD OF PRINCE

There are many tales afloat of the Prince of Wales at the front. Private A. Butler of the Second Coldstream Guards, wrote to friends in Cardiff, Wales: "I must tell you about the Prince, who is here with us. I can assure all you Welsh people he is as brave as a hero. Only last night he passed me when German shells were coming over. You can take it from me that he is not only the Prince of Wales, but a soldier and a man, and we are all proud of him. He is not very big, but he has got a bigger heart than a lot who are hanging back in Great Britain. I hope, please God, he will come back safe and sound without a scratch."

The Prince of Wales continues, says the "British Weekly," when circumstances permit, to take a six-mile walk before breakfast at the front. When asked if he went to bed very early in order to accomplish this, the Prince replied that he could not go to bed early, as he wrote to his father and his mother and sister every night. The only way that has been found to induce the Prince to show some precaution when under shell fire is to represent to him that serious inconvenience might be caused if he were taken prisoner. To any remark about the possibility of his being killed, the Prince answers cheerily that he has many brothers at home, so it would not matter.

AUSTRO-ITALIAN FLEETS

Italy Led With Dreadnoughts—Outclasses Rival at Every Point

Few are aware that thirty years ago Italy's yards were turning out battleships 2,000 tons larger than anything in the British fleet, and arming them with the heaviest guns ever put on a man-of-war. Moreover, Italy has the distinction of producing the man in whose mind the Dreadnought type was first evolved—the late Signor Cuniberti—who actually sketched a design which was a good forecast of the Queen Elizabeth.

Italy's first Dreadnought, the Dante Alighieri, was laid down in the summer of 1909, and completed in three years. She was the first warship in the world to have her guns mounted on the triple turret system. Following the Dante, five larger and more powerful ships were laid down. These vessels are all good for a speed of 23 knots, though their armor is comparatively light, having a maximum thickness of 9½ inches amidships. Their broadside fire is 11,050 pounds of metal as compared with the Iron Duke's 14,000 pounds, and the Queen Elizabeth's 15,400 pounds.

Altogether the Italian navy includes twenty-five vessels, all of which are classed as battleships. Italy also possesses many older and smaller ships, and nineteen submarines, of which probably a dozen are efficient. The fighting strength of the Italian navy, excluding the crews of destroyers, torpedo-boats and submarines, is 37,500 officers and men.

Austria has only three Dreadnoughts, as compared with Italy's six. In pre-Dreadnought battleships Austria enjoys a numercial superiority of twelve ships to eight, but six of the Austrian vessels displace less than 10,000 tons and none of them have heavier guns than the 9.4 inch. Italy again scores in regard to pre-Dreadnought armoured cruisers, of which class she has nine ships to Austria's two. The Austrian navy is manned by 19,000 officers and men, excluding those on destroyers, torpedo-boats, and submarines.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

THE THISTLE-EAST CITY CLASH WILL BE BATTLE

There will be two good games in the City Baseball League to-morrow. In the first battle the Empires and Classics will come together, and in the second the Thistles and East Citys will do battle for the third time this season. East City won both the other games, and if they grab off to-morrow's contest they will have a big lead for the Clydesdale-McWilliams Cup. On the other hand a Thistle win will leave the teams tied up with four games left to play. It looks like the big feature of the season.

McGraw Goes Into Colleges For Material

NEW YORK, July 7.—John McGraw has capitulated. Not that the doughty Giant leader has hurdled to the Feds, or forgiven Jim Gaffney, or anything as rash as that, but he nevertheless has capitulated. He hasn't admitted it, probably wouldn't, but the fact remains.

He is invading the colleges for his material. McGraw has always managed to steer clear of the College bred variety of ball players, with but few exceptions, the big one of course, being Matty. It has been said that McGraw never could regret the old Oriole days when a ball player was gauged almost as much by his handiness in a rough and tumble as he was by his ability to do the hundred in anything less than 11 seconds, and pick a hot one off his shoe laces while making it. He hadn't boycotted the alim lads by any means, but it so happened that he has in the main filled his ranks with the boys who had to battle the cops for their first baseball experience. He never made a specialty of robbing the educational institutions, as has Connie Mack and Branch Rickey.

But this year, with the weight of seven other club sbearing down on him from above he had to do something. So Sinister Dick Kinsella had been delving in the moss covered halls for his ivory crop.

In the last month there has been a steady stream of snappily dressed youths filing into the Polo Grounds. Some have stuck; some haven't. Kenney, a pitcher from Notre Dame, Wanamaker, an infielder of Dartmouth; Workman, a catcher from a Los Angeles College; Carroll of Fordham, and Babbington of Brown, are some of the most likely looking of the crew. The fact that Connie Mack was after the last two named undoubtedly moved McGraw to show a little speed in grabbing them.

McGraw never had any special aversion for the college trained variety, for he has several on his staff now but he always managed to let the other fellows dig 'em up, plane of the rough edges and then secure them by trade or waiver, while the Giant scouts were combing the tall grass for the huskies and the red-necks.

There has been much speculation in fanning circles lately whether or not this reversal of McGraw's policy means he is going to enter the field against Rickey and Mack for the freshwater school players. One thing certain, it was up to him to do something, with his 1915 machine going like the well known Flivver, hitting on one cylinder and that only part of the time. A merry little war for white collared youths is looming in the offing, it appears.

"GOD BLESS THE WEARER."

A gallant Tommy, having received from England an anonymous gift of socks, entered them at once, for he was about to undertake a heavy march. He was soon a prey to the most excruciating agony, and when a mere cripple, he drew off his footgear at the end of a terrible day, he discovered inside the toe of the sock what had once been a piece of stiff writing paper, now reduced to pulp, and on it appeared in a bold, feminine hand the almost illegible benediction, "God bless the wearer of this pair of socks!"—Newcastle Journal.

WAR WILL UNLOCK VAST OIL SUPPLIES

Important Economic Results of Opening Sea Route from Russia and Roumania

Sydney H. North, of London, Eng., founder and editor of the Petroleum Year Book, and other trade publications, has written the following article on the unlocking of oil supplies as one result of the war:

One of the most important operations in which the Allied fleets have engaged is that of opening up the sea route from the coasts of Russia and Roumania to the highways of the world. The military effects of this action may be of vital significance, but the economic effects are still more vital, influencing, as they do, the welfare of millions within and without these two countries.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the principal sources from which we draw our oil for lighting, heating, for fuel, and for motor-cars, are the United States, Russia, the Dutch Indies, Roumania and Mexico. Soon after the war broke out part of these sources was closed to us; and the figures representing the shipments to this country from America are eloquent of the wonderful response of our need made from that quarter.

During these past few months the oil wells of Russia and Roumania continued to produce oil, and had to continue to do so where labor was available, for the closing down of a producing well is a costly, and often ruinous resort. The oil must either be pumped unremittingly or water, some hundreds of feet down, may percolate through into the well and flood it beyond redemption.

A few figures will show clearly what the cessation of Russia's export trade has done to the oil industry.

Russian Stores

The output of oil from Russian oil wells amounts approximately to eight million tons a year; of which, after refining, a large quantity goes into the interior, and the balance is exported. In the year 1913 the total quantity of different oil products amounted to about five million tons; in 1914 this had fallen to about three-and-a-half million tons.

But this is not the worst of the case, for, in consequence of the stoppage of exports through the Dardanelles, the stocks had accumulated to the extent of one-and-a-half million tons, or half as much again compared with a year ago.

Fortunately, or unfortunately, several of the newer districts, such as the Ural-Caspian and Emba-Caspian districts, are increasing their production rapidly, and the storage accommodation for all this ever-growing quantity of oil is not sufficient. In the year 1913 we relieved Russia of thirty-six million gallons of different descriptions of oil, more than a third of which was benzine or petrol; last year, owing to the war, we could only get twenty-one million gallons.

This year we have taken nothing from her of any description, so that it needs little imagination to conjure up the vast stores of liquid and solid wealth which are waiting to flow through the Dardanelles.

Roumania is in similar plight, but rather worse, inasmuch as her organization and facilities are not so ample. Her lot is, indeed, a hard one. For years past her oilmen, backed by the government, have striven energetically to build up a prosperous industry. Her ambitions lay in the direction of securing some portion of that most profitable section of the trade, the manufacture and sale of benzine or petrol. And her success was considerable.

Roumania and Galicia

The total output from Roumanian wells in 1913 amounted to 1,855,000 tons; in 1914 to 1,771,000 tons, not so great a decline, considering the adverse conditions. But, unfortunately, she is one of the innocent who suffer, and only the opening of the sea route again and the resumption of her export trade can save her from disaster. Compared with Russia her oil industry is small, yet at the end of last year the accumulated stocks of oil amounted, according to the "Petroleum Review," to 600,000 tons.

BRITAIN'S TREATIES MADE IN THOUSANDS

War Ended Sinecures in this Department—Five Hundred Arrangements in One Month by Big Staff

Work of the most vital importance to Britain's success in the war is carried on by the great special departments of the Admiralty, Foreign Office, and War Office. But it is work of which little is heard. It is done in silence behind the scenes of the great war drama. Before the war the Treaty Department of the Foreign Office in Whitehall, was by no means busy. The dozen clerks engaged in peace time in this department were among those who earned the name of arm-chair civil servants, so light was their work. The staff, immediately on the outbreak of war, was redoubled, then raised to fifty, then to over one hundred. It is divided into night and day staffs, for the work of the department is carried on continuously. The business handled by the Treaty Department is divided into two chief branches—treaties and passports.

The treaty staff work at high pressure. Since the war started the number of treaties and arrangements entered into between England and her allies and neutrals runs into thousands. In peace time the number of treaties and arrangements entered into between England and other countries is about four hundred in the year. In August, 1914, over five hundred treaties and arrangements were signed by the Foreign Office. In connection with the landing of the British troops in France alone over seventy separate agreements between the French and English Foreign Offices were signed, and the occupation of part of France by British troops necessitated the entering into of at least two hundred agreements, or treaties, between France and England. It took twenty separate treaties or arrangements to settle the laws under which Britain's troops were to be billeted in France.

Endless Drafts

Often twenty or thirty drafts of a treaty may have to be made out before its terms are finally approved of by all the parties to it, and frequently it may have to be drafted in several different languages. For example, a treaty or arrangement with France may have to be submitted to Russia and Japan, in which case it would have to be drafted in Russian and Japanese. The original instructions for the drafting of a treaty are given, of course, by Sir Edward Grey either to his own secretary or to Sir Richard Paget, the chief of the Treaty Department, by whom the terms of the treaty are communicated to Mr. Hugh Ritchie, the head of the Drafting Department. In connection with the drafting of a treaty hundreds of other treaties may have to be looked up. In peace time one clerk attends to this work. Now it takes a staff of twenty.

Wonderful Fast System

The head of the Treaty Department once received instructions at five o'clock in the afternoon to draft a treaty, the terms of which were to be cabled to Petrograd and Paris the next day. To get this work done the drafting staff required to see certain extracts from eighty other treaties. The staff started on their job at six, and remained at it until four the following morning, when their task was completed. Twelve clerks deal with the docketing, indexing, and filing of the cables, correspondence, and documents in the Treaty Department. Under their system of filing any document can be obtained in a couple of minutes after it has been requested by the Foreign Secretary or chief of a department, and hundreds of documents are "requistioned" daily. Frequently the King will requisition some of these documents. His Majesty is the only person outside the members of the government who is kept informed of the extent and character of the various international arrangements Britain entered into since the outbreak of the war.

DANGEROUS SPIES

Two Germans Nearly Succeeded in Enlisting as Belgian Soldiers

Two German spies were detected in a particularly bold attempt to join the Belgian army. They spoke both Flemish and French and came through Holland. At Flushing the Dutch authorities found their military pocket books and other things proving their identity all in order. They passed by boat to Tilbury, England, whence they were forwarded to Folkestone, with a view to proceeding to France. Their papers showed they had already served in the Belgian infantry.

At Folkestone there chanced to be attached to the passport examination staff a Belgian soldier belonging to the same company as that to which the two young men stated they belonged. When he saw that these two men belonged to his former company he asked them questions about some of his former comrades. He received evasive replies, which awakened his suspicions, and caused him to warn his chiefs. As the papers were in order, the men were allowed to proceed, but were kept under observation.

It was growing dark when the boat arrived at Calais, and in the confusion of the landing the two suspected men slipped away, as they imagined unobserved. They were followed, however, and seen to enter an obscure inn near the harbor, whence they issued a little later in private clothes. One was arrested without the knowledge of the other, who was kept under observation with a view to the discovery of his confederates. The man who had been arrested when he saw that the game was up, admitted that the intention had been to enter the Belgian army with the object of serving German interests. The papers which he and his companion had shown belonged to two prisoners of war, whose descriptions agreed with their own.

Greatest Flag Pole in the British Empire

THE flagpole reproduced here is the greatest in the British Empire. The stick is being shipped over the Canadian Pacific for the famous Kew Botanical Gardens, London, England. It was cut on Lot 917 adjoining the Gordon Pasha Lakes, 65 miles from Vancouver on the mainland coast, and is a fair sample of the delightful forests of fire of British Columbia. The tree was originally 228 feet long, with a diameter of 65 inches at the butt and 18 inches at the top, but owing to a knot near the top it was reduced to 216 feet. After cutting, the pole was hauled out of the woods and loaded on a C. P. R. logging train and towed to False Creek, Vancouver, where it is now being dressed. This pole was cut and delivered to the British Columbia Government by Messrs. Brooks, Scanlon & O'Brien Co., Ltd., Vancouver, at actual cost. To-day the second longest flag pole stands in the square at Vancouver opposite the C. P. R. Hotel Vancouver, and is 308 feet long, and was presented to the British Columbia Government.

Britain is Paying Penalty For Laxness Toward Aliens

LONDON, July 7.—The case of Herr Lincoln and Frau Bertha Trost are painful if not ironic illustrations of the extraordinary partiality of the British for the alien immigrant prior to the war. Not only were many ready to take the foreigners "on trust" to a far greater extent than men and women of their own nation, but they were much addicted to allowing the foreigner more latitude than their own people in all manner of social and business ethics.

Here, on the one hand, was a Hungarian Jew, who, quite apart from his latest exploits or self-alleged exploits in the sphere of eGrman espionage, previously had committed a series of misdemeanors) or felonies which, had he been a Briton, would have landed him at Quarter Sessions or at Old Bailey. But Herr Lincoln found sympathy and support on the part of many British "humanitarians" in the House of Commons and elsewhere.

In Frau Bertha Trost London entertained an alleged notorious procuress, who for years had been allowed to carry on almost openly and unmolested by the police two, if not three, infamous and "highly connected" establishments. Then suddenly Scotland Yard became active against this woman, at whose traffic they appear to have winked for years. If one is to believe a well informed source, only recently did the authorities discover that she was not a Parisienne, but a German Jewess from Frankfort-on-Main. It was only when the possibilities offered by her beauty shop as a cover to "white slave" traffic were overweighted by its possibilities as a centre for German espionage, in view of the distinguished names on her books and the fondness which she had developed suddenly for wounded British soldiers, that the public took action.

But, it is asked, if the sudden awakening of the Criminal Investigation epartment in regard to Frau Bertha Trost was justified, why was this woman either not publicly tried as a procuress or as a German spy instead of being bundled out of the country post haste, thereby being enabled to turn over to the German secret service any information of value she might possess? Nothing has been explained why, if she was deported as a procuress, she was not proceeded against prior to the war, or, if she was suspected of espionage, she was allowed to return in peace to the Fatherland.

That Frau Trost for years should have been able to parade unchallenged as a Frenchwoman is regarded as a serious indictment of the easygoing British methods in regard to the alien While a Briton seeking employment in his own country usually is required to produce documentary evidence regarding his origin and past, not even the police in normal times require the foreign immigrant to these shores to produce his papers.

The natural result of the British fetish of freedom has happened. The whole of England knows now, to its cost, what dangers that fetish has implied to the nation. Yet so far the commission has not been remedied fully. The alien enemy now must register, but other aliens need, not, although British travellers in other countries are bound to do so. The apathy here continues, though it is notorious that many German agents conceal themselves under a real or feigned neutral nationality. If the system of compulsory registration for foreigners had been in vogue in 1910 the electors of Darlington might have been spared the pain of now discovering that they had been represented in Parliament by a renegade Hungarian thief.

Sir Hiram Maxim Invents Device To Disperse Fumes of Poison Gas

LONDON, July 8—Sir Hiram Maxim has just completed an invention which is a reply to the German poison gas methods of warfare. Exhaustive tests have been made in trenches under conditions as nearly as possible to those in Flanders, and it is understood that the War Office is very favourably impressed with the invention.

Sir Hiram Maxim says that the poisonous fumes are chlorine gas. "Chlorine gas," he says, "when in pure state at one atmospheric pressure weighs two and one-half times as much as air. In escaping from high pressure to atmospheric pressure the chlorine necessarily rises, mixed with a lot of air, and by the time it is twenty feet away from the discharge pipe the ratio is five volumes of air to one of chlorine.

"The specific gravity is correspondingly reduced, and by the time the fumes reach our trenches there is one hundred times as much air as gas. We know that to be approximately true, because if a soldier breathed a chlorine mixture of one in twenty he would not live more than a few minutes. Scientific men have tried to neutralise the effects of the gas by respirators, but you might just as well think of filtering alcohol out of water with a piece of wire gauze as to try to separate chlorine from the atmosphere with such a device."

Sir Hiram called "these gauze things" "asperators"—short for "exasperators." That sums up his estimate of their utility.

It is not permissable to give away Sir Hiram's secret, but it is said that the invention will force the poisonous fumes over the heads of men in the trenches.

"I do not think that the British," he said, "should descend to the use of poisonous gases, and I am convinced that the enemy will not continue their use once he finds how easily and how cheaply the fumes may be dispersed.

"Another device I am engaged upon relates to the defence of our trenches against the bayonet. It is upon a wholly new principle, but I am not at liberty to describe it. In fact," Sir Hiram continued, "I have my pocket full of new inventions. At the age of seventy-five my day is one of seventeen hours and I want to give that time to serving the country."

BUCHAREST, GAYEST CITY IN EUROPE

The greatest country in Europe just now is Roumania, and needless to say, writes Basil Clarke in the London Mail, the European capital of luxury and pleasure is Bucarest.

With Paris soberly thoughtful and inclined to wear black, while London very earnest and inclined to wear khaki, with Petrograd serious, and Vienna frankly in the dumps (when not artificially hilarious)—little Bucharest gets its chance. And a brave effort the city is making to surpass even itself in luxurious extravagance.

Bucharest has for a long time been rather proud of its reputation for "giddiness." There are those who call it the "Pocket Paris," and not a few there are who will tell you quite seriously that it "outparises" Paris. In the less innocent forms of giddiness this is perhaps true. For though Bucharest's fashions are the fashions of Paris its pleasures and social forms thoe of Paris, the mind behind these things is something different from the mind of Paris— something more Eastern, more reckless, and abandoned, and extravagant than the Parisian mind at its giddiest.

Bucharest begins with the axom that things must be expensive; that "tone" and comfort and pleasure must and can only be commensurate with outlay. You must spend money; and ostentation in the spending is not, generally speaking, included in the Bucharest inventory of the vulgarities. The traders, therefore, make everything most obligingly dear. The pretty little hat for which the Paris girl pays her modest $2.50 must cost in Bucharest five times as much, or how could it be "chic"? Silk stockings, as the shop windows proclaim, are over $5. The hotels are indifferent, but a room will cost $6 a day and meals nearly as much. A simple riding switch cost $5, print shirts $3, boots $12.50, and a suit anything up to $50. Not that the genuine Bucharest "knut" ever thinks of "dressing" in Bucharest. His tailor must live in London or Paris and must be visited periodically. The Bucharest laundries, excellent as they are, are not good enough for him, and crates of Bucharest linen leave for London laundries every week to be washed and returned.

The Bucharest women are distinctly pretty. They have big, bright eyes, brown or black, pretty hair, and faces delicately shaped. Yet, quite unnecessarily, they adorn nature by heels of three or four inches, by face powders, pink and white, and by lip salve of the most telltale vermilion. The men are decorative rather than robust—addicted to short coats, very tight waisted; to pleated shirts with horizontal patterns, to flowing neckwear and last, and least forgivable, to cloth-topped boots. The use of scent is general But they are cheery, genial fellows, notwithstanding these odd little tastes, and are most enthusiastic for things English and French as soon as they learn them.

Italian peat that is too low in fuel value to compete with coal, is being utilized in the production of nitrogen for fertilizers.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

HERE IS ONE CIRCLE IN PETERBORO' THAT RALLIED TO COLOURS

When Mr. Anthony Mongour, 414 Dublin street, enlisted at the armouries in the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles the other day, he completed a record for rallying to the colours that is hard to beat locally. Mr. Mongour's son, Pte. Chas. Mongour, enlisted with the 57th detachment in the second Battalion, C.E.F. and after escaping unhurt through the battle of St. Julien, was wounded by shell fire shortly afterwards and is now in hospital in England. Mr. Mongour has two brothers with the Canadian contingents, one just arrived in England and another at Barriefield, while a third brother is in an English regiment. Three of his brother-in-laws are also with the Canadians, two in the infantry and the third in the 8th C.M.R. and in addition four men who boarded with Mr. Mongour are now at the front with the Canadian artillery. Percy Golds, James Chandler, Chas. White and Jack Foskett. All these men came to Canada from London, Eng.

Three Guardsmen Patrolled the C.G.E. Grounds and Drew Pay For It

In connection with the present discussion of factory protection there is a little story from the C.G.E. that has rippled round the shops. The subject of patrolling the grounds had naturally been talked over by the men and as noon approached last Saturday a yard foreman told three of his men that they were to return after dinner and patrol the premises. They considered it a regular order to come in and after the noon hour they reported for duty completely armed and accoutred. One of them, an elderly man, with red whiskers, brought with him a shotgun that was evidently a near descendant to the Old Queen Bess. It was patched and bound up with wire in several places, and was as fine an old relic as you would see in most museums. Remember that it was raining Saturday afternoon and this officer wisely wore long rubber boots. A second of the three musketeers carried a revolver and an umbrella, but the arms of the Athos have yet to be detailed.

The three men sentried the north, west and south sides of the property as faithfully as if the safety of the buildings depended upon their attentions. The rubber boots took in a lot of water and the umbrella failed to shed all that fell upon it.

Finally, toward the close of the day one of the foremen saw the sentries, and called him in. The conversation that followed ran something like this:

"What are you doing out there?"

"Patrolling the grounds," replied the men.

"Well you might as well go home now," replied the foreman who tried to break it easy that they had been hoaxed.

The story travelled round the departments and finally drifted to the G. M., who failed to recognize the amusing features of the incident.

He called for the yard foreman who admitted that he had sent the men out on duty, but had meant it only as a joke and had not been sure that they would come back.

"These men worked in good faith, and will naturally expect to be paid" said Mr. Patterson, "It is only fair to them that they should be paid, and you will have to pay them."

Such is the story as it is told around the shop. The three musketeers were vindicated and enjoyed the last laugh.

STRONG RUSSIAN FORCES PUSH BACK ENEMY TO SOUTH OF LUBLIN

LONDON, July 9.— Interest in the eastern war theatre centres in Southern Poland, where the Russians, strongly reinforced with both men and guns, and with their railways and fortresses of Ivangorod and Brest-Litovsk to draw upon, have held up the Austro-German attempt to outflank Warsaw from the southwest. The Austrians to-night made the admission that before superior Russian forces to the south of Lublin they have withdrawn from the hills to the north of Kransnik.

Further heavy firing must occur in this region, but the Russian military writers express confidence that now any effort of the Germanic allies to deliver a lightning blow has been discounted and that the Grand Duke's army will be able to hold its position and perhaps drive the invaders back. While this is going on, it is believed that there is little probability of the Germans detaching any part of their eastern armies for a renewed offensive in the west, and that if such a move is made it must be undertaken by fresh troops.

Vienna Not Boastful.

Nowhere east of the Vistula do the Austrians claim to be making progress in their official report to-night. The Vienna communication declares however, that "numerous severe Russian attacks have been bloodily repulsed." A retreat is flatly admitted in the Krasnik region, wheer the Austrian troops, it is announced, were withdrawn from both sides of the road leading to the heights north of the town, as the result of attacks by superior Russian forces brought up for the protection of Lublin.

Vienna describes the situation further to the east—on the Bug and in East Galicia —as unchanged, while further Russian attacks, which are said to have been repulsed, are reported on the Zlota Lipa. To the west of the Vistula, however, it is stated that some Russian advanced positions have been stormed.

Heavy German Losses.

Petrograd, July 9.—The following official communication has been issued by the War Office:

"During the night of July 6 the enemy unsuccessfully attacked our positions near Muravievo Station. To the west of the Kalwaria-Suwalki road the enemy on July 6 succeeded in crossing the river Chelmentka, but was thrown back on the seventh.

"On the Orjitz river the enemy during the night of the 6th attacked our trenches southwest of the village of Jednorojetz. A few score Germans held their ground in front of our trenches until dawn, but were almost all killed by our fire when they tried to retire. During the day the enemy again attacked the same trenches, but everywhere was repulsed with heavy losses.

"On the left bank of the Vistula, during the night of the sixth, the enemy, under cover of enormous clouds of poisonous gases, delivered attacks in the direction of Bolimow. On a front of about eight miles he succeeded in some sectors in capturing our first line trenches, but by counter-attacks next day we dislodged him and recovered the position, except in the sector near the Bolimow road, where the fight still continues.

Take 11,000 Prisoners.

"Between the small town of Senno and the village of Josefow the enemy on the 7th delivered no attacks. At the same time our troops in the direction of Lublin continued to successfully develop the offensive which we had begun in the sector of Ursenderff and Bystrijitza. Our men dealt the enemy terrible blows, and between the 5th and 7th took about eleven thousand prisoners, while they captured several dozen machine guns and a kag. In this sector the enemy is in retreat, and wer are pursuing him.

"There is no change along the Bug, Zlota Lipa and Dniester Rivers."

The German Report.

Berlin, July 9.— "In the eastern theatre:

"An enemy attack from the direction of Kovno (in Lithunia) was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

"Enemy advances in the region of Strzegowo and Staroseby, northeast and east of Racionz, were unsuccessful. Attempts made by our opponents to take away Hill 95, to the east of Dolowatka, which we captured yesterday, failed.

"In the southeastern theatre:

"There is no change in the situation of the German troops standing between the Dniester and the upper Vistula. To the west of the upper Vistula a number of enemy positions were taken by storm."

BELGIANS DISPLAY LOYALTY DESPITE THE GERMAN GOVERNOR

BRUSSELS, July 9. —The Belgians have suddenly adopted the practice of wearing sprays of ivy as an expression of loyalty to Belgium and the allies.

Gen. von Bissing, the German military governor of Belgium, a few days ago issued an order prohibiting the demonstrative display of Belgian colours as personal adornment. The Belgians obeyed the order, but the following day almost every man, woman and child blossomed out with an ivy spray, the significance of which, in the language of flowers, is "attachment; united unto death."

FEARS SUBMARINE ATTACKS ON MUNITION SHIPS

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 9—Apprehension is entertained in marine circles that the Germans may attempt to intercept with their new high power submarines shipping destined for the Allies just as it clears American waters. Such a suggestion two or three months ago would have been laughted at, but the performances of the U-39 and her sister, which made the passage out from Wilhelmshaven to the Dardanelles, have put an entirely new complexion on the matter.

It is conceded that the new German submarines have the radius of action necessary to voyage across the Atlantic, with at least a thousand miles of steaming radius to spare, and the problem of replenishing with crude oil is far simpler than on the United Kingdom coast. Steamships readily can be chartered to carry crude oil from Mexican ports, if for any reason here is doubt about American sources, and, as in the case of the submarine service in British waters, the submarines have only to run along and take oil from a pipe.

The German undersea craft operating in the waters about England and Ireland largely depend upon trawlers, innocent looking craft which for the time being fly a neutral flag to deceive, but which in reality are tenders to the submarine. These trawlers carry oil and provisions, and even when one is lost there are other war ships stationed off that port.

A submarine which reaches the American coast is close to oil fields. It would require but little ingenuity on the part of agents to clear an oil tanker for a neutral port, which craft would in reality be a tender, and one such tanker could supply a flotilla with ample fuel to keep the units going for several weeks.

During the civil war in the United States, when blockade runners made free use of Nassau, it was the practice of the federal government to station several cruisers off the Bahamas for the purpose of intercepting the runners both going and coming squadron, and it is common knowledge that the blockade runners feared these vessels when clearing from Nassau fully as much as the vessels stationed off Wilmington and Charleston.

Up to now the British authorities have been able to check up on all craft bound in and out of New York by means of two war ships stationed off that port. The presence of submarines on the American coast, it is feared, would be a danger to British war ships there.

The great bulk of war munitions which the Allies have ordered from the United States hardly have begun to move. By autumn the deliveries should be coming forward in great quantity.

New York, Boston and Norfolk are the three ports on the Atlantic from when the large ships will come. The depth of the water at these three ports is sufficient to float the largest craft. Ports like Philadelphia, Charleston, New Orleans and Mobile, while able to accommodate vessels of comparatively large size, lack the shipping facilities which will be required for the enormous movement of munitions. In the circumstances any threatening of the means of exit from the principlal United States ports is viewed with a seriousness which can not be overestimated.

The bulk of the Canadian supplies are going forward from the St. Lawrence, and the estuary of that river is nearer to the German naval base than is New York.

Voice of The People

The Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—May I be allowed to suggest (as a citizen), the councillors of Peterborough, if they decide to employ additional help on the police force for the city for protection, obtain such from the list of men who have bravely offered their services to their country, but for minor reasons have been rejected. It seems to me men that are needed, and they certainly have tried their best to be such.

Thanking you for your valuable space.

Recent Fighting on the Gallipoli Has Resulted In Large Number of Prisoners

LONDON, July 9.—The Chronicle has the following from its correspondent at Mitylene:

Recent fighting in the Gallipoli Peninsula has resulted in the capture of a large number of prisoners. I have seen many of them and though they are not badly clothed and appear to have been fairly well fed, they are all of one mind as to the good fortune in being rescued, as one termed it, from the inferno which their positions on the peninsula have been for some considerable time.

It is always essential to discount to some extent the statements of Turkish prisoners, as they generally think it necessary to make declarations by which they hope to find favors with the captors, but allowing for that, there can be no doubt as to the general reliability of what they say. They all agree regarding the flagging spirit of the Turkish army. They state that the feeling between the Germans and the Turks is becoming increasingly bad, and they tell many tales of the Germans being shot in the back in return for the frequent emptying of officers' revolvers into the wavering or hesitating ranks.

CONSTANTINOPLE PARALYZED.

Men who come from Constantinople give a curious picture of that once busy city. The Galata Quays, formerly so densely crowded, are now almost entirely deserted while Golden orn protected by a boom, is a mass of ships which dare not move. Only at nighttime does an occasional transport or supply ship venture out.

The British submarines' work and the Russian blockade have had an extraordinary effect, and the city is now struck as if it were with paralysis. There is undoubtedly in the city a large element favorable to and ready to take part in a revolution to overthrow the military party and its German overlords, while in the provinces anti-conscription riots have taken place.

Meanwhile on the peninsula trench warfare continues with unabated vigor. The weather is extremely hot so the conditions are trying. The spirit of the allied forces, however, cannot be too highly praised. Our men are digging and fighting their way toward that important goal, Tree Peak, and the gradual, numerous slopes which the Turks have made into an underground fort something akin to the "Labyrinth" in France.

KRITHIA IS BATTERED.

Krithia has for some weeks ceased to be a village at all. In all this destructive war never perhaps has a village been so completly battered to bits. The Turks in the neighborhood of the site of the wiped out village have tried a new strategy. Four lines sloping northwards to the positions held by our troops. In a dashing night attack the allies forces carried the the sides of the captured were skilfully mined and crumbled away, exposing the defenders in front. Our men then found themselves in the dim light being raked by machine gun fire from two lines of the enemy's trenches before them. In an instant they were up and at them, and after ten minutes of desperate hand to hand fighting the second line of trenches remained in our possession.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, from Athens, says:

"The Turkish losses at the Dardanelles in the recent fighting were 25,000. An urgent order has been sent to Constantinople to prepare 15,000 beds in the hospitals."

WHAT THE TURKS CLAIM

Constantinople, July 8.—The Turkish War Department to-day gave out the following statement:

"On the Dardanelles front our artillery bombarded the enemy positions near Avi Burnu, and caused heavy damage.

"Attacks on the part of reconnoitering divisions near Sedd-ul-Bahr were repulsed by our troops with heavy losses. One of our Anatolian coast batteries opened fire on the enemy's positions while the enemy was manifesting activity with small boats, which were assisted by small auxiliary cruisers.

"A bomb dropped on an enemy battalion caused great confusion and heavy losses. A munition depot of the enemy was blown up by our battaries. There is nothing to report from the other fronts.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 9.—The overnight casualties bring the total list of Canadian killed, wounded and missing up to 9,962. The killed number 1,701, the wounded 6,470 and missing 1,791.

The number of names coming in still averages up to 100 per day. Those received overnight totalled 78. Of these 12 were killed, 27 wounded and 14 missing, while 25 are on the list of prisoners.

CAPE TOWN, July 9.—The capture of Windhoek, the capital of German South-West Africa, by General Botha was announced some weeks ago, but it was understood that the German forces, consisting of 7,000 men, including regular troops and Colonials, had retired to the north. With his force of British Colonials, General Botha pursued them and has apparently fought them to a victory for the British.

The conquered territory is about the size of the Province of Ontario and is very rich in minerals and cattle raising industries. The Germans have also recently commenced extensive cotton growing plantations.

The Germans surrendered unconditionally after a brief ultimatum had been sent to their commander. The ultimatum expired yesterday afternoon.

Are the Best Brains Usually Inside the Baldest Heads?

What ought to be a good deal of consolation for the bald-headed is supplied by the scientific theory that the best brains are found inside the baldest heads, and that the superman of the future will undoubtedly be an absolutely hairless creature. In short the familiar saying that "brains and hair never go together" is now believed to be more a fact than a jest.

Dr. C. T. Ewart, a Scotch scientist, is one of the authorities who hold this view. His researches have led him to believe that the loss of hair on man's head and other parts of his body is a certain indication of intellectual progress. "This fact," he maintains "explains to some extent the baldness which is always so prevalent among college professors and members of learned societies."

According to researches made by Dr. Ewart, the presence of down or soft hair upon the new born baby indicates that man or his primitive ancestor, was born hairy and remained thus wild and woolly all his life.

In the infancy of the race and before man began to conquer the earth from the equator to the Arctics, a complete covering of hair on the human skin may have been a most useful protection, both from moisture and from cold. How modern man gradually rid himself of this hirsute covering and supplied himself with artificial, instead of the natural clothing, is a problem.

The followers of Darwin still maintain that the whole change has come about by natural selection, the survival of the fittest, and other factors of evolution. Zoologists, who are more modern, take into account the newer laws of heredity, such as the inheritance of a true line of people, who suddenly sprang into creation without hairs, and passed this higher stage of human development on to future generations.

Dr. Ewart holds that gradually, as human intelligence became better applied, men, by mating, selected wives skins were smoothest, and these in turn chose husbands with the least hairy clothing. The upshot of this was to produce offspring with less and less hair between the neck and feet, and the intelligent choice of vegetable and animal substitutes for garments.

Darwin held that, since women of all races are less hairy below the neck than men, it is proper to conclude that women, hundreds of thousands of years ago were the first sex to be divested of hair. Thus they obtained an advantage in the eyes of their masculine admirers.

With modern man the sense of feminine beauty is intimately interlaced with woman's smooth skin. Man long ago decided that hairless cheeks and a flesh uncovered with hair, are necessary to the ideal mate. Thus it came to pass that the female offspring without hair—except on the head and eyebrows—became the mothers of a pure line like themselves, while the hairy woman remained a bachelor maid.

The bearded lady in the side show, the Siamese hairy families and women with superfluous hair on the lips, are anything but attractive to men. On the other hand the beard adds virility and power to the appearance of man, and thus becomes an allurement to womankind. Beards fully developed or partially so in women revive the old prejudice that their possessors are deformed, mentally or morally, as well as physically.

The inner meaning of the modern mode of clean shaven faces for men is, Dr. Ewart says, a transferred one. That is to say, it is deceptive. The moustache and whiskers are a constant emblem to women that a man is a virile, vigorous power, which scorns her; if she fails to be feminine and smooth skinned, and to realise her need of a protector.

Chemong Road in Need of Repairs

The road to Chemong from the city would appear to be in need of repairs. It is reported that no less than seven local autoists were stalled between here and Chemong during yesterday.

The Jitney belonging to the Banks Garage was among the motor driven vehicles to come to grief. It was thrown into the ditch and caused damage to the extent of about $50.00. It is time that this road received some attention.

The Raider Emden Will Be Raised

SDYNEY, N.S.W., July 8.—The Department of Defence has awarded a contract for the salving of the German cruiser Emden, which was sunk off Cocos Island, in the Indian Ocean by the Australian cruiser Sydney. The contractors say the raider can be easily floated, and will be here by Christmas. The Emden will be exhibited.

Recruiting in Victoria has been very successful, and New South Wales is about to begin a campaign for men.

Particulars of the Death of Geo. Revell

Mr. E. A. Peck Has Received Full Particulars From France

1st Co., Canadian Engineers.
France.

Extract from a letter from Lieut. Bowlby Reynolds, referring to death of the late George E. Revell:

Sapper Revell was a brave, courageous man and had been picked with 18 others for a dangerous mission. They were to go in and fix up a German trench that had been mined, after the explosion, and make it safe for our infantry who were to advance. A twelve inch shell unfortunately killed part of them while waiting in a trench for the explosion of the mine. Bombs and shells and rifle bullets unfortunately played such havoc that eight we know were killed, three are missing whom we are satisfied were killed but have no direct evidence, two are seriously wounded, one was burned and driven out of his mind with a shell from which he will recover we hope. One of the two seriously wounded had five wounds yet went on till his part which was to blow up barb wire entanglements, was finished.

Sapper Revell's death was instantaneous and as he would have it. He was held in high esteem for his courage, his resourcefulness and his nerve while under heavy fire. If he had to choose his manner of death he would have chosen to die fighting on the field of battle as he did.

We buried him while the bullets were whistling around, in the shell hole that killed him with five of his companions between the German and English lines where lie hundreds of our fellow men, monuments to the unspeakables desires of German Kultur.

VARIATION IN THE MENU

FOR those of our women folk who make liberal use of salads during the summer months, and we hope the majority of them do, we give below several tasty salad concoctions with the hope that they may be of assistance in planning the menu from time to time.

Cheese and Nut Salad

For this salad, cottage cheese that may be prepared at home or any of the cream cheese that are on the market may be used. Shape into small balls, roll in nuts, place three or four on a lettuce leaf and cover with a spoonful of salad dressing.

Banana and Nut

Allow a banana for each person and about one tablespoonful of nuts which have been chopped finely or run through the meat grinder. Cut the skin off one side of the banana, carefully lift banana out, dip in salad dressing, and roll in the chopped nuts. Put a tablespoonful of salad dressing into the banana skin before replacing the banana. With a sharp knife cut the replaced banana into slices, and serve on individual plates on a lettuce leaf.

Bean Salad

One pint of string beans boiled and cooled, two cupfuls chopped cabbage, two teaspoonfuls of celery seed or chopped celery, and one-half dozen small cucumbers sliced very thin.

Salmon Salad

Chop two hard-boiled eggs fine, a dozen small cucumber pickles, and add to a can of salmon, which has been shredded. Mix thoroughly with mayonnaise dressing, and serve on

Some Things to Ponder Over

THE most we can get out of life is its discipline for ourselves and its usefulness for others. Do the majority of us, however, keep the thought uppermost in our minds of being of service to others? At the Social Service Congress held at Ottawa in March, 1914, Charles Stelzle made a striking remark when he said that "we are too prone to think only and always of what we can get out of religion. Jesus Christ thought only and always of what He could put into religion." The only way in which we can serve God is by serving man. We have just been reading a beautiful illustration of this truth as told by one of our well-known divines who says he learned his lesson from a woodsman.

"We had spent our fortnight in camp and were about to embark for our ten-mile canoe voyage down to the portage where the wagon would be in waiting. Sailor bags, grips and bundles were stowed away in the birch barks and we were waiting impatiently for old man Crumpy to take the ladies ahead in his new boat. At length we heard him in the woods behind the cabin chopping wood. How annoying it was. And what was he doing it for?

"'I'll go and give the old ruide a piece of my mind,' and I ran up the hill, through the underbrush, around the shack and back — there was Crumpy carrying a great armful of pine sticks which he deposited on the porch, carefully covering it with bark.

"'What are you doing, Crumpy?' I shouted. 'You're delaying the start and you yourself said that we must hurry to get across the lake before the wind rises.'

"Even the calm, quiet tone of the old man's answer was a rebuke to my scolding note. 'Comin' right off,' was his tranquil reply. 'Ye see, I've jest chopped a bit of firewood for whosomdever may hap'n along next. It's a sort of way we have ye see, of doin' each other a friendly turn. For we can't never tell when we'll be glad if some 'un else has left a bit of kin'ling for us when we git to a campin' spot like this after dark some rainy night.'

"A thousand times I have thought of this wholesome lesson. He left the kindling for whoever might come after us. He didn't attach a card reading. 'Compliments of Patrick Crumpy.' Neither did he lock it up for someone lucky enough to have a key. Unlabeled and unaddressed, it was left as his contribution to the happiness of the next camper."

Surely the thought of leaving firewood for the next man is well worthy of application in our lives, for our best service to humanity is to leave something good behind us.—M. M. R.

BRITAIN TAKES ISSUE WITH UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, formally applied to the State Department to-day for a definition of the American Government's view as to whether British patriotic societies or other unofficial agencies violate neutrality laws in sending subjects of Great Britain from the United States to volunteer in the British army.

Conferences between the Departments of State and Justice will be held before an answer is given to this question, from which a serious diplomatic [illegible] practice of returning volunteers to England has prevailed since the beginning of the European war, and it is said that the British Government is prepared to register an emphatic protest if the United States takes the position that it is illegal. The return of indictments at San Francisco against five persons charged with enlisting recruits for the British army is understood to have precipitated the Ambassador's action.

According to the British contention, it is unjustly discriminatory to interfere with the transportation of volunteers who are not actually enlisted on American soil, when no objection has been made to notifications by Consuls to reservists of other countries in the United States. In this connection emphasis is laid upon the fact that Great Britain has no reservists in the same sense as Germany, France, Italy and other continental powers.

The British Gain More Positions North of Ypres

RUSSIANS NOW ON OFFENSIVE, DRIVING ENEMY BACK

CAN MANUFACTURE SHELLS IN CANADA

C. G. E. One of the Firms Represented at Recent Conference

In view of the statements made by Lord Curzon that Canada was falling down in the supply of ammunition, a number of prominent manufacturers from Toronto and vicinity met together a few days since, the result of the meeting being that a number of them visited Ottawa for a conference with Hon. Sir Thomas Chairman of the Shell Committee.

Can Produce Shells.

They placed before General Bertram the fact that they were in a position to produce shells in many times the quantities for which they had received orders, and that, if it were the truth that Great Britain was suffering from lack of high explosive shells, those present would undertake to invest large sums in machinery and equipment for producing shells in almost any quantities desired. General Bertram very frankly stated that he had already placed all orders that had been received from the British Government, but that he was hopeful that in the near future additional orders would be received, when they would be distributed to those manufacturers who had the plant and equipment for quick production.

Lack of Orders Real Cause.

The delegation of manufacturers were much pleased at the information given them by General Bertram and realised that the Shell Committee had done everything possible under the circumstances and that the real cause of Canada not being able to contribute ammunition in greater volume towards the defence of the Empire at the present time, was due solely to the lack of orders received from the War Office in Great Britain.

The firms represented were:
Canadian General Electric Co.
Canadian Allis-Chalmers, Limited.
Steel Company of Canada.
Massey-Harris Company.
Polson Iron Works.
Otis-Fensom Company.
Goldie and McCulloch.
John Inglis Company.
Gurney Foundry Company.

After the interview a committee of manufacturers was organized for the purpose of co-operating with the Shell Committee, Col. Frederic Nicholls being appointed chairman, and Mr. Robert Hobson of the Steel Company of Canada, vice-chairman.

The British Have Greatly Extended Their Gains North of Ypres

French Also Have Accomplished Another Brilliant Victory Over the Germans in the Vosges---Large Turkish Force Threatening British Port of Aden.

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 10.—The British have greatly extended their gains north of Ypres.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The German reply only partially meets United States demands. United States ships are promised immunity from attack when not carrying munitions.

PARIS, July 10.—The French have accomplished another brilliant victory over the Germans in the Vosges.

LONDON, July 10.—A large Turkish force is threatening the British free port of Aden.

OTTAWA, July 10.—The Militia Department announces there will be no more shell orders until the million "empty" shells now in hand are completed.

LONDON, July 10.—A British force from India operating against the Turks suffered a set back according to the official statement last night. Indian forces retired toward Aden before the Turks from Yemen.

LONDON, July 10.—The Russian steamer Anna from Archangel, Russia, for Hull, was shelled by a German submarine in the North Sea. The crew landed in Scotland, the ship still afloat.

WASHINGTON, July 10. — Charges that over two hundred million dollars of Federal reserve notes have been used in floating loans to belligerents and establishing war munitions credits here—in violation of American neutrality filed with the Federal reserve board by representative of the Labour Council of Peace.

LONDON, July 10.—London evening papers carried full text of the German reply in their first editions to-day with caustic introductory comment. "More German Cant" was the headline in the Evening News.

Germany insolently blames Great Britain for the loss of life aboard the Lusitania, and protests hypocritically about her claims on principles of humanity, said the Evening Star.

Parcels Get to Prisoners of War

Cable From Dr. Hodgetts Says They Are Delivered Intact

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 10.—Dr. Chas. A. Hodgetts, the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner in England, yesterday cabled Mr. Noel Marshall that Doctors Dolbey and Hart of the C.A.M.C., who have just returned from the army prisons in Germany, state that it is an imperative necessity to send Canadian prisoners as much bread and other food as possible. The postal arrangements are excellent, and the German authorities deliver parcels intact. There are one thousand Canadian prisoners on the Red Cross list, but Dr. Hodgetts hopes to be able to send each man monthly, in addition to the regular fortnightly parcels, a two pound loaf at a cost of sixpence. He also urges the extreme importance of sending contributions through the Canadian Red Cross. Supplies sent through private and unofficial channels have much less chance of reaching their destination.

It is to be hoped that the public will realize the great need of the Canadian prisoners for food, and will send cash contributions through the Canadian Red Cross Treasurer, 77 King street east.

ONTARIO TO HAVE LIGHT APPLE CROP

Indications That It Will Be Much Less Than That of Last Year

The second fruit report issued by the Fruit Commissioner's Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture, says that the Ontario apple crop will be much less than that of last year, that of British Columbia slightly less and that of Nova Scotia very much less.

In the Western Ontario district it is doubtful if the crop harvested will equal half of that of last year. Greenings and Baldwins will be short in Essex County. In Lambton County, with the exception of a small area on Lake Huron, the crop is almost a complete failure. The crop in Norfolk County is poor, as is that between Toronto and Niagara. East of Toronto this year's crop will be inferior to last year's. North of Lake Ontario apples suffered during May from frost in Prince Edward county there is a fair prospect. Eastern Ontario shows a good average crop of Snows and McIntosh. Orchards within two miles of the water in the eGorgian Bay district, will have a minimum crop, but quarters.

FINE CROP IN EAST

In New Brunswick the crop promises to be very heavy, and also in Nova Scotia, despite an apple scab which is developing. The crop in the Annapolis Valley may approach two million barrels, and although there has been a heavy drop the crop is estimated to be 80 per cent. of a full crop.

NOT SO MANY CHERRIES

The cherry crop in Ontario is reported to be 75 per cent. of last year. In British Columbia there has been an increased inland production with a falling off at the coast.

Russians Are Driving Mackensen's Forces Back on a Wide Front

Austro-German Advance is Halted and Russians are on the Offensive---Have Taken Thousands of Prisoners

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 10.—The Grand Duke's armies not only have halted the Austro-German advance on Lublin, but have taken the offensive and are driving Mackensen back on a wide front extending from the mouth of the River Podlip to the south of Bykhawa, the War Office announced to-day.

"In the fighting around the Village of Wilkokaszorny alone we have taken many thousands of prisoners," it was announced. "The enemy continues to retreat, resisting obstinately the pressure of our advance guards."

The enemy attacked fruitlessly our positions at the Village of Kouptche on the BBug River leaving 500 dead and wounded before our trenches. Elsewhere along the Bug, and along the Zelota Lipa River in Galicia, the enemy has ceased his attacks. Our patrols reconnoitring along this front have captured hundreds of prisoners.

Below the Fortress of Dessowetz, the Germans attempted to bridge the Bobr River. Our artillery destroyed the enemy pontoons and forced the Germans to withdraw from the stream.

204 Officers and 3,166 Men Surrender

PRETORIA, July 10.—The German regular forces in German Southwest Frica, which surrendered to General Botha, numbered 204 officers and 3,166 men, it was officially announced to-day. They turned over 37 field cannon and twenty-two machine guns.

Bombardment of Asia Minor Towns

ATHENS, July 10.—Allied warships, accompanied by air flotillas are conducting a systematic bombardment of Asia Minor coast towns from the Gulf of Adramyti to the Gulf of Phoenix.

How Germans Multiply the Losses Incurred By British

LONDON, July 10.—Now attempts by the Germans to keep up the waning spirit of the people of the Teutonic countries by deliberate distortions and misrepresentations of facts are being daily exposed. Mr. Asquith stated in the House of Commons on June 9 that the total British casualties in all ranks of the French and Mediterranean expeditionary forces up to May 31 were 258,000. He gave details showing how many officers and how many men "of other ranks" had been killed, were wounded, and were missing up to that date. In its evening edition of the following day, namely June 10th, the Tagliche Rundschau, of Berlin, published a telegram from its special correspondent at The Hague, in which it was stated that "Asquith had announced in Parliament that the total of the English losses in France is 1,585,000, of whom 10,955 are officers."

German Misrepresentation.

The Tagliche Rundschau, which is read chiefly in army and navy circles, printed this "news" in prominent type, and rendered it still more conspicuous by placing over it the heading "A Million and a Half English Losses." In the first place, the German public is informed that the losses were sustained in France, whereas Mr. Asquith stated clearly that these were the casualties "in the French and Mediterranean expeditionary forces." In the second place the Berlin newspaper adds 1,327,,340 to the number of the casualties in other ranks mentioned by Mr. Asquith. It gives correctly the number of men missing, namely 52,617; but it increases to a fabulous degree the number of killed and wounded. This is, of course, one of the expedients adopted by the German authorities to keep up the spirits of the people that Germany is gaining brilliant victories of all sides. The public will believe this statement, as it has believed all the statements issued by the authorities in which the repeated capture of hundreds of thousands of Russian soldiers and of great numbers of guns has been announced.

HAYING HAS COMMENCED IN PETERBORO' COUNTY

Reports From Different Points Indicate an Excellent Yield --Haying Will Be Well Under Way in Another Week--Hoe Crop Looking Well.

Haying has commenced in Peterborough County. Another week and the whir of the mower will be heard on all sides. So far as can be learned the hay crop promises to be fairly good. This applies more particularly to the old meadows. The new seeding was partly killed out and therefore did not have a chance to mature. Some exceptionally good crops of timothy are to be seen in this district. The cutting so far has been confined to clover. The grain crops seldom looked better. The rains of the past week helped things materially.

In Ontario.

A report from Essex County states that the temperature has been much below the average, and the rainfall light. Fall wheat is headed and shows a heavy crop on a large area, the heading of barley is uneven, oats are good, peas excellent and corn a little backward, turnips are germinating evenly, the hay crop is very light. From Ontario County the weather has been mostly dry and fair with showers in some parts. The condition of grain crops is excellent and hoed crops are looking well, fruits, early tomatoes and peaches, give promise of an excellent crop. The hay crop is good and is mostly harvested. From Ottawa, covering the districts of Eastern Ontario, the grain crops are reported as looking well, but the hay crop is light and uneven, hoed crops have germinated evenly, excepting corn, which is backward and uneven and badly in need of rain.

Saskatchewan.

At Indian Head, Lloydminster, Kindersley and Gull Lake grain crops are reported as looking well or excellent, beneficial rains having fallen from the 4th to the 26th. Late sown wheat, oats and barley showed less damage at Indian Head from frosts of the 7th and 18th than early sown wheat. Hoed crops promise well. At Kindersley oats and flax are well advanced, and at Gull Lake 80 per cent. is in shot blade. Scott Station reports an abundant supply of moisture with wheat in the shot blade and a few fields headed out. Other grain crops are coming along equally well, hoed crops are retarded by cool weather and some districts report injury from frost of the 16th. In southwestern Saskatchewan and from Swift Current north to Prelate all crops look excellent. From Prelate west to Empress crops are patchy due to cutworm, wireworms and in a few instances to the sowing of poor seed. All hoed crops look well though late. The report from Rosthern is less favourable. From this station it is reported that frost on the 15th killed corn, tomatoes and squash, retarded potatoes and injured small fruits; that there is no hay crop through lack of rain; and that all grain crops, except those on very well prepared land, are suffering from drought. Unless heavy rains come soon the grain crops will be almost a total failure.

Nova Scotia.

From Kentville it is reported that June has been unusually dark. From the 8th to the 25th it was almost continually wet, with few drying winds. Grain crops are growing well; grass and clover are excellent; potatoes and corn on dry land are making a fine start but on wet land are doing poorly. At River John beneficial rains fell from the 30th to the 26th. The condition of the grain crops is excellent; hoed crops and later cereals have germinated evenly and are coming along well. At Antigonish hay and pastures are excellent; early sown grain is good; the late sown grain is germinating fairly evenly; on June 24 there were 24 hours' steady rain, all low lying ground being submerged; it has since been cold; parts of some grain fields are turning yellow from the wet.

British Columbia.

The report from Agassiz states that June has been an excellent month for crop growth. Beneficial showers fell from the 7th to the 14th and cereal crops are maturing excellently. Root and fodder crops are above the average; haying is well under way and the clover crop is harvested. In Invermere copious rains have fallen, creating extremely favourable conditions, clover and alfalfa are exceptionally heavy; wheat is good; oats are only fair; hoed crops promise well.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

Neither Kastle nor Tom Smith loosened up a single face-muscle; but I happened to catch Kate's eye, and, bless her heart, she had to bite her lip savage, though she was worried plumb to the bone.

"Do you know this man?" sez Kastle, whirlin' on Kate.

"How long have you known him?"

"Nearly a year."

"A year! When did you speak to him first?"

"That time the buckboard broke down on the way to Dodge."

"Whu-at!" Kastle was standin' alone now and purty straght and tall. "How many times have you seen him since?" sez he.

For a second Kate hung silent and then she drew herself up with her feet set firm on her own instinct, and the light glowed brighter in her eyes. "I have seen hm often," sez she in a steady voice, but without any defiance in it; "we are close friends; he is the other man who helped me to get away from—from the place where Martin took me, and he also went after you."

"What was he doin' there?" sez Kastle.

Kate didn't know what to say and glanced at Tom Smith. "I had business there," sez he.

"Tendin' to goats or cleanin' cricks?" sez Kastle scornful.

The red climbed out of Tom Smith's whiskers and raced across his forehead to his hair. "Neither," sez he with some fierceness; "but no matter what my business had been, I wouldn't have sent a daughter of mine to such a place to 'tend to it."

I wouldn't give a cent for a man or a knife without any temper; but the better the temper, the more need of a handle, and Tom Smith had cut himself as bad as he'd cut Kastle. For a moment they stood eyein' each other, and then the old man swayed and put out his hand to Kate for support, and she sprang to his side, which nachely united them and left Tom Smith standin' alone.

"Go," sez Kastle, pointin' a shaky finger to the west, and speakin' in a shaky voice. "Go, if your business at this place had been decent, you wouldn't be ashamed to tell what it was."

Kate held her father close and gentle, but her eyes rested on Tom Smith's and they were fair meltin' with love and patience and promise. "I am now ashamed to tell," sez Tom Smith, speakin' in a quiet, steady voice now, but the old man interrupted him.

"You'd tell, now that you've had time to think up something," sez he; "but I wouldn't trust ya. You've been hidin' from me, now, for near a year and you wouldn't 'a' done this if you'd been all right. This other man"—wavin' his hand at me as though I was the off mule in a livery team—"he has not come skulking through a muddy crick, hiding in a clump o' weeds, and trying to speak to my daughter on the sly. Go. I never want to see you again."

The old man broke off, trembling and coughing, and Kate waved with here eyes for Tom Smith to leave. He bowed as easy as Jim Jimison could 'a' done it, and he walked away with so much bone in his back and so much all around style, that I reckon Kate didn't even hear the water churnin' in his boots.

When old man Kastle got warmed up, he was one o' these fellers who don't sneak into a corner and whisper what they got to say, and so he spoke right out before me and old Josiah, who sat smokin' slow but with his eyes a mite squinted up with pain.

"Is there anything to this affair besides nonsense, Kate?" sez Kastle.

"I care a great deal for him," sez Kate.

"For a goat farmer!" sez Kastle, sneerin' at her disdainful. "Kate, I'm ashamed of ya. The chances are that he is some sort of a criminal. I have taken lots o' joy in you out here, Kate; but now, I'm ashamed of ya, and you can start your packin' right now, for we leave here to-morrow. Don't help me, I'll walk into the house alone."

He tried it, all right, knowin' this would be one degree worse punishment than whippin' her with a stick; but he stumbled at the step and went to his knees where I caught him, half again' my will. Me and the old hermit had to tote him in and put him to bed, and after Kate had whipped down her sobs, she came in and soothed him.

He wasn't bluffin' this time, he sure did mean to go; but he had worked himself so close to another stroke that he had to spend some time in bed, and his mind went back again purt' nigh as childish as when he had first come.

The thought that it was her fault hung like a chain around Kate's neck and she couldn't do enough for him, and all the time she was eatin' her heart out to know what was happenin' to Tom Smith.

As I rode home that night I was in such a wrought up humour about the way things were goin' that when I came upon that band of outlaw bulls clear up in the range I was savin' for winter, I declared war on 'em, and I told 'em right now to prepare for a better world.

They really were a pest and a danger. Isaac was in the habit of gettin' out to examine some weed or stone and then forgettin' everything else until the sun sank, and twice those bulls had took after him. The boys had fussed 'em up so often without really hurtin' 'em that they were full o' bad medicine, and it was high time their vacation was ended—though I own I hated the job.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE.

THE LAST OF THE BULLS.

It was Friday before we got a chance to start those bulls on their last trail, and when the boys saw it was a sure go they entered into it hearty. Jim had a lot o' fine rifles, Monody had one, each of the Jones boys had one, as they had done consid'able buffalo-huntin', and I still had the buffalo gun I had lifted at Big Jeff's; so we planned to drive 'em down the same draw we had drove the hosses down to count 'em on our first inspection, shoot what we could, and head the rest into a pocket, shootin' them after they'd made the circle and started out again. Most of the boys were in favour of huntin' 'em down in the open; but I didn't look upon it as any kind o' sport and wanted to be sure of finishin' 'em off without fussin' up any of the regular stuff. The wolves and coyotes had been gettin' purty prominent, and I intended to put poison in the carcasses and do as much good as possible.

I planted Jim, Monody, the two Jones boys, and Shorty opposite the pocket in the draw, and had the rest, with the three oldest Hagus boys, to head the bulls into the draw with orders to work 'em as gentle as possible. We picked 'em up without any bother, just kept ridin' a wide circle with an open side towards the draw, and they drifted into the head of it without any back-talk whatever. Then I sent the pinto along a short cut and told the boys below to be ready. After which I just simply sidestepped. I'm finicky about a lot o' things and never did have much appetite for killin'.

I cut across to where the banks were high and steep and the draw narrow. The' was a straight piece above a long curve and it was right there that I thought I'd enjoy seein' those old range-robbers holdin' their last parade, with the pride still fat in 'em.

I happened to glance across the draw as I loped along towards it, and my heart stopped with a jerk when I saw Isaac's empty chariot just at the curve. I threw in the spurs and started the pinto at his best, for the curve was still a quarter away, and there wasn't a chance of Isaac bein' anywhere else in the world at such a time except down in the draw. Presently I caught sight of him bendin' over what I supposed was a bug or a flower and if I'd had time I'd have guessed his book learnin' fluent; but as it was I shouted and shot in the air. He never did pay any heed when he was what he called engrossed, and when I drew closer I saw that he was bendin' over another form, and this form was dressed in fawn skin, and it was the girl, Kate.

I never have but one panic durin' any sort of a complication, and I had that at sight of Isaac. My mind was as clear as moonlight, it was too blame' clear; I could cook up a new plan, consider it carefully, and throw it away again every bloomin' second, I could feel all the crushin' and the tramplin' those two would get when the bulls swept over them, and I knew all the time that there wasn't one thing I could do. The pinto was givin' me his last drop; I was shootin' and shoutin' my best; but I could see up the straight of the draw now, and a little cloud of dust where a side ditch had washed in some top soil, showed that the bulls were closer than I was. Hellion was running at my stirrup but he was as helpless as me, even if I could have made him understand.

I could see the bulls plain now and of course the obstinate fools had stampeded. Long borns they were, and they made a grand sight as they charged down the arroyo. There were only twenty-two of 'em, but they looked like a hundred to me. A bull is so everlastin' tough that he wasn't supposed to need much sense, and therefore mighty little was give to him. A she-cow keeps up her thinkin' right along, but a bull never thinks if he can find anything to get scared or mad at, and I knew if those bulls were shot down in rows, the last one would try his best to trample the strange objects he could just make out with his red, angry eyes.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Wilkerson Again on the Trail.

It had not been difficult for Harry Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell to trace Faversham and his party from the time they landed to their arrival in Bhala. But the idol itself, the object of their quest, still concealed its whereabouts in spite of the most minute inquiries.

"We'll simply have to watch Dorr," Wilkerson said at last. "We know he is on the trail, and we'll just follow him. Sooner or later we'll catch him."

Jean Darnell sullenly agreed, but privately confided to Drake that she thought Wilkerson had lost his nerve.

The climate did not suit her, nor the food, nor the primitive modes of travel, and her temper grew worse and worse. Drake promised to do some investigating on his own hook. He was once more completely under the woman's domination, and he dreamed of finding the precious papers himself and so putting Wilkerson out of the running.

Strangely enough, the man, weakly vicious as he was, was possessed by an honest and whole souled love for Jean.

She knew this, and at times her tawny eyes rested on him with unmistakable affection, but she knew perfectly well that she would choose Wilkerson provided he made good by gaining the master key and uncovering the wealth of the great mother lode.

It was Drake who brought the news of the riot in the temple and the outcome of Dorr's attempt to steal the idol.

"He was disguised and thought he could get away with it," he went on. "But the priests were too quick for him."

Wilkerson's shifty eyes narrowed. "I'll get that idol!" he boasted.

"I forgot to tell you that the idol isn't there any longer," Drake continued. "From what I could learn the temple wasn't considered a safe place for it, and it's disappeared."

"Where to?" demanded Wilkerson.

"That I couldn't find out. It was rather risky asking too much anyway, but a white man who lives with the natives hinted that they had taken it up the river into the hills."

"The idol isn't there any longer," Drake continued.

With this slight clew both Drake and Wilkerson toiled unweariedly until they had established the fact that the idol had indeed been sent into another part of the country for safe keeping.

Then they prepared to follow, having found out that Dorr and Faversham had vanished and were supposed also to have gone hillward.

Mrs. Darnell most unwillingly consented to stay behind, but yielded when Drake set before her the difficulties and perils of the road they must take.

Both men promised to be gone only so long as would be needful to recover the idol, and to both separately she made it plain that she had come so far as she would in helping them.

The two men found a couple of half-bloods to their liking and by judicious expenditure of money managed to get together a small band to accompany them into the hills.

It was impressed upon them that the trip was dangerous and that the hillmen frequently dropped what small pretense they offered of peaceableness and warred on friend and foe alike.

It was through these also that they learned more specifically the route taken by the priests in charge of the idol.

Equipped at last, they started forth and for two days kept pretty closely to the river, which wound about through the hills, mounting slowly to its source in the mountains.

Several times they heard of Faversham and Dorr, but Wilkerson refused to turn aside or delay once on the trail of the idol. And at last they came within view of the little cavalcade which was escorting the god to a place of safety.

Vile as were the men he had hired, Wilkerson dared not trust them too far. He knew that they were superstitious, and he feared that when it came to a battle between avarice and inborn terror of the supernatural he would be left in the lurch.

So he warned Drake not to appear too anxious and by no means to let their followers know that they intended to seize the image and take it away with them.

"But if the papers are in that idol," Drake protested, "we ought to be able to get them and replace the old image, with nobody a jot the worse."

"That may be possible," was the response. "On the other hand, the plans may be concealed so that it will take time to find them."

They discussed a dozen plans and finally decided that the next night the two of them, accompanied only by their guide, should make the trial.

"But supposing they have the image, where shall we find it?" questioned Drake. "They have a lot of stuff in their packs, and you may be sure they have concealed the idol well. Unless they feared its being stolen again they wouldn't be going to all this pains."

The evening came when they were to put their scheme to the test. Their own little company made camp and after supper gradually went to sleep.

It was 10 o'clock when Wilkerson nodded to Drake, and they quit their places by the dying fire.

Outside of the circle they met the man who was to guide them, and one glance at his brutal face showed Wilkerson that he was once more confronted with a problem.

The man made no bones of demanding a large extra sum in compensation for his risks and intimated with extreme plainness that in case his exorbitant blackmail was not paid he would not only not accompany them, but put it out of their power to go alone.

For an hour Wilkerson bargained and haggled, but all to no purpose. At last he gave in and practically stripped himself of coin, which the other pocketed without a thank you.

The three of them started forth under a glimmering moon toward the priests' camp, a mile or so away by a spring.

Half an hour's steady tramping brought them within eyeshot of the place, and Wilkerson went ahead to spy out the lay of things.

When he came back he roughly told Drake, in reply to his question, that the idol must be in one of the pack sacks lying about.

"It's a case of sneak up and get a sack each of us and then look for the idol in it," he said.

"All right!" Drake growled. "But it's risky business. In case of a muss where'll we meet again?"

"At our own camp," Wilkerson whispered and led the way.

When they came close to the spot where the natives were asleep the three of them paused and listened.

Presently Wilkerson gave a silent signal that no one was awake, and they crept up among the baggage.

The first two sacks yielded nothing and Wilkerson was reaching out for one that seemed bulkier than the rest when their guide coughed and instantly a couple of the priests wakened.

Seeing strangers, they gave an alarm, and one, apparently a soldier, fired off an ancient musket so close to Drake that he incontinently dropped his burden and fled.

He heard Wilkerson cursing behind him, a couple of more shots and then took to his heels in good earnest as he heard rapid footsteps.

A moment later Wilkerson had caught up to him, panting and dragging the sack, which he had refused to surrender.

Between them they carried it on further and then rested in a slight hollow till their guide came up.

"If the idol isn't in this sack," Wilkerson said with a snarl, "I'll go back and shoot up the whole outfit and get it."

When the thongs were cut and the great bag opened the first object that met their eyes was the image they sought, glimmering in the half light.

The moment he saw it and knew that his quest was ended Wilkerson flung the rest of the stuff away and boldly got to his feet.

"Now for our own camp. We'll just see where those plans are," he growled.

Drake and the guide both protested in vain.

"It's the same one," Wilkerson said triumphantly.

"Made of metal, too," said Drake slowly. "Now, where are the plans?"

It did not take long for him to discover the movable eye, and when he had pulled that out he thrust his finger in and withdrew it with a folded paper.

"Safe and sound," he exulted, dropping the image to the ground, where

"Give you a copy!" he snarled.

"The gold isn't a thousand feet from the main tunnel of the 'Master Key' mine!" he said triumphantly and thrust the plans into his bosom before Drake could see more.

"If those plans are lost or anything happens to you," Drake said, with an ugly note in his voice, "all our trouble goes for nothing. I am entitled to a copy of those plans."

Wilkerson laughed in his face, and the expression on his saturnine visage made even the brutal guide cringe backward.

"Give you a copy!" he snarled. "When I've hunted for them all these years and suffered the agonies of hell on account of them? They're mine! All that gold is mine! Mine! Mine, I tell you!"

This last he almost shouted into the still air, and Drake drew back.

The man was mad.

"At least let them have their idol," he muttered, picking it up.

Wilkerson snatched it away from him with a gesture at once childish and murderous.

"I think I'll keep this for a memento," he cried, careless of who might hear him.

He stood up, the image in his grasp, and before the sound of his blasphemy Drake and the guide crept away in silent horror.

And not far distant Faversham sat vigilant by the side of his camp watching over the sleep of Ruth Gallon.

Possibly it was an echo of Wilkerson's savage cry of triumph that stirred her in her dreams.

She sighed and reached out one slender hand. It touched that of John Dorr and rested there as if she had found safety.

Sir Donald saw that movement, and his eyes burned with jealousy. But he did not move, keeping his ears open for the slightest sound, his eyes for the faintest shadow between his charges and the horizon.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Tix-It Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

"The population of the world is 1,600,000,000, yet after nineteen hundred years of Christian effort, 1,116,000,000 of the world's population do not know the Christian gospel. CONTRIBUTE MACHINE GUNS.

Acting Minister Lougheed's Suggestion to Rich Canadians.

OTTAWA, July 9.—The Canadian forces need machine guns, and the acting Minister of Militia stated today that patriotic people or institutions, or others desirous of doing their bit, cannot do it better than in giving machine guns.

It is suggested that contributions for the purpose be forwarded to the department. They would be applied to the purchase of guns for regiments from the same localities as the money came from and would be in addition to the regular equipment going with each battalion. A machine gun costs $750.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable." writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

DON'T WORRY

When things go contrary as often they do.
And fortune seems burdened with spite,
Don't give way to grieving, all dismal and blue—
That never set anything right!
But cheerfully face what the day may reveal,
Make the best of whatever befall.
Since the more you worry the worse you must feel,
Why waste time in worry at all?

We all have our troubles—some more and some less—
And this is the knowledge we gain—
It's work and a brave heart that lightens the stress
Of a life's share of sorrow and pain.

Then face with this knowledge fate's cruelest deal.
Too plucky to faint or to fall;
Since the more you worry the worse you must feel,
Is it wisdom to worry at all?
—Grace Inglis.

How Ministers Came to be Called Reverend

At some time in the Middle Ages the custom grew up of applying to clergymen the term "reverendus." This word was a part of speech known in Latin as a gerund, and means "one who ought to be revered."

Gerunds could be compared like adjectives, and it seemed natural to the people of those days that, if all clergymen were reverendi, a bishop should be designated by the comparative degree, "reverendior," more reverend, or right reverend, while the superlative degree, reverendissimus, most reverend, was reserved for archbishops.

As these terms referred to individuals, they were never used in connection with the family name alone, but with the Christian name, which indicated the individual.

A great many people in our day are committing the unfortunate blunder of using the term "reverend" in connection with a family name. Mr. Smith is a clergyman. He is frequently spoken of, and sometimes spoken to as "Reverend Smith." This is wrong. Smith is a family name, and does not refer to an individual. The only proper way of speaking of him is as the Rev. Mr. Smith, or the Rev. John Smith, or plain Mr. Smith, but never Rev. Smith.

Never Rev. and Mrs. Smith, but the Rev. and Mrs. John Smith. Strictly speaking, the only possible way of speaking to him is "Mr. Smith," for the old English "Your Reverence," has died out.

One does not speak of or to a judge as Honorable Jones, but one speaks or writes of him as the Hon. Henry T. Jones, and addresses him as "Your Honour."

As concerns the use use of the word "reverend," no one applies it to himself or signs his name with it, prefixed.

Scholars urge us to try to preserve the use of the English language, and not be attacked by the modern disease which impels so many people to use nearly all the nouns and many of the adjectives as if they were titles.

You may find in the papers any day such expressions as Motorman Brown, Witness Green, Suspect Robinson, Optician White, and Pitcher Jones.

It ought to be stopped; but who will stop it? Scholars tell us that this is one of the signs that the English language is degenerating very rapidly.

Worry Makes Stomach Suffer

Worry has come to be a question of hygiene rather than of religion. Whether immoral or not it is certainly unhealthful so the doctors tell us. Whatever its effect upon the soul it is known to injure the body.

If the medical man is correct in his latest deductions, many of the most distressing of our physical ailments are due to worry alone.

The pulse of a worried man is irregular. It beats intermittently and its force varies greatly. He sighs frequently. His respiration is repressed. He is likely to be pale. His extremities are cold.

There is but one meaning to this. Through the marvellous influence which mind exercises upon matter [illegible] circulation is impaired and chronic heart disease is to be feared unless the worry ceases.

The stomach is likely to suffer also. The same worry which disturbs the heart's functions plays havoc with digestion often. Recent observations demonstrate that when one is in extreme anxiety the apeptite fails. The secretions are disturbed. Should the anxiety continue the subject is almost certain to become a confirmed dyspeptic.

The effect of worry upon the internal glands has not been fully studied. Enough is known, however, to assure the physician that it affects the secretions of these glands very seriously through the sympathetic nerves. It thus becomes an important agent in producing ex-opthalmic goitre and a train of other ills that can only be defined when the real functions of the glands in question are more adequately studied.

Of all this we are assured by the very latest outgivings from the scientific laboratory, but the ancients must have had some inkling of the facts. Otherwise, how could one of old have said "A merry heart doeth good like medicine?"

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the deuble strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

WORTH REMEMBERING

To clean a straw hat, scrub with an old nailbrush dipped in one cupful of warm water in which one tablespoonful of oxalic acid has been dissolved.

Keep all large corks; they do the work of scouring knives far better than a rag and are cleaner to have around.

To nourish a fern, put a couple of raw oysters under the dirt, close to the roots, and the fern will grow like magic.

Camphor will remove fresh peach stains from linen, if followed with soap and water.

Ammonia or alcohol will remove iodine; then wash out in cold water.

To wash dress shields, lay them on a board, soiled side up, and scrub with a brush, using plenty of suds. Rinse, but do not squeeze. Hang on line to dry.

Use lemon juice and salt to remove iron rust on white goods.

To clean bannisters, wash off with mild soap and awter, dry quicker and then apply two parts of linseed oil and one part turpentine. This will keep woodwork looking fine.

Two drams of sal-ammoniac in an ounce of eGrman cologne is said to cure freckles. The solution should be added to a pint of soft water before using. Apply three times daily, with a sponge.

Colours can be set in wash material, by dissolving one tablespoonful of sugar of lead in two gallons of water. Let goods stand in solution over night.

If a wooden panel with rows of wire nails drives into it and spools of thread put on the nails is hung near the sewing machine and the workbasket, the desired number of thread may be quickly found.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

As this summer has brought us a season of very soft, sheer fabrics, it is the full models which make the strongest appeal for dresses of the pretty type. Such a one is shown in our illustration.

In this charming dress we have a bodice cut in one with the sleeve, which ends just below the elbow. The front of the waist is open and displays the front of a guimpe. This is also in one piece and may be made with sleeves or without them.

The skirt is a straight gathered one and is seamed only where the width of the material demands it. There are rows of perforations at the lower edge to guide the maker in placing ruffles. These may be of the dress material or of lace or they need not be used at all. It is also possible to cut off the skirt at the line of perforations and to let it hang as a tunic over a second material below it.

Summer silks made in this manner are extremely attractive, while cotton voile, organdie and other fabrics of semi-transparent texture are also suitable. Many ideas will suggest themselves to the ingenious home dressmaker.

The dress pattern, No. 7,262, is cut in sizes 34 to 40 inches bust measure. Medium size requires, with ruffles, 7 yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

WAFFLES

Mix and stir one and three-fourths cups of flour, three teaspoons of baking powder and one half teaspoon of salt. Add one cup of milk (gradually), yolks of two eggs, one tablespoon of melted butter and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Cook on greased hot waffle irons.

CUCUMBER SALAD

To make this salad a success, mix five teaspoonfuls of sour cream, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one half teaspoonful of paprika, a pinch of salt and one half a teaspoonful of finely chopped chives. Blend all carefully together and add to the cucumbers, cut into very thin slices. Mix well and serve.

BANANA CREAM PIE

Beat four eggs, (preserving whites of two), with half cup of sugar until thoroughly mixed, then add a tiny pinch of salt and the pulp of two very ripe bananas pressed through a sieve. Stir in a pint of hot milk gradually so as not to cook the eggs, then add a few drops of vanilla. Pour into a deep pie tin lined with rich pastry, and bake in a moderate oven until the custard is firm in the centre. When done cover with a meringue made of the whites and two tablespoonfuls of sugar, beaten very stiff, and set in a very slow oven to cook brown.

Sugar Cookies.

Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, three-fourths of a cup of milk, two eggs, four cups of flour, one teaspoon of vanilla, two teaspoons of baking powder. Cream butter and sugar, add egg and flavouring, mix baking powder with half of the flour, alternate with the milk, then add the remaining flour, turn it out on floured board, roll thin and cook quickly.

A Real Flesh Builder For Thin People

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain fact is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and fussy new-fangled diets. Omit the flesh cream rubbons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol changes your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of the body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come forty tablets to a package, are pheasant, harmless and inexpensive. All druggists in Peterboro and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

To Acquire Curly Hair Over Night

(The Beauty Seeker.)

There's good news, indeed, in the announcement that so simple a method as applying plain liquid silmerine to the hair will make it beautifully curly and wavy over night. The hair dries in lovely waves and ringlets that are perfectly natural in appearance, and there is nothing sticky, greasy or unpleasant about it. The liquid, which is of course quite harmless, also serves as a splendid dressing for the hair, keeping it delightfully glossy and supple.

If one will procure a few ounces of liquid silmerine from the druggist, she will have enough to keep the hair in curl for weeks. It should be applied at night with a clean tooth brush. In the morning the hair will be very prettily waved without having that burnt, lifeless look acquired by using a heated iron.

TWENTY USES FOR THE LEMON

Few people realize the value of lemons, which cannot be over-estimated. In the warm, debilitating weather their tonic effect is excellent, and in cases of fever, sore throat or torpid liver the medicinal qualities are splendid.

1. Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of hot, strong tea will cure a nervous headache.

2. A teaspoon of lemond juice in a cup of black coffee will relieve a bilious headache.

2. A teaspoon of lemon juice in a cup of hot water on awakening in the morning is an excellent liver corrective and successful substitute for calomel and other alternative drugs.

4. A dash of lemon juice in plain water makes a cleansing tooth wash, not only removing the tartar, but sweetening the breath.

5. A lotion of lemon juice and rose water will remove tan and whiten the skin.

6. Lemon juice with olive oil is considered by many as far superior to vinegar for salad dressing.

7. Lemon juice and loaf sugar are good for hoarseness.

8. Outward application of the juice allays irritation caused by insect bites.

9. A refreshing drink is made by adding a freshly beaten egg to lemonade, and

10. The same mixture when frozen makes a delicious ice.

11. If when boiling sago or rice a teaspoon of lemon juice is added, the kernels will be whiter and a delicate flavour is added.

12. An old-fashioned remedy for croup is lemon juice, honey and alum.

13. We all know the value of lemon juice and salt for removing rust stains from white goods.

14. After the juice is extracted the rind dipped in salt cleanses brass beautifully and conveniently.

15. It also removes unsightly stains from the hands.

16. For flavouring cookery lemon juice is unexcelled.

17. After the pulp is removed the skins make dainty receptacles for serving salads, ices, etc.

18. Tough meat may be made tender by adding a teaspoon of lemon juice to the water in which it is boiled.

19. Slices of lemon garnish fish of all descriptions.

20. Tea is greatly improved by the addition of a slice of lemon, either iced for summer's use or as Russian tea on a winter's day. In buying lemons select those having a thin dry rind. They are cheaper and much juicier than the fresh, plump ones.

LEAD STOCKS

The advance of one hundred per cent. in the market price of lead foreshadows a similar increase in the market value of producers of the metal, whether silver-lead or zinc-lead producers of the same character as that now being enjoyed by the Coppers.

We advise the immediate purchase of the lead stocks for increased investment yield and speculative profits justified by the tremendous increase in earnings.

FRENCH BOY IS HERO OF ATTACK AT DARDANELLES

Led Charge Which Won Haricot, Key Position to Kereves Dere

PARIS, July 11.—An unnamed French youth, who charged over piles of dead bodies "is if he were going to a picnic," was the hero of a daring attack that won the important Turkish position of Haricot for the allies at the Dardanelles, the official eye-witness [illegible] this afternoon in a review of operations on June 9 to 24. One Turkish regiment is known to have been slaughtered, the eye-witness declared, and prisoners admitted their losses were enormous.

Previous to June 21 the daily engagements were relatively unimportant, but on the 21st a general offensive movement was organized by the French expeditionary force and resulted in the capture of two line of trenches. The principal objective was the position known as "Haricot," around which fortification the struggle has continued for the past six weeks.

Stormed On Three Sides.

The allies determined to capture Haricot at all costs, because it commands the southern end of the ravine of Kereves Dere, and because from its northern side the Turks had poured in a destructive fire on the Anglo-French flanks for six weeks. This position was stormed on three sides, and although the officer in command of the French expeditionary force was severely wounded, the French forces continued to advance bravely, and succeeded in gaining a foothold in the second line of trenches and in capturing a portion of the redoubt.

The fight lasted throughout the day, and at nightfall the lieutenant-colonel in command gave orders to charge on the fort and regain the territory which, during the afternoon, the French troops had been forced to evacuate. Ten minutes later the whole line of trenches again was in possession of the French, and the Turks had been routed.

"The charge," says the eye-witness, "was ordered June 21, led by this brilliant boy of 20 years, who raced over the field at the head of older soldiers. After the position was taken our troops solidified it and awaited the expected enemy attack."

Counter-Attack Was Vain.

The French at once began to prepare their new positions to withstand the counter-attack which it was evident the Turks contemplated. This work was particularly difficult, as the French were continually under the fire of several long-range guns removed by the Turks from the former German cruiser Goeben and brought over to Adrianople.

"The Turks counter-attacked furiously on June 22 at 3 a.m. The situation for the moment was critical, but our artillery fire, mitrailleuses, and rifle fire decimated the Turks, who fled, leaving an entire regiment on the field. The result of the action was highly important."

DAINTY FOOD.
Turns Pale Cheeks to Pink.

Our best physicians of the present day seek to cure patients by the use of food and right living, rather than heavy drugs, and this is the true method, for only from food can the body be rebuilt.

Many people, after living on poorly selected or badly cooked food for a long time, and when their ailments become chronic, expect the doctor, with some magic potency, to instantly rebuild them.

This is not possible. The only true method is to turn as quickly as can be, from poor food to good. A young lady says:

"I was variously treated for my nerves, stomach, lungs, etc., but none of the treatments gave me relief.

"About a year ago when my appetite failed completely and I began to have sinking spells similar to fainting, I took all manner of tonics and stimulants, but they were of no effect. I had been brought to quit drinking coffee and talking Postum in its place and gradually began to get a little better.

"Someone suggested that if I found Postum so beneficial I had better use Grape-Nuts food, as they were both the children of one brain. I commenced on Grape-Nuts food for breakfast, having Postum with it. I found the food so dainty, delicious, and appetizing that I always looked forward to breakfast with pleasure.

"Shortly after commencing this diet, the wretched pain in my side was greatly relieved, and now, a year later, it has gone entirely, also the sinking spells; in fact, my pale cheeks have changed to pink, I have gained back more than the twenty pounds I lost, and am thoroughly well in every way."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

LORD KITCHENER AND PREMIER ASQUITH WITNESS REPULSE OF THE GERMAN COUNTER ATTACK

In Two Days' Tour Along the Whole Battlefront Lord Kitchener Inspected the Whole British Expeditionary Force and Some French Units.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 12.—Lord Kitchener and Premier Asquith witnessed the repulse of the German counter-attack against the British lines north of Ypres on July 7, an eye-witness statement declared to-day.

From Ypres they were driven northward to the Belgian front and conferred with King Albert. In two days' tour along the battle front Lord Kitchener inspected practically the whole British expeditionary force, and some French units.

AMSTERDAM, July 12.—American women in Germany have issued an appeal to women of America to urge their husbands to insist on prohibition of exports of arms and ammunition to the Allies, according to Berlin despatches to-day.

PARIS, July 12.—The French have taken the heights dominating Flanders, and an early advance along the whole line is expected.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Slight advices received here say that the submarine which sunk the Lusitania has been captured in the Channel nets and the crew has been imprisoned.

ROME, July 12.—An Austrian submarine engaged an Italian submarine and both were sunk.

NEW YORK, July 12.—Several steamers leaving here for Britain have been warned that bombs were planted in the cargo.

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin wireless, July 12.—The British battleship of the Lord Nelson type was heavily shelled by Turkish forts near Gaba Tepe Saturday night and was forced to withdraw, it was officially announced to-day. Several of the Turkish projectiles exploded over the warship's deck and are believed to have done considerable damage.

ITALIAN GUNS BOMBARDING MALBORGETH AND PREDIL

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, July 12.—Thousands of tons of metal are being hurled against the Austrian works along the Isonzo in a determined attempt to wreck the defences to Goritz. King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by his cousin the Duke D'Aosta, is speeding up and down the Italian front, personally directing the artillery fire and encouraging his troops.

Italian airmen are raiding the Austrian front with challenge from the enemy's aviators. Official despatches reported that the railway station at Nabresina has again been bombarded from the air.

General Cadorno's despatches reported that the heavy bombardment of Platzwise fort, in the Upper Ansici Valley, is continuing and that part of the Austrian work is in flames. Elsewhere, he reported, several night attacks by the Austrians were repulsed.

During a vigorous attack north of Goritz, 65 Dalmatians threw up their hands in token of surrender, according to despatches received here, but were instantly made targets for the Austrian riflemen. Twenty-eight were killed. Those who reached the Italian lines were treated with the greatest consideration.

A special to the Tribuna Saturday reported the Austrians busy fortifying their lines of defence stretching from Trieste to Gratz and Vienna in preparation for an expected Italian invasion.

Friday night's official statement said:

"In the Aone Valley the enemy made a daring effort to capture the summit of Bozzola, occupied by us, but were repulsed. In the Upper Ansici Valley our artillery opened fire on Platzwise fort, seriously damaging it and causing a fire.

"The enemy on Thursday attacked our position between Zeillinkon and Crestawerde in Carnia, but were thrown back with a loss. A night attack against Val Grande had the same result.

"Our artillery continues an effective fire on the defences of Malborgeth and Predil Pass. The situation along the remainder of the front is satisfactory."

Both Openly Defy Congress

Says Frank P. Walsh, Chairman of Federal Industrial Relations Commission of Rockefeller and Hon. MacKenzie King

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 12.—After describing Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, former Labour Minister in Canada, as the tool of Rockefeller interests, Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Federal Industrial Relations Commissions, demanded in a speech here yesterday that both Rockefeller and King be summoned before the Bar of Congress and compelled to answer questions put by the Commission. Walsh declared that both openly defy Congress authority in the matter.

DEAD LAWN TENNIS HERO IS NOT FORGOTTEN

New Zealand tennis players have organized a movement to erect a memorial to the late Capt. Anthony F. Wilding, the international tennis player killed while serving with the British army in France. The council of the New Zealand Tennis Association had instructed the management committee to inaugurate a shilling (25 cents) fund among tennis players, part of which is to be spent on a memorial to Wilding at his birthplace, Shristchurch, and the balance on perpetual Wilding trophies for the New Zealand championship singles for both men and women.

POINTERS FOR GARDENERS

Many Plants Should Be Staked Up---Pruning Summer Shrubs---Use of Fertilizer

The heavy storms of the past week have spread havoc in the garden especially among tall growing plants. If allowed to remain in their present tumble-down state the neatness and beauty of the garden will be permanently marred. Staking up will bring order out of chaos. Suitable stakes should be provided; clumsy pieces of wood will only add to the unsightliness of the place. Ordinary laths may be used if care is taken to set them firmly in an upright position, and the plants neatly tied with raphia. Raphia is so cheap that there is little excuse for the use of old string or pieces of rag. Then this tying material will not cut or injure the tender stalks.

Tall-growing perennials, such as delphinium, should be supported until the blooming period is past, then they should be cut down before seed is formed. It will benefit the plants if this is done and also improve the appearance of the beds.

Summer Pruning of Shrubs.

Cut off the dead, withered bloom from spring flowering shrubs that have ended their flowering season. All dead spikes should be removed and enough of the old wood to allow for growth of wood on which next season's bloom will appear. Any dead or weak wood should also be removed. Where portions of old shrubs have been winter killed making the shrubs unsightly, a vigorous cutting back to short spurs is recommended. New branches will then be formed on which next year's flowers will appear.

Aim to have the top bud of each stem point outwards when cutting back shrubs. If this is done the new growth will be in that direction and criss-crossing of branches will be prevented. Spirea hedges should be neatly trimmed now, they may be well cut back to advantage. The more vigorous the cutting back the finer and larger will be the bloom next season. If it becomes necessary to remove a large limb from an old shrub take it back close to the main stem and paint the wound.

Plants that show signs of suffering for lack of available nourishment in the soil may be stimulated in growth by applying nitrogen in the form or nitrate of soda, using one pound to twelve gallons of water.

Preparing Liquid Manure.

Liquid manure is prepared by placing a quantity of manure in a barrel or other receptacle, enough to fill it about two thirds full, then fill nearly full with water. This should be well stirred up followed by a stirring every other day. In three or four days it will be ready for use, which will be indicated by the colour of the liquid, which should be of a rich dark brown. This liquid must be diluted with water before applying around the roots of plants, and should be reduced to about the colour of weak tea. If a small bag of soot, weighed down with a stone, is placed in the bottom of the fluid in the barrel it greatly improves the quality of the liquid.

All insects are not garden enemies by any means, in fact, some insects are the gardener's best friends. Among "our friends" are bees, dragon flies, tree crickets, ground beetles, lady bugs, wasps, lace-winged flies, hornets and garden spiders; frogs, toads and lizards may also be numbered, among the gardener's friends. Bees are necessary as polenizers, the other insects mentioned feed largely on "our enemies"—injurious insects and plant lice. Others of the friends mentioned feed on the larvae of garden pests and on slugs. Don't make the grave mistake of destroying your friends or you will have more trouble with your enemies.

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Kate lay on her back, and Isaac bent above her with some water in his drinkin' cup, bathin' her temples. The water was just used up and he started to get some more and picked up his umbrella. He stood in a daze a minute tryin' to decide whether it would be better to take this implement with him or to leave it behind, and it was just at this point that little Connie managed to attract his attention. Connie was so used to havin' the angels look out for his absent-minded master that he had got to be a little dilatory himself; but now he was beginnin' to get some interested and to bark and carry on high.

Isaac stood with the umbrella in his hand and after glancin' down at Connie and speakin' to him, he came near enough alive to notice that something was taking place up the draw, and adjusted his spectacles to have a good, loafy look. He seemed to be turned to stone when he made out what it was that was chargin' down on him, and then he looked from one bank of the draw to the other, but there wasn't a speck of shelter and the bulls weren't a hundred feet away. He stooped as though to pick up the girl, and then shook his queer old head and probably said something to little Connie, for the dog wagged his tail.

Connie knew that this charge of the bulls meant a horrible death, but not for a second did it occur to him to try to save his own bacon. If his god chose to work a merricle and destroy those bulls, why that would be a fine sight, or if his god were weary of life and had selected this way out of it, why, that was all right, too—a god whose whims are to be questioned isn't no god at all.

A man looks at a horrid sight for the same reason that a bird looks at a writhin' snake—'cause he blame' well can't help himself. Every bone in me ached at thought of what was soon to be, but I looked at that little group until every line and every shade was branded into my brain, and became part of it.

Down charged the bulls, six abreast, their horns interlacing and almost fillin' the draw, heads low, and tails in the air. In front of 'em lay the gel with upturned face, and between them and her, stood a lean, loose-built man with shaggy whiskers and big black spectacles, holdin' an umbrella, and lookin' quite interested, while at the feet of the man stood a little silver blue terrier, about the size and weight of a fur gauntlet. I had seen plenty o' men meet death, but I never saw no such a meetin' as this.

I was gettin' right up to 'em, now, but I wasn't of any more use than a strawstack, except to look. Time seemed to fairly hang fire, and I seemed to be gazin' at a painted picture. When the bulls got to within fifty feet, I must have been within about that many yards, and I saw Isaac look down at the girl and shake his head regretful. Then, for some reason clear above and beyond and outside all reason, he faced the bulls again and calmly opened his umbrella.

The' ain't no sense in a bull, not a grain. The two in the centre of the front rank split at the sight of the black something which had suddenly yawned in their faces, and threw themselves against their fellows, and so with the second rank, and the third and the fouth. With the horns of the outside bulls raking the draw, the ones on the inside pushed and reared and strugglied so that not the tip o' one of those deadly umbrella ribs should touch their tender hides; and Isaac, Kate, and little Connie stood in a lane as safe and just about as peculiar as that other one the good Lord opened a long time before, when the Egyptians coppered His bet that Moses was a-goin' to give those Children of Israel a fair start on their forty-year dash through the Wilderness.

As the bulls passed with a grinding whirr, Isaac turned and gazed after 'em in mild surprise, while Connie, tickled to see what a neat twist his wonderful god had give to what had looked to be a rather serious complication, hooked onto the tail of the bunch and snapped bull's heels until he tripped over a blade of grass and went down in a heap. I pulled up the pinto, got off, threw the reins on the ground, and stretched out flat on my back to get my breath natural. A feller once spent about three days tellin' me how he felt after wakin' up from a dream in which a blast had let go too soon and had blown him into a million pieces. He said when he started to wake up the pieces came back a few at a time and each one had a separate hurt. I hadn't never been able to sympathize with him before.

I had been ridin' along a high ridge durin' most of the time I was watchin' 'em, but as I rode down the slope to the edge of the bank, I lost sight of 'em, and when I had got my breathin' and expression fixed, and walked over to look for a place to climb down, I saw the boys under Phil McLaughlin comin' down the draw on a shuffle and just then the boys below began to shoot.

When I reached 'em, Isaac was in the midst of a windy explanation as to how he had seen the girl lyin' in the draw but had had to drive back to the curve before he had found a place he could climb down. When he had found 'at the young lady had fainted he had gone back to his canteen after water, but, strangely enough, had neglected to bring the canteen with him. He would now go and get some more water.

"Did you happen to notice a small bunch o' bulls drift down this way a while back?" asked Phil McLaughlin.

"It's kind o' narrow quarters here," sez Phil; "I'm surprised they went by you."

"Why, I shooed at 'em with my umberella," sez Isaac, pointin' to his weapon which he had stood up so as to shade the girl, "and they gave us plenty of room."

Phil McLaughlin shook his head and turned away. "I don't see much use of havin' sense," sez he to me.

Just then the girl gave a gaspy sigh under the umberella, and Isaac lifted it off and sez in a kind voice: "Well, how do you feel by this time?"

[illegible] head in a dazed sort of way and sez: "My head don't feel just right, I—where am I?"

"Can you tell us where you live?" I asked her, speakin' like a stranger so as to give her a cue; but the' was no need of it.

"I can't remember," sez she, lookin' full at me as though she had never set eyes on me before, and the' was no put-on to this either.

"We'd better take her to the ranch house," sez McLaughlin. "Move a little, lady, and see if you could walk." When any one spoke to her she held her eyes on him as though it took her last grain o' will-power, and she took suggestions like a small child. She got up careful and slow and took a couple o' steps. "I can walk," sez she. "Where are we?"

"On the Lion Head Ranch," sez Phil.

"Ranch?" sez she, "How peculiar! What—what state is this?"

"Texas?" she repeated. "How very peculiar! Is my father here?"

"Well, I haven't seen him to know him," sez Phil, and his voice was unusual kind and soothin'.

"I don't understand it, at all," sez she, shakin' her head.

"What business is your father in, miss?" sez Phil.

"He is a banker," sez she.

"Well, then he'll know how to find ya," sez Phil; "and now you had better come with us until you get strong again."

Phil took hold of her arm on one side and me on the other and we helped her get under way, but she was soon able to go alone. By the time we had reached the path down which Isaac had come, Jim and the rest had come up leadin' her hoss, but she didn't seem to recognize even the pony. "The best plan is to just turn the pony adrift, Jim," sez I, "and the chances are that he'll find his way back to her people"; so we gave the hoss a slap and let him go.

I told Jim all about it and he joined right in with havin' her go to headquarters. "I wonder where she can have come from?" sez he, lookin' at her close.

The skirt of her fawn-skin suit fell to below her knees, and it was made some way in layers, so that it hung skimpy when she stood still, but never hampered her in walkin', and when she rode it split apart in front and behind and looked as comfortable as chaps. The Begum wore tight-fittin' waists with a lot of extra fluffin's behind which Jim said was called a bustle. It looked like a deformity to me, but I just knew she was goin' to be shocked at sight o' this girl.

After sendin' some of the boys ahead with Jim to get things fixed, and the rest on the errand and another, I slipped away to the old hermit's to see if he had any news. I rode up the draw and came out the head of it just as he was about to ride into it.

His face was all sagged down with trouble, and both dogs were with him, Placido ahead showin' the trail. "Where is Kate?" sez he, and I told him.

"Placido came back alone," sez he, "and I've grown such a fool in my old age that it took me hours to know what he wanted. Sometimes she sends him back after a glove or something, and sometimes with a note; but a blind bat ought to have known it was something important this time."

He didn't worry much about the effect of her fall, thinkin' she'd be all right after a good sleep; but he saw right out that her father would have to be supplied with a mighty convincin' alibi or he'd paw the ridge-pole loose.

He made me go back with him to tell just how it happened, and so I went along with mighty little appetite for the job. Kate's father had a way o' lookin' down at ya that allus moved me to be harsh with him, and yet I would sooner 'a' stood for a good lickin' than to really hurt his feelin's—on Kate's account.

Round About Dorking.

The neighborhood of Dorking, where George Meredith lived, has many literary associations independent of its connection with that famous novelist. It was at Burford Bridge, near Dorking, that Keats completed "Endymion" in November, 1817; close by, at the Rookery, was born Father Malthus, the popular economist, and at West Humble Frances Burney, after her marriage with General d'Arbisy, built Camilla cottage with profits of her novel of that name and settled down. Sheridan resided at Polesden and John Stuart Mill at Mickleham, while other illustrious residents in the locality in earlier times were John Evelyn and Daniel Defoe. To most people, however, the chief literary association of Dorking is with Dickens, for was it not at the Marquis of Granby's, variously identified with the White Hart and the Old King's Head, that Mr. Weller, Sr., made the fatal blunder of proposing to a "widder?"—Westminster Gazette.

Fewest Battles in December.

December is the least belligerent month in the calendar. A correspondent who has analyzed the dates of over 1,000 battles of the world, from Marathon to Mons, finds that fewer than fifty of them were fought in December, and these few were among the least important and decisive. Scarcely one of them would be known to the proverbial schoolboy. On the other hand July, as is only fitting, seeing that it is named after a soldier, is the most belligerent, with 122 great battles to its credit or otherwise, and is closely followed by August with 122.—Westminster Gazette.

EXERCISE BENEFICIAL TO WOMEN

The woman suffering from the ills of her sex often loses ambition and will not exert herself in the least, her muscles become flabby, her circulation bad and nerves wrecked. Another woman suffering from the same ills will lay out for herself a system of convalescent exercises of deep breathing even before leaving her bed. If the woman will but write Dr. Pierce at the Invalids' Home, Buffalo, N.Y., she can get free medical advice in such cases, also a 1000-page book with advice on Hygiene, How to care for the sick, Sex problems, Diseases of women, etc., all for 5 dimes or 50 cts. in stamps to pay for mailing (duty prepaid.)

Sick women— thousands of them have been cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription. It is a woman's tonic that has a singleness of purpose in curing the disease of women only. The dull, sunken eye with its dark circles which comes of suffering is banished—so too is the sallow, sunken cheek, the shrunken form—when this "Prescription" is used. It is a temperance remedy because made without alcohol— of native roots and herbs.

Women who suffer should not wait till a breakdown causes prostration. If you are anxious to correct the derangement, to overcome irritability and nervousness, waste no time, but get Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription in liquid or tablet form this very day at any medicine dealers and tomorrow you will know that you are on the highway to health and happiness.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ontario.

DANGERS OF FLATTERY.

In order that all men may be taught to speak truth it is necessary that all should learn to hear it, for no species of falsehood is more frequent than flattery, to which the coward is betrayed by fear, the dependent by interest, the friend by tenderness. Those neither servile nor timorous are yet desirous to bestow pleasure, and while unjust demands of praise continue to be made there will always be some whom hope, fear or kindness will dispose to pay them.—Johnson.

THE NEW BIRTH OF CHURCH AND WORLD

Regeneration of Church and World Distinct.

Adam and His Race Legally Dead—The Dying Processes Thorough—Redemption Secures Another Opportunity For Life—Faith, the Only Door, Is Limited by Knowledge to Few—"Few There Be That Find It"—Hope For the Unregenerate 1 Messiah's Kingdom.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publiction.]

July 11.—Pastor Russell, of Toledo, Ohio, who is here to-day, took for his text the words, "Ye which have followed Me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of His glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones."—Matthew 19:28.

The speaker's opening sentence doubtless sent a shock to many of his hearers. He declared that none are members of the Church of Christ except the regenerate; and that this fact was emphasized by our Lord Jesus, saying, "Ye must be born again," if ye would be His disciples. This teaching has practically disappeared from the pulpit, for the reason that the hearts of Christian people seem to be more tender than were those of their fathers; they cannot bear to think of the great mass of their relatives, friends and neighbors and of the heathen unregenerate as subjects for eternal torment at the the hands of the Devil. Hence they ignore the Scriptural doctrine of regeneration, and endeavor to convince themselves that it cannot be necessary; for they know many not regenerated, who are deserving of a better fate.

The difficulty met with in considering this question is the same which we so often meet with on other questions; namely, an error firmly held so biases the mind as to make Bible truths seem impossible. Now, however, Bible students begin to see that there is a regeneration promised in the Bible for the world in the Millennium, quite separate and distinct from the regeneration now possible to the saintly Church. When we get the Bible focus upon the condition of the dead and see that they are unconscious, or, as the Bible says, sleeping, waiting for the Resurrection Morn, when the world in general will be granted opportunities of regeneration, we see that the regeneration of the present time, that of the Little Flock, will not hinder the masses from regeneration by and by. On the contrary, the regenerated Church of the present time will be associated with Messiah in the regeneration of the world.

This puts a new aspect upon the whole matter. Those now being regenerated are an elect, or select class. Not only have they a special love for righteousness and a special hatred for iniquity, but additionally, they exercised a special faith in God and His promises. By means of these promises and the trials and disciplines of life, these elect regenerates become especially qualified for God's service now and hereafter.

Another item to be noticed is that the regenerating processes of the present time are with a view to bringing the Church class, the Elect of God, to a new nature. Their regeneration began when God imparted to them the Holy Spirit, following their full consecration to His service in the name and merit of the Redeemer. The regenerative process continues during their lifetime, as they grow in grace, in knowledge and in love—in the character-likeness of God's dear Son. This means a transforming and renewing work referred to by St. Paul, saying, "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the purifying of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit."

No well informed person will dispute the fact that the regenerated constitute a very small proportion of the Christian nations; yea, that the regenerated constitute but a very small proportion of the religious church membership. The Apostle refers to the regenerate, styling them New Creatures in Christ, and declares that to these "old things have passed away, and all things have become new"—new hopes, new aims, new ambitions, new desires, new affections. Such have been "transformed by the renewing of their minds."—2 Corinthians 5:17; Romans 12:2.

Surely it is not an empty statement on the Apostle's part that all these regenerate ones are New Creatures in Christ Jesus. The Apostle, referring to this class, tells us that they have been begotten by the Holy Spirit through the Message of Truth. Again, St. Peter says, God hath "given unto us (regenerates) exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we might become partakers of the Divine nature." (2 Peter 1:4.) There it is said the Pastor; these by nature were humans; but by God's grace in Christ, through this begetting, they become of a different nature—"partakers of the Divine nature." In comparison with the world, therefore, these are New Creatures—a fresh creation.

But the Scriptures everywhere remind us that the New Creation is merely an embryo and will not be perfected until the resurrection. They inform us also that some, by repudiating their covenant with the Lord and turning wilfully to sin, may become subjects of the Second Death. They inform us that many begotten of the Spirit may never attain the full measure of their possibilities—may never become joint-heirs with Jesus Christ their Lord Because of slackness, worldly-mindedness, they may attain only to a lower spiritual degree or nature—like unto the angels and not like unto the Son of God, who is the express image of the Father's glorious person.

We perceive, therefore, that the steps of consecration and spirit-begetting are not trifling propositions, but serious ones; and that with this opportunity of so great an exaltation go also conditions, limitations, trials, testing of faith and loyalty. "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him"—"be glorified together."—2 Timothy 2:12; Romans 8:17.

In our context the Redeemer assured His faithful Apostles that, after being tested, the worthy ones would be associated with Himself in His Heavenly Kingdom—His Millennial Kingdom. These would sit on twelve thrones, judging or ruling. (1 Corinthians 6:2.) No doubt some special glory and honor is provided in God's great Plan for the twelve faithful Apostles—St. Peter taking the place of Judas. Nevertheless the Lord afterward declared that all of His faithful followers would be granted a share with Him in His Millennial Kingdom and in His glory and power. Mark His words: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My Throne"—"I will give him power over the nations"—the Gentiles.—Revelation 3:21; 2:26.

This is doubly interesting to us; first, because it is the reward of those who are now regenerated and who prove faithful to the spirit-begetting which they now receive—to those who eventually will be born of the Spirit in the First Resurrection. As every begetting in the flesh must have a birth, else it will be valueless, so the begetting of the Spirit must reach the culmination of the New Birth in the Resurrection. Jesus describes this Resurrection, saying, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power, but they shall reign with Him a thousand years."—Revelation 20:6.

But this is not all. The time when the Church will be reigning with Christ in His Kingdom glory will be the time of the world's regeneration—the Millennium. This is the lesson of our text, "Ye which have followed Me (in the narrow way of self-sacrifice in the present life), in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit upon the Throne of His glory (during His Millennial Reign), ye shall sit upon twelve thrones." How plain! How simple! How beautiful! How grand! Could any of the Lord's people who have experienced the purifying of their own hearts by the regenerating influences of the Holy Spirit have a selfish or unkind thought toward the unregenerate world—so that they would object to the thought here presented! Would not all such, on the contrary, rejoice to know that the Heavenly Father has a Plan by which the non-elect of mankind may be regenerated in due time? We hold that this is true.

Selfishness and every desire to exclude others from blessings which God has promised them signify so much of sin in control of the mind. Love not only thinketh no evil, but it hopeth all things, and is glad to find in God's Word various promises to the effect that all the families of the earth shall yet be blessed through the Spiritual Seed of Abraham—Christ and the Church.—Galatians 3:8, 16, 29.

Some may see that the Church need regenerating now, but fail to see the need of the world. They see that the Church's regeneration is necessary because "flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God"—we "must be born again." But there would be no Kingdom of God, there would be no Millennium there would be no regeneration of the world, if God purposed only the salvation of the Church. On the contrary, however, everywhere in the Bible God tells of His compassion toward the world, while telling of His particular love for the true Church, dear as the apple of His eye.—Zech. 2:8.

Note that favorite text, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.) The whole world was loved [illegible] provided for in the glorious sacrifice of Jesus, and the whole world is to have the benefit resulting from that sacrifice. Christ's death is not in vain, nor merely for the Church, the Elect few. Through these Elect the great mass of mankind, non-elect and unfit for the Kingdom, are to be blessed—blessed with an opportunity for regeneration as men—not to a new nature, as the Church, but to the nature once assigned humanity, in the image of God, lost through sin.

The world's regeneration, therefore, will be to perfect human nature, lost in Adam, redeemed by the sacrifice of Christ's human life. Moreover, God's provision of Times of Regeneration—Years of Regeneration—is ample—a thousand years. Satan shall no longer be the prince of this world. At the beginning of Messiah's Reign, we have the assurance that he will be bound, restrained, that he may deceive the nations no more—that he may put light for darkness and darkness for light no more.

The Great Life-Giver will provide the opportunity for regeneration to all the thousands of millions of our race who died in Adam and were redeemed to this opportunity for everlasting life through Messiah's death at Calvary. (1 Corinthians 15:21-23.) Ignorance and superstition, darkness and sin, will flee from before the rising Sun of Righteousness, which will flood the earth with the knowledge of the glory of God. Then all mankind, whosoever will, shall have the opportunity of coming to a knowledge of God and of the way of life, and of being begotten again by the Life-Giver.

The regenerated Elect of this Age will have nothing to do with giving the life to the world. That life must all come from the Life-Giver, who has secured the right to be the world's Everlasting Father by the sacrifice of Himself. But as Christ will be the Second Adam to the world for its regeneration, so the Church will be the Second Eve, to nourish, to care for, to instruct, all the willing and obedient, desirous of coming back into harmony with God during the Millennial Age.

At the conclusion of that blessed Epoch of a thousand years, when all wilful sinners shall have been destroyed in the Second Death, the Revelator's words will be fulfilled—every creature in Heaven and on earth shall be heard saying, Praise glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb, forever. There will be no discordant note. God's will shall then be done upon earth, even as it is now done in Heaven; and the reward of everlasting life, with no sickness, sorrow nor pain—will then be with humanity, even as it is now with the angels.

It should not be forgotten that Adam did not lose everlasting life Although he had a perfect life and was free from all elements of death, nevertheless he was placed in Eden on probation, to see whether by obedience to God he would develop a character in harmony with God, and so be accounted worthy of everlasting life. Consequently, when Adam and his posterity are redeemed from death, this salvation does not entitle them to life everlasting, but merely to a fresh trial as to worthiness of everlasting life.

This new trial will indeed be more favorable for Adam and his race in some respects than was Adam's original trial, because of the large increase of knowledge. Man has had an opportunity to learn the lesson of the exceeding sinfulness of sin. He will soon have an opportunity to learn the blessedness of righteousness and to know of the grace of God in Christ. This knowledge will be of great service to all who will use it during the Millennial Age when for a thousand years the whole world will be on trial for everlasting life before the great White Judgment Throne.—Revelation 20: 11, 12.

God wills that all men shall be saved, not only from the Adamic death sentence, but also from the ignorance and blindness with which Satan has darkened their minds. (2 Corinthians 4:4.) He wills that all should be so saved from the train of evils which has followed Adam's sins and its penalty of death, in order that they may come to a knowledge of the Truth. This He does to the intent that having a clear knowledge of the Truth they may make the very best possible use of the new trial for life secured for them by the Redeemer's Ransom-sacrifice. It is for this very purpose that the Messianic Kingdom will be inaugurated, which will first bind Satan and then release mankind from their blindness; as it is written. (Isaiah 35:5.) For the same reason it is the Divine arrangement that the Kingdom work shall be done gradually and shall require a thousand years for its completion.

Throughout the Millennial Age it will be the work of Christ Jesus, as the Second Adam, to regenerate all mankind. The regenerating influences will begin with their awakening from the sleep of death, in harmony with the Master's declaration, "The hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and come forth."—John 5:28, 29.

The coming forth from the tomb will be merely the beginning of the work of regeneration. It will be only a preparatory work. The awakened sleepers will be in the same condition of mind that they were in when they fell asleep in death—in a very similar condition to those who will be living on the earth at that time. But before they can be regenerated, they must be brought to a knowledge of the Truth. Their eyes and ears of understanding must be opened. This the Scriptures assure us shall be accomplished. "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped." "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the glory of the Lord." (Isaiah 35:5; 11:9; Hab. 2:14.)

The good news of Divine Love and of the possibilities of return to the favor of God through the atoning work of Jesus having then been clearly demonstrated to all, each one will have the opportunity of deciding for himself whether or not he desires to return to human perfection and the blessed privileges of life everlasting. To do so, he must be begotten again by the Life-Giver who will beget again only those who are desirous of having the new life. All wilful rejecters of the opportunity will die the Second Death But those who accept the Saviour's proposition will come under helpful and disciplinary experiences which will gradually lift them up to human perfection—mental, moral and physical—to all that was lost for them in Adam's disobedience and that was regained for them by the Redeemer's obedience and the Divine arrangement for the regeneration of the world.

Fortified Tires
FORTIFIED AGAINST
Rim-Cuts—by our No-Rim-Cut feature.
Blowouts—by our "On-Air" cure.
Loose Treads—by many rubber rivets.
Insecurity—by 126 braided piano wires.
Puncture and Skidding—by our double-thick All-Weather Tread.

Fortified Tires
That Protect in 5 Ways Against Trouble

Fine rubber, staunch fabric and good workmanship are not enough to protect a tire from trouble. Many makes besides Goodyears have those things. But Goodyear Tires alone are fortified in five costly ways against the worst attacks that a tire encounters.

So they have proved out best in countless tests when run with rival tires on opposite wheels.

For your own sake please note these five exclusive defenses—

Fortified Against Rim-Cutting by our No-Rim-Cut feature that best combats rim-cuts. Millions of tires have proved that.

Fortified Against Blowouts by our "On-Air" cure, that saves so many blowouts due, in rival tires, to wrinkled fabric.

Fortified Against Loose Treads by our Rubber Rivets, formed in each tire. They reduce loose tread risk 60 per cent.

Fortified Against Punctures and Skidding by our All-Weather Tread, tough and double-thick. It gives you maximum tread wear. It minimises punctures. And its sharp-edged grips are resistless.

* * * * *

But why trust to luck? Why not always buy the tire that averages best because it is built in the best way known to resist attacks?

Legions of tire users have learned these things in the past four years. And so this year we doubled the capacity of our factory at Bowmanville, Ont.

Prices Reduced

As our output multiplied, reducing factory cost, our prices came down with it.

We gave our latest reduction February 15th—in the face of the [illegible]

Today Goodyear Tires are saving the user 37 per cent of prices that prevailed two years ago. So ask your dealer for our low price on the size you use.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duscios, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. Banana Canteloupe.

One-half box of gelatine, or two and one-half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatine, one-half cupful of cold water, whites of two eggs, one-fourth cupful of powdered sugar, three-fourths cupful of scalded cream, two-thirds cupful of sugar, four bananas mashed to a pulp, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, whip three and one-half cupfuls of cream, 12 lady fingers. Soak gelatine in cold water, beat whites of eggs slightly; add powdered sugar, and gradually hot cream, cook over hot water until it thickens; add soaked gelatine and remaining sugar, strain into a pan set in ice water, add bananas and lemon juice, stir until it begins to thicken, then fold in whips from cream. Line a melon mould with lady fingers trimmed to just fit sections of mould, turn in the mixture, spread evenly and chill.

Gingersnaps.

Cream a cupful of butter with one of sugar. Beat in a cupful of molasses, stir in a cupful of water, a teaspoonful each of ground ginger and cinnamon, a teaspoonful of allspice and a scant one of soda, sifted with a pint and a half of flour. Add enough flour to make a dough that can be rolled out, cut into rounds and bake.

Baked Salmon Wiggle.

A Good Supper Dish—One can of salmon, one-half can of peas, butter size of an egg, salt and pepper, milk sauce. Bake about one-half hour.

KITCHEN FLOOR PAINT

If you take one pound of red lead to 1 gallon of shellac, stir well, and paint your kitchen floor, you will find everything well covered and cracks all filled. Apply with the grain of wood evenly and you will have a fine kitchen floor.

FOR A THIN NECK

Throwing the head far back and then rolling it from side to side, is a simple and effective exercise for making the neck shapely, and all deep-breathing exercises are most beneficial for both the neck and shoulders.

Eat plenty of fattening foods, such as bread and butter, rice, potatoes, beets, carrots, turnips, sugar and sweets, raw eggs and milk. Take a dessertspoonful of olive oil after each meal. Drink plenty of cold water, and exercise as much as possible in the open air.

RUB WITH PAPER

By rubbing the bathtub with crumpled newspapers as soon as it is thoroughly dry every bit of grease, soap, lint and the marks from the water will be easily removed. It is not necessary to do any scouring if the tub is smooth but it is quite necessary that it be dry.

THE BABY

When morning broke; and baby came,
The house did scarcely seem the same
As just before. The very air
Grew fragrant with the essence rare
Of a celestial garden, where
The angels, breathless, leaned to hear
The youthful mother's fervid prayer
To God, to guard her first-born care.
And with what diligence each ear
Did listen, as her lips did frame
The helpless little stranger's name,
When baby came.

When darkness came, and baby died,
The misty grief that fell belied
The transient joy that filled the room
But just before; where brooding gloom
Now dumbly spoke the baby's doom.
We hid away the little things
Woven by Nature's matchless loom—
A woman's hands! The amber bloom
Waxed dimmer on the finch's wings;
The flowers, too, in sorrow vied,
As if kind Nature drooped and cried—
When baby died!

WHITE FEATHER FOR A HERO WHO WON THE V.C.

LONDON July 9. — The contemptible practice of women presenting civilian men of military age with white feathers has not yet completely died out in London. In the tempestuous days of last August scores of stylish young girls showed their patriotism by ranging Hyde Park and other precincts of the west end proffering pale plumage to all ostensibly eligible males who had not taken refuge in khaki.

Sometimes this performance fetched recruits, but more often decent men were cruelly humiliated. Frequently the donor's sex alone saved her from a sound thrashing. For in many cases the recipient was some man only setting his affairs in order before enlistment. Worse still, many an apparently able-bodied chap, but suffering from some defect which had caused his rejection, had silently to bear the insult of this white badge of cowardice.

Tables Turned.

One of these interfering young women, however, had the tables neatly turned on her. Sitting by himself in the cafe of a famous London hotel after dinner a few nights ago, was a tall, handsome young fellow in evening clothes. Scores of smartly-dressed people were there listening to the music and watching the dancers. Suddenly, Meddlesome Mattie, who with some friends had been eyeing the youth, got up and stepped over to him. Unfolding a jewelled hand she displayed a little white feather, which she urged him to accept.

Drawing himself together, the young man rose and bowed gracefully, extending his hand for the insult. Simultaneously the fingers of his left hand slipped into a waistcoat pocket and nonchalantly he drew somthing forth—a dull little bronze object which he placed beside the feather in the upturned palm of his right hand.

A Match For It.

"Thank you so much," exclaimed the youth pleasantly. "It is not often [illegible] such distinctions on the same day."

That little trinket was the Victoria Cross, which three hours before the King had pinned to his breast — for conspicuous bravery at the Dardanelles. The young man, Lieutenant X., home on sick leave, with a concealed body wound, had seized the opportunity of doffing his uniform for a comfortable suit of mufti. Gallant even in the face of such an insult, the officer had acted like the gentleman he was. His words had only reached the ears of the girl herself.

Flushing crimson with shame, the young woman faltered an apology and, hastily excusing herself to her friends, retired for the evening. Later, she told the story on herself and wrote a most abjectly remorseful note to the officer. No more white feathers for her!

Deeds, Not Words.

The story is true, excepting, perhaps, the trenchant retort. For V.C. men are not invariably so quick at repartee. Lieutenant Chipman of the Thirteenth Battalion told me that he had met the hero of this episode a few days ago at that hotel, but that like men of his breed, he was absolutely disinclined to talk of his exploits, least of all that concerning the white feather.

Not quote a debonair was the attitude of the brother of a girl I met here. Turned down several times by the examiners, on account of slight varicose veins, the young man in question had perforce to stick to his job in an office. One day a fussy old female who should have known better, stood in a doorway and waylaid him. Suddenly popping out from her lair she brushed his face with the entire tail of a big leghorn, meanwhile exclaiming: "Join the 'awmy, you miserable young slacker. And look sharp about it or they will come and fetch the likes of you."

"Go to ——," was the retort courteous in this case. The virago complied, so says the youth, to the extent of flouncing down into the sulphurous-smelling depths of a neighbouring subway entrance.

Toronto Man's Retort.

Not quite a debonair was the atience of a young friend of mine from Toronto. Angered at the importunities of a certain recruiting sergeant on the Strand, who exhorted him daily to "be a man and enlist in the Sportsmans' Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers," the youth had found what he thought would be a jocose and "last word" reply.

Portly of person and purple of face, the sergeant pacing his beat, next morning accosted the Canadian, as usual.

"Come, come, my lad," said he, "it's just such chaps as you that the King needs. Now's your chawnce to get into a fine corps — all of 'em stock brokers and the like, just your clawss. Better join before conscription comes."

A Squelcher.

"Oh, when Uncle Sam comes in I'll be there with the boys in blue," drawled the youth in an excellent rendition of a Buffalonian. Then suddenly he saw his mistake. So did the sergeant.

"Haw, haw," guffawed the recruiter, slapping his khaki slacks with a swagger stick. "One of Bryan's boys. I see, but then you are too prou—"

But the Toronto youth had dodged and the roar of the traffic drowned the rest of the sentence.

SAVE TIME IN SHOPPING

If time is a consideration for the shopping trip, do not try to save it by making a mad rush through the stores, pushing through crowds like a football player, usurping the places of others at the various counters and ordering articles which you are sure will be returned to-morrow. Rather save the time before starting out by making a list of the articles wished and deciding just exactly what you are going to get. The ride to town on train or trolley may be very profitably used in making up this list. Of course, one is never quite sure what one does want when selecting a hat, for instance; but it does save time if you enumerate to the patient saleswoman what you do not want, instead of sinking languidly before a mirror and saying, "I haven't the least idea of what I intend to get."

At the bargain counter, when you have succeeded in getting hold of a [illegible] feel aggrieved if you find another woman has the other end and try to snatch it from her. "But a nice woman—" Oh, yes; otherwise nice women do such things, and that is the part that is hard to understand about these shopping lapses from social decorum. B-a-r-g-a-i-n seems to spell barbarism to otherwise peace-loving womankind and turn timid, considerate souls into very fiends. More is lost at the bargain counter in the fall from social grace than is gained in dollars and cents. If you cannot keep your good temper and your manners at the bergain counter it is better to save your pennies until next week and buy from regular stock; you probably will not want that special article by next week, anyway.

Aero's Chase of a Zeppelin Through Sky

LONDON, July 8.—11.15 p.m.—"A Zeppelin is reported at ——, travelling due west at 11 p.m. Height estimated, 9,000.

11.35 p.m.—"A Zeppelin passed over —— at 11.10 p.m., travelling north-west. Height estimated 9,000.

The above message supplied me with enough preliminary data to organize the chase. In a few minutes the very burr of different types of aeroplanes could be heard along most of the British front.

It was pitch dark, and as we got clear of the aerodrome only the faintest outlines of a nearby forest was discernible. Theer were broken clouds about at low altitudes.

RISING TEDIOUS BUSINESS

Going for height in these conditions is a tedious business, for there is nothing to do except to speculate more or less vaguely on one's drift and its relation to one's course.

A cloud in front suddenly blazes up as though by magic. It is an enemy searchlight. He has information of our quest and casts his great streams of white light all over the upper atmosphere. The shaft disappears, but a moment later finds us with a dazzling flash.

A sudden dive and a rapid turn clear us of its course. In about twenty seconds the "Archies" begin. The whole area through which we have just passed is filled with shells.

They burst in groups and processions, some throwing out a syrupy stream of "dead dog flames," some bursting like huge rockets, almost mermerising with their dazzling rays reflected from the background of leafy cloudlets. But the searchlight cannot follow us.

SEARCHLIGHTS SCAN SKY

He fairly scans the sky, and suddenly picks up with another machine. This time he stays on and "Archie" gets much better data for his work.

We are still going for height, taking in large sweeps through which it would be impossible for hostile aircraft to elude us. The searchlight has lost the other machine and plays on the base of a gathering cloud a thousand feet below us.

On the eastern horison there is a gleam of new light as the moon struggles up. But well below that horizon someone is flashing out a signal obviously meant for the aircraft. It is the first clue of the "Zep." We are bearing toward it with all possible speed. The other machine has disappeared. Probably followed another clue.

As we cleared the top of a great mass of vapor the sky presented that dull, iron grey appearance which is the prelude of a brilliant moon. For fully five minutes we anxiously searched the sky line. Then a distinct flash was seen far above us, and seaward.

It was followed by another flash, after a short interval. There was nothing more. It was far, far too far away, but we were certain that it was a "Zep." Up we went and steered straight for the region of the flash.

As the moon came up we got in a line beyond the area of the flash and the eastern horison, and as we cleared a bank of mist at a great height, the outline of the Zeppelin showed up with unmistakable clearness. Up to this time he had not suspected attack for his course was regular and his nose level.

But we knew that he would soon hear the noise of our engine, so we kept as clear as possible until we had assumed sufficient height. But we under-estimated the "Zep's" ears. He heard us and began to searchlight us—a process which gives him no qualms over his own territory.

As we crossed his stern at a fair height he got on to us with the light and a perfect fusilade of machine gun bullets came scurrying around us.

We made what we reckoned to be a due course for the "Zep." The only only indication of his position was the constant clicking of his machine guns as they fired off wildly in the hope of getting us with a stray shot. But even this lasted only a few minutes.

When we thought that we were over him we loosened off our projectiles in a rather hopeless attempt. Their fate we shall never know. The clouds had baffled us at the last moment. It was one of the uncertainties of air warfare with which there can be no reckoning.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This design may be classed among the more serviceable models, and it will be found appropriate for the skirts of suits and for those separate skirts which are of rather substantial materials.

The yoke is quite deep and fits the figure neatly. It may have either the normal waist finish or the Empire. The lower portion of the skirt is cut with three gores. It joins the yoke without fulness and ripples at the lower edge, which measures 2¾ yards in the medium size.

The closing of this waist is down the front, and there are two smart little patch pockets at the line of the yoke at each side of the front. These are optional and may be used or not.

So many skirts are made of beach cloth at present that it at once suggests itself for such a design as this. It is light but firm, and comes in solid colors and also in hairline stripes, the effect being much the same as of serge in white or cream color.

Buttons have much to do with the effectiveness of such a skirt and those which are of two colors, such as black and white, are among the favorites. The edges of the pockets and the line where yoke and lower skirt join may be piped with a solid color.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,243, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

GAS BOMBS SUCCESSFULLY USED IN GERMAN ATTACK

French Positions Around Souchez Cemetery Rendered Untenable by Poisonons Fumes and French Have to Retire to Strong Position---Attacks of the Foe at Other Points on the Western Battle Line All Fail.

LABRYINTH STILL ATTACKED BY THE GERMANS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 12.—A furious German night attack south of Souchez, in which the enemy used thousands of asphyxiating bombs, forced the French to evacuate Souchez Cemetery and portions of the adjoining trenches, the War Office admitted this afternoon.

The first attack by the Germans failed. The French responded to the German charge with a bayonet counter-attack that swept the Teutons back upon their own trenches.

While the enemy was reforming for this second attack, the French works were heavily shelled, and a large part of the projectiles gave off asphyxiating gases that hung over the cemetery in the calm night and rendered the French positions untenable. The French troops therefore withdrew to positions in the rear, from which they shelled the enemy with great effectiveness.

For 48 hours the Germans have continued their attempt to recapture the "labryinth" south-east of Neuville. They are attacking with hand grenades and bombs, the same method by which the French captured cellars and tunnels several days ago.

All their attacks thus far have been fruitless.

"A violent cannonade is proceeding about the Quennvieres Farm, south of Arras, and around Nouvron," said the communique.

"The enemy's bombardment at Fresnes Saulx was followed by several attacks, which were repulsed."

PETROGRAD, July 12.—The Austro-Germans have begun withdrawing their troops from the line east and south-east of Lemberg, General Ivanoff reported today. It is believed here they are to be used either in a new drive against Warsaw or upon the Franco-Flanders front.

The Germans apparently have abandoned their offensive along the river Bug. The only clashes of any importance in the past 48 hours have occurred north and north-west of Warsaw.

PARIS, France, July 12.—Newspapers here published a report today that the Sultan of Turkey is dead.

LONDON, Eng., July 12.—From Galicia and Poland, the eyes of the experts are turned by to-day's Berlin statement to the more northerly battle line in Russia, where, south-west of Kavno, the Germans claim the capture of nearly two and a half miles of Russian trenches along the Suwalki-Kalvaria front, a little way over the border from East Prussia, where the Russian lines are fairly close to German soil.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 12.—The Canadian casualties now exceed the ten thousand mark. The list received up to ten o'clock this morning brings the total up to 9,985, and unless the list to come in to-day is unusually slight, the ten thousand mark will be passed. These losses are very heavy, forming one-third of the First Overseas Expeditionary Force of thirty-three thousand men. The killed now number 1,720, the wounded 6,507, and the missing 1,180.

WITHDREW "NOT GUILTY" PLEA.

NEW YORK CITY, July 12.—Gustave Stahl, the German reservist indicted for perjury because he swore he saw guns mounted on the Lusitania ,to-day withdrew his plea of "not guilty" in the Federal Court. He entered three pleas in abatement of the indictment. Judgment was reserved. Stahl was returned to the tombs.

7,000 AUSTRIANS CAPTURED.

GENEVA, July 12.—Seven thousand Austrians have surrendered to the Italian armies since the beginning of the war, according to advices received here to-day.

WINDSOR, Vt., July 12.—President Wilson is sounding public opinion in America over the latest German reply. He is reading excerpts from editorial comments and personal letters addressed to him at Washington, and forwarded here, and before his conference with Secretary of State Lansing hopes to have an accurate idea of the sentiment of the country.

A Flat Denial

Premier T. C. Norris Had Absolutely No Knowledge of Alleged Deal

Special to the Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., July 12.—Premier T. C. Norris, in the witness box this morning, denied absolutely any knowledge of the alleged deal between Hon. J. H. Howden and Wm. Chambers, regarding the payment for calling off election protests or changing Governments. He said he never at any time was aware that Chambers had accepted money for such purposes and knew of no negotiations in that direction.

RUSSIA BUYS ICEBREAKER.

Purchase of Newfoundland Steamer Bruce is Announced.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., July 12.—The purchase by the Russian Government of the ice-breaking steamer Bruce, from the Reid Newfoundland Company was announced on Saturday. It is understood that the Bruce, with her sister ship, Lintrose, bought by Russia last winter, will be used in the White Sea during the fall and winter in an effort to keep open later than usual the channel to the port of Archangel.

The Bruce and the Lintrose were built a few years ago for service in Cabot Strait, between Newfoundland and Cape Breton, where heavy ice is encountered in the winter. They are steamers of 1,56 tons.

700 CHILDREN AT OPENING OF THE PLAYGROUND

New Institution Voted a Great Success Not Only by the Youngsters, But by Their Parents as Well

MANY GAMES PLAYED

Children from all over the city participated in the opening of the new playground at Central School. Early in the day scores had gathered to profit by this breathing place, where all may find amusement and recreation. At 2 o'clock the automobiles which the Local Council of Women had provided to carry the youngsters to the grounds, began dumping their loads of joyous and expectant kiddies at the gate. Carnival ran high when these hosts of children were promptly led into some big game. The Supervisors were kept busy arranging new games for the constant stream of new arrivals. Canon Davidson rendered invaluable service by his volunteered help. He led some seventy-odd boys in games and military drill. His group culminated their drill by a combined charge on the playgrounds fence which they captured amid loud cheers. Mr. Carson of the Y.M.C.A. was here, there and everywhere, gathering any who were not in the many games and leading them in sports of all sorts. Miss Johnson, the lady Supervisor, assisted by many of the members of the Local Council of Women, had the girls busy at a host of group games.

Mr. Burridge, the Supervisor, with a group of nearly one hundred boys, ran through a category of games, races and stunts that was a revelation to the boys.

Over seven hundred children and the many parents present, thoroughly enjoyed it all. The neighbourhood turned out en masse to witness the fun. Despite the enormous crowd and the perpetual motion of the swings and see-saws, no falls, barked heads, or shins were sustained, and Peterborough may well feel proud of her first supervised playground.

The playground will be maintained during July and August from 9 a. m. to 6 p.m. with an evening session until 8 p.m. for the older folk. Every one is welcome at all times; everything is free and there is something for everyone who chooses to come. Here is a chance for healthy recreation and as physically fit men are necessary to-day this opportunity should be grasped by all. The Government demands in the text-book "Infantry Training" a knowledge of the value of combination as well as individual prowess, and this knowledge can readily be gained in the group games and sports on the playground.

DECISION MADE IN FAMOUS CASE

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, July 12. — In two twelfth of July decisions in the famous Ottawa school cases the Divisional Court to-day upheld the right of the Ontario Department of Education to limit the teaching of French in the Ontario schools. The following points are made:

1. That the Legislature by its declaratory act of last session specifically vested this power in the department.

2. That even if right to have French taught had originally been granted by treaty, the British North American Act, with no such provision, is supreme.

3. That the study of French should be encouraged as an advantage, instead of being demanded as a right.

The Ontario Departmental regulation involved in the case of judgments is the outcome of the Seperate School Board trouble in Ottawa, which resulted in the suspension of teachers and other reprisals.

FINE SCHEME FOR GERMANY

Suggestion That Great German Liner Now Interned in United States Port Be Placed on Transatlantic Route

UNDER AMERICAN FLAG

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., July 12. — Despatches from Berlin to-day indicates that Germany may add to her "concessions" to the United States, in the Lusitania affair, by consenting to placing great German liners, now interned in American ports, under the United States flag, so they can engage in trans-Atlantic travel immune from submarine attack.

In London this is regarded as a plan, that even should the United States consent to it, could never be carried out. It is almost ludicrous to imagine that Britain would permit enemy ships she has driven from the seas to resume travel under the American or any other flag.

It is realized here that any arrangement made between the United States and Germany, must be without expectation of concessions from Great Britain.

The British navy now absolutely controls all trade routes, without hindrance or attack of any other power, except the isolated attacks of submarines, and Great Britain neither desires nor needs to make any concession whatever in her policy of complete suppression of the enemy's trade and commerce on the seas.

CELEBRATING THE TWELFTH

Threatening Skies Did Not Keep Peterboro's Orangemen at Home

Threatening skies did not keep Peterborough's Orangemen at home today, and the boom of the drum and the shrilling of the fife resounded through the streets early this morning as the loyal sons of William wended their way to the station to entrain for Cobourg, where most of the city Orangemen spent the day. A number of the county lodges chose instead to go to Norwood, where preparations had been made for an old-time celebration. In addition to lodge members many other citizens left to-day to see the "walk."

ASQUITH NON-COMMITTAL

Premier Refused to Be Drawn Into a Discussion in Regard to Rumours of Dissension in the Cabinet

MANY LABOUR VOLUNTEERS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., July 12.—Premier Asquith, in the CoCmmons this afternoon, refused to be drawn into a discussion in regard to rumours of dissension in the cabinet or of a split between Lord Kitchener and General French over the ammunition question. In reply to queries put by the Liberal members he declared that any public discussion of the conduct of the war "would serve no good purpose at this time."

The Premier was asked pointedly if he agreed with Lloyd George's criticism of Haldane.

"I have nothing to add to my former statements," was his only reply.

Dr. Christopher Addison, the Liberal member, speaking in behalf of Lloyd George, said that the Minister of Munitions believes he possesses adequate powers to control the metal market without further action by Parliament. He said that 98,266 skilled workers had answered Lloyd George's appeal for voluntary enrollment fir duty in ammunition factories, and that the munition situation is beginning to show an improvement.

C.P.R. ENGINEER WAS INSTANTLY KILLED BY THE LAKEFIELD TRAIN

HIGHLY RESPECTED CITIZEN

Richard Childs, 92 Aylmer Street, was instantly killed this morning at 9.45 o'clock, when a G.T.R. train ran over his body on the Lakefield road immediately north of Argyle Street and in front of the Nicholls Hospital.

Charles Clee, Romaine Street, an employee at Jordan Bros. flower-house on Argyle Street, was an eye-witness of the tragedy, the news of which came as a decided shock to all those who knew the deceased. Mr. Clee said that he had entered the office after watering some of the flowers, and casually glanced through the door. He saw Mr. Childs sitting on a bench on the hospital terrace, and was apparently reading a book or paper. At that moment the whistle of the G. T. R. morning train for Lakefield sounded for the Argyle crossing. Mr. Childs immediately arose ran across the driveway and down through the trees toward the railway track. He hurried through the wire fence and climbed the gravel roadbed. Mr. Clee said he thought the man was going to wave to some person in the train which was then almost abreast with him. But, instead, he stumbled or threw himself across the west rail when the engine's pilot was only a few feet distant. It was a startling occurrence to Mr. Clee who, while he watched the man in that eventful moment, never expected the tragic climax to what opened as an ordinary incident.

A C. P. R. Engineer,

Mr. Childs has been employed as engineer on the C.P.R. shunter. He was of a friendly, unassuming disposition and most highly respected by everybody who knew him. He was well educated and of more than average intelligence, was industrious and thoroughly reliable. "He was one of the very best men we had," was the ready tribute of Mr. W. S. Dodd of the local C.P.R. freight office.

Mr. Childs, who was 64 years old, had been thirty-five years with the C.P.R., and came to Peterborough eleven years ago from Havelock as engineer of the local C.P.R. yard engine. On Friday, July 2nd, he began a midsummer holiday, and on Tuesday last went to the Nicholls Hospital.

It was the opinion of his friends, and also of Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, that the deceased was suffering a temporal mental strain, the result of a chronic disease, the Doctor said.

Train Crew Unaware.

The Lakefield train continued to gather speed, evidently unaware of the fatality. The engineer would have been sitting on the east side of the engine cab, and if the fireman was at work the crew could not have seen Mr. Childs, who barely reached the rail ahead of the engine. The conductor was surprised when at Lakefield he received word of the affair, and exclaimed: "We didn't hit anybody."

The body was practically severed at the waist and death must have been instantaneous. Mr. Clee called the hospital and Dr. Moir and Dr. Eastwood removed the body to one side of the track until the Coroner arrived.

An inquest was called by Dr. Greer for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Inquest.

Dr. Greer was called up from Gore's Landing and presided at an inquest held at Comstock's. The following jury was empanelled:

Jos. Picard, Jr., foreman; Sam Houlihan, Bruce Patterson, Jas. Fitzsimmons, A. N. Allison, John Jayes, Arthur Clysdale, Stanley Blewett, Wm. McCracken, Thos. Minnecola, Lorezo Humber, Bruce Doupe

Detective Newhall was the first witness. He identified the body as that of Richard Childs whom, he said, he had known. It was found on the G. T. R. eighty-eight feet north of Argyle street.

The right arm was cut off and was 115 feet above Argyle street. There was a large gash across his body. His teeth were picked up close by. When

FITTING TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF PTE. M. ADAMS

Funeral of the Young Soldier Held on Saturday Evening Largely Attended

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

Impressive indeed was the funeral cortege of the late Pte. Merton Frank Adams, of the 8th C. M. R., Barriefield, and son of City Treasurer Adams, as it wended its way from the Grand Trunk Station on Saturday evening to the Armouries, where a service was held. Hundreds of citizens lined the streets, and many a silent tear was shed as they thought of the bright young life which only such a short while ago had been among them, and which had been so tragically ended. Owing to the nature of the disease that resulted in the death of the late Pte. Adams, the funeral had to be held on the arrival of the remains from Kingston.

The news of the death of this popular young soldier came with such shocking suddenness that sitzens were stunned at the report, but all united in paying their last tribute of respect to the memory of one of Peterborough's most promising sons, whose life had been cut short in the pursuit of his duty to his King and country.

Headed by the band of the Salvation Army, to the strains of the dead march, the funeral procession moved away from the station, shortly after 6 o'clock. Following the band was Rev. W. H. White, Rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, the mourners, and intimate friends, then the officers of the Garrison, the Federal representative, Mr. J. H. Burnham, city and Customs officials, and members of the Belmont Club.

Corp. Spencely, who accompanied the remains to the city, with Sgts. Fairbrass, Shurety, Kent, Morley and Pte. McLaughlin of the 8th C. M. R., who are on leave here, acted as military escort and pallbearers. Owing to the fact that the camp at Barriefield was under quarantine it was unable to send a firing party.

The service at the Armouries was in charge of Rev. Mr. White of St. Luke's, of which church the deceased was a member, assisted by Hon. Major J. C. Davidson, Chaplain of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers.

Rev. Mr. White made a touching reference to the life of the deceased, emphasizing the sacrifice that he had made in offering his life to the Empire. He had fallen in the cause which had claimed many thousands of lives, both on the battlefield and other centres of military activity. Messages of regret were received from Col. Munro, commanding officer of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, and also from the commanding officers of the Peterborough Garrison.

Hon. Major Davidson extended the sympathy of the officers and men of the 57th, as did Major Johnson and Major Johnston, representing the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, and also the 8th Mounted Rifles.

Among the beautiful floral tributes were wreaths from the 8th C. M. R. and St. Luke's Sunday School.

Reference to Life of Pte. Adams at St. Luke's

Once more the congregation of St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, has been called upon to commemorate the death of one of its prominent young men who has given his life for his country. This time it was Pte. Merton Frank Adams, whose passing, as recorded in Saturday's issue, is deeply mourned by hosts of friends. It was fitting that the service at St. Luke's yesterday morning should have in special memory he, whose

MACHINE GUNS WANTED.

The Germans have reduced morality as well as warfare to a matter of mechanics. They depend upon machinery more than muscle. The Germans have sixteen machine guns to each battalion, and the British only four. This shows the need for this wholesale killing machine. The business men of Vancouver have subscribed $30,000 for machine guns for the army. Atan average cost of $750 each, this means forty machine guns. If any Canadian man of means has no other way in which he can fight, let him buy a machine gun or more than one and present to the Canadian army. If all the men of Canada who have the means to do this would do it, we should have our machine gun factories busy, and a great assistance would be given in promoting the success of our arms.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

There is food for thought, and stimulus to action, in the latest Canadian casualty lists. One-third of the first Canadian expeditionary force has, since last October, been put out of action—killed, wounded and msising. There are 8,317 Canadian soldiers in Europe appealing directly to the sympathy and activity of non-combatants—the noble army of women who are busying themselves a hundred ways in working to relieve the sufferings, and meet the wants of 6,517 wounded and, as much as can be done, the 1,810 missing, probably many of them prisoners of war in Germany. The duty and work of our women confront them with increasing insistence every morning that dawns. There's a duty for all of us, and nearly all of us are doing it in some way or other. While great efforts are being made to heal the wounds and mitigate the sufferings of war, is there as much recognition of the duty of filling the depleted ranks of our soldiers, and giving aid in the fight that, while it may in many cases mean death to the combatants, means life in its only livable sense to all of us, life to our dearest liberties, life to the exercise and enjoyment of the right of humanity.

WATERLOO AND TO-DAY.

June 18th was the hundredth anniversary of Waterlool, and the occasion has revived the question as to what country's troops the victory is due. The Kaiser in a recent speech claimed that the German Legion "saved the British at Waterlool from destruction." But the Kaiser will claim anything. He is as remorseless in his lying as in his physical manifestations of savagery. If he had claimed, as, in truth, he might have done, that the spirit of the Hun was present in the Prussian forces at Waterloo, he would have been justified in so doing. The Prussians were good fighters at Waterloo as they are in the same scenes to-day. They are also the same savages in warfare, in policy, and action, as they were then; but since one hundred years ago, the spirit and agencies of brutality have been greatly developed. There may be dispute as to what army fought the best at Waterloo; there is,however,no dispute as to which fought the worse. It is a fact of history that the British and French fought like gentlemen; but the Prussians like brutes to the disgust of those who were fighting on the same side. Sir Charles Napier wrote of their conduct:

"I can assure you that from the German general down to the smallest drummer boy in the legion the earth never groaned with such a set of murderous, infamous villains. They murdered, robbed and ill-treated the peasantry wherever they went."

It is also a historical fact that Blucher wanted to. sack Paris, but Wellington would not permit the outrage. After the surrender of the city, the British officers and soldiers avoided intercourse with the Germans, because of their outrageous brutality, especially that of the officers. Wellington was forced to take a battalion of the Guards to protect the bridge of Jena, which the Prussians were preparing to wantonaly, destroy, an outrage without "military advantage" parallelling the outrages of the Germans of a like kind in these days.

The same spirit of brutality and savagery as the Prussians manifested a hundred years ago animates the German military caste, and through its influence and training, the German armies to-day, especially the officers. Only the German capacity to give more sinister effect to this spirit has been developed and enlarged, and "improved" by the training of a century; the training to acceptance of the cult of force and cruelty in the school, from the kindergarten to the university. The doctrine of force has been preached in the pulpit till the people, all through, are poisoned with its virus. This is the spirit we are fighting to exorcise. The aim of this spirit is world domination, and if Germany can enforce its ambition of world domination by this spirit, world domination by Germany is as certain as the successful enslavement of the great, generous and kind-hearted natural nature, so to speak, of the German people. If Germany succeeds; if the devil succeeds in being good to his own, the same fetters will be placed upon the nations of Europe; upon Great Britain and the "Dominions beyond the seas." This is what we are fighting against, and whether we realize it or not, this is what will come upon us if we do not strain every nerve, enlist every available man and every available resource to crush the German spirit of brute force, and the German spirit of savagery, and disregard and contempt of all the rights of humanity. This adds emphasis to the appeal—"Your King and country need you"—your homes, your families, your dearest political rights, call upon you to help save yourself, your country, your Empire, and all it represents of freedom and human right.

THE SILVER BULLET.

Sir George Paish, editor of the London Statist, refuses to become pessimistic. On the contrary, he declares that the financial outlook in Great Britain is not dubious, but optimistic. He points out that by the practice of a little economy England will be able to finance the war without serious inconvenience.—Journal of Commerce.

BOTHA'S ACHIEVEMENT.

German South-West Africa is rather more than a geographical expression. It has nearly 800 miles of Atlantic coast-line, and its total area is estimated at 322,450 square miles. Copper mining, diamond mining after the Johannesburg model, and agriculture are the principal industries. The white population is about 20,000, the large majority of whom are Germans. Through this territory General Botha has advanced in spite of vigorous opposition sustained by large quantities of war material stored at Windhuk in peace times by the German Government.

A few months of campaigning has paralyzed the German resistance. The Germans have found themselves outgeneralled and out-fought from the first day of the operations. General Botha, a dozen years ago in arms against the British Empire, has added to that Empire a territory one-third larger than the European possessions of Emperor Wilhelm. By his actions he has given to the world his opinion of British rule and British justice. It is the most dramatic and most picturesque accomplishment of the war. —Toronto News.

ANGELS IN BATTLEFIELD.

The Catholic Register, of Toronto, of July 1, 1915, says:

A strange story is going the rounds in England. It is evident that the war is bringing back some of the spirit of the ages of faith. The story that follows is not Catholic, but from Anglican and Protestant sources. It is in the form of a letter from an Anglican lady to another of the same belief in Canada, who was so good as to give us this extract for publication. The following is the extract:

"Last Tuesday I met Miss M. (daughter of the Canon), and she told me she knew two officers, both of whom had themselves, seen the angels, who saved their left wing from the Germans when they came right upon them during the retreat from Mons. They expected annihilation as they were almost helpless, when to their amazement the Germans stood like dazed men, never so much as touched their guns or stirred till we had turned round and escaped by a cross road. One of Miss M.'s friends, who was not a religious man, told her he saw a troop of angels between them and the enemy, and he has been a changed man ever since. The other man she met in London last week; he is a Christian. She asked him if he had heard the wonderful story of the angels. He said he had seen them himself when he and his company were retreating, they heard the German cavalry turning after them. They ran for a place where they thought a stand might be made with some hope of safety, but before they could reach it the German cavalry was upon them, so they turned and faced the enemy, expecting instant death, when to his wonder he saw between them and the enemy a whole troop of angels, and the horses of the German cavalry turned round, terrified out of their senses and regularly stampeded, the men tugging at their bridles, while the poor horses tore away in every direction from our men. The officer declared he saw the angels distinctly, and it was evident the horses saw them, and it gave them time to reach safety."

The above is like something out of the Crusader days, and there is no need of any comment upon it.

THE SILVER BULLET'S PLACE IN RED CROSS EFFECTIVENESS

Sir Frederick Treves, one of the foremost English surgeons who is now occupied exclusively with military work, has written an interesting description of the hospitals of Boulogne, the largest English hospital base in France.

At the back of the Maritime Station the freight sheds have been converted into a military hospital of the type known as stationary. An uninviting, dismal and uninhabitable building has been changed into a series of bright wards, spotlessly clean, well lighted, well warmed and well ventilated.

This hospital is perfectly equipped in every particular, even down to a special ward for pneumonia cases. The white walls, the white sheets, the red blankets and the gray uniform of the army sisters provide a spectacle as far removed from any conception of the freight shed as can be imagined. There are two operating theatres in the hospital, both up to date in every point.

The hospital has also a rest station consisting of a ward of over fifty beds. It is intended for the less serious cases, for men who may have some time to wait between the arrival of the ambulance train and the departure of the transport. The Boulogne Casino has been converted into a military hospital. The building is in a garden by the sea. The Casino makes a magnificent ward, with over ninety beds. At the bar, where rare wines were once served out, medicines for the ward are dispensed.

The ballroom and the room of the roulette wheels have been turned into superb wards. The finest ward is in the great bacarat hall. The cashiers office is now a nun's room, on the counter of which lint and gauze are paid out in the place of bank notes and gold. The American bar has become an X-ray room.

A body of eminent consulting physicians visits the hospitals daily to advise upon any medical cases of difficulty. No major operation is carried out until the measure has been approved by one of them. Working with this exceptional staff are a number of specialists.

It is in the matter of transport that so much has been done for the comfort of the wounded. The motor ambulance has gone far to solve the problem. Some of these are new and especially built for the purpose, embodying the latest refinements in hospital train construction. One type of car has on either side a series of strong frameworks of iron which carry stretchers in a double tier. This can take thirty-six lying down cases, and can be evacuated in less than fifteen minutes through the great side doors with which these carriages are provided. It is perfectly heated, and at night well lit. In loading and unloading the car the stretchers are passed through the windows without the least discomfort to the patient. No matter how long the journey lasts the wounded can be well looked after and provided with all they want.

Lloyd-George has stated that in the long run it will be the silver, not the leaden bullet, that will decide the war. It is the immense resources of the British Empire in men, no less than in money, that will crush Germany. Similarly in the battle against disease, it is perfect equipment and unlimited supplies that are decisive, and these cannot be purchased without money. To keep up this perfect hospital organization the stream of contributions to Red Cross work must run on unceasingly.

Ontario—West.

All over Canada, in innumerable rivulets, money and supplies are pouring into the great stream of Red Cross contributions which is emptying like a healing flood into those reservoirs of suffering which are called hospitals. Yet, generous as has been the Canadian public's response to Red Cross appeals, it is quite clear from the following letter sent by Miss Strong, the Assistant Matron of No. 2 Canadian General Hospital, Le Treport, France, that even greater efforts are necessary.

Miss Strong, writing to friends in Kentville, Nova Scotia, says: "I assure you that the Red Cross garments are proving a God-send to us. You cannot imagine what it means, when we have to put over 300 poor wretches to bed, to issue out of our reserve Red Cross supplies, a clean night shirt or suit of pyjamas to each man.

You have no idea how the faces of our Canadian wounded brighten, if I say "Isn't that a comfy bath robe? It's one made by the Canadian women." Now, what I am really writing for is money and then more money to buy comforts for these poor soldiers. All the sisters spend more than they can afford but it's only a drop in the bucket. The Chaplain and nurses have been having comforts out of their own purse, but they can't keep up indefinitely."

The public, however, must be prepared to keep up until the end of the war and for months after it—for the wounded will require to be nursed back to health long after peace is made—the stream of financial contribution. After all, in time of war the civilian's patriotism is best shown in a generous sacrifice of his time and money for the welfare of the soldier who is sacrificing life and limb for the state.

GERMAN FIRE BOMBS

A description of incendiary bombs and how to deal with them, prepared by the British Fire Prevention Committee, is posted throughout Britain in public institutions or private houses alongside instructions for using fire extinguishers. A sketch shows what an incendiary bomb looks like, and a diagram shows its exact construction and what is inside it. The usual fire bomb dropped by a Zeppelin is conical in shape, the diameter at the base being about ten inches. It is wrapped round with inflammable cord, which gives it rather a nautical appearance, enhanced by a handle at the apex for lowering it over the gunwhale of the airship. The base is a flat cup, and from this to the handle runs a hollow metal funnel forming the centre and business part of the bomb. This central funnel is filled with thermite. Thermite is the preparation which on ignition produces a heat so intense as to melt steel. The ignition of thermite creates a tremendous glare of light, and the heat melts the metal funnel. The molten metal spreads when the bomb strikes. It sets up at once a fierce fire if it strikes anything combustible, but at the beginning it is only a small fire, and if it is tackled at once with water, it can be put out before it does much damage.

FIRST INDIAN V.C.

This picture taken at Calcutta, shows the first man of the Indian contingent to win the coveted Victoria Cross. He was wounded and invalided home. He was attached to the 129th Duke of Connaught's Baluchis.

Good luck and bad habits are seldom even on speaking terms.

There are ten joints in a New York inventor's table that can be folded more compactly than most devices of the kind.

Turcos Not Flatterers

An amusing story is told of a Turco and the wife of a well known Parisian banker. She had opened a hospital for 50 wounded soldiers at her house. The Turco was received there and though both his arms were mangled by shells he was the life of the establishment after he was first bandanged, and kept everybody amused. One day he remarked that in his country men bought their wives. A nurse jokingly asked him what the nurses of the hospital would bring if they were placed in the market. "How much, for instance, would Mlle. M—— be worth?" "Oh, Mlle. M—— who is big and fair would be worth at least 3,000 francs," replied the Turco. "And Mlle. X——?" "Mademoiselle X who is not so big and shorter would bring about 1,500 francs."

"And how much would I fetch?" asked the banker's wife recklessly.

"You, mother! Old already, no more pretty, die soon, you would be worth 10 francs."

HONOUR PROVED

"Does your husband ever lie to you?"

"Never."

"How do you know?"

"He tells me that I do not look a day older than I did when he married me, and if he does not lie about that, I don't think he would about less important matters."

EAST CITY TEAM AGAIN TRIUMPHS OVER THE THISTLES

Won a Pitcher's Battle by 2 to 1 After One of the Most Exciting Games of the Season---Hagerman's Single With Two Out in the 8th Innings Won the Game for the East City Outfit.

A good game to win and a hard one to lose was the clash on Saturday afternoon between East City and the Thistles, the City League leaders. By the same score as they won by before the East City boys landed on top, 2 to 1. It was a pitcher's battle all the way through, as was expected, Kirn and Huycke splitting honours about even, with everybody on edge. There were four errors behind Huycke, while those behind Kirn did not miss anything. When the Thistles scored once in the seventh the game looked to be won, but a game of baseball is never won until the last man is out, as the Thistles and their followers realize to their sorrow. With two down and one man on the bases and Butcher going to first, Long chose the time to make his second error of the game, and a timely two-bagger by Hagerman brought over two runs, enough to win. One of the largest crowds of [illegible]

The last time these two teams met in a scheduled game the score was also 2 to 1, in favour of East City. In that memorable game Huycke had nine strike-outs to his credit, while Kirn had five. On Saturday they were both in the best of condition and each had eleven by the strike-out route.

Kirn was tight when Knapman, Jobbitt and Smythe faced him in succession. They all fanned. No runs, no hits.

Butcher was the first man to bat for the East City aggregation. He lined one to Cavanagh, but the short-stop slipped it up. Then Long made a wild throw in the direction of second, which advancedt Butcher. Hagerman struck out and Shaw sacrificed. Lowe was the third man down; also by the strike-out route, leaving Butcher on third. No runs, no hits.

Long was out, Kirn to Guerin, Cavanagh from Butcher to Guerin, while Huycke was fanned. No runs, no hits.

In the second innings, Barrie, the first man up, was an easy out, Huycke to Long. Swanston came through with a single, the first hit of the game, but he did not get any further as Guerin struck out, and Primeau was out on a foul fly to Hill. No runs, one hit.

For the Thistles, Hill was out, Kirn to Guerin. Jackson sent up a foul fly which Swanston smothered, while McQuoig was also out, Kirn to Guerin. No runs, no hits.

Kirn fanned, and Butcher, next up, singled, but was out stealing second, Hagerman again fanned. No runs, one hit.

Knapman flew out to Barrie, Jobbitt was out, Kirn to Guerin, and Smythe struck out. No runs, no hits.

Long drove a liner in Butcher's direction and was out to Guerin. Cavanah and Huycke struck out. No runs, no hits.

In the last of the fifth Swanston got on first again, when Cavanah made his second error, but was out at second. Hill caught Guerin's foul fly, and Primeau was down, Huycke to Long. No runs, no hits.

Hill and Jackson both flew out to Butcher in succession, and McQuaig fanned. No runs, no hits.

In the sixth, Kirn was the first man up and he fanned. Butcher sent one to Jackson and was out to Long, while Hagerman struck out for the third time. No hits, no runs.

The run against East City was scored in this half of the innings. Knapman drove a hot one to right field, which looked perfectly good for a single at least. But Preimeau had his eye on it and came tearing in, in time to throw him out at first. This was one of the finest plays of the day. Kirn weakened a little and Jobbitt drew a walk. Smythe pegged one to Barrie, who threw Jobibtt out at second. A walk for Long advanced Smythe to second. Cavanah's single scored Smythe. Huycke struck out. One run, one hit.

Shaw fanned, Lowe was out on a fly to Jackson and Barrie singled to centre. He was still on first when Swanston flew out to Smythe. No runs, no hits.

In East City's eighth Guerin popped a fly to Huycke, and Primeau fanned. Then Kirn came through with a hit and two down. Long muffed Jackson's throw to first and Butcher was safe with Kirn on second. Hagerman was next to bat. He had fanned three times but came through with a single over second scoring Kirn and Butcher and winning the game. Hagerman was out stealing third.—Two runs two hits.

Kirn fanned Knapman in the ninth It looked for a while as if he were weakening when he again walked Jobbitt but a nice double play, Barrie to Hagerman to Guerin, put Smythe and Jobbitt out. No runs, no hits.

In the first game Empires and Classics each scored eleven runs in eight innings. It was a busy session for all concerned, with lots of hits, and twelve errors altogether. Rahmel allowed thirteen hits while the other two gave eleven.

At four o'clock the game was not yet finished, the Empires still having their part of the innings to go. In their part of the ninth the Classics scored two runs, but when the game was called it reverted back to even innings, and at that they were tied.

As he box score shows, Frost, the Classics' fielder, had his batting togs on, gathering three singles and a double in five times up. Neary and Rose were not so generous with any one individual.

CARL WEILMAN, OF BROWNS, IS C JENNINGS' JINX

NEW YORK, July 12—Hardly a baseball season passes without producing a "jinx" pitcher—one that is a mediocre performer against six clubs, and is a world-beater against the seventh. He simply "has it on" that club. It isn't his speed, it isn't his curves, or his control, or a change of pace, or anything like that. Old baseball men don't attempt to explain it except by that one word—J-I-N-X.

This season's mysterious person is tall, lanky Carl Weilman of the St. Louis Browns, and the goat club is Hughey Jennings' Tigers. This season, and, in fact, ever since he kicked his way into the big show, the lanky Weilman has beaten the Tigers consistently. A short time ago he beat them twice in the same series, and that was all that was needed to convince the Detroiters that he is their jinx.

Even Cobb is Helpless.

Yes Weilman will go up against a weak hitting club like either Washington or Cleveland and they'll all but knock his brains out. Cobb, Crawford, Veach, Bush and the rest of that famed wrecking crew look like bushers against the lean Brown while some rookie will go up and plant the ball over the fence.

Dusting off the records in the dim archives of baseball history, it is seen that there have been many jinxes. It will be remembered that for a long time the Cincinnati Reds could not beat Mathewson. Of course, there were a lot of other clubs in the same fix, but they did manage to sneak a game from the old master now and then, but the Reds—never.

A case a little more recent is that of A. Rankin Johnson, who beat the Washington club, Walter Johnson up every time he worked against it. Rankin wasn't a wounderful pitcher, he was just average, if that, and after he leaped to the Feds he had a lot of difficulty in winnig games. But he had Clarke Griffith's goat.

Tom Hughes Another.

Tom Hughes, the old Washington pitcher, cast the same sort of spell over Cleveland. When Tom was in his prime, Washington never was out of the cellar. About all the games the Senators won were due to his prowess He didn't look so good against other clubs, but Cleveland had no chance at all.

Eddie Summers, the old Tiger star, made the Athletics eat out of his hand during his sojourn in the American league. One day, the last good season he had, he beat them a double header and Connie Mack heaved a sigh of relief when Summers hit the toboggan next season.

Jim Scott of the White Sox also has some sort of a charm over the Mackmen, though not to so marked a degree.

GERMAN SPY COLLEGE

Minute Knowledge and Careful Training Spelled Success

In the early days of the war people marvelled at Germany's perfect system of espionage. "How has it been organized?" was the question one heard on every hand. It develops that Germany ran schools for teaching spies. One of these institutions existed at Larrach, in the Grand Duchy of Haden. The teaching was at once theoretical and practical. At first the pupils studied maps and drawings which gave minute details of the uniforms of the French, Russian, and British armies, guns, rifles and shells. Afterwards the future spies were instructed as to the internal military organisation of the country in which they had to operate—the effectives, garrisons and forts. Technical instructors explained to them the strategic utility of the network of railways, the importance of the different stations for mobilisation, and other things of the same nature.

They were further taught the means of reporting with discretion and rapidity the information collected. When a spy travelling through a French town found four regiments of infantry, two of cavalry, and one of artillery, it was sufficient for him to underline on the railway time table the name of the town, and to put certain signs beneath the figures 4, 2, and 1 on the same page. In this way the effectives of a district were indicated without the most perspicacious observer of German correspondence being any the wiser.

As soon as an espionage pupil completed his studies he was given a false name, a passport, money, and a mission. He was told to return as often as possible to report the result of his mission. It was borne in upon all spies that if they succeeded they would be rewarded, but that if they compromised themselves they would be disavowed. In this connection it is interesting to reproduce a story from the "Cri de Paris." Two ladies appeared at the offices of a woman's mutual assistance association, and applied for French governesses.

"Meanwhile," they added, "may we be able to take back our German governesses?"

"As you like," replied the president of the association, "but you will probably have to pay more for German governesses after the war."

"Why?"

"Because there will no longer be at Berlin an espionage fund for supplementing the salaries of German governesses."

No Wonder.

"What is it?"

"Electrical work."

MANY ROYAL AVIATORS

When King Albert ascended in a Belgian military aeroplane for an aerial reconnaissance over the German lines, he was the first crowned monarch to fly over troops in action, but he is not the only Royal personage to fly. Years ago the Kaiser had a short flight in a Zeppelin, with the famous Count at the helm. The trip was carried out secretly at a German aerodrome, and Berliners knew nothing about it till it was over. The Crown Prince of Germany was one of the first men to fly in an aeroplane. He ascended with Orville Wright, who with his brother Wilbur produced the first heavier-than-air machine to fly. The flight took place in America some years back, and at the conclusion the Prince presented Mr. Wright with a gold tie-pin as a memento of the occasion. The Prince of Wales enjoyed a lengthy flight in one of our Army airships at Farnborough. The trip was carried out in private.

To Detect Mines

Magnetic attraction is now being applied, more or less experimentally, to the detection of mines on a ship's bow, and is used to signal the presence of a mine. Could the current be made strong enough to deflect a torpedo, another terror of the deep would gradually disappear.

MARCONI ALMOST IRISH

Famous Inventor Pleased at Italy's Share in War

Few Italians welcome Italy's entrance into the war more than Signor Marconi, son of an Irish mother and husband of an Irish wife. Signora Marconi is a daughter of the late Lord Inchiquin. Signor Marconi's mother was a Miss Jameson, and from her he learnt to speak English almost as soo as he learnt Italian. He was brought up in Bologna—which is still his home—and in a field near that city the youthful Marconi carried out his first experiment in wireless telegraphy wi[illegible] an instrument part of which was an old biscuit tin.

WHY FISHER RETIRED

Political Interference Kept Him From Killing Enough Germans

"A Cabinet Minister said to Lor' Fisher, 'You have broken up one Cabinet. Are you going to break up a second?' 'Cabinets-' replied the old man. 'What are Cabinets to me? My business is to kill Germans enough to prevent Germany from winning this war. To kill Germans is the affair of seamen and soldiers, not Parliaments and Cabinets. Therefore I will work not work with either Mr. Churchill or Mr. Balfour as head of the Admiralty.'

A VERSATILE LABORITE

Hon. Arthur Henderson Worked Hard to Win High Position

The Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, M.P., whose knowledge of labor questions gained from a place in the coalition government, has led a romantic career. He was born in Glasgow in 1863 and started life as an iron-moulder in a Newcastle factory. His schooling was but scanty, and he was obliged to educate himself in his spare time. His ability and perseverance soon made an impression on his fellow workers, and after many years' work as a Trade Unionist leader he entered Parliament as labor member for the Barnard Castle division of Durham in 1903. He is now Chairman of the Labor party, and is a Privy Councillor, a Wesleyan and a popular lay preacher.

Dowdy and Unsympathetic.

"Broadly speaking," declares a prominent English woman, "New York women are dowdy. Limply hanging skirts and badly fitting coats are as common as blackberries among the poorer sections, while the taste of the wealthier women often is excrable. Freak fashions from which a French woman would recoil in horror are accepted with complacency by the moneyed matrons of New York. Here and there in the mad medley of color one sees an example of exquisite taste, and it is these rare exceptions, no doubt, which have given the American woman the reputation she possesses for smartness and chic.

"When a New York woman is beautiful she is very beautiful, but she lacks poetry and sympathy. She has not suffered enough. There is no suggestion of softness or subtlety about her. Her lips are too thin and her eyes too hard."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

AN ARMY OF 400,000 CRACK SHOTS COMPELS RESPECT FOR SWISS

BERNE, Switzerland, June 4. — Away up the street was the sound of military music. A march was being played. A short, choppy, snappy march which somewhat hobbled the action of those having long legs. It came nearer. Men and women turned to watch, and smiled, and waved their hands. The cadets were coming.

Just babies, some of these cadets. Some of them could almost march under a table without touching their caps. Their little legs strained ludicrously in the efforts to keep step. Their little faces were portentously solemn. The youngest were but 12 years old and did not look it. The oldest had not turned 16.

But, and here is the importance of the cadets to Switzerland—each of these kiddies carried a full-sized military rifle. A full-sized bayonet swung at each tender side. The point almost dragged on the ground sometimes, as though it were a sword dangling from a military dandy's belt. Each carried on his innocent back a military knapsack, although of a size proportioned to the back. Each wore a military uniform that was regulation in everything but size.

These cadet organizations are all over Switzerland. Membership is voluntary, of course. The Swiss youth is not required to take his military service until he is past 19 years. But the little fellows are being hatched for service in a soldierly incubator. Each takes his turn at target practice — with real rifles and with the usual practice charges—and there are artillery companies in which these children handle real guns. By the time they are 16 they are disciplined soldiers. This war has shown what the soldier of 16 can do.

Ready for Defence.

If militarism—a militarism of which the aim is defence and not aggression—is ever defensible, then Switzerland has shown the way. If foreigners be excluded, almost 12 per cent. of Switzerland's population can be called to the colours. If she were to be plunged into the war to-morrow 400,000 first-rate soldiers, armed and equipped to the last leather, would answer the call. One result of that national preparedness may be seen in this:

She is completely surrounded by belligerent nations. France and Germany and Austria shoulder her. To the south is Italy. Their various interests collide in and over Switzerland's borders all the time. If she were a weak or a spineless nation she would have been at war or have been humiliated times without number. Instead of which, sturdy little Switzerland has made them all eat humble pie. Each of the four has apologized to her for some breach of her manfully maintained neutrality. England, too. England apologized rather tardily. But she apologized.

There is a V-shaped jog in the Swiss frontier, which thrusts in between Germany and France. France has taken advantage of the position, with an acuteness which would be extremely funny if the lives of men did not hang upon it. She has posted a battery within seven meters — 22 feet—of the Swiss line. From this point she cheerily throws shells into Germany. A German battery replies now and then, but it is obvious that it is extremely difficult to so place a shell that it will not skip the battery and land in Switzerland. Several shells have. Whereupon Switzerland doughtily demands an apology from the offender. Germany has always apologized.

"We had a dinner there," a Swiss officer told me, "in which the table was placed just upon the line. The French officers and the Swiss officers were guests at the same table, and yet neither side stepped upon the other's territory."

All Are for Switzerland.

It is not to be assumed that Switzerland is more friendly to France than to Germany. One half of Switzerland is called French and the other half is called German. Presumably each half sympathizes with the nation whose tongue it speaks. But both sides are heart and soul with Switzerland.

"We have been free for almost 500 years," a Swiss said. "We do not propose to be another Belgium."

France thought to disregard the little mountain gamecock's defiance, and some of her fliers crossed the Swiss line. They were shot down and interned. They are still interned. Switzerland demanded an apology. She kept on demanding an apology in such a tone that her demand was acceded to. Not one of the fighting nations cares to handicap itself by a quarrel with Switzerland just now. England's fliers also swooped over Switzerland's borders. It took Switzerland three weeks to get an apology from Great Britain—but she got it. She means business. Switzerland does. The nature of Italy's offense has slipped my memory. But she offended. Then she said she was very sorry it happened.

Switzerland's army is the reason why.

It isn't a standing army, as our army or England's army is. Its soldiers will be called militiamen by us. In times of peace its highest officer is a colonel, whereas little Rhode Island probably has a freight car load of generals. When this war trouble broke out its parliament ejected the ranking colonel as general. When the war is over he will automatically sink back to his former rank. But its militiamen members are all trained soldiers. More than all, they are trained shots. They remain trained soldiers and trained shots to the end of their days.

When a Swiss youth becomes somewhat more than 19 years old he is called to the colours, if he is physically fit. Thereafter his service follows the line of the German army. He passes with the lapse of time into the Landwehr and later into the Landstrum, being liable for an increasingly shorter term of service each year as he ages. But the important feature of the Swiss system is the attention given to rifle practice. The Swiss theory is that 100 soldiers who can hit what they are shooting at are better than 500 soldiers who cannot. So her men are made into sharpshooters.

Must Practice Shooting.

They fire innumerable shots during the two years of active service. Each year thereafter they fire other shots. By-and-by they pass into the service classes. Each man takes his rifle with him. He must keep it in his home, and in good order. Each year he is required to fire a given number of shots at a target—the Government providing the cartridges. A record is kept of his score. He is not permitted to simply go out in the backyard and loose off the gun at the moon.

"Naturally," said a Landstrum man, "if one goes out to shoot 20 shots for the government, he will shoot a few more shots for fun."

There is also the element of rivalry. No soldier wants to confess that he could no longer hit the side of a barn, especially when competition is forced upon him. So that he keeps up something of rifle practice all year round. Each Swiss village has from one to half a dozen shooting societies. They march out in the hills and shoot and yodel and drink beer happily day after summer day. They have intersociety shoots and intervillage shoots and crack competitions and Heaven only knows what.

"Sometimes you can't see the Alps for the powder smoke," said my companion, disgustedly.

Switzerland has a cavalry also, to which men who have a little money to spend belong. The government buys the horses for the men. Buys good horses. Topnotch horses. Then the man pays one-half the cost of the horse, up to a fixed limit. He is required to appear with that horse in good condition for the summer manoeuvres. The rest of the year the horse is his, to do with what he pleases subject to occasional inspection. Each year the government repays him 10 per cent. of the sum he has advanced in buying the horse. At the end of 10 years his active service has ended, and the horse is his.

Between times the soldiers study at their profession. They may be watchmakers or Alpine guides when off duty, but the making of war properly is their avocation. When every man of a nation is interested in one thing—at least, every man who is physically fit—it follows that the nation is interested in it. Swiss women talk to you with enthusiasm of their army. It isn't the Swiss idea that their army can buckle up and go out and whip some other army.

"No other army can invade Switzerland—and get home again," they tell you, somewhat grimly.

Apparently the other armies think so. Between this very excellently trained army which Switzerland possesses, and an inch by inch knowledge of her ground, and various peaks and canyons and alleys, and other edgewise territory, her defence against invasion would be a murderous one.

But the whole system is founded on the man with the rifle. No man is forced to give so much of his time to military duties as to cripple his activity in other lines. He is merely required to learn how to shoot—to shoot so that he can hit what he shoots at. Then he is not permitted to forget.

One definite and tangible result of the possession of this army at this time is that Switzerland is eating white bread. No one has been able to tell which way the Swiss cat would jump, except that it would jump at any nation that invaded Switzerland. Therefore — while Switzerland, with a laudible desire to keep out of trouble—has obeyed the regulations regarding the shipment of contraband goods into Germany laid down by her neighbor, France, it at one time seemed to Italy that Switzerland should be kept upon such short rations that she could not go to war. Switzerland's corn all comes from Italy. France and Germany and Austria have none to spare.

"You can only keep two months' supply of corn on hand," said Italy in effect.

Switzerland didn't protest. But by and by it happened that Italy needed coal. Britain could not furnish her any. France's best coalfields are being mined by Germans. Italy demanded that Switzerland sell her coal.

"You were rather nasty about that corn some time ago," said Switzerland "Now, we'll sell you coal. But for every car of coal we let go to you, you must let a car of corn come to us."

Italy agreed. Italy had to. Nothing aggressive, you'll observe, about this Swiss spirit. Still one must observe that she can take care of herself. That army of target shooters no doubt helped maintain that spirit. It isn't for nothing that the William Tell legend persists in the Swiss hills.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

INCAPACITATED PRISONERS RETURN TO ENGLAND--SAY BRITISH PRISONERS ARE STARVING

ROSENDAAL, July 12.—Yesterday afternon 560 incapacitaeed British soldiers and men of the Royal Army Medical Corps crossed the frontier into Holland on their way to England. A greater portion of the party, namely, thirty-four doctors and 300 men, were of the medical service, the remaining two hundred odd being men maimed in the war and incapable of further military service. The party has been waiting at Prussens whilst final arrangements were made for the transfer of an equal number of wounded Germans from England. They left this morning by special trains for Flushing, whence they travel to-morrow on the Orange Nassau for England.

Get Good Snd-off.

Treated with every consideration by the German medical staff and nursing sisters they passed from Belgium through Esschen, and at once were handed into the care of the Dutch, whose Red Cross authorities showered on them every conceivable kindness. The Germans and Belgians had themselves decorated Esschen station as much in tribute to the British as in preparation for the welcome to the Germans expected from England. At Rosendaal the British were overwhelmed by attentions from the Dutch, who provided them with cooling driks, food, fruit, and tobacco.

A cheering set of wounded and ambulance men never entered Holland. Their delight at meting their fellow-countrymen was intense. Their desire to express disgust at the treatment in Germany was unbounded from officers and men. I received nothing but tales of disgust at the food in the camps. Last month things improved somewhat, but even so the men were being kept alive merely by food sent by relatives at home.

"Food Was Rotten."

One officer said: "Things are getting better, but in many cases the food was rotten, and in others perfectly detestable. There is a great lack of food. Most of the men are actually living on parcels from home. Those who don't get parcels are dying either from starvation or disease, brought on by it."

A private of the Royal Irish Rifles said he and others had been in Muenterburg Hospital eight months. They were given what they nicknamed "Landstrum soup," with chestnuts in it that were so hard they could hardly bite them.

Another man said: "At Rennbahn the men are living on stuff sent from home. Their spirit, though, is fine. German bulletins are often torn down and the men sing "God Save the King'."

The largest proportion of Medical Corps men were taken prisoners after the retreat from Mons. They remained behind to attend the wounded. Several told me with indignation how they were dragged away in the midst of dressing the wounds of their soldier comrades. In some cases the doctors were arrested in the very middle of the operations.

CHANGES IN A. M'KIM LIMITED

C. T. Pearce, New Toronto Manager and W. B. Somerset Appointed to Important Post at Head Office

The steady development of the business of A. McKim Limited, the largest Newspaper Advertising Agency in Canada, has necessitated two important appointments in the staff.

W. B. Somerset, who for thirteen years has been manager of the Toronto branch, now comes to Montreal as second vice-president to superintend the business of the branches and assist Mr. A. McKim, whose time will more than ever be devoted to the clients of the firm.

Chas. T. Pearce, until a few weeks ago general manager of the Toronto Daily News, and a very popular Toronto man, succeeds Mr. Somerset as manager of the Toronto branch.

The newspaper and advertising business has been Mr. Somerset's life work, his father was for many years manager of the Winnipeg Free Press, and it was in the office of this great paper that he got his newspaper training, rising to the position of advertising manager. On his trip East for the Free Press Mr. Somerset came in touch with Mr. McKim and was engaged to open the Toronto branch, which has since become a very important part of the business of this large agency.

Mr. Somerset is a clean-cut young business man of sterling integrity, keen analytical mind and boundless optimism. In the head office of the firm he will have larger opportunities and will be a greater source of strength to the business.

Possibly few people realize what a power the advertising agency has become in business development or to what extent the art of advertising has opened up economic and profitable ways of marketing products of every description. In this development the firm of A. McKim Limited has undoubtedly played the most important part. They have offices in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, and London, Eng.

INJURED AT STONEY LAKE

Mr. Ben Chapman Had His Hand Painfully Cut

Mr. Ben Chapman, jeweller, of Toronto, who is holidaying near Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, was the victim of a very painful accident, yesterday. While cranking an over-board motor on his skiff his hand in some manner became caught in the machinery and was badly cut, so bad indeed that Dr. Neal brought him into Peterborough yesterday afternoon to have the wound dressed.

Hundred Indians Elude the Turks

LONDON, July 11.—The story of a remarkable exploit of 100 Indian prisoners of war who escaped from Constantinople and reached Afghanistan after a four months' march is briefly told in a letter received here from Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan.

The men, who are Pathans, formed a part of the Indian army fighting in Flanders. They were captured by the Germans and sent to Constantinople in the hope, the letter says, that, being Mahommedans, they might be induced to join the Turks.

With unwavering loyalty, however, the Pathans are said to have finally succeeded in eluding their guards and in reaching Persia. They travelled along the northern route through the Sunnite country and ultimately arrived at the Afghanistan capital. They are now on their way to join their regimental depot in India.

PATRIOTIC YEAR AT THE EXHIBITION

TORONTO, July 12.—The plan of the Exhibition directors to make the "Patriotic and Production" theme the dominant one at the big Fair this year extends even to the list of days, which has been completely changed around, the new titles being redolent of Imperialistic sentiment.

Society Day of past years, usually the first Tuesday, has been combined with Review Day, the last Friday, and has been replaced by Empire Day. Industrial Day of a year ago, the first Thursday, will be Military Day this year, while Press Day, the first Friday, becomes Fisheries Day, at the request of the Dominion Government, which is making a mammoth display of the country's fisheries resources.

Hamilton Day, the first Saturday, becomes Press Day, while Labour Day will be more appropriately termed Industrial Day. Transportation Day, the second Tuesday, becomes Farmers' Day, while Agricultural Day, the second Wednesday, has been transformed into Patriotic Production Day. Opening Day, Children's Day, and Citizens' and Athletic Day are the only days that remain unchanged from a year ago.

The various days have been allotted as follows:

Saturday, August 28—Preparation Day (not open to the public).
Monday, August 30—Opening Day.
Tuesday, August 31—Empire Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 1—Children's Day.
Thursday, Sept. 2—Military Day.
Friday, Sept. 3—Fisheries Day.
Saturday, Sept. 4—Press Day.
Monday, Sept. 6—Industrial Day.
Tuesday, Sept. 7—Farmers' Day.
Wednesday, Sept. 8—Patriotic Production Day.
Thursday, Sept. 9—Transportation Day.
Friday, Sept. 10—Society and Review Day.
Saturday, Sept. 11—Citizens' and Athletic Day.

"Art" Picture Case In Police Court

Magistrate Dumble this morning reserved judgment in a case in which two Peterborough men were charged with selling obscene pictures. The prints were on celluloid on the reverse side of pocket mirrors and were alleged copies of works of art. It was probably only an incident that most of them appeared to be pictures of female forms in the nude and that other exhibits might have been produced of the Laocoon group, the Hermes of Praxitiles or some other variation to Nymphs at Play and Septembet Morn.

Mr. Widdifield appeared for the defence.

Wife Finishes College Course Stopped in '88

PHILADELPHIA, July 9. — By persevering study in her own home, poring over textbooks when not busied with the duties that devolved on her as wife and mother, Mrs. Rebecca Webb Holmes has completed a college course that illness compelled her to give up twenty-seven years ago. She will be graduated shortly from Swarthmore College, which she entered first in 1885.

Mrs. Holmes is the wife of Dr. Jesse Holmes, professor of philosophy and the Bible at Swarthmore. The care of two sons, now in their teens, prevented her from realizing sooner the ambition she has always cherished. With the boys growing up, she found more time to devote to study, and, between household duties she made up in the last two years the one year of college work necessary for her graduation.

Ten hours a week she spent in the classrooms, with girls who were not born until five or six years after she had given up "temporarily" the studies she now is finishing.

"It simply was a matter of perseverance," Mrs. Holmes says. "There are many women who could do the same thing or more than I have done with ease, if they are willing to, do it."

Had Finished Junior Year.

Mrs. Holmes entered Swarthmore in 1885. She had completed her junior year with only one more year to study, when she was taken ill, and had to leave college. She came back to her home in this city, where her father, William B. Webb, conducted a drug store.

Mrs. Holmes was a frequent visitor to the class reunions, and she said she often thought she would like to finish her college course in the years that followed. After her marriage to Dr. Holmes he taught for several years at George School and fifteen years ago went to Swarthmore.

Brought back to the atmosphere of the college, Mrs. Holmes says the desire to continue her studies returned but she found it impossible in those earlier years.

Two years ago Dr. Holmes was given a leave of absence for travel in Europe. When the family returned to Swarthmore they boarded for awhile, and there it was Mrs. Holmes found her first opportunity for study.

During the first year she was able to do half the necessary work. She took as her major course public speaking. Other studies she elected were English philosophy and the Bible. In some of these classes her husband was her instructor.

Continues Housekeeping.

During the last year the family moved into their own house again, and Mrs. Holmes had to mix housekeeping and studying.

All of her ten classes a week were in the morning, and for a short time she attended classes at 8 o'clock. "I had a good maid this year," she says. "But it was difficult sometimes for me to get to those early classes, for I had to plan the day's meals, and a woman has so many things to think of in the morning."

Many of the thirty members of the class of 1889 will return for commencement this year, and Mrs. Holmes will be able to take her place among them as a fellow graduate.

"Most of the women I know," she says, "are graduates of college, and I have always felt that I wanted to be able to say I was one, too. And this year I shall be one."

To save a housewife bending over while sweeping a dust pan has been invented that is heavy enough to stay where it is moved with the foot and with a guard to retain accumulated sweepings.

According to English investigators, heating soil with steam pipes before planting seeds increases its food value, while plants raised therein blossom earlier and produce more and better fruit.

The inventor of a new steel railroad tie that also will serve as a cattle guard claims it will prevent wrecks due to rails spreading and can be laid in half the time required for a wooden tie.

Annual Church Service Of Local Orangemen

Stirring Address by Rev. J. P. Wilson Along Patriotic Lines ---Splendid Turnout Filled the Body of the Church

Headed by the Salvation Army Temple Band, the members of the different Orange Orders marched from Victoria Hall last evening to Charlotte Street Methodist Church, where they attended divine service. So great were they in number that they filled the body of the church, and many of the congregation were unable to get in.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Charlotte Street Church, addressed the members of the Orders. He traced Orangeism and Protestantism from before the time of William of Orange. As to William of Orange, he said he was a soldier of the first order; first in the attack; last in the retreat. He was not popular in the Court, but preferred the love of the people to that kind of popularity. There was never a more astute and more far-seeing leader.

The speaker went on to describe his part in the revolution of 1688, and the beginning of Cabinet Government in England, and we have to-day, and which has settled for all time, he hoped, Protestant succession to the Throne of Great Britain.

As Orangemen they must vindivate the fame of the old defenders of the truth. They did not need to be bitter towards any religion in which they did not concur. But if we had broader minds to-day we must not forget how this was brought about.

The speaker said that at least 40 per cent. of the people of to-day did not know what Protestantism was, and what it stood for. It was an effort at reform. It marked the change from Medieval to PPrimeval methods. It stood for the assertion of the rights of the people and marked the change from Medieval to Primeval methods, of the present day, and never since, until the year 1915, was there anything to compare in any way with the Battle of the Boyne. William of Orange was called to protect the liberty of the Empire, and the Protestant religion. One battle gave William the Conquerer possession of England, but one battle gave William of Orange the possession of the hearts of the people and all the blessings.

The Orange Society should not stand for any political party. It was a coalition of all the parties in England that brought William of Orange and the Orangement should pride in the freedom. Despotism in any form should not be tolerated. Orangemen should not be bitter towards Roman Catholics, but should not fall into the errors which Roman Catholics had fallen into. Although none but Protestants could join the ranks of the Orangemen, there should be no persecution of anyone for their religion. In Europe, Great Britain had massed men, guns and horses, but also the ideals of the Empire. If we would be true Britishers and Christians we must live up to the principles of these men; these men also of France and Flanders. At the sinking of the Lusitania we shuddered, but we had no apology for being at war; we did not blush at being there. Germany viewed the pact as a scrap of paper, and treated it as such. Britain's truth and honour were at stake in that scrap of paper.

The work of the Orange Order should be for the freedom; the welfare of men; honour of the King; and good of the country. We were to live lives like Jesus; unselfish lives, and lay down our lives for the Brethren.

Canada was our home. The very soil was precious to use. After the war this would be with the United States the greatest country the world had ever seen. One hundred million people would be here in the near future. We wanted peace, intelligence and freedom to deal with these conditions. There were also some evils in Canada of course. There was the evil of greed, and at that political rascality in the Province of Manitoba. Canadians hung their heads. There must be no particular class or creed; one flog and most important of all one school to build up the democracy as it should be built up.

We must love the brotherhood; fear God; honour the King.

After the service the Salvation Army Temple Band headed the procession back to the George Street Hall.

FUNERAL OF AN OLD RESIDENT

Friends of Mr. Alexander H. Kennedy Paid Their Last Respects This Afternoon

The funeral of a former old and highly respected citizen was held from St. Andrew's Church on Monday afternoon, July 12th. Memory goes back to the many years of his residence in Peterborough.

At the age of thirty-five he married Miss Mary Taylor, and their home life, surrounded by their children, six of whom — James Walker, John E., Peter Mary Ewart, Jane and Wm. A.—survive him, was ever that of deepest ties. To him it came as a great joy when his youngest son married, and brought an extra ray of sunshine into his declining years in the person of his little grandson, James Alexander.

We want to weave into our little tribute the impress which this life produced upon those with whom he came in contact, from the smallest child e'en to the one with silvered locks.

During his recent days in the hospital, when evcruciating pain seemed to preclude recognition, at times, even of his dearest ones, a neighbour's child was taken to his room, and, when his daughter said: "Why, father, here's Bobbie, do you know him?" he instantly opened his eyes, and smilingly said: "Oh, yes! This is one of my little pets, of whom I have many." This picture from life bespeaks more fully the heart of our hero than simply eulogistic words could do.

Thus those who knew him best will remember him. He was always most loyally alive to the home land, i.e., a "Bonnie Scot," and residents of Peterborough who have visited his home in Chicago will recall the rhythm in his nature, evidenced by his keen pleasure in the rendition of Harry Lauder's selections on the Victrola. We pause to hear the echo of this long, not always easy, earthly pilgrimage, made more lonely for the last five years by the winging of the spirit of his companion to the Better Land, but his outlook and onward glance was ever to the reunion awaiting him.

Of his family only two brothers, Dr. William Kennedy, of Buffalo, N.Y., and Mr. Francis Kennedy, of Hastings, Ontario, still await the call to join the heavenly host.

Au revoir, "Our Scottish Chief."
Deepest love and esteemed prompts our brief.
Separation for us means heartache, but for you we feel no grief,
For, at home with him, you've found sweet joy and relief.
De-united (?) Ah yes! Evermore with your "Beloved" to occupy His mansions because "I am the way" has been your belief.
"Because I live, ye shall live also."
If some of life's other pleasures we must forego,
Still, secure in Him, our cup shall overflow,
For "Goodness and mercy have followed thee all thy days"—When He called, "Come"—you said—
"I'll go."
As we press the kiss on thy honored brow, may it be the seal that we'll follow our Master, no matter how strong the foe.
Our memory shall ever hover about thee—our "General,"
For the fragrance of thy life was ne'er ephemeral.
Pure and clean as the lily have the petals shown
And now, in Heaven, the life is full blown.

JACK TAR'S BEST JOB

Why Seaman-Gunner-Torpedoman is Envied—His Thorough Education

Every naval power nowadays has its torpedo school, a sort of honors' class to which only the best of seamen aspire. An S.G.T., which stands for seaman gunner torpedoman, will acquire his most profound knowledge of the exceedingly fickle art on board a destroyer or submarine, but before he can volunteer as S.G.T. he must go through the regular course in one of the two ships dedicated to this purpose. Before commencing, he must first have passed successfully through a gunnery course and qualified as a seaman-gunner.

Torpedoes are far too uncanny craft and expensive to be handled by anyone but the man who is thoroughly conversant with their intricacies. Even in times of peace torpedoes go amissing in practice, sometimes due to malhandling, but more often because of the unconquerable eccentricity of some of these amazing weapons of destruction, though, of course, the lost terror is frequently recovered and a handsome reward paid the finder. At other times the torpedo, for what the sailor calls "pure cussedness," will double back on its course as if anxious to have a backhander at its parent ship, while, on other occasions, it will fly away at a tangent. These, however, are the exceptions. The surprising thing really is not that the torpedo should occasionally prove obstreperous, but that it is, all things considered, so reliable. Much of this latter quality is due to the unremitting care and almost downright genius of the leading torpedoman, a fully qualified seaman who has shown marked ability in his training, and, as a result, has had his instruction considerably extended.

There is a still higher rung open to the smart, ambitious Jack Tar—the proud position of torpedo instructor, and mayhap he may rise to the topmost rung, and become chief torpedo instructor. The chief torpedo instructor is regarded by the admiring fellows under him as a walking encyclopædia on all things pertaining to torpedoes, gyroscopes, cylinders, magnetism, floating and fixed mines not to mention range finders, electric bells, and lighting.

The typical torpedo lecture hall would not disgrace a university class room. It is a large and splendidly equipped apartment dedicated in the forenoon to lectures, in the afternoon to practical demonstrations; and in the evening it is again in full activity. The men are taught practically everything connected with mines and explosives, and, through the electric light shop adjacent, are brought into close contact with electric contrivances. Occasionally, too, they are taken away in a body to the minefields for practical work. In short, nothing is left to chance, nor is any expense spared to turn out skilled operators to compare with the best any rival power can show.

Church Service on Warships

Every day on every British warship there are prayers, as well as a regular church service every Sunday.

If there is no chaplain on board, the captain conducts the service. The "church" itself is the deck, the part chosen being in as sheltered a position as possible. The sailors' favorite hymns are those dealing with the sea, particularly "Almighty Father, Strong to Save."

There is one thing about these services on board ship: every Jack Tar is keen on attending them, and though they are a matter of routine they are never hurried. The chaplain's or captain's sermons always are about the things that matter. He knows every one of his congregation and the things to say to them.

Hardy Italian Soldiers

The Italian soldier undergoes a more severe training in some respects than any friend or enemy in the armies of Europe. His day begins at 4.30 a.m., and drill and routine continue, with a two-hours' break of "compulsory repose," until 5 p.m. After that he has four hours' freedom, but must be back in barracks by 9 o'clock, or 8.30 in winter, and is supposed to be abed when, half an hour later, the bugles sound the "silenzio." He is extremely well cared for by the authorities, but long marches are reckoned among the essentials of his training, and some regiments can cover sixty miles at five miles an hour, and consider it nothing remarkable.

life among the people of this church had been so bright and full of service. Only the week previous he had been present in his accustomed place in this House of God that he had known and loved since his childhood. Thus it was a congregation whose sorrow seemed as one, who assembled, to remember before God, their late reported fellow member and worker. The hymns and prayers were especially appropriate to the occasion.

The Rector, Rev. W. H. White, preached a splendid discourse, it being a study of the "Song of the Bow," as found in the eighteenth and nineteenth chapters of the Second Book of Samuel. This poem, he said, was unique among the compositions from David's pen, differing from the Psalms, inasmuch as it was a patriotic eulogy of Saul and Johnathan. Johnathan was the happy warrior. He possessed a cheerful courage, coupled with a deep religious feeling. God was with him.

Referring to the life of the departed soldier, the reverend speaker felt that in a measure the points of character in him were similar to those of Johnathan. At his confirmation he not only claimed the full privileges of membership in Christ's Church, but the late Pte. Merton Adams availed himself of them. He was a regular communicant, and only last Sunday, on the occasion of his visit home, knelt at God's altar at Communion.

He was not only a worshipper but a worker, having identified himself actively in the work of the Sunday School. In his home life he was a dutiful son, being a devoted helper and companion to his father. While he had no idea of a military career for its own sake, he felt it was a call imperative, and entered upon his training as a soldier with a readiness and cheerfulness comparable to that of the soldier of God, whose career was being studied. He died for his country, just as much as if he had fallen on the field of battle. While his sudden death was a most sorrowful thing for his friends, it was a happy thing for him. "On Saturday evening as the funeral cortege wended its way around the bend to the Cemetery, and the beauty of the lovely evening struck me," remarked the preacher, "it did seem a sad thing that this young life should be taken out of the world. But the beauties of this life are only slight as compared with the life in Paradise, where our late friend may continue in the service of his God."

Rev. Mr. White concluded his remarks with the words of that beautiful hymn:

"The morning shall awaken,
The shadows shall decay,
And each true hearted servant
Shall shine as doth the day."

C.P.R. Engineer Was Instantly, etc.

the train was returning from Lakefield it was stopped at the scene of the fatality. Witness found on the first small wheel a piece of human flesh another piece was found on a big driving wheel. The engineer had no knowledge of the fatality.

Mr. Chas. Clee.

Mr. Clee, of Jordan Bros., was next called. In addition to the above statement by him, Mr. Clee said the G. T. R. train was not going very rapidly. Its bell was ringing as it approached Argyle street. Witness described the accident as he saw it.

Dr. McCulloch said the deceased had been a patient of his. He had attended him recently at the hospital. Mr. Childs had the typical symptoms of diabetes.

He was removed to the Nicholls Hospital and by Friday was allowed on the grounds. On Sunday morning he said he was a new man and felt 100 per cent. improved, but in the afternoon was not as cheerful. There was no reason for suspecting the patient. The disease was one that would lead to periods of depression.

No further evidence was taken. The train crew had proceeded to Belleville and could not be secured in time.

The jury was out about twenty minutes and returned a verdict that the deceased had met his death by throwing himself in front of the G. T. R. train while in a state of mental depression.

REV. J. R. WEBB PREACHES STRONG RECRUITING SERMON

Yesterday morning Rev. J. R. Webb of Murray Street Baptist Church, preaching from the text, "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?" voiced from the pulpit in the most certain manner the need of the present hour that every man and woman in the British Empire rise to the immediate perilous occasion. After quoting Lloyd-George, who has recently stated that he does not trouble much about present small reverses as much as he does about a future big reverse, and also Sir Robertson Nichol who, though habitually optimistic, has lately expressed the fear that it is not improbable that our Empire may soon receive such a shock as she has never known before.

Mr. Webb indicated three things which we must now face squarely The first is Danger. Only the ignorant or the blind would deny that there actually is danger. We are opposed by a foe both merciless and efficient both revengeful and inventive, who knows where or how she shall strike next. The most foolish policy that we can pursue is one which closes the eyes of our people to the ever present and terrible danger. The next thing to face is Duty—stern daughter of God. No one can tell another what his duty is, but there never was a time in British history when the call to duty was so clear and insistent. The call comes from the depths of danger, and is echoed from every home where freedom is imperilled. The manhood of the nation must be placed on the altar of sacrifice in some form or other, for only through sacrifice can come salvation. And not only must the offwer of our manhood be found in the ranks fighting for King and Country, but all classes must do their share in the nation's task. Luxury must be abandoned, frivolity must be eschewed. In place of careless living there must come thought for the Empire's needs and activity to fulfil them. The last thing to keep before us is Victory. We fight to protect the defenceless, and the God of mercy will fight with us. We fight to maintain the honour of our plighted word and truth at last must prevail. We fight for the righteousness of nations and righteousness alone exalteth a nation. With a knowledge of our real danger and a ready national response from all classes to the call of duty, the hour of victory shall some day come; "but if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for the battle?"

AN APPRECIATION OF THE NEW PLAYGROUNDS

Dear Sir,—On Saturday, 10th July Peterborough's first supervised playground was simply inundated by children of all ages, and some parents as well, who were brought there from all quarters of the city in automobiles, owned and driven by many kind citizens, who, in this way, were able to help the Local Council of Women in their effort to bring the playground to the notice of our citizens generally.

Mr. Burridge, the enthusiastic supervisor, and his able assistant, Miss Johnson, had all they could do to attend to so many eager youngsters" and were aided for a time by several members of the Playgrounds Committee of the Local Council and other kind friends of the movement. The crowds were too great on Saturday to allow all the equipment to be used or all the possible games to be taught but this will all be done by degrees. A piece of equipment which is missing is a very favourite one in other playgrounds, but as the Local Council of Women do not feel justified in going into debt, they have not been able to buy a "slide," which costs in the neighbourhood of $50. One lady who has seen slides being used, was heard to say, "Oh, I wish you had a slide; it is always the favourite pastime," and another enthusiastic onlooker "wondered if the Board of Education couldn't be induced to take down the fence at the north end of the grounds in order to have the shade from the street trees inside rather than outside the grounds."

Citizens are to be congratulated on the very auspicious first day, and it is hoped that this forward movement may be crowned with success. The grounds will be open and supervised every day (except Sundays) until further notice. As there are shelters for the children, they may come there on rainy days.

A Prisoner in Germany

Nothing Had Been Heard of Lance Corp. Cumberland For Over Two Months

After nothing had been heard of him for over two months, Lance-Corporal Keith Cumberland, of Peterborough, who went to the Front with the 57th detachment in the 2nd Battalion, is now officially reported a prisoner of war.

Lce.-Corpl. Cumberland was first unofficially, in a cablegram from a Toronto newspaper man, reported killed at St. Julien, and was a short time afterwards officially reported missing. Another report that he was wounded and at the base in France, was foundationless, and since then there had been word of his fate. Now, however, he is officially reported as a prisoner.

This will be good news to his many friends, and will relieve the great anxiety that has been felt for his safety. His brother, Mr. Eldred Cumberland, is on the staff of the City Engineer.

TURKISH ATTACKS ARE REPULSED

LONDON, July 12.—Further Turkish attacks on the extreme right wing of the Allied forces on the Gallipoli have been repulsed, according to the Daily Mail's correspondent at Athens, with heavy losses to the enemy.

The Turks opened a bombardment from the Asiatic coast on the British positions at Tekke Burun and in the neighbourhood of Sedd-el-Bahr to prevent the Allies from landing reinforcements.

NEW SERBIAN ARMY IS READY FOR AN OFFENSIVE MOVEMENT

ROME, July 1.—A Nish despatch to the Messaggero says that large quantities of war munitions have reached Serbia. The Serbian National Assembly has voted a credit of $50,000,000 for the continuation of the military operations.

Sanitary conditions are reported now to be virtually normal; the typhus epidemic, however, resulted in many deaths.

Large numbers of recruits, on furlough, have been recalled to the colours, and it is the intention of the Serbians to undertake an offensive movement at an early date along the Danube Save sector.

Austria and Hungary are concentrating new troops at Sarajevo and Semlin. The Serbian Crown Prince has rejoined the general staff.

Cynical and Barbarous Disregard of Usuages of Civilized War

LONDON, July 12.—Field Marshall Sir John French, in a review of the operations of the British expeditionary forces in April and May, the story of which has been told in the accounts by the British "eye-witness" and by special correspondents, makes caustic reference to the use by the Germans of asphyxiating gas.

"I much regret," says Field Marshall French, that during the period under report the fighting has been characterized on the enemy's side by cynical and barbarous disregard of the well known usages of civilized war and by flagrant disregard of The Hague Convention.

"All the scientific resources of Germany, apparently, have been brought into play to produce a gas of so virulent and poisonous a nature that any human being brought in contact with it is first of all paralyzed and then meets with a lingering and agonising death.

"The brain power and thought which evidently have been at work before this unworthy method of making war reached the pitch of efficiency which has been demonstrated in its practice, shows that the Germans must have harbored these designs for a long time.

"As a soldier I cannot help expressing the deepest regret and some surprise, that an army which has claimed to be the chief exponent of the chivalry of war, should have stooped to employ such devices against brave and gallant foes."

Building the best system of roads in the world has cost France about $61,000,000.

CHECK TO AUSTRIAN FORCES IN POLAND UPSETS THE KAISER'S PLANS IT THE WEST

LONDON, July 12. — The check which the Russians have imposed on Archduke Joseph Ferdinand's army in Southern Poland and the additional strain which this has placed on the German Gen. von Mackensen's army to the right has postponed, it is believed in military circles here, the threatened German offensive in the west, and there is now a possibility that the allies will be the first to take the offensive. . . . . .

In support of this it is pointed out that the attacks by the German Crown Prince's army in the Woevre, which the German press announced was the commencement of a general movement forward, have ceased, and what fighting is going on along the western front consists of artillery engagements and a few isolated attacks and counter-attacks by infantry which make little or no difference in the positions of the opposing forces.

So far as the Germans are concerned, military observers assert that they are bound to carry out their offensive against the Russians until there is some decisive engagement, such as the capture of the Lublin-Cholm railway, which, it is asserted, would have been in their hands before now if the Austrians advancing toward the former city had not been driven back.

Bringing Back Troops.

Reports from neutral sources are to the effect that to make good their efforts against the Russians the Germans are moving troops which were intended for the western front to the east. To a certain extent this seems confirmed by the statement in the Russian official report that reinforcements have reached Archduke Ferdinand and that General von Mackenzen also commenced an offensive which however broke down under the Russian fire.

While the military critics are still undecided whether the Russians will make their stand on the present lines or fall back to the Bug River, thus abandoning the fortress of Ivangorod and Warsaw, it is agreed, that the counter-attack which they have developed has postponed for a time at least the necessity for any further retirement.

A despatch from Vienna indicates the fierceness of the struggle which is in progress along the Krasnik line. The Russians have brought forward strong reinforcements, probably from the interior, and are making repeated heavy attacks. Archduke Joseph Ferdinand's army has the task of holding and, if possible, repulsing the Russians. Additional great battles, says the despatch, may confidently be predicted between the Vistual and Bug Rivers.

Both Sides Entrenching.

Despatch from Innsbruck, Austrian Tyrol, to the Geneva Tribune, says both the Russians and the Austrians are entrenching in South Poland.

The Austrian forces which were meant for the Italian campaign have been sent back to the Lublin front, according to this report, which adds that the Russians are said to have obtained an important victory at Jaroslau, in Galicia, on the San River, to the north of Peremysl. The correspondent says the Russians now have powerful artillery, while the Cossacks are doing excellent work in splendid charges.

It is asserted in a despatch from Czernowitz, Bukowina, that the Russians along that front and on the Dneister recently requested a four-hour armistice to bury their dead, which was granted by the Austro-Germans.

This despatch says the Russians have suffered severely from the Austrian artillery fire along the Dneister front, and have retired at many points several miles beyond the river.

BUILD A FLEET OF 10,000 AEROPLANES AND WIN THE WAR FROM THE AIR

English Aeronautical Men Launch a Movement For the Creation of a Ministry of Aviation---Deluge German Ammunition Works and Supply Routes With Bombs.

(By Wilbur S. Forrest.)

LONDON, July 13.—With the slogan, "win the war from the air," English aeronautical men to-day launched a movement for the creation of a ministry of aviation and the building of a fleet of 10,000 aeroplanes to deluge German ammunition works and supply routes with bombs.

L. Blin Desbolds, lecturer in aeronautics at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, is the real leader of a campaign to create a gigantic air fleet. He is supported by H. G. Wells, British novelist, C. C. Grey, London aeronautical editor, and a score of experts in aviation. The plan is to organize public sentiment through lectures and newspaper articles behind the idea that Britain's salvation is in the air.

'Batter down Rhine bridges by daily air raids and trench warfare in France is ended," said the statement issued in support of the new movement to-day. "Send 10,000 aeroplanes carrying five bombs each over Krupp munition works and Germans will be paralyzed.

"Destroy nine bridges over the Meuse over which supplies are transported to German arms and the Kaiser will be on his knees."

RUSSIA REPORTED SENDING TROOPS TO DARDANELLES

Special to The Examiner:

MANILA, July 13.—Persons who have arrived here from Saigon, capital of French Cochin China, report that all vessels belonging to the Messageries Maritimes, which have been engaged in far eastern traffic are being transformed into transports to carry Russian troops to the Dardanelles. Whenever a vessel of the Messageries fleet reached Saigon, it is said, the passengers are transferred and the freight unloaded, after which a large force of carpenters work at top speed to make the necessary alterations. The ships then are sent to Vladivostok to take on troops.

Russia probably would benefit more than any other nation from the forcing of the Dardanelles and the fall of Constantinople, but there have been no previous reports of an authoritative nature to the effect that Russian troops would be sent to the Gallipoli peninsula to assist the allies in the operations there.

In order to reach Gallipoli peninsula, the Russians from Vladivostok, an Asiatic port on the Pacific, would have to be taken around south of India, and up through the Suez canal to the Mediterranean, partially the same route as that followed by the soldiers from Australia, from which Vladivostok is due north.

Rheims Cathedral is a Dead Body Says Mr. Prevost in Paris Revue

New York, July 12.—Mr. Marcel Prevost, the member of the French Academy whose works are to-day more widely circulated in America than those of any of his countrymen, has made an inspection of the Cathedral of Rheims. He was accompanied by a corps of experts in various lines of art. The stratling conclusion of their investigationn is that the world renowned cathedral may be considered as dead. This statement has aroused in England and other countries a demand for action in behalf of the cathedral.

"On the right, at a moment when our staring eyes are no longer seeking it, it looks us in the face," writes Mr. Prevost, in the Paris Revue.

"I had read like everybody else, the story of the successive damages suffered by the Cathedral of Rheims. The shock which I felt and which those who were with me felt at the same time, was not because some particular detail of the facade, however, precious it might have been, had been injured or had disappeared. Those atrocious wounds which we were to examine a little later, are not remarked at the first glance. But what one sees as a whole, and with the very first look more clearly than one notices it afterwards, is that the cathedral is dead!

"A dead body may still have a head, legs, arms, a trunk; may even be stood upright, but at the very first glance it is seen that it is a dead body. And so the Cathedral of Rheims, with its towers standing, with its facade, in which all the ground lines are still there, with the walls of its nave still erect, is nevertheless dead.

"It has been scalped of its roofing; its eyes have been put out; its columns have been broken, shattered along their length like splintered bones. The red which tints the stones and which was produced by fire, looks like blood stains.

"The cathedral of Rheims is dead. We must repeat it and repeat it, to denounce the German crime, and to arouse French vengeance."

Mr. Prevost's article attracted immediate attention at home and in the British Isles. A number of artists and men of letters proposed to the British government that an independent investigation be made at Rheims, with the result that a commission, which includes among its members Mr. Arnold Bennett and Mr. Walter Hale, has gone to study the actual condition and prepare a report.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N.S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

ITALIANS FROM CLOUDS DISPERSE THE AUSTRIANS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

VERONA, via Paris, July 12.—The taking by storm of the Dolomite Peak of Mont Tofano last Friday by the Alpine troops is considered in army circles to illustrate the preference of using these troops for the seemingly impossible task of climbing precipices to the longer process of attacking through narrow valleys and defiles every rod of which is defended with fortifications.

In this latter method of attack in some cases the routes are so narrow that the men could march only in single file, and a battalion advancing in this order would spread over a distance of two miles and a half in length, and it would require an hour to bring the men into a fighting line when open spaces were reached.

On Mont Tofano the Austrians were encamped on the opposite slope of the mountain to that which the Alpinists ascended. They are said to have been so surprised at the onslaught from the clouds above that they offered little resistance and fled, leaving in the hands of the Alpinists food supplies, machine guns, rifles and ammunition, and in addition a number of prisoners.

The capture of Mont Tofano makes the Italians masters of the road along the Travenanzes Valley, which is the short cut across the Dolomite Peak from the Falzarego Pass to Cortina.

KING GEORGE HAS BEEN ON TRIP TO SEE THE FLEET

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 13.—The belief that the British navy will win fresh laurels "whenever the day of battle comes" is expressed by King George in a message to Admiral Jellicoe after a journey to the grand fleet.

"I have had the pleasure of seeing the greater portion of the officers and men of the fleet," said the King; "I realize the patient and determined spirit with which you have faced long months of waiting and hoping.

"I know how strong is the comradeship that links all ranks together. Such a happy state of things convinces me that whenever the day of battle comes my navy will add fresh triumphs to its old and glorious traditions."

Austrian Stragglers Purposely Kill Great Italian Bicycle Champion

ROME, July 13.—Austrian stragglers purposely killed the great Italian bicycle champion, Carlata, in the hope of provoking Italian troops to outrages against civilians in Austrian territory, General Cadorna reported to the War Office to-day. Carlata left his company to drink at a well at a village the Italian troops had just taken from the enemy. He was found stabbed in the neck, dead. New orders have been issued to Italian troops not to harm civilian population in any way, no matter how great the aggravation.

Germans Spread Dastardly Rumour To Explain Failures Against Italy

MILAN, July 12.—Colonel Barone, the most authorjtative of the Italian military writers, makes a guarded allusion to the Secolo to a rumour manifestly current in Italy and certainly set in circulation by German agents.

'Rumours are current here and abroad," he says, "that we have made a compact with Germany to stop our offensive operations as soon as we have attained the frontier necessary for the completion of our national unity, and that on this understanding, and this alone, Germany is letting us go ahead victoriously, and is not opposing us or taking action against us. It is easy to divine the object of this campaign of rumours and the names of its organizers. But the rumours, in addition to being an insult by casting doubt on our loyalty to our allies, ars such a gross politico-military absurdity that they do not deserve the honour of discussion.'

Colonel Barone then proceeds to pass in review the elements of the military situation. To insure complete liberty of action for the troops operating beyond the Isonzo, on the east, the possibility of a flank movement of the enemy in the north—Friuli and Trentino—had to be eliminated. This has been done by the occupation of commanding points and the massing of troops at strategic centres. Moreover, the troops have been "blooded" and have well withstood the test; the chiefs have been tried and proved their efficiency. The artillery has surpassed the expectations of those who knew its excellence and has dumfounded those who did not.

"Before engaging the decisive battle east of the Isonzo another series of operations is necessary and is in course of execution. As any one may see from a map showing the Isonzo and the region east of it, the Italian offensive necessitates possession of all the lines of operation." He enumerates the various points of strategic importance – Ponebba, Tarvis, Malboghetto, then the Treglou, network of passes commanding the valley of the Save. Much progress has been made, but it is necessary to proceed with as much caution as energy in order to avoid the "error of bullhead attacks with much bloodshed and no corresponding results, of which the Germans have furnished so many examples in this war. • • • The hint I have given will suffice to make clear the fact that special attenion should be paid to the operations around Pontebba and Malborghetto in particular, and in the Carnia province in general, and also to explain why the Austrians are now making vigorous efforts—so far in vain—to recover positions captured by our mountain troops and held by our forces with such tenacity and bravery."

Colonel Barone also makes a significant remark regarding the outcome of the war: "A vigorous offensive is essential if we would, as is our firm intention, co-operate efficaciously in the complex and decisive events of our allies, of which the success is now inevitable."

It Ruins Hair to Wash It With Soap

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

CHAPTER THIRTY.

REVENGE.

As we rode along the old hermit took due notice of Hellion, this bein' the first time ever he'd seen him. "That'll be a turrible fightin' dog," sez he, "'cause he's plumb built for it. I reckon my two dogs could kill him, but I reckon one of 'em could never lick anything else. I never saw but one other dog like him. Where'd you get him?"

I told about Red and Shorty havin' won him and then how I'd got him away from them.

"He's a lonely old man, Happy," sez Josiah, after a bit, "and if I was you, I'd take the dog back. A cow is just so much money wrapped up in a hide; but a dog is somethin' nothin' else can replace."

"I'm not worryin' much about a feller who'll bet his dog in a poker game," sez I.

Red had seen this dog when he had gone after Isaac's mule, for Corrigan had owned both of 'em. I hadn't ever thought much about Corrigan until somethin' in the old hermit's voice caught my attention. It was plain that he knew Corrigan middlin' well and this alone was enough to stir up my curiosity.

When we reached his cabin he took me right into the room where Kate's father sat propped up in bed. Kastle looked gray and thin again' the pillers, but his eyes looked down haughty at me the way they allus did, and truth to tell, it wasn't a job I coveted much.

"Kate's had an accident," sez old Josiah, and Kastle's eyes drew up as though he felt already what his loneliness would be if she was took from him; but Josiah hastened on to say, "And while it's goin' to keep her laid up for a few days it's nothin' serious."

Dread stepped out of Kastle's eyes and suspicion stepped in. "Where is she?" sez he.

"She's over at the Lion Head," sez the old hermit, "and there is a good woman there who will take care of her."

"Where was she hurt?"

"It seemed to be in her head," sez I.

"I mean, where was she when she got hurt?"

"About three miles and a half from here," sez I.

"And how far from the Lion Head, as you call it?"

"About four miles and a half," sez I.

He spoke cross to me and kept his eyes drillin' into me as though to read what was wrote on the inside of my heart. I turned to and told him the whole incident, and said we had took her to the Lion Head on account of there bein' a woman there to tend to her.

That old man had a mighty keen eye for even a small hole in the truth, and he saw 'at this woman wasn't the full reason for our takin' Kate to the Lion Head. "Did you send for a doctor?" sez he, and his eyes shot right into me.

"No," sez I, "Jim Jimison, the owner of the Lion Head, was there, and I knew that he would do whatever was needed."

"Was that goat-expert there?" sez Kastle.

I hesitated a second, because he had took me by surprise. "'Course he wasn't," sez I.

"He's a friend o' yours, isn't he?"

"I don't know," sez I, speakin' soft and light, for the old man was beginnin' to scratch on me; "but I'm a friend of his."

"That's what I thought," sez Kastle, "and he's at the bottom of it all. He prowled around here and kept out of my sight for a year, and now he's lured here way. I don't believe a word o' your story, not a word. Wild bulls bein' frightened by an umberella! And then takin' a hurt girl to strangers when it was farther than to her own father—why, it's too silly for words!"

Well, it did look purty raw after he'd called attention to it. The old hermit's whims led him to keep all his business private, and I had helped out all I could because it wouldn't do to boost Tom Smith into prominence: but now that this old man's restless mind had bumped square into the complication, it made a tangle I didn't feel able to lie out of with any credit, and so I stood lookin' insulted but not havin' a word to say, which sure did look suspicious.

Kastle's eyes kept gettin' brighter and hotter and a little cloud o' red came to his grey cheeks and burned there in the centre of 'em. "You're in on this, too," sez he, pointin' a claw-like finger at old Josiah, "you're in on this, too. Now, listen to me, both of you; she's gone from me, gone of her own free will, left me here bed-ridden and helpless, and I never want to hear her name spoke, I never—"

"Hush, man, hush," sez the old hermit, in a low, solemn voice.

"Don't you try to hush me," sez Kastle; "I've been ailin' and I've just let things go, but I see it all now. That goat-man, that Tom Smith is a low grade criminal."

"Supposin' he is," sez Josiah, "he hasn't had a thing to do with this. I'm not carin' what you think of him—though I believe the boy is all right—but if you were cool you wouldn't accuse your daughter until you had somethin' to accuse her of."

"I've got enough to accuse her of," shrieked Kastle. "She's hid from me all about this man, and that's proof enough that he's no good; and she's owned up that she thinks a sight of him, and that proves that she's no good. From this very minute, she is no daughter—"

Old Josiah held his hand out towards Kastle and shook his head at him. "Don't say it, man," sez he in a pleadin' voice. "You've sent one o' your children frof ya, and afterwards found you were wrong. Now, don't send the other. I'm not fakin' any threat to ya, nor nothin' like it; but I warn ya that even though you send her from your side, you'll never drive her from this home. This home is hers, and hers alone, just as long as she'll do me the honour to live in it."

Kastle loked fierce at old Josiah. "Do you mean," sez he, "that you would step in between a father and his own child?"

"Not if I could help it," sez the old hermit softly, "but if the time ever comes, I stand ready to step in between this child and any wrong in the world that threatens her; and it's always wrong to turn a girl out into the world—any girl, no matter what she's done."

Kastle leaned back heavy on his pillers and lay there gaspin'; but his face got harder intead of ofter. "I see what you mean," sez he after a git, in a low, bitter tone, "this is your house, and I've been forgettin' it. Well, I'll leave it soon, I'll get up and dress the minute I can get my breath back, and I'll crawl off your land, and die like a dog at the roadside, if need be; but I'll never forgive a daughter of mine—"

Old Josiah Cornell reared himself up to his full height, which was four inches over six feet, he held his hands out over the man on the bed, and looked down on him with eyes that shot fire, but without fierceness. His beard rippled down over the gaunt bulge of his chest, and he sure did look like a full-grown man.

Friar Tuck's got a lot o' yarns he spins about the old prophets, and the way they cut around limin' up kings and cussin' out the Children of Israel or the way they carried on, and whenever he draws an unusual keen picture of one o' these prophets, I allus see the old hermit standin' there with his arms outspread and fillin' that whole bedroom with his own spirit.

"Keep silent," sez he in his deepest tones, "keep silent, keep silent until your blood gets cool. You are not speaking out of your heart, but out of the mists of delirium. oT plan your future while in a rage is to sick out a fool and a madman to be your leader. I swear to ya this girl is true, I pledge my right hand on it, and if she turns out false, I'll cut off that hand, myself, before your very eyes. I swear this. Now, rest and wait in peace until she is well enough to come again."

They held their positions for a consid'able space o' time after Josiah stopped speakin'; and the wildness left Kastle's eyes and they took on the lok of a man trapped in his own weakness, and realizin' the utter useleasness of ever struglin.' Tears came into his eyes and his lips quivered, while his fingers kept workin' at the gaudy blanket which covered him, and which made the grey of his face all the ghastlier.

"That's right," sez Josiah, grippin' with his own big hand the thin white one on the blanket. "That's riht, and now try to sleep."

"Some one will go to Kate's mother to me, "I wish you'd tell my daughter to get well as quick as she can, and tell her that I want her never to speak to that Tom Smith again."

How to Gain Weight A Pound a Day

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good result worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel, or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put. Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Leading druggists in Peterboro and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

READY TO FIGHT
Bells Call Swiss Soldiers to Front

By VICTOR KRUSI.

WHEN last August the church bells throughout the Swiss Republic called the Helvetian soldiers to arms the prompt and enthusiastic response was sufficient proof that the Swiss had not forgotten the watchword, "All for each and each for all," written by their forefathers on the cornerstone of liberty in the year 1291.

But not only did the Swiss mountaineers descend from the remotest valleys to gather around the flag; the call also found its echo in every part of the world, reminding the Swiss subjects that their country was in danger of being drawn into the gigantic struggle.

The news of the blazing torch of war being carried into Belgium was received in Switzerland with horror, and certain prominent citizens, among others the famous poet Spitteler, rose in protest against the efforts of the invaders to "fish for documents in the pockets of the struggling victim."

The preparations for the defence of our frontiers against a similar invasion progressed with great activity under the efficient direction of General Ulrich Wille, commander in chief of the Swiss army, and Colonel v. Sprecher, chief of staff.

Italy's entrance into the war on May 23 has made it necessary for Switzerland to reinforce the troops stationed along the southern border, particularly at the point where the Italian, Austrian and Swiss frontiers meet, in close proximity to the Stelvio Pass, where, according to reports, some of the heavy fighting took place.

The equipment and armament of the Swiss Alpine troops are considered up to date in every respect, a very effective means of defence being the easily transportable machine guns, which are usually packed on sleighs if operated on snow covered mountain slopes.

It is of utmost importance for the different detachments stationed along the frontier to keep in close touch with each other. The performance of this task in deep snow would be rendered almost impossible for the patrols without the assistance of the ski, or snowshoe.

As much as the Swiss soldier would have to be feared by any invader of Swiss territory, the relations between him and his neighbors are very cordial as long as friendly relations exist, and it is a common occurrence that Swiss soldiers are "fraternizing" with Italian, French and German frontier guards.

Let us hope that the Swiss Republic may be spared the horrors of this terrible conflagration and that, together with the rest of the neutral countries, she will lead the pace toward peace, prosperity and good will among nations!

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This story of the wonderful Swiss army is published exactly as written and the pictures printed exactly as taken by Victor Krusi, a Swiss soldier. Mr. Krusi was travelling in America when Europe went to war and has left for his frontier post only within the last few weeks.

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells.

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

For afternoon wear all the dresses of the present summer are soft and full, and models which show gathered effects are therefore best liked for this purpose.

Such a model as the one shown in our illustration is of immediate interest, and it is one which will show to advantage in organdie, cotton voile and other similar fabrics.

The waist is made with surplice closing in front and with plain back, but it is trimmed around the neck by a bertha, which takes the form of a rounding collar in the back and of a shaped plastron in front. This may be used or omitted. The sleeves may be long or short, and they are plain and full.

The skirt of this dress is a one piece gathered model, and it is straight at both upper and lower edges. The lower portion of the pattern is perforated in a wide scalloped outline for the attaching of small frills or ruchings. These may be omitted if desired, or the skirt may be cut off at this point and used as a tunic to overhang a second fabric below it.

Although organdie and voile are one's first thought in connection with this dainty model, there are other sheer and also semi-transparent materials which it is well to inspect. Many of these have no special name, but the shops are full of them, especially this year when the manufacture of cottons in this country must take the place of the importation of other tissues from abroad.

The dress pattern, No. 7,261, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires, with ruffles, 6⅛ yards of 45 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

PREDICTS THE TIDES.

One of Uncle Sam's Machines That Does Wonderful Work.

A machine known as the United States tide predicting machine No. 2 and which is in daily operation in the United States geodetic survey at Washington, makes mathematical calculations which would otherwise require 100 persons to do.

Its work is nothing less than the predicting of the times and heights of high and low tides a year in advance. Its mechanism is of brass and steel, its house a huge mahogany and glass case and its tender one observer, who turns a crank and copies off on paper the reading of several dials and later removes from the machine a roll of paper on which is plotted the tidal curve for the particular spot along the coast the tides of which have been predicted.

Every year the United States issues a book of tide tables, primarily for the use of its navy and, secondly, for the use of all who go down to the sea in ships. This book of tide tables gives the time to the minute and the height of the nearest tenth of a foot of every high and low tide during the year for seventy of the world seaports, and by means of an auxiliary table the same information for 3,000 other places.—Scientific American.

Bayonets in Battle.

The bayonet is used in warfare as much as ever. Its chief value is its moral effect upon a line of troops. The reasons why a comparatively small number are actually killed by the bayonet are that those charged flee before the attack or those attacking are shot down or fall back before the concentrated fire. The hand to hand conflict with bayonets is comparatively rare because one or the other side has given way before grips are reached. The soldiers in the United States army are trained in this type of fighting.—New York Tribune.

The "University" of Ham.

The town of Ham has perhaps the most notable chateau in France. As ancient as Rheims cathedral, its enormous [illegible] Joan of Arc, Conde, the Huguenot leader, and Prince Louis Napoleon after his attempt at Boulogne in 1840 to win over France. Here for six years he was a compulsory student, as he himself put it, in the "University" of Ham until his escape in 1846 disguised as a workman.—London Chronicle.

The Fishing Banks.

Newfoundland would be nothing without that great submarine plateau known as the "banks," on which all the fishing is done. At a small station within the edges of the great bank that the cod loves so well the sea is quite smooth. It is usual for vessels fishing on the bank to inquire from those that have arrived from the open sea as to what sort of weather it is "abroad."

Too Commercial.

Bobbie—I saw you kissing sister again last night. Castleton—Well, I'm not going to pay you a quarter this time. Ten cents is enough. Bobby—That's the tendency in these days, to cut out the middleman and let the goods go straight from the producer to the consumer without charge.—Life.

Liquid Hydrogen.

The boiling point of liquid hydrogen is 4.3 degrees C. absolute, or 268.7 degrees below common zero C. A temperature of 273 degrees below zero C. is absolute, and physicians are within 4.3 degrees of this intensely interesting scientific point when handling liquid hydrogen.

Drinking Water Rendered Immune From Typhoid by Montserrat

Most epidemics of typhoid are traceable to impure water.

City people going to the country for the summer months or even for week ends, very often bring back typhoid germs owing to vegetable decomposition in lake, river and well water.

The bacteriologists at McGill University have proved that a small quantity of Montserrat Lime Juice will destroy typhoid germs in water, in twenty minutes.

Typhoid can be prevented at home or at the country cottage by using Montserrat Lime Juice. It makes the water absolutely immune, besides providing a wholesome, cooling and thirst assuaging beverage.

Keep a pitcher of this healthy beverage in the ice box.

MONTSERRAT LIME JUICE is for sale at all druggists and grocers.

SPELL OF THE PRAIRIES.

Where the Ocean of Land Seems Vaster Even Than the Sea.

I had believed that I realized the vastness of the United States without having actually traveled across the country, yet I had not realized it at all, and I do not think that any one can possibly realize it without having felt it in the course of a long journey. I had imagined that I understood the prairies without having laid eyes upon them, but when I raised my window shade that morning and found the prairies stretching out before me I was as surprised, as stunned, as though I had never heard of them before, and the idea came to me like an original thought: How perfectly enormous they are! And how like the sea! I had discovered for myself the truth of another platitude.

For a long time I lay comfortably in my berth, gazing out at the appalling spread of land and sky. Even at sea the great bowl of the sky had never looked so vast to me. The land was nothing to it. In the foreground there was nothing. Nothing met the eye in all that treeless waste of brown and gray which lay between the railroad line and the horizon, on which was discernible the faint outlines of several ships—ships which were in reality a house, a windmill and a barn.

Presently our craft—for I had the feeling that I was on a ship at anchor—got under way.

On we sailed, over the ocean of land for mile upon mile, each mile like the one before it and the one that followed, save only when we passed a little fleet of houses, like fishing boats at sea, or crossed an inconsequential wagon road, resembling the faintly discernible wake of some ship long since out of sight.

Presently I arose, and, joining my companion, we went to the dining car for breakfast. He, too, had fallen under the spell of the prairies. We sat over our meal and stared out of the window like a pair of images. After breakfast it was the same. We returned to our car and kept on gazing out at the eternal spaces.

Now and then in the distance we would see cattle, like dots upon the plain, and once in a long time a horseman ambling along beneath the sky. The little towns were far apart, but each little settlement had its wooden church, and each church its steeple—a steeple crude and pathetic in its expression of effort on the part of a poor little hamlet to embellish more than any other house the house of God.—Julian Street in Collier's.

Thief Proof.

Some years ago a well known London solicitor, recently deceased, successfully defended a man charged with burglary, and a few days later there came by post a valuable gold hunter watch, with an inscription to the effect that it was a gift from a certain London society, presumably of doubtful practices. Years afterward the solicitor had the watch stolen from his waistcoat pocket, but it came back to him by post with a letter of apology, stating that "we never rob one of our pals."—London Answers.

The Real Turk.

An insight into the character of the modern Turk is afforded by Harry Charles Lukach in his book, "The City of the Dancing Dervishes and Other Studies From the Near East." Speaking of the Turk as the author knows him, he says:

"For parental authority he entertains a deep regard. A grown up Turk who is lax enough to drink wine will usually hesitate to do so in the presence of his father. Similar diffidence is even shown sometimes with regard to smoking. Near relationship does not engender what the Turks regard as unseemly familiarity. Turks address their elder brothers by the titles of Agha or Agha beyi, their sisters as Abla, scarcely ever by name unless the difference in age is very slight. They obey seriously the injunctions of their faith as to charity, and the solidarity of Islam does not permit them to suffer coreligionists to starve. Furthermore, they do not blaspheme."

The Hollow in a Boiled Egg.

There is an air space in every egg, but we notice it particularly in a boiled one because the contents have been made solid by cooking and made the hollow space more apparent. This space is a provision of nature so that the chick which grows within the shell may have air to breathe from the time it comes to life until it becomes strong enough to break through the shell to the outside world.

To generate life in the egg it is necessary that it be subjected to a certain degree of heat for a period of twenty-one days. When this is not done the egg remains indefinitely in its raw state.

When it is boiled the pocket of air within the shell, which would have been used up by the chick if the egg had been set to batch, begins to fight for its space and pushes the boiled contents of the egg back, leaving the hollow space.—Rocky Mountain News.

How Long Your Nails Grow.

The growth of an average finger nail is about one thirty-second of an inch a week, or nearly one and one-half inches in a year, so those aristocratic Chinese who proudly exhibit nails six to eight inches in length must have refrained from cutting them at least four to six years. Finger nails grow faster in the summer than in winter. The nail on the middle finger grows faster than any of the others, and that of the thumb is slowest in growth. The nails of the right hand grow faster than those of the left. A nail is supposed to reach its full growth in about four and a half months, and at this rate a man seventy years old would have renewed his nails 263 times. On each finger he would have grown nine feet of nail, or on all his fingers and thumbs no less than ninety feet of nail.—St. Louis Republic.

SUMMER TOKENS.

Souvenirs From Vacationists to Stay at Home Friends.

INEXPENSIVE GIFTS BEST.

Seaside Novelties That Are Always Popular—Dainty and Attractive Remembrances That Convey a Delicate Compliment to the Recipient.

Every summer journey, even if it be only to the next state, is productive of souvenirs for the friends at home. Something characteristic of the place you are visiting is usually a good choice.

If you pass the summer at a seaside place, for instance, make part of your diversion the gathering of shells. Arrange the rarest of them for some small boy who is collecting shells or who keeps curios of all sorts, as small boys have a habit of doing. Put the rest in little chints bags or baskets for the various small children of your acquaintance.

Perhaps you are especially interested in some children's hospital or home. If so make bags of shells for the children in this institution.

For the rather proud old lady who lives in a boarding house, with a canary as her beloved companion, gather clean sand when the tide is low and pack it neatly into boxes—enough to last throughout the winter as a covering for the bird's cage floor.

Perhaps some one you know is especially interested in sailboats. For her

For the botanist collect specimens of the flora of the locality. Press all the flowers and leaves you can find and label them carefully. They will prove an interesting addition to a botanical collection.

For the housewife the little tray illustrated here would make a gift much liked. The flowers and butterflies are a charming suggestion of summer.

An embroidery of this style might be purchased and then arranged in the tray frame.

Pressed wild flowers or mounted seaweeds combined with tiny shells may be attractively arranged for the decoration of these frame trays.

German Milk Rice.

The Germans eat a good deal of milk rice (milchreis), which is cooked partly in water and finished in milk—if wanted richer, with a little cream—then served with butter and flavorings, the latter of which may be cooked in. Cinnamon with sugar is the commonest thing to eat with it.

Nearly all German recipes for this dish advise bringing the rice to a boil in cold water with a pinch of soda, since they believe the milk will otherwise be curdled. They pour off the first water as soon as it boils, then cook the rice in an open kettle for a little, in order to get rid of the proper but not agreeable odor which much rice gets in cooking.

Grapes With Grapefruit.

A dainty fruit salad calls for Malaga grapes. Blanch them by throwing them into hot water for a second or so. Then cut them in two and take out the seeds. Peel grapefruit and separate it into sections, removing all the tough ligaments and the seeds. Mix the grapes and the grapefruit, which should both be chilled through. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Everything Favorable.

"Is your friend Miss Sweetthing going to marry the young man who has been paying her such devoted attention?"

"Well, all the circumstances point to that conclusion. He has some money, little intelligence, less character and is opposed bitterly by her father and mother."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Dangerous Proficiency.

"What was the matter with your last cook?"

"She was too good."

"Too good?"

"Yes. During the month she was with us my wife gained twenty pounds."

"Gracious! What did you do with her?"

"My wife?"

"No, the cook."

"My wife very cordially recommended her to a woman she hates."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GERMAN FORCES DECIMATED IN ATTACKS ON LABYRINTH

Fierce Fire of Heavy Explosive Shells Failed to Dislodge the French After Which Gas Bombs Were Used---When the German Infantry Attacked However They Were Utterly Routed.

OTHER ATTACKS ALL FAILED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 13.—(French Official Communique).—By a frightful fire of heavy explosive shells, the Germans attempted to drive the French out of their positions in the "labyrinth," south-east of Neuville, last night.

An artillery attack failed to wreck the strong concrete and metal works. The Germans then resorted to asphyxiating bombs, and under a cross fire of explosive shells and gas bombs, the infantry troops attempted to rush the French out of the entrenchments. The attacking forces were decimated in hand to hand fighting in the underground passages and utterly routed.

The Germans have renewed their onslaughts against the French positions in the Forest of Apremont. Following heavy cannonading, the German infantry attacked with grenades, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

PARIS, July 13.—Thirty-five French aeroplanes participated in the great raid on an important strategic station at Vignaulles Les Hattonchatel, the War Office announced, starting several fires that are believed to have destroyed tons of German munitions and supplies.

LONDON, Eng., July 13.—Minister of Munitions David Lloyd-George, who absented himself from his office while reports of an impending clash with Lord Kitchener and Premier Asquith were in circulation, resumed his duties to-day. It was stated that he had returned "from a much needed rest in Wales."

NEW YORK CITY, July 13.—The long absence of Marshal Von Hindenburg's name from the news, while events of such vast importance have been occurring in the eastern battle area, suggests there may be some truth in the reports from Russian sources that the great East Prussian strategist has fallen into disfavour.

LOWESTOFT, Eng., July 13.—The crews of the trawlers Merlin, 172 tons, and Emerald, 170 tons, which were shelled and sunk by submarines yesterday, landed here to-day.

LONDON, Eng., July 13.—Speaking at the luncheon given in his honour in the House of Commons to-day, Premier Borden, alluding to what had been said as to Canada's part in the war, said there was no doubt in his mind as to what that part would be.

"I took the responsibility," he said, "four days before the actual declaration of war, of sending to the Imperial Government a message stating that if war should unhappily intervene, they might be assured that Canada would regard the quarrel as her own, and do her part in maintaining the integrity of the Empire."

AMSTERDAM, July 13.—The German Government is encouraging discussion in the German press regarding the possibilities of separate peace with Russia, according to Berlin advices to-day.

"Only a few political questions separate us," said the circular issued by the Government.

The press article also declared that the submarine operations had taught Britain that her position as world power was no longer unassailable.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Though it is true that the United ing his own counsel to-day concerning the nature of the reply he was framing to the latest note from Berlin.

Indications were that when the chief executive returns from Connish two messages will be ready, the President's and the Secretary's, concerning the details of which no one will have a particle of information except their respective authors.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Though it ise true that the United States Secret Service suspects a widespread anti-Allies terrorist plot in this country, it has not yet made sufficient progress with its investigation to have definite proof. That this conspiracy included an attempt to kill or kidnap British Ambassador Springrice on Long Island on Monday night, it could not be verified.

LONDON, Eng., July 13.—The Canadian Record Officer's story of the fighting around Festubert towards the end of May appears in the English press to-day. The Daily Mail remarks: "It may truly be said that this war is setting up new standards of courage and valor so close is the competition of bravery between the Dominions and the Motherland, and between the British forces and their gallant allies. There has been no fault to find," adds the Mail, "with soldiers at the front. If courage could have decided the war, the British armies would long since have been over the Rhine. It is the politicians, unfortunately, who have failed, not the soldiers.

"The Canadian eye-witness emphasizes the fact that bombs and machine guns carry the brunt of the day's work more and more as time goes on. Trench warfare began nine months ago, so there should have been time to provide these requisites and high explosive shells in abundance."

You may believe you are buying tea cheaply and economically because it is low in price. Have you considered that if you paid ten cents a pound more and bought Salada it would only cost you an additional twentieth part of a cent per cup, and you would always be sure of pure, clean tea of delicious flavour instead of the annoying dust and dirt so often found in ordinary tea?

"KOENIGSBURG" IS DESTROYED BY BRITISH MONITORS

German Protected Cruiser Which Took Refuge in River in German East Africa is Now a Total Wreck---Monitors Mersey and Severn Sent Out From England to Complete Her Destruction.

SPECIAL CABLE:

London, July 12.—The Admiralty announces that the German cruiser Koenigsberg, which in the Fall of last year took refuge from the British fleet in the Rufiji River, in German East Africa, has been totally wrecked ed by British river monitors. The Koenigsberg was a vessel of 3,348 tons and had a speed of about 23 knots. She was a protected cruiser.

The announcement of the Admiralty follows:

"Since the end of last October the Koenigsberg has been sheltering some distance up the Rufiji river in a position which rendered attack against her most difficult,only shallow draught ships being able to get sufficiently close to engage the cruiser effectively.

"Two months ago the admiralty decided to send two river monitors namely, the Severn, Captain Eric Fullerton, and the Mersey, Commander Robert A. Wilson, to assist the Commander in chief of the Cape station, Vice-Admiral H. King Hall, in these operations.

"The position of the Koenigsberg was accurately located by aircraft and as soon as the monitors were ready the operations were begun. On the morning of July 4th the monitors entered the river and opened a fire, to which the Koenigsberg replied immediately, firing salvos with five guns, with accuracy and rapidity. The Mersey was hit twice and four men were killed and four wounded by one shell.

"As the Koenigsberg was surrounded by a jungle the aeroplanes experienced great difficulty in locating the fall of our shot. She was hit five times early in the action but after the monitors had fired for six hours the aeroplanes reported that the Koenigsberg's masts were still standing.

PUT OUT OF ACTION

"A salvo then burst on her, and she caught fire heavily between her masts. She continued to fire intermittently with one gun for a time, but for the last part of the engagement she did not fire at all, either on account of lack of ammunition or the disablement of her guns. Although not totally destroyed as a result of this engagement she probably was incapacitated.

"The Commander in chief reports that the task of the monitors was an extremely difficult one on account of the jungle and the trouble of accurately spotting shots, but that they were assisted by H. M. S. Weymouth, Captain D. Crampton, on which ship the Commander in chief flew his flag, and which followed them across the bar of the river and engaged the small guns on the banks, while H. M. S. Pioneer, Acting Commander T. W. Bildlecombe, Royal Australian Navy, engaged the guns at the mouth of the river.

"To complete the destruction of the Koenigsberg the Commander in chief ordered a further attack on July 11, and a telegram now has been received stating that the ship is a total wreck. In this last engagement our casualties were only two men wounded on the Mersey."

The monitors Mersey an Severn, with their sister ship the Humber, were building for Brazil and were taken over by the British Admiralty at the beginning of the war. These ships each carry two 6-inch guns and two 4.7 inch howitzers. They played a prominent part in the operations in Flanders last autumn where they effectively supported the allied land forces by lying off the coast and bombarding the German flank. The shallow draft of the vessels enables them to run close inshore and up rivers.

The Weymouth is a light cruiser of 5,250 tons, with a speed of 24 1-2 knots and carrying eight 6-inch guns; built in 1913. The Pioneer of the Australian navy, was built in 1900. She is a light cruiser of 2,200 tons, carrying eight 4-inch guns, and with a speed of 20 1-2 knots. The Koenigsberg carried ten 4-inch guns.

THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH CELEBRATED AT COBOURG

Peterboro' Orangemen Visit Lakeshore Town and Take Part in the Demonstration Attendant Upon the Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne.

BETHANY L.O.L. WON PRIZE

Never before in the history of Canada did an Orange parade take place under such conditions as existed yesterday, when millions of men are fighting for the very principles for which the Orangemen stand, namely, liberty and equal rights. A look of care might have been seen on the face of many a veteran Orangeman, remembering those thousands of the brethren who have answered the call of their country, and the ranks may have been thinned due to the war and adverse conditions, but never in the 227 years since William of Orange and his gallant followers crossed the historic Boyne, was there a more enthusiastic celebration than that held at Cobourg.

Over two thousand Orangemen visited the Lakeshore town and the streets were lined with people during the day. Being what is called the "off year" amongst the Orange Orders, two other celebrations were held, to which many who would otherwise have been at Cobourg, went. These were at Oshawa and Belleville. Special trains from the city took hundreds of people to both places, but the lodges from the County of Peterborough divided between Cobourg and Belleville. However, the Oshawa celebration took a great number of lodges from nearby districts, including Port Hope.

The streets were literally crowded with people, but ample accommodation was provided for Cobourg citizens and visitors, and they were all well looked after. They poured into the town via train, steamer, automobile and carriage. By special and regular trains on the Grand Trunk and Great Northern railways, by steamer, by automobile and by carriage, the people commenced to arrive at the scene of the celebration at an early hour. Upon the arrival of each lodge at the station, the brethren were welcomed by the committee members and escorted to the main street along which they marched to a point at the western part of the town, where the banners, etc., were stacked while the visitors dispersed to convenient places for lunch.

Of course the grand event of the day was the parade. The different lodges lined up at Victoria Park at 1.30 p.m. sharp. The weather man was on his good behaviour and the proverbial twelfth of July rain did not materialize, although at a couple of stages the clouds looked threatening. To the discretion of the committee was left the laying of the dust on the line of march. Union Jacks, banners and badges were to be seen everywhere. The presence of a large number of huge Union Jacks and hundreds of Canadian flags and banners gave the affair the necessary patriotic fervor. Flags and colours played an important part in the decoration of the line of march, with everywhere along the route, autos gaily decked with flags and the Orange ribbon.

Long before the parade hove in sight it was evident that the procession was on the minds of all. People lined the walks and stood on the side of the road, while every window and point of vantage was filled with those who wanted to see the great annual show, which has neither become of less importance with age or been faded by custom. And it was a great show There were the grey beards, some with halting footsteps, but stepping out one more year to show their loyalty to principle; and there were the middle-aged men, youths and boys, many of whom were marching in an Orange parade for the first time, with their ribbons and badges. With some of the banners were men in soldier's uniform, who will before long be marching on a sterner path.

The line of march, which took in the principle residential and business streets of pretty Cobourg, commenced at Victoria Park, to Henry street, north to King, west to Division, north to University avenue, east to the Columbia hotel and to the park again, where the brethren listened to stirring speeches or enjoyed the sports.

To Bethany L.O.L. 1022, Manvers township, East Durham district, went the honours of the day. This fine body of men, headed by the Bethany Brass Band, numbering seventeen on

THE NEW WAR LOAN PROVED TO BE POPULAR

A Total of 570 Million Pounds Sterling Has Been Subscribed the Secretary of the Exchequer Announces To-day.

THANKS FOR BOTHA

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 13.—Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna, announced in the Commons this afternoon that subscriptions to the new "popular war loan" issued by the Government, have reached a total of 570 millions pounds sterling.

This sum represents the total of subscriptions of 100 pounds or over, which closed last week. The taking of subscriptions in smaller amounts will continue indefinitely.

Besides the larger subscriptions received through the Bank of England, 547,000 persons applied for shares in the loan through the "stamp loan issue" handled by the post office, McKenna announced.

The response from this source, he said, surprised even the most optimistic officials.

The House of Commons this afternoon, on motion of Premier Asquith, enthusiastically extended a vote of thanks to General Botha, commander of South African forces, who conquered German Southwest Africa.

Evangelist Sharpe Here

Delegation of Laymen Met Him Last Night

Evangelist G. M. Sharpe, of Toronto, arrived in the city yesterday and met a delegation of laymen from the various city churches in the board room of the Y.M.C.A. last night, when plans were discussed for the coming Laymen's Evangelistic campaign.

The laymen were much delighted with Mr. Sharpe's straightforward explanation of doctrine and purposes, and it was decided to hold a larger meeting in the Y. M. C. A. parlours next Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, when all official members and male Sunday School teachers, as well as all other Christian laymen who are interested in soul winning are cordially invited to be present. The evangelist and his band of workers, including Mrs. Sharpe, Mr. and Mrs. Rudd, and the two Stringer sisters, will be present. Come and meet them and satisfy yourself as to the capabilities of these workers, and the need of a spiritual awakening in Peterborough.

Ninety Thousand Workers Enroll

LONDON, July 13.—After upwards of a fortnight's work the six hundred bureaus which were opened when the Minister of Munitions, David Lloyd George, gave labour the opportunity voluntarily to enroll as munitions operatives, closed to-day with a total registration of ninety thousand men. Registration hereafter will be carried out through the labour exchanges.

More men are needed, but the chief difficulty now is to place them on war work with a minimum of red tape H. G. Morgan, assistant director of the Munitions Department, said today that this problem was causing some unrest among the workers, but that the transfer would take time, for the Government was anxious not to disturb industry more than necessary.

"The problem almost amounts to a rearrangement of the whole skilled labour of the country," said Mr. Morgan. "This, of course, will take considerable time."

The new bureau has a staff of three hundred men, most of whom are working temporarily in tents.

"LET THERE BE PEACE."

The Examiner does not like to interfere in the domestic matters of its political neighbours, but as an authoritative appeal for peace has been made, we are naturally anxious to promote the peace and harmony of the community, which is imperilled by political conventions whether marked by "internal warfare" or otherwise. A Conservative convention, evidently for the nomination of a candidate—or "the" candidate who seems to be engineering it, is announced for the evening of the 27th instant. In reference to this convention the local organ of the party has the following ingenuous admission or forecast of a "scrappy time" at the gathering; and specially pleads for the acceptance and undivided support of the nominee. This is the plea for peace under the heading "Let There Be Peace"—

> Now that it has been deemed wise for the Conservatives to call a convention for the nomination of a candidate to represent them at the next election—whenever that may be—it is not the very best of "sport" for anyone to refuse to be guided by the result of such convention. We hope that the result of the last local election will not be repeated in the forthcoming Dominion election, as is quite possible if party strife does not cease. All cannot have their own way in politics, any more than in any other walk of life; therefore, even if some are disappointed, there is nothing to be gained by "internal warfare." No matter who is the choice of the convention, we trust that he will have the undivided support of the party. The public do not always follow the revolutionists, and are likely to get "mad" and resent such work.

The organ seems by its insistence upon the open-your-mouth and shut-your-eyes acceptance of the candidate, to expect that a candidate will be chosen who will not go down easily. "No matter," it hopes, "what the choice of the convention, we trust he will have the undivided support of the party." A convention in war time is inimical to community peace, such as is the crying need of this time of national and imperial crisis, but when added to this is the prospect of internal warfare, there is especial need for the cry, "Let there be peace."

CITY MAN, SPARE THAT TREE!

The following from the Toronto Globe, should be read with interest and heeded in Peterborough, by, especially, our city authorities:

> For cutting down some trees that obstructed work on a New York street a construction company has been ordered to pay $500 per tree, with $1,000 additional punitive damages. The company cut down the trees to facilitate work without consulting the city authorities or the owners of adjacent property. The verdict of the lower court has been sustained by the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court, and while it will not restore the trees it may have the effect of saving others from destruction. This case may modify the ideas of those who conclude, in the bewildering glares, noises, and displays of the modern city, that the age is barbaric. A people appreciative of the value of trees, even when the appreciation is expressed in dollars and cents, have not merely armed barbarism with civilization's means of display. There must be an element of the leaven of real civilization in the men who can turn upon and suppress vandalism.
>
> Masterpieces in architecture and the other arts become priceless because we have lost the sincerity that produced them. All their other qualities can be imitated and many improved upon. And there is a similar value in the surviving results of nature's sincerity. There are trees in this and other cities surviving from a time when nature's work was sincere — when her multitudinous efforts combined to the production of a few masterpieces. A new age has come, but its destructions are fortunately incomplete, and the survivals of that more sincere age challenge a growing appreciation.
> We must also value the new activity that has supplanted the old. Shade trees beautify city streets, and in the sultry days of summer cool and purify the air. They are of slow growth, and it requires years of care to restore the destruction of a few short-sighted hours. The New York decision should have wide publicity, for the value of a city's trees cannot be too deeply impressed.

One cannot understand why the men who represent the people are so destructive and careless of tree life. Within a few years we have had some of the stateliest trees in Canada — the survivals of nature's "sincerity"—sacrificed to the vandalism of our city authorities. In all the city's history of nearly one hundred years, the city authorities have not planted one street tree. On the other hand they have destroyed hundreds with the ninety years of the city's life, in the growth of their towering trunks, carrying each a little forest of magnificent leafage, a delight to the eye, and a veritable boon, by its grateful shade, and its soothing scenic relief and rest for the eye.

The city now has turned two men loose to "trim" trees; and they are "trimming" them in the pugilistic sense. There is a disregard of the first principles of proper tree trimming — limbs are sawn off, or rather hacked off —leaving long projecting prongs to be strangulated by the growth of the trunk —to die and decay in time, and become a rotten spot, the beginning of death of the tree. The worst feature of this improper work, aside from mutilation of the trees, is that it shows the indifference of the city to the value and beauty of our city trees, and a disregard of the interests and enjoyment of joint owners of the trees—the residence owners—whose wishes are impudently disregarded in respect of the trees they or their forerunners have planted, and which the city only seems to regard as a medium of the exercise of the German spirit of destruction. Where is the public spirit of our citizens of substance and taste, that there is not some effective protest?

A citizen who has planted hundreds of trees in the city, and contributed largely to its tree beauty, complains of the hacking and mutilation of street trees by the employees of the Utilities Commission on McDonel street, and the destruction of grassed boulevards and lawns by the planting of poles. He also complains of the sidewalks jammed close up against the roots of street trees in a way to injure them. He says that this might be avoided by narrowing the driving surface of the streets, to double advantage. He says that the civic "Bourbons" won't learn anything, and that in laying down a new sidewalk on Stewart street northward from Brock, the same "error or outrage" is being committed — the walk encroaches upon the trees, when a street that ends at the old Protestant Home and has little traffic, might have the driving surface narrowed three or four feet—and the trees spared, with the result of saving them and saving money in the building and maintenance of a roadway of less surface.

THE KAISER'S AFRICAN SURPRISE.

When the war broke out, one of Germany's first overseas surprises was to precipitate a revolt in South Africa. The Kaiser was very sure the Dutch burghers would rally to his standard. We have to remember this in measuring up the effect of the blow dealt to Germany by the fact that Germany's largest and dearest colony the last remaining piece of her colonial empire, has been captured by the British Empire by the Boers, who are now sending an expeditionary force to France to help rub the lesson in.—Montreal Herald.

London, July 12. — King George will to-morrow receive in audience Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada.

An Open Letter Addressed To Our Canadian Political Leaders

To Sir Robert Borden and to Sir Wilfrid Laurier:

Sirs,—The newspaper reports are that recruiting is very backward. Have you, sirs, faced the real reasons for this condition? Is not the real obstacle to enlistment the actions of the majority of our public men? One hundred thousand young Canadians in uniform is the young man's answer to his country's call, but what about the fathers of these young men? What about the fathers attending political conventions and causing political dissensions? The young man attending the baseball match may be neglecting his duty, but what leadership example is he getting from those over him?

If Canada is to do its full duty let our public men show the way. One hundred and eighty members of the British House of Commons on active service and the formation of a coalition Government shows the way to the young men in Great Britain. In Canada, on the other hand, we see only five or six members of Parliament on active service, but we read of party conventions being held on every hand, and the members of Parliament addressing these conventions, or travelling the country sidelines for party, but not for country's sake. Is it too much to ask of those who cannot go to the front to drop politics at home? Are not the people justified in fearing that with our public men party gain is the thing, with the war as a side issue? If private citizens are to lay down their lives, must not our public men also lay aside their politics? Why die for country when the bugle note of party summons away from the field of honour to join the ranks of a political party? Why enlist where looting is forbidden, when the recruiting sergeant from both political parties too often offers a foremost position to the plunderer who is looting at home?

To you, Sir Robert Borden, Premier of this great Dominion, and to you, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, four times the elected choice of this young nation, has come an awful responsibility and a tremendous call to duty. Will you allow your partizans to paralize, in part at least, the strength of this great Dominion, the right hand of Great Britain itself, or, on the other hand, will our great statesmen prove their sincerity by more than the spoken word? A coalition Government has awakened the people of Great Britain. A coalition Government formed by Sir John A. Macdonald, and the Hon. George Brown gave us this great confederation. A coalition Government formed by Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier to help save the world's liberty would stir every Canadian to united action. With Borden and Laurier in the same Cabinet at Ottawa devising public measures, with Dr. Michael Clarke, M.P., and the Hon. Arthur Meighen arousing the people by their eloquence from a common platform of lofty patriotism, Canada would be stirred from Victoria to Halifax and from the great lakes to our Arctic boundaries—our young men would be electrified into action, the recruiting stations would be over-crowded, and Great Britain would receive such an access of strength as would carry anxiety to her enemies. Let our leaders awake and the people will awake also.

Right Hon. Sir Robert Borden, Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Knights, sans peur et sans reproche, what will your answer be? Will you lead (not point) the way for your people, who are anxious, perplexed, saddened by losses and worried over the terrible possibilities? The knights of old laid down their lives for honour's sake. What Sir Knights, will you do for the sake of King and country, for liberty and civilizations? Canada awaits an answer.

A UNITED CANADA.

A SERMON CRITICISED

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Will you kindly permit expression of a thought awakened by a recent sermon here?

In substance, the justly popular Divine gravely informed us that the Creator was obliged to use "millions of ages" in creation of the world!

In common with Christendom this same guide (?) holds that the Creator is no other than Jesus Christ. (See John 1:1-3): "All things were made by Him."

Pursuing this course of reasoning the instantaneous "new creation" of a sinner by that same "Ward" would be a slow, long-drawn, evolving into higher circles of existence!

Thus we have the astounding spectacle of a Methodist Pastor posing as the patron of a present day "ism," known as "Spiritism"!

Oh, shade of the noble Wesleys, pity us! Thanking you, I remain,

MACEDONIAN.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Diamond Cut Diamond

A Story of the Police Versus Crime.

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

I was traveling on a train between New York and Albany when, at Poughkeepsie, a man carrying a satchel entered the car in which I was and took the vacant seat beside me. He soon opened conversation with me, and I found him quite agreeable, though afterward I remembered that the way he obtained my admiration was by drawing out my conversational powers.

During the ride to Albany my traveling companion handed me his card, saying that he resided in that city and would be happy to have me drop in at his office during my stay there, for I had told him that I would be there several days. Naturally I gave him one of my own cards, on which I wrote my office address in New York in pencil.

Shortly before reaching Albany the man said he would go to the smoking car to enjoy a cigar and, leaving his satchel beside me, asked me if I would oblige him by keeping an eye on it for him during his absence. I assented, and he left the car. On crossing the bridge at Albany I began to fear we might reach the station before his return. When the train stopped in Albany he had not appeared. I waited till every one except myself had left the car, expecting each moment to see him hurrying toward me. Finally when the train began to fill up with a new load I left it myself, carrying the stranger's bag with me.

Stepping out on to the platform, I looked about for my traveling companion. A man stepped up to me and asked if I were looking for any one. I told him my story as I have told it here, and, snatching the satchel from me, he opened it and, thrusting in his hand, drew from among its contents a pearl necklace which, it struck me immediately, must be worth a fortune.

"I've got 'em," he remarked, "but I haven't got him!"

I pulled out the stranger's card and was looking at it when he took it from me and, after a hasty glance, put it in his pocket, remarking that there was no such street and number in Albany. He then told me that a wealthy lady of New York had lost the necklace and a detective agency with which he was connected had been employed to run down the thief and recapture the goods. The agency had obtained a clew and learned that the man proposed to take the train by which I had come from New York. My informant had been deputed to follow him, but had been misled, doubtless by a confederate of the thief who carried the property. The confederate had acted suspiciously, carrying a satchel that he kept under his own eye constantly, every now and again glancing uneasily at the detective. On reaching Albany the detective had arrested the decoy and turned him over to an associate, but a hasty examination of his satchel had revealed no booty. It was evident that the man carrying the necklace knew he was in danger and, after taking my address, had left his satchel in my hands that he might not be caught with the stolen property in his possession.

I accompanied the detective to a police station, where I turned over the satchel with its contents to the department.

Having transacted in Albany the business for which I had come, I returned to New York in company with the detective, and after a conference among the parties concerned it was agreed that I should wait a reasonable length of time for some communication from the man who had left the satchel in my keeping, and if I did not hear from him I would put an advertisement in the newspapers.

I had no confidence in the plan, and to tell the truth, I considered that the detective had bungled the case in being called off on a false scent and that my advertisement would not help matters. They argued that I had doubtless impressed the thief as being a gentleman, and no refined person would be likely to examine the contents of a bag left in his keeping by a stranger. They also suggested that many different explanations might be made for the man's failure to return for his property. I considered these arguments very thin and did not believe any thief fool enough to walk into such a trap as they were laying for him. The man had my name and address and would choose his own way of recovering the necklace, if, indeed, he intended to try to recover it, which I very much doubted, for I saw no way by which he could do so.

However, the detectives had a faint hope that their theory was correct, and I was quite willing to do anything they asked me to do. They waited a week for some communication from the thief. Then, since none had come, they inserted an advertisement. Some time was spent on its wording, and after many writings it read as follows:

The gentleman who recently left in the keeping of another on a train from New York to Albany a satchel containing valuable property will receive a reward for the same and address of the owner of said property and no questions asked.

The detectives supposed that the thief might bite at this bait, but I did not. It seemed to me that had I been the thief I would prefer to steal some other property than to attempt to make money by owning myself the thief of property stolen and recovered. But, as I have said, the professionals were working the case, and I was simply acting for them. When, however, one morning I received the following note by mail I confess I was surprised:

Dear Sir—I have seen your advertisement. I am not fool enough to walk into a trap. If $10,000 will tempt you to return me the necklace the money will be yours. It is worth $30,000. In other words, I'll go halves with you. If you agree to these terms put an ad. in next Sunday's personal column of any first class New York newspaper and I will write you when, how and where to deliver the goods and receive the funds.

The detectives were very hopeful on receipt of this letter. As for me, I could not believe that the man who had seen me and talked with me would consider me a person to divide the price of stolen goods even in the expectation of pocketing $10,000. The detectives said that I was probably right in my inference, but no one could tell exactly what was the man's game. It was doubtless something different from what appeared on the surface. They insisted on my inserting the ad., which I did, and in reply I received a note instructing me to take the necklace on a certain night at 11 o'clock to a house which the writer described so minutely that I could not miss it. I was warned that any attempt to put the police on the writer's track would fail, for the man from whom I had received the satchel would not act, but leave his interests in the hands of innocent persons who did not know that the transaction was illegitimate.

I had not objected to carrying the suggestions of the detectives thus far, but I did not like the idea of going any further and asked the police to put a substitute in my place. They told me that the moment the rascals saw that another than the man with whom the property had been left was not acting the whole affair would fall to the ground. I have never been a shirker of any duty, and since I considered it my duty to do all in my power to help the police catch the thief I yielded and agreed to carry out their plans.

The first thing they did was to have a spurious necklace made up to represent the real one. They had barely time for this when the evening for meeting the thief came round, and I repaired to the place of rendezvous. I was armed, and I knew that I was every moment under the eye of the police until I entered the house where the transfer was to take place, and after that it was surrounded by them, though they were in plain clothes and kept in shadow. The house was a dilapidated dwelling. There was a light in one room, the window being covered by a shade. I went to the door and rapped. A man came to the door, and I asked him if a man was there who wished to buy some jewelry. He led me into the room lighted by a candle, which stood on a table. He pointed to a seat on one side of the table and sat down himself on the other side.

"Show up," he said, taking a roll of bank bills from his pocket and, after showing me that they were of a hundred dollar denomination, waited for me to produce the necklace.

The police had found it impossible to suggest any secret signal by which I was to notify them that it was time to close in on us, so we had agreed that they were to do so ten minutes after my entrance to the house. If I were in danger I was to cry out or fire my pistol. To delay the matter a few moments I asked the man some questions.

"Do you represent the party who turned over this satchel to me?"

"Yes."

"Does he know you are dealing with that person?"

"He does."

"How?"

"He has seen you through a hole in the partition."

I opened the bag and took out the spurious necklace. The man extended his left hand with the bills in it, while with the other he clutched the necklace, at the same time blowing out the candle, leaving the room in total darkness. I gave a yell as a signal for the men outside to come in, which they did not need, for they saw that the light was extinguished. They strove to open the front door, but it had been locked from the inside. A few minutes were spent in breaking it down, during which time I sat in darkness. They made so much noise at the door that I could hear little or nothing that was going on in the room. One thing I did hear. It sounded like the closing of a door.

When the men came in they flashed their lanterns and relit the candle. They found no one in the room but myself. There was no door in it except the one leading into the hall by which they had entered. This puzzled them for a time; but, flashing their lanterns everywhere, they at last noticed a trapdoor in the floor. Pulling it up, they descended into a cellar. There they found an iron door, which they could not pass till they had spent some time in prying it open. When this was accomplished they entered a tunnel that led them over 200 feet to a deserted house.

Thus ended a case of diamond cut diamond. The villains were too smart for the police, but the police had given them only a false necklace. We never received any explanation of the affair. Whether they were in league with the man from whom I had received the satchel or whether they were an entirely different party we never learned. Quite likely they were criminals who had seen my ad. and, taking the advertiser for a fiat, had put up a job to get possession of valuable property.

Hairs can be quickly banished from the skin by this quick, painless method. Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin, and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment buy the delatone in an original package.

THE SUMMER COIFFURE.

The hair is apt to become musty and matted in very little time during the hot weather unless it is carefully treated. The reason is apparent. The scalp perspires more freely than any other part of the body. During the hot weather all rats, switches, curls and puffs should be put into storage. The present style of hairdressing has no need of false hair anyway.

Even if the style called for much and elaborately dressed hair it would be foolish to follow fashion's call, at least during summer months, for there is nothing quite so harmful to the head as false hair in hot weather. It is very heating, causing incessant perspiration; then it shuts out all air which might reach the scalp under ordinary circumstances.

A woman should never omit the nightly brushing and airing. Before retiring she should let down her hair and sit in the open windows where the wind can blow away every vestige of the odor of perspiration. Ten minutes' airing is not too much and can be easily spared.

Once every week during the hot weather the hair should be shampooed. If the scalp is inclined to be oily it may be necessary to give the head a dry shampoo during the week. A massage with orris root will work wonders. The orris root should be well rubbed into the scalp so that every bit of oil and moisture is absorbed. Then the powder is all brushed out, leaving the hair as fluffy as after a washing.

The tango cap of knotted gold cord illustrated here is worn over a sheer foundation. The bandeau of tulle caught by the pearl ornaments is also an attractive ornament for evening wear.

Moire Shopping Bags.

White moire bags bound in gilt have an outside handkerchief pocket. Both black and white moire shopping bags are fitted with vanity fixings and have a small double purse and single strap handle. Fancy silk bags now may carry a bottle of real perfume. Shopping bags of silk Roman stripes have a center of shirred black satin or moire.

HOW TO CAN CORN

Uncle Sam Tells of Satisfactory Ways to Put It Up.

SELLING SURPLUS PRODUCT.

The United States department of agriculture gives some well tested and reasonable suggestions for putting up corn.

These recipes have been used in connection with the five different types of canning devices, and the corn has been put up in all types of containers, such as glass, screw and suction top jars and tin cans. The method employed is the cold pack method.

Select sweet corn ears of uniform size and proper ripeness. If too ripe the corn will color while processing. (Processing is the canning term for sterilization or cooking.) If not ripe enough much of the food value is lost in cutting the corn from the cob. Use either glass jars or tin cans. For market purposes and greater safety in transportation use tin cans.

Remove husk, silk, shank, tips and injured or defective places. Blanch corn in boiling water or steam chest for from five to ten minutes. The time depends upon the stage of ripeness, size of ears and degree of freshness. Remove the ears and plunge quickly in cold water.

Cooking the Corn.

Cut the corn from the cob with a sharp, thin bladed knife. Pack well in glass jar or tin can; add hot water and a level teaspoonful of salt to the quart or No. 3 can. Place rubber and glass jar top in place, not tight. If using tin, solder cap in place and fill vent hole or seal completely. Process the corn from 180 to 240 minutes in the homemade or hot water commercial bath outfits; for one and one-half hours in the water seal outfits; for one hour when using from five to ten pounds of steam pressure, with the steam pressure canning devices and forty minutes when using the aluminium steam pressure cooker outfit. After processing remove the jars, tighten covers, invert to test the joints and cool.

If using tin inspect the soldered end caps for pinhole leaks. Repair all leaks, allow to stand for twenty-four hours. If cans are still bulging at ends at the end of this time one of two things is true—the pack is too full, or some live spores are still left in the can. If the latter replace in sterilizer and process the second time from thirty minutes to one hour.

Canning Sweet Corn on the Cob.

Blanch in boiling water five to ten minutes, according to ripeness, size and freshness; plunge quickly in cold water. Pack, alternating butts and tips; add just a little boiling water and one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Place rubber and top and partially tighten. (Cap and tip tins.) Process 180 to 240 minutes in hot water bath; one and one-half hours water seal outfit; one hour under five or more pounds of steam; forty minutes in aluminium pressure cooker. Remove jars, tighten covers, invert and cool. (Heat up for table use in steamer, not in water. If corn seems flat or waterlogged, it has been overcooked or allowed to stand in too much water.)

Use one or two quart glass jars, if not needed for other products. Quart jars will hold two ears; two quart jars will hold from three to five ears, according to size of ear. Do not can large ears. Half gallon or gallon tin cans with large openings should be used in the canning of ear corn when idle glass jars are not available. Gallon tin cans will hold from six to twelve ears. They should be graded to uniform size.

In high altitudes, 4,000 feet and over it will be necessary to increase the time requirements in the canning of sweet corn about 25 per cent, if water boils at about 202 degrees F. and even less.

Pathetic Letter From Austrian Officer Releasing His Fiancee

The pathos of the great war finds a particularly striking expression in the following letter from Lieutenant Wirico, of the Austrian army, to an intimate friend in Vienna.

"This will be my last letter," he writes, "and I address it to you because you will understand me better than would poor little Winni, my fiancee. I wish you to explain to her as gently as possible the reasons why we can never meet again. If she asks for my address do not give it her. She would only send me a long tear-stained letter, which would rend my heart with grief. 'Why all this?' I can hear you both exclaim. One minute and I will tell you."

The officer then proceeds to describe a battle in which he was severely wounded, and continues:

"Two days later I regained full consciousness in the hospital. The first thing I was told was what I wished the least to hear—that I would not die just yet. I would live on, mind you, with half of my face cut away. A sabre stroke had made one big warped scar of the once handsome features of dashing Lieutenant Wirico You understand now, my dear fellow why I am so anxious to release Winni from her engagment. Tell her all about it.

"It is all very well for people to say that wounds received in battle are to be valued higher than medals and that a soldier should glory in his scars. But only once have I dared to gaze at my hideously distorted face in a looking glass, which the nurse held over me. That was enough. Little Winni must never see me thus. She must remember her lieutenant as he looked at their last parting. I need not tell you any more, for I am sure you comprehend now how I feel about it. Above all, please don't write, because it will only make me suffer the more. It might force the tears to my remaining eye and the cavity where the other used to be. And that hurts so! In a couple of days Wirico will be off again to battle. Whether for new wounds, or for medals, matters little."

English Wives of German-Britons Do Not Always Convert the Men

LONDON, July 13.—The new Home Secretary, Sir John Simon, is dealing firmly with the question of the enemy aliens. I know of one German who had been in business in London for several decades and is married to an Enlish wife. She is an excellent wife, but she has not made him pro-British.

The other day he was airing some strong pro-German sentiments. The case reached official ears. Prompt result. The German found himself conducted across the seas—he being above the military age—as far as the German frontier. There he was left with the equivalent of two and a half dollars in his pocket and a polite but grim warning that England prefer red his room to his company during the rest of the war.

Another German in a good way of business in the city foregathered with two other Germans after the sinking of the Lusitania and celebrated the glorious event by a dinner. He, too, has an English wife, but the fact that the treatment of wives he followed German rather than British traditions did not endear him to her relatives. It was, in fact, through their intervention that the news of the "Lusitania joy dinner" came to the ears of the police. Again, prompt result. Half an hour to pack a bag and report himself at the nearest police station. He is now in a concentration camp.

Another case has an element of humour in it. There is a fancy goods firm, which has branches in London, Paris and Germany. A manager looks after the Paris branch, but the two partners manage the London and German branches. They are Germans by birth, but one has become a naturalized Briton and the other has not. When war came the naturalized one happened, by an unfortunate mischance, to be in Berlin. The Germans put him under lock and key, and there they keep him. The unnaturalized partner went on with the business from London until the other day the police here interned him in spite of all protests. So now the manager of the Paris branch is master of the situation.

Students Seek Real Causes of Divorce Suits

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 13.—In a diligent search for the real story of the divorce court deputy clerks of the district court and members of the University of Minnesota faculty combined forces and they are tabulating the figures, the causes for divorce and other things pertaining to the default cases, for use in the department of sociology.

Every alternate Monday about thirty five default divorce actions are tried. These are the uncontested actions in which only one side of the story is told.

The things that arise in domestic life to make a man or woman cruel, the things that make them pick their hats and leave, or fail to buy provisionsfi are not told. Anyone of these causes is sufficient in Minnesota for a divorce and the persons seeking relief rarely tell why their mates offended. They are not required to tell.

W. A. Evans, deputy clerk of the court, who has been in the divorce court for twenty years, has combined the figures of many weeks of past cases and will continue compiling them as an aid to the university.

Judges have before been troubled by the repeated story of women seeking divorce. Three-fourths of the divorce actions are for desertion.

"He just took his hat, walked out, and never came back,' they all say.

To Seek "Other Stories."

To get at the other side of the desertions and of the other grounds for divorce, the judges have proposed the emplyment of an impartial investigator who would inform the court. Until such a man is employed the judes say, the other story, the other side of the case, will not be known. As practically all the divorces are uncontested, the real source of the evil is not shown by statistics.

Even the figures, that are obtained by a careful compilation are only half convincing. Whether the man or the woman is most at fault is a matter for philosophical reasoning. The first set of figures show that:

Desertions occur compartively early in married life, usually in the first two or three years.

Cruelty takes place after the couples have lived together much longer, seven or eight years on the average, often as long as fifteen or twenty years.

Two women ask for divorce to every man applying.

The average age at which a man asks for a divorce is thirty-six years and the woman thirty-two years.

This is all that the figures tell. Evans contends that the smaller number of suits brought by men indicates that the average man endures more abuse, naging and trouble of all kinds than the average women.

"Means Men are Meaner."

The young women from the university who have helped compile the figures declare that the greater number of actions begun by women shows conclusively that the women have more cause than the men, and that there are more mean men than mean women. Statisticians contend that the figures do not show whether children tend to lessen the divorce evil.

The figures show one thing conclusively, however, and that is that Minnesota is not a State that attracts outside persons seeking divorce. Out of a hundred cases eihty-six of the litigants were married in Minnesota and lived in the State until the action was begun. Ninety per cent. longer than the year that is required to gain a residence.

The problem to all those who have investigated is to get that "other story."

Whether the man leaves home because of cold dinners and poorly cooked dinners, too many afternoon bridge parties, use of cosmetics or just because he is vicious, is one of the stories untold.

Whether the woman leaves because the husband spends more than his share of the money, plays too much pool, expects her to laugh at all his jokes or makes her saw the wood is the other story untold.

Means Victory or World Might

In connection with the Earl of Derby's West Lancashire recruiting campaign, Rudyard Kipling addressed an open-air meeting at Southport. The gathering numbered several thousands.

Mr. Kipling said: "I am here to speak on behalf of a system in which I do not believe, and in which, I dare say, a good many of you do not believe—the system of voluntary service. It seems to me unfair and unbusiness-like that after ten months of war we should still be raising men by the same methods as we raise money at a charity bazaar; but clumsy and unfair as that system is, it is the only one we have, and we must work it. (Hear, hear.)

"How do matters stand in regard to recruiting to-day? There is, of course, a small, pernicious minority who do not intend to inconvenience themselves for any consideration, but I am convinced that the overwhelming bulk of the men who have not yet come forward to enlist argue, 'why should I go when my neighbour stays behind? Make it equal all round and I'll go gladly.' That is a detail that should have been settled in time of peace. It is illogical to complain of it now. If it is changed, and changed soon, so much the better, but meantime we must reap what we have sown. (Hear, hear.)

The Abominable German.

"The German has spent quite as much energy in the last 4' years preparing for war as we have in convincing ourselves that wars should not be prepared for.' He has started this war with a magnificent equipment which took him time and heavy taxation to get together. That equipment we have had to face for the last ten months. We have had to face more. The German went into this war with a mind which had been carefully trained out at the idea of every moral sense or obligation—private, public, or international. He does not recognise the existence of any laws, least of all those he has subscribed to himself, in making war against combatants or non-combatants, men, women and children.

"He has done from his own point of view very well indeed. All mankind bears witness to-day that there is no crime, no cruelty, no abomination that the mind of man can conceive which the German has not perpetrated, is not perpetrating and will not perpetrate if he is allowed to go on. These horrors and perversions were not invented by him on the spur of the moment. They were arranged beforehand, their outlines are laid down in the German war book. They are part of the system in which Germany has been scientifically trained. It is the essence of that system to make such a hell of the countries where her armies set foot, that any terms she may offer will seem like heaven to the people whose bodies she has defiled and whose minds she has broken of set purpose and intention. So long as an unbroken Germany exists, so long will life on this planet be intolerable, not only for us and for our allies, but for all humanity. And humanity knows it.

A Long War Ahead.

"Up to the present, as far as we can find out, Germany has suffered some three million casualties. She can suffer another three million, and, for aught we know, another three million after that. We have no reason to believe that she will break up suddenly and dramatically, as a few people still expect. Why should she? She took two generations to prepare herself in every detail, and through every fibre of her national being for this war. She is playing for the highest stakes in the world—the dominion of the world. It seems to me that she must either win or bleed to death almost where her lines run to-day. Therefore, we and our allies must continue to pass our children through fire to Moloch until Moloch perish. This, as I can see, is where we stand, and where Germany stands.

America Giving Germany Food.

"Turn your mind for a moment to the idea of a conquering Germany. You need not go far to see what it would mean to us. In Belgium at this hour, several millions of Belgians are making war material or fortifications for their conquerors. They are given enough food to support life as the German thinks it should be supported. By the way, I believe the United States of America supplies a large part of that food. In return they are compelled to work at the point of the bayonet. If they object they are shot. Their factories, their houses and their public buildings have long ago been gutted, and everything in them that was valuable or useful has been packed up and sent into Germany. They have no more property, and no more rights than cattle; and they cannot lift a hand to protect the honour of their women. And less than a year ago they were one of the most civilized and prosperous of the nations of the earth.

Would Fare Worse Than Belgium.

"There has been nothing like the horror of their fate in all history, and this system is in full working order within fifty miles of the English coast. Where I live I can hear the guns that are trying to extend it. The same system exists in such parts of France and Poland as are in German hands. But whatever has been dealt out to Belgium, France and Poland will be England's fate tenfold if we fail to subdue the Germans. That we shall be broken, plundered, robbed and enslaved like Belgium will be but the first part of the matter. Over and above this, no pledge we can offer, no guarantee we can give will be accepted by Germany as binding. She has broken her own most solemn oaths, pledges and obligations, and by the very fact of her existence she is bound to trust nothing and to recognize nothing except immediate superior force backed by illimitable cruelty. So you see there are no terms possible.

America Would Obey Germany.

"Realize, too, if the allies are beaten there will be no spot on the globe where a soul can escape from the domination of this enemy of mankind. There has been childish talk that the Western Hemisphere would offer a refuge from oppression. Put that thought from your mind. If the allies were defeated, Germany would not need to send a single battleship over the Atlantic. She would issue an order, and it would be obeyed. Civilization would be bankrupt, and the Western world would be taken over with the rest of the wreckage by Germany, the receiver. So you see there is no retreat possible. There are no terms and no retreat in this war. It must go forward, and with those men of England who are eligible for service, but who have not yet offered themselves, the decision of the war rests

"Let us look at a few figures. Like yourselves, I have no definite information; but, so far as one can estimate, rather more than 2,000,000 men have joined the army up to date. This is an impressive record till one remembers that the population of these Islands is rather more than 45,000,000, so that the present proportion works out at about 5 per cent. of the total population, and 10 per cent. of the total male population. We do not know how many soldiers we shall need to end the war, but we do know that de do not need 90 per cent. of the male population to make ammunition and carry on the necessary work of the country during the war.

"People who won't look facts in the face ask sometimes: 'What's the use of piling in men before one has the arms and equipment for them?' The answer is quite simple. You can use equipment the minute you get it, but you can't use a man till he has been trained. That is why the supply of men must always be months ahead of other supplies. And we need a steady, unbroken flow of men—young and without domestic ties for choice—always coming on into training."

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Greatest Place In the World For Business

Richard Varick Dey, of San Francisco, millionaire, mine owner, and, as he described himself "a young bachelor of eighty-one," thinks New York City the greatest place in the world for business, and is about to be the world's financial centre. But live here? Never! Not while there is a San Francisco and a Pacific Coast.

Mr. Dey, for many years an intimate friend of the late United States Senator James G. Fair, of San Francisco, has come East to act as a witness in the fair will litigation. He is visting his sister at No. 28 West Eighty-eighth street. Born in this city, he went West when eleven. He is still actively in charge of his gold, silver and copper mines in Arizona.

"If each city had an account book" he said to a New York American reporter yesterday, "I would credit New York with: World commercial supremacy, financial greatness, and size and completeness of structures, and equipment for carrying on both. To San Francisco I would give: Liberality, in spirit, education and mode of life; hospitality and its glorious climate.

"The spirit in the West is a survival of the days of '49, when a man's hand went instantly into his pocket to help a down-and-out neighbour. Hospitality is in the fibre of the West. Here in New York people are too rushed in the making of money—and don't they make it!—to give a hang for the fellow next door. New York men are too cold.

"With regard to the women of New York City, however, I can say that I see no difference in them from our Western women. They are both good to look at and warm of heart.

"Women's styles? Why, I've been ill for the last few weeks, so I guess I can say nothing about the six or seven fashions that have come and gone in that time. They are too quick for a young fellow like me.

"The bigness of New York commercially and its smallness on the human side are shown even in its architecture and style of living. Its towering steel skyscrapers are models for the world; its tiny cubbyholes called flats, in which people live, are an abomination. The West builds amply, with plenty of elbow-room, but New York is too cramped to live and breathe in.

"Finally, the summers here are too hot and the winters too cold. San Francisco is always temperate, and gives health and long life. I offer myself as Exhibit A."

And the eyes of the "young bachelor of eighty-one" twinkled with good humour as he stood up to shake hands, the picture of health—ruddy complexioned, sturdy and alive to his finger tips.

ROUMANIA ALLOWS ITALIANS TO PASS

Examiner Special:

ROME, via Paris, July 13.—Italy and Russia have reached an understanding, it is stated, regarding the sending to Italy of prisoners of Italian nationality taken from the Austrian army. Roumania has assented cordially to the passage of such prisoners through that country, it is said, but the negotiations with Bulgaria and Greece have been halted.

It has been arranged that such prisoners, if they do not wish to enter the Italian army or if they are not from districts already taken by Italy, be treated by Italy as Austrian prisoners of war.

SOCIETY WOMEN "WHITE WINGS" CLEAN UP TOWN

Coudersport, Pa., July 13.—The most distinguished company of "white wings" that ever repaired local roads, was a company of indignant and determined women, representing the first families of Potter's county seat, who enraged at neglect of the borough authorities to put the residential section of East street in appropriate shape for Chautauqua week, turned out in silks, laces and diamonds galore, and flashed the hoe, shovel, spade, rake and wheelbarrow, as well as gravel along the line, till their fair and intelligent faces glowed with exercise and indignation over the way their fine homes were disfigured by mudholes and weeds of neglected streets.

"Our patience has been exhausted in appeals to our city fathers," declared one silk petticoated worker, "and we won't stand for it any longer." Her hoe was flying for dear life, and she emphasized her words by vigorous strokes at mullen and pig weed, burdocks and milk weed, that had they been the borough fathers, would have likely got what she thought was just desserts.

"A giraffe would drown there," said another volunteer, pointing a jewelled finger at a pesky mudhole. "Look at this blister, said a little enthusiast, holding out a dainty palm that hadn't ever seen anything like that before. "Be careful, dear," said another, pointing to the mudhole, "don't venture too near that lake without a life preserver." And so with stroke and comment the work went ahead to a successful completion, and the street commissioner was named, and the Borough Council rebuked.

The dainty padrone of the willing workers who led the onslaught was Miss Chloe Faugbenberry. The active participants were Mrs R. P. Noble Mrs. Clare Burt, Mrs. O. D. Van DeBoe, Mrs. W. F. Schutt, Miss Dorothy Russell, Mrs. John F. Stone, Mrs. A. F. Smith, Mrs. J. F. Leffler, Mrs. E. L. Westworth, Mrs. W. W. Thompson, Miss Helen Russell, Mrs. D. G. Van De Boe, Miss Edith Keith Miss Elsie French and Miss Mildred Keith, wives and daughters of prominent business and professional men.

HOW TO CLEAN SPATS.

Linen spats, much worn in hot weather, may be laundered with ordinary care. The best way is to put them over shoe forms and scrub with white soapsuds, applied with a stiff brush. Rinse well with clear water, and allow to dry in the forms. Gasoline cleaning is all right for a few times, but soon turns the spats yellow, whereas the washing whitens them. A little bluing may be added to slightly tint the water.

Builders Of The "Big Ditch"

There has just been issued by the Historical Publishing Company of Washington, D.C., a magnificent illustrated history of the construction and builders of the Panama Canal. The editor of this great history is Mr. Ira E. Bennett, with associate editors, John Hays Hammond, celebrated mining engineer; Capt. Philip Andrews, U. S. N.; Rupert Blue, Surg. Gen. U.S. Public Health Service; J. Hampton Moore, Pres. Atlantic Deeper Waterways Ass'n; Patrick J. Lennox, B.A., and William J. Showalter.

One of the most interesting portions of the book is that dealing with the feeding of the immense army of labourers. A few paragraphs of one of the foods chosen and supplied by the Commissary Department, are quoted (beginning page 428) as follows:

"Visitors to the canal who were privileged to get a glimpse of the routine inner life will recall a familiar picture of workmen going to their places of labor carrying round yellow tins.

"Often as they went, they munched a food poured from the tin into the hand. This food which played no inconsiderable part in 'building' the canal, was the well known article of diet, 'GRAPE-NUTS.'

"The mention of Grape-Nuts in this connection is peculiarly pertinent. Not merely because Grape-Nuts is a food—for of course proper food was an integral part of the big enterprise—but because it is a cereal food which successfully withstood the effect of a tropical climate. This characteristic of Grape-Nuts was pretty well known and constituted a cogent reason for its selection for use in the Canal Zone....

"This food is so thoroughly baked that it keeps almost indefinitely in any climate, as has been demonstrated again and again.

"One finds Grape-Nuts on transoceanic steamships, in the islands of the seas, in Alaska, South America, Japan, along the China Coast, in Manila, Australia, South Africa, and on highways of travel and the byways of the jungle—in short, wherever minimum of bulk and maximum of nourishment are requisite in food which has to be transported long distances, and often under extreme difficulties.

"The very enviable reputation which Grape-Nuts has attaided in these respects caused it to be chosen as one of the foods for the Canal Zone."

Grape-Nuts FOOD

—scientifically made of prime wheat and malted barley, contains the entire goodness of the grain, including those priceless mineral elements so essential for active bodies and keen brains, but which are lacking in white flour products and the usual dietary.

There's a reason why Grape-Nuts food was chosen by the Canal Commissariat. There's a reason why Grape-Nuts is a favourite food of hustling people everywhere!

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

parade, all of whom are members of the order, turned out 140 men yesterday. They carried the prize with a sweep from all competitors, being the best dressed and largest in numbers. They also have the signal honour of having the oldest Orangeman in the parade with their banner. He was Mr. John Shouldice, who has reached the good old age of 96 years. For Bro Shouldice and four other veteran brethren of Bethany Lodge, Bros Johnston Morton, Wm. Westlake, Richard Johnston and Andrew Kerr, an auto was provided. As one of the brethren, Mr. Shouldice was also undoubtedly the longest a member, having worn the colours for over sixty years.

Under the marshalling of W. G. M Henry Ward, the Bethany Lodge with their ribbons and badges, every member smartly dressed in white coat and white cap with a blue and orange band, following their brass band, under their leader, Bro. C. Morton, the members of which were distinguished with white trousers and white felt hats, in addition to the white coats, the band playing patriotic selections, and Bro. T. Hardman in the lead with a huge Union Jack made a grand show and the crowd waxed enthusiastic as they passed. With Bethany L.O.L. 1022, marched Bro. George McCartney of Bethany, Organizer for Ontario, East. This is one of the premier lodges of Eastern Ontario and a great credit to Bethany, Orangeism's stronghold.

In another auto rode Capt. Warren, P.C.M., Lindsay; and also P.M. of the Black Knights of Ireland; Dr. J. W. Wood, W.M. of Lindsay, No. 32; and C.M. of West Northumberland J. Kirk, and in a third auto were P C.M. of West Northumberland, Major McCaughey, Cobourg; Bain Ewing Town Clerk, Cobourg; P.C.M. West Northumberland H. McCullough; P. C.M. West Northumberland, Robert Free.

There was the same crash of bands, but contrary to expectations party tunes were not altogether "taboo," for some of the organizations could not resist, but the precentage of party tunes was small. The brass bands present were Cobourg, Lindsay and Bethany. They were down on the programme for a massed band concert in front of the City Hall from 11.30 a.m. till 12 o'clock, but as they did not all get to Cobourg in time to play and leave a few minutes for lunch, this item on the programme was cancelled.

The Cobourg Orangemen and those who constituted the committee in charge of the celebration, namely, A S. Field, chairman of the committee; J. J. Andrews, secretary; James Service, director of ceremonies, and James Kirk, County Master, are to be congratulated on the way they provided for the huge crowds and upon the excellent arrangements made for the Orangemen themselves. The members of the Order were exceedingly well conducted, and remarks were heard as to their splendid conduct in all parts of the town, and they too are to be congratulated on the way, by their actions yesterday, they upheld the traditions of Orangeism.

The procession lined up by the following counties:

Victoria.
Vernon.
Peterborough.
East Durham.

The line-up on the march was as follows:

Owing to the lateness of the hour, the speeches in Victoria Park were necessarily cut short in order to give those leaving on the early trains a chance to get home. County Master James Kirk occupied the chair.

The first speaker was Mayor Duncan of Cobourg, who in behalf of the citizens of Cobourg, heartily welcomed the visitors.

Mayor Duncan said that the celebration was being held under quite different conditions to those which prevailed a year ago, when part of the Empire was on the verge of a civil war. To-day the Empire was engaged in a gigantic struggle which drew all classes and creeds together, all fighting for the one cause, the downing of despotism in Europe.

After these few remarks Mayor Duncan gave way to Dr. J. W. Wood, of Lindsay. On behalf of the District of Emily, Dr. Wood, who is W. M. of No. 32, congratulated the Orangemen of Cobourg, and the Orange Association, on the magnificent turn out. Dr. Wood said that the Orangemen were not there to celebrate any victory over Roman Catholics but to celebrate with Roman Catholics, if they desired to come, Canada's civil and religious liberty. The Roman Catholics had just as much right to be there as the Orangemen and Protestants. This liberty was being threatened by a despot, a fiend incarnate, and to-day the British nation, Protestant and Roman Catholics, were fighting for the liberty of Catholic Belgium and France. It would be no liberty if it were only for Orangemen and Protestants. The Premier of Great Britain had said that the last man and the last dollar would be spent if necessary to down that despot. We might not have been in this war to-day if we had accepted the bribe that was offered to us, but Great Britain said, "Hands off."

Canada was doing her duty to-day and she had done it before. She was doing it now on the historic battlefields of Flanders and in the words of Sir John French, "The Canadians saved the situation." If England's existence was threatened, ours was threatened. Germany was looking for a place for her excess millions. How much farther would she look than Canada if the chance of getting it was favorable? We were descendants of the great Anglo-Saxon race, who fought for freedom before. The Orangemen were doing their duty. They were in the ranks in Flanders, and doing their part, and if called upon for more men there would be a ready response.

Mr. George McCartney of Bethany, the organizer for Ontario East, was the next speaker. Bro. McCartney opened by congratulating the Orangemen on the success of their celebration. He said that the celebration had been held in Cobourg under a great deal of opposition, which opposition he could not understand. The celebration brought together the very best type of womanhood and manhood the country could produce.

The speaker said that they were there to celebrate the Battle of the Boyne, which secured to each one of us at that time, Roman Catholic and Protestant alike, civil and religious liberty. He said the Orangemen were not there to beat drums and flaunt flags in the face of Roman Catholics, but they were there to give to right thinking men the liberty they had themselves.

Mr. McCartney had paid some attention to the causes and reasons why the Orange Order had made such giant strides in past years. Speakers other years would tell us of our glorious past and trace everything connected with Orangeism back for centuries. It was well to have a glorious past but something of the present should occupy the attention of the Orangemen of to-day.

In the first place there were questions arising each year in connection with legislation. Attention must be paid to the legislation which was being placed on the statute books. The Orangemen had something to say about this and no political party could twist the Orange Society. It had been said that Orangemen played a part in elections. They did; but they looked on the vital questions from their own standpoint. Manitoba was showing the result of an alliance of the party in power with the other side. That party was not in power now. No party, whatever it was, dared enact legislation of which the Orange Order did not approve.

We joined a lodge, and took certain obligations, and many of us did not know why we were Orangemen. If they were asked why they were Orangemen, half of the brethren would not know. The various answers would be that they liked the Lodge, and probably that they were Protestants. A man had to be an intelligent Orangeman to be a successful one, and the only way to become intelligent was to subscribe for the Orange Sentinel.

Everyone ought to know what the Society was doing. The Society had taken hold of that vital question in Ontario, the Bilingual Question, and had carried it to a successful issue. The organization was the one which had power enough to force the government to place on the statute books a law saying that the English language in the Public Schools in Ontario should prevail, amongst Roman Catholics and Protestants alike. Representatives of the organization went to the government and demanded this. Orangemen should watch at all times that nothing should be introduced at any time that would allow the French language to prevail. How about the Eastern Townships? An English speaking Protestant could go to a town council and state his case in the English language. It was discussed in French by the councillors and the town clerk notified the ratepayer in writing of the decision. The Orangemen should maintain that all business in this country should be done in the English language.

We all had a duty which we owed to this country of ours and to the Order. We were to see to it and when we met again be able to do something that would be for the betterment of our country and the Society.

France and Flanders were more vigilant now than ever before. Vigilance was a serious matter, and this was a serious time. His hearers were to take away the thought that they were members of the great Orange organization and their obligations imposed upon them certain things. These obligations were to be adhered to, and they would be better members of the Lodge and better citizens; better in their homes, to their wives and families. In time, Peace and Victory would settle on the army of the Empire on the fields of Europe.

The visitors commenced to leave Cobourg at 5 p.m., special trains leaving at that hour for Lindsay, via the old road, on the Grand Trunk. At 5.30 p.m., the Peterborough people got started and arrived in the city at 8 o'clock. The lodges lined up at the station and were marshalled east on Charlotte, north on George to London, east on London to Water, south on Water and west on Simcoe, thence to their lodge rooms at Victoria Hall.

At Cobourg in the afternoon a game of baseball in Victoria Park, as part of the programme of sports, between Brighton and Cobourg teams, was won by the latter by the score of 14 to 10. At the end of the 5th inning the score stood 8 to 4 in favor of Brighton but they fell down after several riots over disputed decisions, in which one umpire was allowed to view the game from the side lines while a successor was chosen. His Umps reversed a rather bad decision, and as a compromise with the team against which he discriminated, his successor was appointed after half of the first innings. The base umpire was the centre of the crowd when he called a man out on third which was disputed. Benefitting from the experience of the other umpire, he did not reverse his decision.

A Secret Society of Good Samaritans

The Examiner is informed unofficially, but it is believed, reliably, of an organization that realizes the spirit of the line of Pope—"Do good by stealth and blush to find it fame." It is hardly an organization either; but rather an association, for it has no organization, but is merely a society of noble women working together to provide hospital dressings and cognito supplies for the benefit of the Canadians wounded in the war.

It is composed of some fifteen ladies, and is called the Canadian-American Society; and it owes its hyphenated name to the fact that its origin is due to the good spirit of a member of the American colony in Peterborough, who, with others of her fair compatriots, felt that she would like to do something similar to what her United States sisters are and have been doing so nobly. They associated a few Canadian ladies with them and went to work last April.

The Society has no organization; no president or vice-president, or other officers. They make no appeals for money, but each member pays a monthly fee. This provides the raw materials of its sinews of war. The ladies meet weekly at some residence and work in rollig bandages, preparing compressors and other hospital requisites. And they "attend to their knitting." They meet from 2 to 6, and do not even drink tea—they work and, incidentally, as is natural when ladies get together, there is a little conversation—about their work, for gossip is tabooed. As a result a great deal of good work is done. The Society has sent one large bale to Shorncliffe, and others are sent to Queen's University hospital authorities. The following list will give some idea of the unobtrusive, but effective, work done, (and is still going on) in the past three months. The society has prepared and sent forward the following:

654 hospital dressings, 96 eye dressings, 30 large surgical sponges, 373 wipes, 192 compresses, 354 factory cotton bandages, 189 gauze bandages, 1,500 mouth wipes, 312 handkerchiefs, 168 wash cloths, 9 large towels and 12 towels donated; 1096 swabs, 184 gauze sponges, and several boxes of fruit.

Altogether, not including the fruit, there have been put in hand at the front or where they are needed, 5,188 individual articles for the benefit of sick or wounded Canadian soldiers, articles that have been and will be the right thing in the right place. It is a pleasure to record the splendid and unobtrusive work of this, practically, secret society of good Samaritans.

Corp. M. T. King Dies of Wounds

Another Peterboro' Artilleryman Gives His Life for the Empire

To-day's official casualty list contains the name of another Peterborough artilleryman, who has given his life for the Empire, in the person of Corp. Merwyn Thos. King, of the 1st Canadian Artillery Brigade, and formerly head bookkeeper in the Accounting Department of the Canadian General Electric Co. Corp. King is officially reported died of wounds on June 23. He had been an employee of the C. G. E. for over a year, coming to Peterborough from Toronto, where he had bee nemployed by the Canada Metal Company. He was a university man, bright, clever and amiable, and during his residence in Peterborough made many friends. He left here with the 24th Field Battery detachment last August. Corp. King came originally from England, but had lived in Canada for a long time, for some years residing in the Canadian West.

ORANGE BLOSSOMS

The Duke of Manchester Lodge is there with the music. They have volume and play well together, and they have an extensive repertoire.

It was a dry day, without and likewise within.

Last night some of the boys "paraded" in an automobile. It was the first time fife and drum music was heard from a car.

Duke of Manchester wound up their parade last night with "Auld Lang Syne," and they played it very well.

The familiar faces of some of the civic employees were to be seen in the parade at Cobourg yesterday.

Bro. John Shouldice, with Bethany L.O.L., No. 1022, at Cobourg yesterday was the oldest man and the oldest member of the order on parade. He is 96 years of age and has been an Orangeman for over 60 years.

The naming at Cobourg of Bethany L.O.L. No. 1022, as the winners of the prize for the best dressed members, with the largest number on parade, was popular with the spectators. Bethany had 140 members on parade. They have 157 members on the roll but a number of the veterans were unable to be out.

The twelfth of July exodus from the city yesterday was not so large as that of last year by about 200 people when the celebration was held at Lindsay. Anything in Scugogville is a good drawing card.

Ald. James Edgar attended the celebration in Cobourg yesterday with the banner of the Duke of Manchester Lodge.

The three Peterborough Lodges which went to the "Walk" at Cobourg had a large turn-out of the brethren.

A good many local citizens awoke to the crash of the fife and drum at 5 o'clock yesterday morning. Two drummers and two Orangemen with fifes paraded some of the principal streets at an early hour.

Many a good Orange lad, who has crossed sea water since last twelfth, with the same spirit that King William and his gallant followers crossed the Boyne, was remembered yesterday.

The twelfth of July, 1916, will be celebrated in Peterborough.

Many Peterborough County Orangemen were in the parade at Belleville.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell of Belleville, who presided over the gathering there yesterday, has been a member of the order for 71 years.

When several local people missed the train at Cobourg last night they called on the local Jitney 'Bus, which was sent to the rescue.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS BACK HAD A GREAT TIME AT ANNUAL CAMP

Twenty-five boys returned from the Y.M.C.A. 12 days' outing at Sandy Point, Clear Lake, Saturday evening, in health and strength and feeling the benefit of camping in the open air.

The camp this year was a good success from every point of view. No accidents marred the pleasure of the outing and the good fellowship among the boys was in keeping with the camp motto, "Each for all and all for each."

The camp was in charge of Boys' Secretary Galley, assisted by Mr. Carle, M. C. Nichols, Roy White and Ralph Meserve as leaders, while Mrs. Galley and Mrs. James had charge of the dining tent and cooking. Too much credit cannot be given Mrs. James for the manner in which she looked after the meals for the boys. This is the most important feature of a camp from a boys' point of view, and no boy ever left the table complaining that he did not get enough to eat.

Every morning after breakfast Bible study was conducted for the boys. The study this year was, "Life Problems of School Boys." There were ten sessions of this class with a total attendance of 230 boys.

A special feature of the camp this year was a scow with sleeping quarters on it, in which ten of the older boys lived. The scow was also used for swimming off. A good spring board was erected on it and the boys had the time of their lives jumping and diving into the water off it. The scow was kindly lent to the Y.M.C.A. by Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, coal and wood dealer.

The baseball league this year was a great success. A new diamond was erected on it and the boys had ball was used, which made the game much faster and more interesting Weldon Fanning's team won the pennant for 1915 and the brand of ball played by this team would make any Canadian league team sit up and take notice.

The quoit tournament proved very interesting and was won by Roderick Cafferon.

Friday afternoon, July 9th the aquatic sports were run off. Perhaps no sport at a boys' camp is enjoyed as much as the water sports. Harold Patterson captured the honours in the senior events. While Jack Fanning carried off the honours in the junior.

Several trips were made in the war canoe to different points on the lakes. The cottagers enjoy watching the boys go up and down the lakes in the big canoe, All the paddles keeping time makes a very pretty sight.

One thing that makes the boys' camp so pleasant is the kindness shown the boys by the cottagers along the shore. Mr. and Mrs. Brock invited the boys to their cottage Sunday evening for a song service. Miss Brock rendered several vocal solos in her usual capable manner. Short talks were given the boys by Mr. Brock, Mr. Madill and Mr. Meserve.

Mr. Harry Fitzgerald of Lakefield, who has always shown his interest in the boys' camp, took the boys for a trip in his motor boat to Ell's Creek, where the day was spent in sightseeing and swimming.

Mr. Brock towed the boys in their war canoe behind his launch so fast to Young's Point Saturday that sometimes you would think that you were in an aeroplane instead of behind a motor boat.

Mrs. Harry Fitzgerald of Lakefield, who has her summer cottage at Sandy Point, put the climax on all good things when she made the camp a present of five dollars in cash. Mrs Fitzgerald is one of the best friends the boys have on the lakes. Whenever the camp was in need of anything it was always supplied by Mrs. Fitzgerald. The boys appreciate the kindness shown them by Mrs. Fitzgerald more than words can express.

The banquet tendered the boys on Thursday night by Mrs. Galley and Mrs. James was a feature of the camp which will long be remembered by the boys. The big dining tent was beautifully decorated with Chinese lanterns and buntings of red, white and blue. The menu was of the highest order and it would do your heart good to see the boys get away with the good things provided by the ladies. Mr. Douglas Hay on behalf of the boys, thanked the ladies for their kindness and assured them that they would be looking for the same treatment next year.

The management of the camp wish to thank the following people for gifts for the boys: Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, Miss Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Fanning, Mr. Wall, Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Williamson, Toronto, Mr. Ross Dobbin, Mr. W. B. Campbell, Mr. Richardson and Mr. Carson of the Y. M.C.A.

The following gentlemen kindly took the boys to camp in their automobiles: Mr. Green, Mr. Lyle, Mr. Warne, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Mr. Ross Dobbin and Mr. Matthews.

RED CROSS WILL MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the Red Cross Society will be held on Wednesday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A. at 3.30. A full attendance of members is requested.

OVER 100 LODGES AT BELLEVILLE

Fifteen Thousand Attended the Celebration There Yesterday

Belleville, July 13.—One of the largest Orange Demonstrations held in Eastern Ontario took place at this city yesterday. Over 100 lodges were in the parade and upwards of 5,000 men marched. The procession was headed by Sir M. Bowell, Right Worshipful Brother E. H. McLean, of Bowmanville, the Grand Master for Ontario East; and many other prominent members of the order rode in automobiles. After parading the principal streets of the city, which were most appropriately decorated the procession marched to the Agricultural Park, where speeches were delivered. The gathering was presided over by Sir M. Bowell, who has been a member of the order for 71 years. He spoke, as did also E. G. Porter, K.C., M.P., B. R. Hepburn, M.P.; E. H. McLean, Rev. Mr. Barber, E. W. Tummon, Deputy Grand Master; R. Graham, of Kingston, and W. Boulter, of Picton. The day passed off most pleasantly without anything occurring to mar the proceedings. It was estimated that at least 15,000 visitors were in the city.

PTE. CONNELLY WRITES FROM SANDLING CAMP

Miss Gertrude Connelly has received the following letter from her brother, Pte. J. Y. Connolly, 21st Batt., 4th infantry Brigade, C.E.F., West Sandling Camp, England:

Kent, June 29th, 1914.

Dear Sister Gertrude, —Just a few lines to say I received your kind and welcome letter. I was glad to hear from you all. I had a letter from Brother Dan in France. Dan was in the best of health and spirits. This is a fine country, Getric, plenty of fresh air and beautiful scenery. Not much farming done over here; it is so much different to Canada. People different, everything different, but such is life. will write you a longer letter next time. Iam in a hurry going out to drill. Tell mother to send me her picture and give my love to the kids. Bye-bye,

From your lovin ghrother,
F. Y. Connelly.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

WHAT'S WRONG WITH BASEBALL? OTTAWA JOURNAL INQUIRES

The Ottawa Journal Says:

What's wrong with baseball?

From the four corners of North America comes the query—and little wonder. The International League has all but gone smash, many major league teams are facing financial disaster, most minor leagues are playing before empty stands, and many clubs are slated for the wayside with the season not half over.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, better known to baseball as Connie Mack, greatest leader of them all, answers the question in one word—"commercialism." Mr. Mack says that Mammon has eaten the heart out of all the sport that was left in baseball, the spirit of the old days when millions whistled "Casey at the bat," has fled, and the fans, realizing this, have quit the bleachers in disgust. Perhaps Mack is right. Professionalism, if kept clean, is all right, and can produce good athletic sport. But the temptations to set the golden calf above everything else are great, and seldom it is that professionalism does not succomb to the end. The fate of lacrosse here in Ottawa is a striking illustration of that.

Perhaps also another reason for the present state of baseball is that too many of the fans are more interested in the greater game of war. And if that be so in Canada, there's no cause for undue worry. Keeping baseball players from getting home is a great game but keeping Germans from getting there is infinitely more manly and greater.

LACROSSE TEAM WILL PRACTICE

The Peterborough lacrosse team will practice at Riverside Park tonight, at 6.30 o'clock, and every player is expected to be out sharp on time. The Petes have still a chance for the district, provided Hastings beats Campbellford to-morrow. The locals play in Millbrook on Thursday and the line-up for that game will be picked after to-night's practice, while there will be a light work-out to-morrow night.

BIRMINGHAM TESTS IRONCLAD CONTRACT

Cleveland, Ohio, July 12.—Joseph L. Birmingham, formerly manager of the Cleveland American League Baseball Team, today filed an action for $20,000 in Common Pleas Court here against Charles W. Somers, the owner of the team, to recover salary and damages alleged to be due because Somers terminated his contract, discharged him as manager and released him as a member of the team.

Birmingham's petition says his contract was for the seasons of 1914, 1915 and 1916, at $6,000 a year, with $1,500 additional as an option on his services and that it contained no ten days' clause, being what has come to be termed an "iron-clad" contract. He says that he was paid his salary to June 1, 1915, and claims it is due until October 15, 1915.

The action is expected to be a test of the so-called "iron-clad" contract, which displaced the ten day clause after certain court decisions held the latter invalid, following the coming into the major league field of the Federal league and the consequent raids on clubs of organized ball and jumping of several star players.

MANY MACHINE GUNS GIVEN.

Large Number of Orders Sent to Militia Dept. at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Ont., July 12.—The statement was made by Hon. Senator Lougheed, acting Minister of Militia that since the announcement the other day that gifts of machine guns would be acceptable to the Government, a large number of offers have been received, while inquiries as to procedure on the part of the donors are even more numerous. In all cases those who desire to make gifts of machine guns are being advised that the money should be sent to the department which will arrange for the machine, the guns to be allotted to the regiment named by the donors.

NEUTRALS COME OVER AND HELP US

Neutrals come over, don't delay;
There's honour in the Allies' sleigh;
Humanity shouts loud to-day
  In the European war.
The Kaiser seems to have a vow,
To conquer the world, through and through;
It's life or death to England now,
  In the European war.

Nobility leads in the war—
Kings, Princes, Dukes, and Russian Czar,
All fighting in the Allies' car,
  In the European war.
Fight on, fight on to victory,
For God Almighty's liberty;
Murderers should have no pity,
  In the European war.

Sodom and Gomorrah did sin;
The same God is Judge of Berlin;
Murdering little children,
  In the European war.
Sodom and Gomorrah was then,
Read in Genesis, chapter ten;
Nineteenth verse tells where and when,
  Of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Germany is now in a shake,
To see what way the ball will take,
Should Uncle Sam now use his rake,
  In the European war.
The Lusitania murder
Sets the whole world now in wonder,
Will Uncle Sam knuckle under,
  In the European war.

PAINTING VERANDAH FURNITURE.

Take any piece of furniture that you wish to finish in white, rub it down thoroughly with double 00 sandpaper, and go over it with a rag dampened in gasoline. Then put on your first coat of paint, with long, sweeping strokes, to get a smooth finish. Let this dry a least two days, then sandpaper with a very fine grade and put on another coat of flat white. Allow this to dry and harden for another two days, and rub with wire wool (you can get enough for your purpose for five cents at a paint store). Then put on the last coat, and when this has become dry rub it down with rotten stone or powdered pumice and water. While the process takes some time, the result will repay you tenfold.

Until you experiment with the painting and decorating of furniture you cannot appreciate how much money may be saved.

In second-hand shops verandah furniture—such as benches, tables, wooden chairs, etc., often is offered at surprisingly low prices; and all they need is a coat or two of paint.

FIRST AMERICAN-MADE AMMUNITION FOR ALLIES LOADED ON BOARD SHIP—The S.S. Colorado taking on ammunition for the Allies to be shipped from America. This is one of five freighters now similarly employed in Gravesend Bay, New York.

History.

History is no museum of antiquities; it is a storehouse of political wisdom for him who will take the trouble to understand. Every boy and girl who has reached a fair degree of maturity can be trained to interpret the past in terms of the present in the light of the past. And unless history shall come to serve this broadly social purpose in our high schools, it will find itself with the has been of pedagogical tradition in the educational junkheap.—J. Lynn Barnard.

Days in a Year.

At the examination of the pupils in a primary school a short time ago the inspector put questions at random to the scholars. Among the latter was a red headed lad, who, on being asked how many days there are in a year, answered "seven." When the tittering of the rest of the class subsided the inspector remarked:

"I said a year, not a week. Now try again. How many days are there in a year?"

The lad appeared nonplussed and vexed for a moment and then ejaculated:

"Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday—just seven. If there's others I never heard of 'em."—London Globe.

Our Submarine, the Holland.

An ignominious end marks the career of the Holland, the first modern submarine owned by this country. Perfected by John J. Holland, the little vessel was sold to the government a number of years ago. The craft was fifty-three feet in length, with a displacement of seventy-five tons, compared with the modern submarine of 1,000 tons which the government has decided to build. One of the features of the boat was the aerial gun in the bow, which could throw a shell of high explosives nearly a mile. All that remains of the Holland lies filled with sand and water in the Delaware river.—Argonaut.

Gentle Persuasion.

Shortly after our Spanish war a lady in New York asked her colored cook to get her husband to come over and help move some furniture. She noticed that the negro man had several bad scars on his head.

"Was your husband in the war, Dinah?" she asked.

"No, ma'am."

"How did he get all those scars on his head?" she asked.

"Oh, dat's what we's had words!"

"How could you, Dinah? He seems like a nice man," said the mistress.

"Oh, he's good 'nough now, but it took a lot of work wid de tater masher to persuade him to be good!"—Chicago News.

Uses Animals Make of Their Tails.

Horses, cows and other creatures use their tails as fly flappers. Cats, squirrels and many more twist them around their necks for comforters. The rat has raised the use of the tail to a fine art, for by its means it guides the blind and steals jelly, oil and cream out of jars and bottles. The macaco plays as merrily with its tail as a kitten does, and the marmoset while it sleeps uses its tail as a sort of blanket. The raccoon catches crabs with its tail. Every one knows how the monkeys journey through pathless forests by swinging from tree to tree, while the fishes steer their way through the water by their tail fins. The ant eater uses its big bushy tail as an umbrella.

Death Dealing Kisses.

The most famous example of kisses that have caused death is furnished by the story of the sprightly young Duchess of Gordon, who raised so many recruits for the famous Gordon highlanders. In the early days of the regiment recruiting was very slow, but the duchess attired herself in the regimental colors and made a tour of the various markets and fairs, offering to each recruit a guinea and a kiss.

Most of the recipients paid for the kiss with their lives. No sooner was the regiment raised than it was sent to fight the French, and in the first engagement in which the duchess' recruits participated there was a loss of 300 killed and wounded. All the right flanking company was hit save one, and he, curiously enough, did not happen to be a recipient of the young duchess' kiss. He was a canny Aberdeenshire man, and for an extra guinea he sold his right to another person to a kiss from the duchess' ruby lips.—London Graphic.

The Fire Worshipers.

Azerbaijan, a province in northwestern Persia, is the home of the descendants of the Ghebers, the ancient fire worshipers of Persia. The whole countryside is admirably adapted to the propagation of a fire worshiping creed, for earthquakes and caverns vomiting fumes from subterranean conflagrations abound in the neighborhood of Tabriz. One of the most remarkable caverns in the world is that of Secundereah, whose character resembles the Grotto del Cane of Naples. It gives off noxious fumes, which at certain times are certain death to man and beast. But the most astonishing place in Azerbaijan is the ruined city of Takht-i-Suleimaun, or Solomon's temple. The city stands on a hill 150 feet high, with a wall of thirty feet embracing the crumbling remains of temple and shrine. In the midst is a "lake of deepest azure." Although most of the buildings are of the Mohammedan period, there is one striking mass which has been identified as the temple of the fire worshipers.

A Bit Tired.

A somewhat weather beaten tramp, being asked what was the matter with his coat, replied: "Insomnia. It hasn't had a nap in ten years."—Christian Register.

Didn't Startle Rossetti.

Among authors there are some who take but the slightest interest in social or political questions. So far as public questions are concerned they are hardly better informed than Dante Gabriel Rossetti. During the French revolution one of his friends burst into Rossetti's studio with the incredible news, "Louis Philippe has landed in England." "Has he?" said Rossetti calmly. "What has he come for?"

Caught.

"I was looking at some new style twenty dollar hats today," said his wife, "and I brought this one home to see what you think of it."

"Frightful," said her husband.

"That's what I thought. This is a cheap five dollar hat. Let me have $15."—Philadelphia Ledger.

That Was Different.

"Why don't you get an automobile?"

"Because I don't know whether or not I could manage one."

"You didn't let that consideration stop you when you wanted a wife."—Boston Transcript.

OPENING OF CONGRESS HALL, MONTREAL

Bishop O'Brien Assisted in Dedicatory Proceedings, Also in Eucharistic Congress

MONTREAL, July 12.—Congress Hall, which His Grace Archbishop Bruchesi prophesied last year would become a place of prayer, charity and fine arts, was solemnly dedicated yesterday afternoon with grandeur, and according to the liturgy of the Church. Among the clergy present were Archbishops Bruchesi of Montreal, Spratt, of Kingston, and McNeill of Victoria, B.C.; Right Rev. Bishops P. J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of New York; Budka of the Greek-Ruthenian rite, Winnipeg; Rice, of Burlington, Vt.; M. J. O'Brien, of Peterboro; Morrison, of Antigonish; Ryan, of Pembroke; and O'Leary of Charlottetown, and numbers of priests. There was also a very large attendance of the laity.

An inspiring incident occurred immediately preceding the arrival of the procession when the Lieutenant Governor, Hon. P. E. Le Blanc, accompanied by his A.D.C., Capt. Pelletier, took his seat in the special pew reserved for him in the nave. At sight of the King's representative the massed choirs, under the direction of Professor P. J. Shea, sang "God Save the King," the vast congregation joining in the chorus.

Church Was Scene of Beauty.

The interior of the church, comprising pillars, arches, ceilings, the many grand marble altars, the flank and transept windows, with their masterly varied tracery seen through the arches from the choir loft, presented a coup d'oeil, which, accentuated by the streaming festoons, etc., struck the beholder with awe and admiration.

The ensemble, with its simple decorative effect, at once appealing as it did, in an enchanting manner to the heart and mind of the most casual observer.

Sermon An Outstanding Feature.

Of the many features of the morning service, not the least outstanding was the scholarly sermon which was delivered by Right Rev. Bishop Patrick J. Hayes, auxiliary Bishop of New York. He took for his text: "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is made the head of the corner," Ps. 117.

TWO FINNS HELD SWAY IN COUNTY COURT TO-DAY

English Language Failed as a Medium Between the Court and And. Toivio

County Magistrate Langley heard a case in Finnish this afternoon when Abdrew Toivio, a Finn, arrested on July 5th, in Norwood, by the Village constable, Mr. Puffer, was heard on a charge of vagrancy. Charles Johannson (Finn for Johnson) a nomad peddler of shoe laces, who has been in the city several days, was used as interpreter. Toivio had a pipe and two packages of tobacco when arrested. Otherwise he had his clothing, and they were rather far gone. The two Finns had quite a confab and Magistrate Langley had to call them up short frequently. Johannson speaks Swedish, German, and understands Russian. The case was proceeding at 3 o'clock.

Judgment Given For Plaintiff

In Case of Mahood vs. Hayes But Costs Have to Be Paid by the Plaintiff Mahood

His Honour Judge Huycke delivered the following judgment to-day in the case of F. T. Mahood against John E. Hayes, tried at the recent June sessions of the County Court, in which Mr. Mahood claimed $220.04 in connection with a cement work contract with Mr. Hayes:

A special verdict was taken from the jury, which was in every instance in favour of the plaintiff. The only question reserved for me was the quantity of concrete put in on the C. G.E. work by plaintiff for defendant. In making this computation I have given plaintiff the benefit of every uncertainty possible under the evidence as to the quantities. I am not at all sure that he is entitled to all of them, but the differences are very slight and I prefer to do this rather than to inflict upon him a possible, though small, injustice. I accordingly allow him 4,533 cu. ft. concrete, or 167.88 cu. yds. at $7.00, amounting to $167.88

Add for wages admitted 4.06

$171.93

Deduct

Cash paid $80.00

Amt. for smoothing cement surface as jury allowed 22.10

Bal. to plaintiff ..... $ 59.83

For which plaintiff is hereby given judgment. Defendant therefore, owes plaintiff $59.83, and did so owe him at commencement of action. But tender was pleaded and I find proved. The first tender was $60 and the second $70, which last sum was paid in court. It is true these tenders were made by cheque only, but the circumstances of refusal of render both tenders good. I must find accordingly. These tenders, both or either of them, constitute a good defence and the costs of the action must therefore be paid by plaintiff forthwith after taxation.

Of the money in court, $1.17 is the defendants, and the balance, $59.83, belongs to plaintiff. This balance will be applied on defendant's costs of action when ascertained by taxation.

The Fate of the Waterloo Lion

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 14.— The Germans have stolen the famous bronze lion statue from the Field of Waterloo and have melted it down because they are short of metal for their guns and shells.

Mme. Vandervelde, wife of the Belgian Minister of State, announced the theft while speaking at a meeting of the National Committee for Relief in Belgium at Apsley House, Piccadilly, at which the Duke and Duchess of Wellington, who have so kindly lent it this afternoon, that I have just seen a lady who was able to escape from Brussels.

"As she left Brussels she passed through Waterloo and saw the Germans actually taking away the wonderful bronze lion which has been there for nearly a century, having been put up a little time after the famous victory.

"This lady was able to speak to a German soldier, and she said to him: 'Why are you taking this lion away?' and he replied: 'Oh, it is made of copper and bronze, and we want to use it for our shells.'"

Germany Thus Describes the Triumph in South-West Africa.

LONDON, July 14.—According to a Rotterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., the German Colonial Office, in a statement relative to the surrender of the German forces in South-West Africa, says:

"If this surrender actually has taken place it was due to the overwhelming superiority of the British forces and occurred under the most honourable circumstances. It is the first British victory of the war and was won by a Boer General, and it will not affect the ultimate result of the war."

Austrians Try By Night Attacks To Break Into Italy

Special Cable to The Examiner:

UNDINE, via Paris, July 14.— According to reports from the front, the Austrians are making desperate efforts to penetrate Italy through the Carnic Alps. They rely chiefly upon night attacks, but these so far have invariably failed.

The Italians have retorted by redoubling their efforts against all the forts protecting the Pusteria Valley along the River Drave, as, with the occupation of Innishen or Toblach, on that river and on the railway line, Trent could be re-supplied only through Innsbruck.

After having bombarded Platzwiefe and the newly terraced Fort Landro, the most important of the system of fortifications closing the great Alemagna road leading to Austria, the Italians are now giving their attention to the forts which form the flank protection of that highway. These are all armoured, and each is divided into two sections, one provided with armoured casemates for long range cannon and the other with machine guns for near defence. All have steel cupolas.

RUSSIANS SEND HOME ITALIAN PRISONERS

SPECIAL CABLE:

GENEVA, via Paris, July 14. —The Italians are advancing very slowly of late, as the task of breaking through the natural Alpine fortresses has become more difficult, now that the Austrians have been fully reinforced. One of the chief difficulties the Italians are meeting with is the destruction of the wire entanglements in the mountain passes, which has to be accomplished by indirect artillery fire.

According to an Innsbruck despatch the Germans are concentrating a new army, under command of General Lundendorf, in the vicinity of Munich. Its destination is said to be Trent.

The Russians are sending back to Italy about six thousand Italians who were taken prisoners as part of the Austrian forces in the Galician campaign. The men will be returned by way of Roumania.

As the Austrian aviators outnumber the Italian airmen France is sending some of her aviators to Italy.

He also forecasted that German troops would be out of Belgium by Christmas and the war over in 1916.

How to Make Straight Hair Curly

(Society Talk.)

To make straight hair nice and curly in one night by merely applying plain liquid silmerine—that's one of the best beauty secrets that has leaked out in a long time. Some peculair property of this harmless fluid causes the hair to dry in just the prettiest, most natural looking curls and crosses imaginable. It is valuable as a dressing also, as it puts new life and lustre into dead-looking hair.

This means that the singeing, drying, curling iron can now be dispensed with forever! A few ounces of the liquid silmerine, which may be found in any drug store, will keep the hair in wave for weeks. It is neither sticky nor greasy, and is really quite an agreeable thing to use. It can be applied with a clean tooth brush before retiring—and the transformation will afford a most pleasant surprise in the morning.

SPLENDID WORK OF THE CANADIANS ROUND FESTUBERT

Official Eye Witness Describes the Capture of Strong German Positions by the Canadian Forces---16th Canadian Scottish and the Canadian Artillery Especially Prominent.

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 13.—The intelligence branch at general headquarters of the British army in the field authorizes the publication of the following narrative by Sir Max Aitken, Canadian record officer, serving with the army in France:

At the Canadian battle-front — Things have transpired which made me learn the size and meaning of the game.

"I done no more than others did,
I don't know where the change began:
I started as an average kid,
I finished as a thinking man."
—Kipling.

I send you here a bald record of work in the trenches by our own people. It is couched almost in official phrases, but, now and then, I have interpolated some personal anecdote which may help to show you what triumphs and terrors and tragedy lie behind the smooth, impersonal stage directions of this war.

After the great battle of Langemarck, the Canadian division, worn out, but not shattered, retired into billets and rested until May 14th, when the headquarters moved to the southern section of the British line in readiness for new operations. During that time reinforcements had poured in from the Canadian base in England, where were gathered Dominion troops whose numbers and efficiency we owe to the large vision and untiring energy of the Minister of Militia and Defence.

Praise For General Hughes.

His direct and comprehensive methods are an example which the Empire might follow with advantage. On the 7th of May, the remade infantry brigades advanced towards the firing line once more. The attack followed.

It must be understood that on the afternoon of May 18th the 3rd brigade occupied reserve trenches, two companies of the 14th Royal Montreal regiment commanded by Lieut.-Col. Meighen and two companies of the 16th Canadian Scottish, under Lieut.-Col. Leckie being ordered to make an immediate advance on La Quinque, due northwest of an orchard which had been placed in a state of defence by the enemy. One company of the 16th Canadian Scottish was to make a flanking movement on the enemy's position in the orchard by way of an old German communication trench, and as this attack was to be made, of course, in conjunction with a frontal one, little time was available to make dispositions.

As there was no opportunity to reconnoitre the ground, it was very difficult to determine the proper objective. The flanking company of the 16th Battalion reached its allotted position, but after the advance of the remaining company of that regiment and the 14th, under very heavy shell fire, the proper direction was not maintained. The detachments reached part of their objective, but owing to the lack of covering fire it was undesirable at the moment to make an attack on the orchard. The companies were told to dig themselves in, and connect up with the Wiltshire Battalion on their right and the Coldstream Guards on their left. They had then gained 500 yards. Lieut.-Col. Leckie sent up the other two companies of the 16th Canadian Scottish to assist in the digging and to relieve the original two companies at daybreak.

During the night the companies of the 14th Battalion Royal Montreal Regiment, were also withdrawn and the trench occupied by these was taken over by stretching out the Coldstream Guards on one flank and the 16th Canadian Scottish on the other.

Orchard Attack Ordered.

On the morning of the 20th orders were issued for an attack on the orchard that night. A reconnaissance of the position was made by Major Leckie, brother of Lieut.-Col. Leckie, when patrols were sent out, one of which very neatly managed to escape, being cut off by the enemy, and another suffered a few casualties. This showed the Germans were in force and that an attack on the orchard would be no night work. That night the Canadian Scottish occupied a deserted house close to the German lines, and succeeded in establishing ther two machine guns and a garrison of thirty men. The enemy were evidently not aware of the possession of this house for although they bombarded all the British trenches with great severity throughout the whole of the next day, this little garrison was left untouched. The attacking detachment under Major Rae consisted of two companies of the Canadian Scottish, one commanded by Capt. Morrison, the other by Major Peck.

48th To Attack On Right.

The attack was to take place at 7:45 p.m., and at the same time the 15th Battalion, 48th Highlanders, were directed to make an assault of a position several hundred yards to the right. During that afternoon the orchard was very heavily bombarded by our artillery, increasing in severity up to the delivery of the attack. Promptly to the minute the guns ceased and the two companies climbed out of their trenches to advance.

At the same instant the two machine guns situated in the advanced position opened on the enemy. As the advance was carried out in broad daylight, the movements were at once seen by the enemy, and immediately a torrent of machine gun, rifle fire, and shrapnel was directed upon our troops. Their steadiness and discipline were remarkable, and were greatly praised by the officers of the Coldstream Guards, who were on our left. When they reached the edge of the orchard, an unexpected obstacle presented itself in the form of a deep ditch, and on the further side a wired hedge. Without hesitation, however, the men plunged through the ditch in some places up to their necks in water, and made for some previously-reconnoitred gaps in the hedge. Not many Germans had stayed in the orchard during the bombardment. The bulk of the garrison, according to the usual German method under, our artillery fire, had evidently retreated to the support trenches in the rear. A few had been left behind to man a machine gun redoubt near to the centre of the orchard with the idea of holding up our advancing infantry till the enemy, withdrawn during the bombardment, could return in full strength.

These machine guns retreated when the Canadians came.

On the far side of the orchard the Germans, following their system indicated above, came to contest the situation, but the onset of the Canadians forced them to beat a hasty retreat. Although double our numbers they could not be induced to face a hand-to-hand fight.

Three platoons cleared the orchard, while a fourth platoon, advancing towards the north side, were hampered by a very awkward ditch which forced them to make a wide detour so they did not arrive in the orchard until its occupation was complete, the men dug themselves in on the far side of the orchard, where there was another wired ditch.

German Troops Wouldn't Go.

The Germans could be heard in their trench, about fifty yards away, chattering and talking to one another; the officers, too, were heard giving commands and apparently trying to force their men to attack. But nothing would persuade the German troops to expose themselves. One company did not go into the orchard, but pushed forward and occupied an abandoned German trench running in a south-westerly direction to prevent any flank counter-attack being made by the enemy. They found themselves in a very exposed position, and consequently suffered heavily. The casualties in proportion to the number employed in the attack were heavy for all engaged, but the position was a very important one, having twice repulsed assault by other regiments. Had our advance been less rapid, the enemy would, no doubt, have got back into this position and our task might have been impossible. They argued, as I have said, that any attack might be held up by the machine guns in the redoubt, and in the fortified positions on the flank for long enough to enable them to return to the orchard after our bombardment had ceased and throw us back.

The speed, with which our asault was carried out prevented this altogether.

The drawback to drill book tactics is that if one side does not keep the rules the other suffers, and a citizen army will not keep to the rules. For example, not long after the affair of the orchard, a Canadian battalion put up a little arrangement with the ever-adaptable Canadian artillery in its rear. The artillery opened heavy fire on a section of the German trenches, while the battalion made a rather ostentatious parade of fixing bayonets, rigging trench ladders, and whistling commands as a prelude to an attack the instant the bombardment should cease. The Germans, who are experts in these matters, promptly retired to their supporting trenches and left the storm to range in front, ready to rush forward the instant it stopped and meet the Canadian attack.

Called Canadian Sam Slick.

"So far all went perfectly. Our guns lifted from the front trenches and shelled the supporting trenches, as is laid down by the best authorities, to prevent the Germans coming up. The Germans, nevertheless, came and crowded into the front trenches. But there was no infantry attack whatever. That deceitful Canadian battalion had not moved. Only the guns shortened range once more and the blast of their fire fell on the Germant front trench, now satisfactorily filled with men. Next day German wireless announced that 'a desperate attack had been heavily repulsed,' but the general sense of the enemy was more accurately represented by a 'hyphenated' voice that cried out peevishly next evening 'Say, Sam Slick, no dirty tricks to-night.'

"The 16th Battalion, Canadian Scottish," includes detachments from the 72nd Seaforths of Vancouver, the 78th Camerons of Winnipeg, the 50th Gordons of Victoria, and the 91st Highlanders of Hamilton, so all Canada from Ontario to the Pacific ocean was represented in the orchard that night.

Royal Highlanders' Losses Heavy.

"At seven o'clock in the evening of the 20th the 13th battalion Royal Highlanders, of the 3rd brigade, under Lieut.-Col. Loomis, advanced across the British trenches under heavy shell fire with severe losses in support of the 16th battalion, Canadian Scottish.

The attack on the orchard having succeeded, three companies of the 13th Battalion Royal Highlanders immediately marched forward.

As four officers of one company, including the officers commanding, had been severely wounded the company was taken over by Major Buchanan, the second in command of the regiment. A fourth company marched to a support trench immediately in the rear. The position was then consolidated and the 16th Battalion, after its hard work and brilliant triumph, withdrew.

Toronto Regt. Relieved Highlanders.

Next afternoon the enemy in their trenches made a demonstration fifty

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"Is that the message you really want to send her?" asked Josiah, in the kindliest tones you could imagine.

"No, no, no," sez Kastle, "tell her to get well as quick as she can because I fairly ache with loneliness for her."

"I sure will," sez I, and then Kastle's eyelids drooped, and me and old Josiah stole from the room.

"Poor man," he murmured, as he sat beside his door and offered me his tobacco pouch, "poor man."

After a few minutes, as we sat smokin' thoughtful, we heard the sick man begin to mutter. "The curse of my family has been on me all my life," sez he, "and I can't shake it off. I've changed my name, and my abiding place, and my ways of life; but the Stannard curse still follows, and still I injure the very ones whom I ort to cherish. Oh, will it never end?"

Teh voice just drawled jerkily along like a feller talkin' in his sleep; but I heard a stir beside me, and there was the old hermit leanin' forward and frozen stiff with interest. His eyes were set and bright, his hand stuck out with the fingers spread as though about to catch somethin', and his mouth was a bit open as though he was drinkin' in the words for fear his ears might miss somethin'. "The Stannard curse, the Stannard curse," he muttered. "So this is George Stannard!"

He settled back in his place with a grim expression of satisaction on his face, his eyes were closed, but his lips kept movin' a little. "No wonder the gel reminded me of her," he murmured, and then he sighed.

Then his face set a little and his hands tightened. "Sittin' right here at my cabin door," sez he, with a threatenin' grin, "and havin' George Stannard come right to me! Oh, I'll have my revenge now, I'll have my revenge, now. The comedy, the low, low comedy of life!"

He had plumb forgot me, but I hadn't forgot myself and was all puffed out with excitement. It was as plain as a mountain; here was the old hermit with every nerve and sinew tuned to the highest pitch, with his feelin' settled on the gel who had come to him out of the dawn and who had won him for herself and before he had the slightest notion that she was the daughter of that other gel he had once loved; while inside, broken and frail and weakly, lay the man who had double-crossed him, the man who had cut him off from his own and had set him to huntin' like the lone wolf, the man who had been a treacherous friend, a sneakin' lover, and an unforgivin' father. Once before the hands of the old hermit had been taken from this man's throat to please a gel, but now he had the field to himself, and he was plannin' his revenge. It sent the shivers up and down my back.

I'm not overly squeamish, and I could see where it would be better all around for Kastle to be removed and for old Josiah to be Kate's father in earnest; but at the thought of this powerful man takin' it out on a broken old wreck like Kate's father, why I balked right there.

Kastle kept up his babblin' in on the bed, and presently old Josiah stood up and stepped softly inside, followed by his two dogs. He went to a corner, pulled a skin aside and took out some bottles. His face was shinin' with a wicked sort of gladness as he measured out the drugs, and I kept turnin' over rumours I'd heard about slow poisons, and stuff that made ya go insane, until I reached my own limit.

Hellion was lyin' off to the right and I walked over and patted his head, holdin' my hand on it a moment to get his attention. If it came to a mix-up inside, I didn't intend to have the wolf dogs to deal with, too. Old Josiah, himself, had told me that Hellion could keep both of his dogs busy, and I had a notion that if I had to try handlin' that old hermit, I'd appreciate havin' his two dogs fully occupied.

I stepped inside and I can recall yet how queer my voice sounded when I got close to him and sez in a low tone: "Mr. Cornell, what are you goin' to do?"

"I'm mixin' together some"—he named over several foreign drugs—"which I think are about what the patient needs."

His whole face was beamin' as though he was already gloatin' over what effect these would have.

"What'll this do to him?" sez I as stern as ever.

He loked at me intent, the gloating left his face and it got serious. "Come with me," sez he, settin' his done on a table and goin' outside.

He took me a little distance from the cabin, looked at me curious, and sez: "You think I'm fixin' to poison him, don't ya?"

I bobbed my head, and he sez: "What made ya think that?"

So I clean-breasted the whole thing, remindin' him of all he had told me on the very ride we had made to get Kastle, about how fierce he had loved when young and what a quick temper he'd had, how he had trusted a man, and the man had been false to him, how the gel he had loved had finally gone to that man and had begged for him when he, himself, was about to finish him with his own hands, how I had heard him mutterin' to himself about Kate bein' the daughter of the gel he had once loved, and that he was now goin' to get his revenge.

The old hermit stood quiet before me while I was upbraidin', and his face kept grave and grim. "Don't you think I've got a right to take revenge?" sez he.

"Oh, I reckon you got a right to," sez I; "and if he was able to defend himself, it wouldn't be so bad; but he's all broke up as it is, and—"

"Listen," sez he, "that man in there is my cousin. His name is Stannard and so is mine, and as he sez, a curse has followed the name—we hurt those we care most for. My father tried to save my mother from drowning and she clasped him about, holdin' his arms. He was nearly as large as I am, but he couldn't break the grip, and they both drowned. This has been the way all along.

"That man in there and myself were boyhood chums, he was an orphan, too, and we lived with our grandfather. We rode and swam and fished together and no two boys were ever closer. He was quiet while I had a wild streak in me, but we were good boys—I can say it, now—we were good boys.

"We both fell in love with the same girl, Kate Kastle—and now you can see why I took so to this Kate Kastle. I felt she must be related in some way, though I never suspected how until this afternoon. If she'd had any other name but her own mother's I think even my stupidity would have seen through it, but there isn't a thing about this weak old man to remind me of the George Stannard I used to know. I was perfectly frank and open with my love, while he was quiet in this as in everything else. The whole countryside knew of my feelings, even I did not suspect his.

"Our grandfather hoped to break the family curse by fitting us for lives of service; George was to be a minister, I to be a doctor, and after a classical course together, we also took our professional courses together. He was the better student, I was the more popular, but nothin' ever shook our friendship."

Old Josiah went on to tell how George kept studyin' harder at night, while he gradually got to pirutin' around a little in search of festivity. He said after finishin' his studyin', George would go for a walk to exercise his blood around and put him in the mood for sleep, and how durin' their last year, George had wandered on this walk into a part of the town where a minister scholar wasn't supposed to have any call to wander, and there had seen two toughs imposin' on a woman. He said that George was a high-minded boy in spite of his bookishness and that he had tied right into the toughs and knocked 'em down.

Then, just as old Josiah had arrived on the scene on his way home, all alone, but still chucklin' over some prank he had been up to, the toughs had arose and had started for George with knives, slung-shots, and similar implements. He said George had a wealth o' courage, but his muscles had got a little flabby, and that the fool woman had also turned on him and grabbed him by the arms.

The old hermit's face lit up with the trace of a grin here. "I was purty strong as a young man," sez he, "and I amused myself for some time by knockin' those toughs about freely, while George held the woman. I didn't try to put the toughs out, just played with 'em as a cat tantalizes a mouse; and then the woman gave a scream, George gave a cry, some one struck me from behind, I whirled and saw a new man, a big, burly fellow right close to me and a policeman a block away. 'Run, George,' I sez, for I didn't want him to get into any trouble, and I started to run, too. The woman and the smallest of the first two troughs, grabbed hold of me and yelled for help, and the rest ran away."

The policeman took the three of them in, and old Josiah thought it a fine joke until the next mornin'. He told his tale to the judge, just callin' George a friend of his, and the woman told her tale. She said that she was the wife of the little man and that they were strangers, and had got into the wrong part of the town and had been set upon by four men who tried to take her away from her husband.

Well, it seems that the college boys had been purty frisky in that town and that old Josiah had been noticeable on account of his size and also because when any pranks were pulled off, he was generally found in the fornt ranks. About all the policemen were willin' to contribute a little somethin' to his general reputation, and none of 'em had ever seen the woman before. He said 'at the judge was tempted to sympathize with him and had said if he would produce his friend as a witness, it would have a big effect; but this Josiah refused to do, as his grandfather had got mightily set on the effect it would have on the family curse for George to be a minister, and so Josiah bein' without witnesses had a noble fine hung on him and the woman's story got by without a hitch.

BLOOD WILL TELL

LONDON, July 14.—Many young men have been lost in France by the fact that their blood was out of order and impure when they started out in this campaign as soldiers at the front. Many of them never reached the battle line because they were taken sick in camp, due to stomach and bowel troubles, and with blood powerless to resist. Young men and old men in Canada should be just as watchful of their blood to see that it is pure, that their stomach is acting well and the liver active.

It takes lots of vitality, nervous force and strength to win a race. Blood must be pure and good.

Keep the nerves nourished, the heart strong, the head cool, the stomach vigorous, the liver active with a tonic which has stood the test of time and has a wide reputation, such as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is the world's great Blood Purifier; it enters joints, dissolves the impure deposits and carries them out, as it does all impurities, through the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

If you have indigestion, sluggish liver, backache over the kidneys, nasal or other Catarrh, unsteady nerves or unsightly skin, get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery today and start at once to replace your impure blood with the kind that puts energy and ambition into you and bring back youth and vigorous action. —Advt.

HOW TO TREAT "BLACKHEADS"

Blackheads can be removed and you can prevent their return after once ridding the face of them. They are really dirt which is clogging the pores of the skin. The glands which get rid of the waste matter that the skin is continually throwing off, are choked up so that there is usually a collection of pimples as well as blackheads. By scrubbing with warm water and a bland castile soap you can remove the less obstinate ones.

Wring out a wash cloth in hot water and place it over the lower part of the face. Place another one over the upper part and as soon as they are cool remove and repeat the process. This will open the pores and make the work easy. Now apply a good cleansing cream.

After this wring out the cloths and remove the cream. With a soft linen cloth cover the finger and press out the blackheads. Remove a few at a time. It will require a steady treatment but this will be repaid in the end. After this rinse with hot water to which a few drops of witch hazel has been added. Finish with a bath of cold water to close the pores.

Symbols of Empire

BELGIUM.

TURKEY.

GREAT BRITAIN.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

By Mary Watts.

IN these days when the symbols of nationalism have come to assume unusual significance because of the conflict in which so many of the greatest nations of the earth are engaged it is interesting to consider the why and wherefore of the British lion, the double headed eagle of Austria-Hungary and of Russia, the lion rampant of Belgium, the lictor fasces of France and the crescent of Turkey, not to mention the many smaller heraldic emblems which are used in national coats of arms and all of which are closely linked with the history of the countries on whose shields they figure.

The eagle which fights on both sides of the present battle line in Poland is one of the most ancient heraldic figures. As a heraldic bird it is of pagan ancestry. The bird of Jove, it came to be adopted as the standard of Roman Emperors and remained in use after Christianity had been generally adopted. Charlemagne is said to have used it as his standard. The early German emperors used the eagle "displayed"—with body upright and the wings raised. This eagle forms the decoration of Charlemagne's sword, which is still preserved in Vienna.

Tradition states that Godfrey de Bouillon, first Christian King of Jerusalem, bore the eagle standard at the battle of Molsen in 1060. It was the standard adopted by Henry III., Holy Roman Emperor. The Vicars of the Empire and Lords of Its Marches also bore the eagle as their device as well as the Emperor and King of the Romans. In this way the eagle drifted into Italy as a heraldic emblem. The Count of Savoy as Margrave of the Empire in Italy bore the royal bird as his device. The single headed eagle displayed which represented the empire was also used as supporter of the Savoy escutcheon. It still appears on the Cross of the Order of the Crown of Italy. The single headed eagle which now figures as the main device of the standard of the German Empire had become the recognized standard of the Holy Roman Empire when Frederick Barbarossa was crowned at Rome in 1155.

Historians vary greatly in their accounts of the origin of the double headed eagle which is the principal figure upon the coats of arms of Austria-Hungary and Russia. According to most heraldic explorers the Holy Roman emperors borrowed the symbol of the double headed eagle from the Byzantine Emperors. When the Empire of the East declined it is said that Sigismund joined the eagles together and used them with one body and two heads as a symbol of his sovereignty over the two empires. But other historians declare that the Byzantine Emperors had taken the symbol from the Turkish dynasty of the Seljuks. Professor William Ramsay, of Aberdeen, finds that the Seljuk Emperors took the symbol, very probably, from the ruins of Eyuk, in Northern Cappadocia, where it appeared as one of the most important relics of an early civilization.

The double headed eagle descended to Austria-Hungary naturally through the Holy Roman Empire.

Russia acquired the double headed eagle as a heraldic charge in 1472 through the marriage of the Grand Duke Basilovitz of Moscow to Sophia, daughter of Thomas Paleologus and niece of the last Emperor of Byzantium, Constantine XIV. The Tsar of Servia and Bosnia also assumed the double headed eagle of Byzantium.

FRANCE.

After the double headed eagle had come to be known as the standard of the Holy Roman Empire the single headed eagle came to belong distinctively to the King of the Romans, who acquired the double headed device on his election to the imperial office.

In the arms of Russia the double headed eagle, sable, with red beak and claws, holds in its right claw the imperial sceptre and in its left the orb. On the breast of the eagle is a shield whereon are the arms of Moscow—the mounted figure of St. George slaying the dragon.

Around this shield are the collar and badge of the Russian order of Saint Andrew. On the right wing of the eagle there are four escutcheons. These represent the provinces of the Russian Empire:—Kazan, a dragon; Poland, an eagle displayed; Taurida, a double headed eagle displayed; Kiev, the Archangel Michael diademmed and holding a flaming sword. On the left wing other provinces are represented by their special coats of arms, among them being Astrakhan, Kabardia, Iberia, Kartilinia, Armenia, Circassia, Georgia and Finland. Each head of the eagle is crowned and the imperial crown rests over both.

The arms of the Austro-Hungarian Empire do not differ so widely from those of Russia, according to the casual observer, as the present attitude of the two countries toward each other would lead one to expect. Not only is the central figure of each coat of arms the same, but the general appearance of the national arms of the two countries are not unlike, especially the upper part. The double headed eagle of Austria-Hungary is also imperially crowned and the dexter claw holds the orb, as does the eagle of Russia. The Austrian eagle, however, has a golden beak and claws, while the Russian eagle shows these members in red. The Austrian eagle holds in its right claw a drawn sword, as well as a golden sceptre. On the breast of the eagle is the escutcheon representing Hapsburg, Austria and Lorraine. Around the escutcheon are the collar of the Golden Fleece and the grand cordon of the Order of St. Maria Theresa.

On the outstretched wings of the eagle are eleven crowned escutcheons. On the right wing are Hungary, Esclavonia, Austria, Salzburg, Styria and the Tyrol. On the left wing are Bohemia, at the top: Illyria, Esclavonia, Moravia impaling Silesia and Carinthia. If supporters are used they are two griffins of gold, with black wings and breasts.

The other eagle country now at war, Germany, has for its coat of arms a black eagle with claws and tongue of red. The crown of Charlemagne is above its head. Upon its breast is a shield emblazoned with the Emperor's personal arms, which are the royal arms of Prussia; on a silver shield a black eagle displayed, crowned, bearing on its breast a small escutcheon of the house of Hohenzollern, which is quartered in silver and black.

A very charming story is connected with that most frequent and ancient of royal French heraldic devices, the fleur-de-lys.

The ancient chroniclers assert that when Clovis, King of the Franks, became converted to Christianity with many thousands of his followers, the Virgin Mary in token of her pleasure at the conversion sent the fleur-de-lys to Clovis by an angel direct from heaven. The lily has always been the special flower of the Virgin, and from that time forth it took its place in the standard of France. There are other writers who declare that the fleur-de-lys is not a flower at all, but that the design is derived from a spear head. However that may be the French bishops at the Council of Trent when pleading the right of their sovereign to precedence brought forward in support of his claim the fact that the lilies upon his escutcheon had been sent to a former French monarch directly from heaven.

SERVIA.

Still other writers declare that the fleur-de-lys won its place among the heraldic devices of France through a rebus representing Louis or "Luys" VII., who had the surname of Flerus.

The lilies triumphed upon the shield of France until 1793, when the three fleurs-de-lys disappeared to be succeeded in time by the Napoleonic eagle. The eagle of Napoleon was not at all like the bird which had attained such prominence on the coats of arms of other countries. It was not a mediaeval eagle and was unknown to heraldry, as it belonged to the antique or classical instead of to the mediaeval type of royal bird. The arms of the Napoleonic Empire were azure, an eagle rising, its head turned toward the left, grasping in both claws a golden thunderbolt.

Under the restoration the three fleurs-de-lys again appeared upon the coat of arms of France; then came the arms of the Third Republic. To-day the coat of arms of the French Republic on a tricolored shield displays the letters R-F on either side of the lictor fasces, the whole encircled with laurel branches. The symbol of the lictor suggests sovereignty, the laurel victory.

A pretty story is told by some of the historians of Napoleon's entrance into a French cathedral city in the days when his eagles were taking their most glorious flights and Europe was at his feet.

It happened that the cathedral windows were, some of them, decorated with the design of the fleur-de-lys. Eager partisans, fearful that the Emperor might be offended at the symbol of the old régime, had covered up these windows partly with paper so that the lilies would not show.

The Emperor, sharp of eye as ever, inquired the reason for the obscuration of the windows.

"They bear the fleur-de-lys design and there was no time to change it," explained the townsfolk. "So we covered it up, fearing it might offend Your Majesty."

"The lilies of France," said Napoleon, "have led its sons to victory through many wars. Surely every son of France should be proud of them."

It is almost needless to say that the windows were immediately uncovered.

Of equal importance with the eagle in heraldry is the lion, which appears upon a number of regal banners. Belgium, the principal figure of whose coat of arms is the lion rampant, seems particularly entitled to wear the royal beast, as the first appearance of the lion in heraldry is said to have been upon the seal of Philip I., Count of Flanders. As the eagle is symbolical of imperial state and sovereignty and is particularly the bird of majesty, the lion is equally the beast of royalty, suggesting also tremendous strength and dauntless courage.

Guillim speaking of the lion in heraldry says:—"It is a lively image of a good soldier, who must be valiant of courage, strong of body, politic in council and a foe to fear."

Before long the lion was adopted as the standard of the Princes of Norway, Denmark and Scotland. Then most of the kings of Europe, excepting the French kings and the German and Russian emperors, adopted the lion as a symbol of their royalty. In the reign of Henry III. of England the English lions were called leopards. At that time the heralds were accustomed to designate the king of beasts as a lion only when he was rampant; when he was in some other position, passant, for instance, as in the coat of arms of England, he was called a leopard. Drawing and the knowledge of animal anatomy had not in those days progressed sufficiently to make a designation along less broad lines possible.

KODAK SAFETY

ALLIED FORCES INFLICTED STAGGERING LOSES ON TURCO-GERMAN TROOPS

LEMNOS, via Athens, July 13—The heaviest fighting which has taken place in Gallipoli Peninsula since the allied forces landed there was that which began late Tuesday last and lasted well into Wednesday. It resulted in a swing forward of the southern line of allied armies for about five furlongs, and in the infliction of staggering losses on the enemy. Those who were in battle place the Turco German casualties at 7,000 killed and between 14,000 and 15,000 wounded. Many prisoners were taken, too. The whole army in the southern part of the peninsula was engaged, and the Australians and New Zealanders further north also played a part.

The victory marks a definite stage in the initial work of throwing forces around Achi Baba, which may now without exaggeration be described as one of the strongest fortresses in the world.

The allies had been resting in comparative tranquility, and the Turks therefore evidently were persuaded that they were experiencing a shortage of ammunition. This belief apparently convinced the Turks of the excellent opportunity to drive the invaders into the sea. It was late Tuesday night when the first signs of the enemy's movement was detected. No time was lost in flashing the warning message to headquarters. The French were soon alert and the artillery at that portion of the line against which the attack was obviously being prepared, was quickly and strongly reinforced.

Guns Rushed to Front.

French and British machine guns were rushed to the front till a perfect wall of heavy and light guns was in position. Then there was a short interval of silence and waiting, almost oppressive. Suddenly the stillness was riven by a tremendous burst of shells from the Turkish guns and for a time shrapnel rained down on the French front, but the men were safely positioned in dug-outs, and little loss was experienced. From the straits a loud booming began. It was the battered Goeben at work again, and during the bombardment she pounded our right with some forty 11-inch shells. Many did not burst. They were apparently of Turkish manufacture. This hail of shells lasted just an hour and a half and was the severest bombardment to which our lines have been subjected during the weeks of struggle on the peninsula. No sooner had the heavy fire ceased than great solid masses of Turks lept forward to attack. On they came, the silence unbroken save for their shouts until they reached a point within 60 or 70 yards of the French position. Then from 200 well-placed machine guns a devastating answering fire burst forth from our trenches. The big guns flared and lighted up the lurid scene at intervals. With fine bravery the enemy came on, not hesitating before this inferno of death. In terrible cut-up condition the stormers reached the barbed wire entanglements only to find to their dismay their artillery had been ineffective in an attempt to demolish it. The slaughter here was terrible, yet at three points the enemy managed to swarm in the French trenches and even succeeded in turning some of the French weapons on the defending troops. The second French line, however, hurled itself instantly on the foe.

Hand-to-hand Fighting.

"We were so closely mixed up together," a French soldier told me, "that it was almost impossible to use a bayonet, and we had to clear a way for ourselves by simply pushing the Turks back into the trenches. There we fell upon them, ramming our bayonets into the solid mass. Once we had cleared a little way for ourselves in this way, we rushed forward and then the Turks, now badly supported, turned to flee." Into the struggling, fleeing masses our Maxims poured streaks of death, mowing the enemy down in heaps.

Meanwhile the naval division had been sustaining a portion of the attack, and they, too, turned the machine guns on the wreck of the lately attacking force. Firmly held on the enemy were the ships' searchlights thus providing a ghastly target for our deadly guns and hard-worked rifles. In a short space of time the field presented a most appaling spectacle. Soldiers who fought in some of the fiercest fights in France and Flanders, and who have been through the terrible experiences provided by the landing of allied forces on the peninsula, say they sickened at the awful sight which lay before their eye when the dim morning twilight spread over the scene. The bodies were lying four and five deep on the ground in all positions. Fallen men lay strewn on barbed wire entanglements, while many of the enemy's dead still stood erect, propped up against the masses of their stricken comrades. Amid yells and groans mixed with shouts and the whistlings of officers the battered and beaten rabble retreated, followed by relentless death.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

MISSES' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

While plain dresses are more in vogue than fussy frocks for general wear, there are many of the simple models which are relieved from severity by the use of yokes, vests and other devices. The frock shown in the accompanying illustration is one of these.

The blouse is without trimming, except for the vest in the centre of the front. This is plain and flat and occupies the centre of the front from neck to girdle. At each side of it, turning toward the armhole, is a small tuck, so cut that ribbon may be run through the upper part of it, but if preferred it may be left plain. A high, turnover collar trims the back of the neck, while the front remains plain. The sleeves are shaped to the arm and may be made full length, or they may be shortened to the elbow and trimmed with a cuff.

The skirt is a three gore yoke model. The centre of the front gore extends to the waistline, while the side of the same gore is cut away at the top and attached to the lower edge of the yoke. The back is also provided with a yoke, and to this the lower gores are attached.

This is one of the styles which is well suited to gingham and piqué may be used for vest, collar and cuffs. Linen, lawn, beach cloth and other novelty cotton fabrics are also appropriate and taffetas and pongee will be very lovely in this style. It is equally suitable for serge and woollens generally.

The dress pattern, No. 7,256, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 3¾ yards of 44 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods and 1 yard of ribon.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

The Turkey In England.

How did the turkey come to displace the old boar's head in English Christmas fare? Scottish influence had much to do with the change. James I., when he succeeded to the English throne, brought with him an intense dislike of pork. His proposed "supper to the devil," it may be remembered, included "a loin of pork and a pipe of tobacco." So English courtiers, who wished to stand well with their sovereign, had to abandon their favorite boar's head and found a substitute in the turkey, which had become a fashionable dish for other festive occasions during Elizabeth's reign.—London Express.

The Riches of Poverty.

A man without a penny in his pocket can stand on the top of a hill overlooking estates; he can lift his eyes to the blue sky and count the birds that skim across the water; he can fill his lungs with the purest ozone and drink sparkling water from the spring; if he is high enough he can pluck the hardy flowers that seek the rocks. And as he stands there, full of health and vigor, he can say, "All this is mine—this hill and yonder meadows and forest, the blue sky and the birds, the cooling spring and the flowers—all this is mine to enjoy while I live if I will, and the wealth of earth could not buy it for any man!"—Richmond Times Dispatch.

The First Tooth Festival.

Among the Syrians there is no such thing as giving a party in celebration of the first anniversary of the birth of a child. The celebration is held when the baby cuts its first tooth. On such an occasion friends of the parents are not invited to the house to eat cakes and listen to a phonograph, but whatever sweets may be prepared for the occasion are sent by the parents to the homes of the friends whom they wish to inform of the news. The friends later visit the parents and tender their congratulations. The dishes in which the sanainieh is carried to neighbors and friends are not returned immediately. Sometimes it is a week or even two before they are back in their customary places in the family cupboard. When they are returned they are not empty.

He Got a Poor Drive.

Colonel Carter, says Collier's Weekly, had been playing golf for only three months. Therefore when the secretary of the club saw the colonel playing his ball several feet in front of the tee disks during a tournament he thought the veteran soldier had forgotten the rule.

"Colonel! Colonel!" he exclaimed. "You must play from behind the tee disks!"

The colonel's face turned red, but he preserved his dignity.

"It's none of your business, sah," he answered as calmly as possible, "but this is my third stroke!"

Foote and Garrick.

Foote's favorite butt was Garrick, whose thrifty habits he was constantly turning into ridicule. One day while in his company Garrick after satirizing some individual wound up his attack by saying, "Well, perhaps before I condemn another I should pull the beam out of my own eye."

"And so you would," Foote replied, "if you could sell the timber!"

A Stone That is Elastic.

There is a stone that is as flexible as rubber and that, when set up on edge in a thick plate, sways to and from in the wind like a piece of leather. This stone is a called itakolumite, and the Scientific American says it is the mother rock of Brazilian diamonds.

A Mean Suggestion.

It Ruins Hair to Wash It With Soap

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy. It's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Splendid Work of The Canadians

yards north of the orchard but our heavy fire soon drove them off the parapets. During the night the disputed ground between the trenches was brightly lighted by the enemy's flares and enlivened by the rattle of montinuous musketry. None the less our working parties went on with the improvements and left the position in good shape for the 3rd Canadian Toronto Regiment of the 2nd Brigade, which relieved the Royal Highlanders on Saturday.

During these brilliant, though costly operations of the 3rd brigade, the 2nd brigade had been active against a fortified position a mile to the south held by the enemy, and known to our intelligence department as Bexhill. A British brigade had recently captured trenches in the face of heavy fire from Bexhill, and on the night of the 19th the position won was taken over by the 2nd Canadian brigade.

On May 20th at 7:05 p.m. the 10th Canadian battalion, under Major Guthrie, who joined the battalion at Ypres, as a lieutenant, after the regiment had last most of its officers, made an attempt to secure Bexhill. This attack was a failure, as no previous reconnaissance had been carried out and the preliminary bombardment had been quite ineffective.

Moreover, our troops were in full view of the enemy when crossing a gap in the fire trench, and as the only approach to Bexhill was through an old communicating trench, swept by machine guns, the leading men of the front company were all shot down and the 10th Battalion retired.

During the night a further reconnaissance of the enemy's position was carried out, and the gap in the fire trench was repaired, which assured covered communications to all parts of our line.

"On the evening of May 21st an artillery bombardment opened under direction of Brigadier-General Burstall and went on intermittently until 8:10, when the attack was launched.

"Grens" Were In It.

"Our force consisted of the Grenadier Company of the first Canadian brigade and two companies of the 10th Battalion. This attack was met by overwhelming fire from Bexhill redoubt; and our force on the left was practically annihilated by machine guns, and against this steady stream no one could advance.

"On the right the attackers succeeded in reaching the enemy's trench line running south from Bexhill, and, preceded by bombs, drove the enemy 400 paces down the trench and erected a barricade to hold what they had won. During the night the enemy made several attempts to counter-attack, but was repulsed. At daybreak, May 22nd, the enemy opened a terrific bombardment on the captured trench which was continued without ceasing through the whole day, and practically wiped the trench out. After very heavy casualties, the southern end of the captured trench was abandoned and a second barricade was erected across the portion which remained in our hands. In the afternoon the enemy's infantry prepared for an attack but retired after coming under our artillery and machine-gun fire.

Strathconas' Baptism of Fire.

During the night the trenches were taken over by a detachment of British troops and a detachment of the first Canadian infantry brigade, and by King Edward's Horse and Strathcona's Horse.

These latter served, of course, as infantry, and it was their first introduction to warfare.

May 23rd passed without incident, although the enemy threatened an attack upon King Edward's Horse, but broke back in the face of a heavy artillery fire searchingly directed by the Canadian artillery brigade. At daybreak again on May 24th, Queen Victoria's birthday, after a very thorough reconnaissance of the ground, we attacked the enemy with two companies of the 5th Battalion under Major Edgar, a brave officer, supported by a company of the 7th Battalion British Columbia regiment, as a working party, and in the face of a very heavy machine gun fire the position was taken at 4:35 a.m., although Bexhill was not entered at that time. A company of the 7th Battalion was sent up to reinforce the other squadron of Strathcona Horse, and at 5:44 a.m., the Battalion captured Bexhill and 180 yards of trenches towards the north, where they were held up. At 6:30 a platoon of the 5th Battalion was sent to support Major Edgar with orders to "dig in and hang on," but not to try and take more ground. At this time Major Odium, in command of the 7th Battalion, took charge of the 5th Battalion, as Col. Tuxford was ill, and Major Edgar had been wounded.

All through that morning the enemy's artillery was exceedingly active, although the Canadian artillery surrounded our troops, who were hanging on in the redoubt with a saving ring of shrapnel, while our heavy guns distracted the enemy's artillery.

Fine Canadian Gunnery.

Canada had good reason to be proud of her gunners that day. Several times during the same morning the enemy tried to counter-attack, but each attempt was stamped out with artillery and machine gun fire. The captured trenches were held at great cost all day and the troops of the 2nd Canadian Battalion, under Lieut.-Col. Watson, and the Royal Canadian Dragoons were sent in to take them over.

The total loss of the brigade amounted to 55 officers and 980 men. The hostile shelling was the most severe that the brigade ever experienced, but the ordeal was borne unshakingly. At noon, May 25th, Brig.-Gen. Seeley assumed command of the troops holding the position.

"Until the end of the month the Canadian division continued to hold the territory which had been seized from the enemy, and on the last day of May their headquarters were removed to the extreme south of the British lines. Here the routine of ordinary trench warfare was resumed until the middle of June."

German Attacks on British Position Easily Repulsed

After Several Hours Bombardment Huns Tried to Storm British Redoubts But Machine Gun Fire Tore Gaps in Their Ranks and They Had to Retire---Soissons and Arras Bombarded at Long Range.

CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY HAS HAD ENOUGH

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 14.—Both Arras and Soissons are being heavily bombarded by high - powered explosive shells, the official despatches reported this afternoon. The Germans have put in action several long range guns on the plateau across the Aisne and are attempting to level Soissons to ruins. Fires have again broken out in Arras, where the Germans are attempting to complete the destruction of the town.

This afternoon's official communique reported the repulse of a German attack on the British positions south-west of Pilken. The Germans shelled the English positions around Pilken for several hours and then attempted to take the redoubts by storm. Machine gun fire tore gaps in the charging columns, and the enemy finally retired. During the night the Germans did not resume their violent attacks against the French lines around Souchez. There were minor clashes and grenade fighting north of Chateau Carleul and in the Labyrinthe region, but nothing of importance occurred on this front. In the Argonne the Crown Prince's army has ceased its attacks on the French positions guarding Verdun. The War Office despatches indicated today that the fighting in this section yesterday was of a local character, and did not constitute the beginning of any real offensive against the fortress.

PARIS, July 14.—From Vosges to the English Channel, Bastile Day was celebrated along the allied battlefront to-day. By prearranged plan, the trenches burst forth in great chorus of the Marseillaise during the hour in which President Poincare was delivering an address before the Hotel Des Invalides.

OTTAWA, July 14.—There is no possibility, for the present at least, of Canada following the example of Great Britain in accepting for service volunteers with slight physical defects.

OTTAWA, July 14.—The overnight casualty lists includes the names of 10 Canadians killed and 37 wounded; prisoners number 12 and missing 3. These figures bring the total of the Canadian casualties up to 10,152. The killed number 1,736, the wounded 6,556, and the missing 1,860.

AMSTERDAM, July 14.—The reports that the German submarine commanders, since the torpedoing of the Lusitania, have been instructed to exercise more care with regard to human lives, were partly corroborated in a semi-official statement given out at Berlin to-day and telegraphed here.

Reviewing the results of submarine activities, the statement declared that the loss of human life has been remarkably small. The submarines were using every precaution and giving ample warning and time to leave the ship if no resistance is offered.

LONDON, Eng., July 14.—The Allies have conquered nearly half the territory included in Germany's colonial possessions, Bonar Law, Secretary for the Colonies, announced in the Commons this afternoon. Thus far, 450,000 square miles of German colonies out of a total of one million are in the hands of Germany's enemies, he asserted.

CARDIFF, July 14.—The South Wales Miners' Federation to-day met to discuss the Government's announcement that the War Munitions Act will be invoked, if necessary, to prevent the strike of fifty thousand coal miners interfering with the production of ammunition.

Ramsay MacDonald, M.P., Independent Labour leader, intimated that the labour interests would probably feel it their duty to submit in the present crisis, but when the war is over they would fight to remove for ever all conditions that make war possible.

Dogs Do Valiant Service For France

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, July 14.—The National Society of Ambulance Dogs, of France, now has eight kennels where experts are busy preparing dogs for service at the front. They are training patrol dogs, despatch carriers and trench guards as well as ambulance dogs with such success that the army is calling for more than they can supply. Two hundred and twenty five patrol dogs have just been sent to a part of the front that cannot be disclosed. These dogs accompany patrolling and reconnoitering parties at night and carry messages back to the lines when necessary. The dog is able to perform this duty much quicker and in far greater security than a man. The service is of great value as it permits a patrolling party that has urgent news to send back to use the dog to maintain communications with the main force while continuing a reconnaisance.

It takes only ten days for a dog of ordinary intelligence to learn this service so that it may be relied upon to perform it like a trained soldier.

The trench dog is taught first of all to maintain an absolute silence until the approach of strangers to the trench. Not until the enemy is within two hundred yards must the dog make a sign, then he gives warning by a low growl. Many attempts of the enemy to make a surprise attack by creeping up to the trenches in the night have been detected by their use. The service is quite as exposed and as dangerous as that of an advanced sentry or look out, and he often shares their fate. Carion, a remarkably intelligent sentry dog, that became the glory of his company before he was killed by a fragment of a bomb, was buried with pomp and honoured with a cross to perpetuate his services.

True, a little fox terrier who sought out one hundred and fifty wounded men in concealed places during the battle of the Marne, was one of many ambulance dogs just sent back to the front after a well earned rest. True stuck to his post during the pursuit of the Germans until his master was killed, and then in the confusion of the advance lost his company. He turned up one morning exhausted and footsore at the kennel of the president of the society of ambulance dogs at Maisons Lafitte, where he had been trained.

All that dogs are doing and have done at the front will not be known until after the war. The censor finds some of their services so important that he says to disclose it would give valuable hints to France's enemies.

NARROW ESCAPE

Four Men Rendered Unconscious by Lightning Yesterday, But It Is Expected All of Them Will Recover

ONE IS SPEECHLESS

Although Peterborough was threatened with an electrical storm about 4 o'clock yesterday, the disturbance evaded the city, the heavy, black clouds bearing to the south of Peterborough. Other places in the district were not so fortunate, however, and several narrow escapes from death by lightning are recorded.

William Henry Jones, a farmer residing on the 14th concession of Cavan, about four miles south of Omemee, was struck by lightning during the course of the storm, and rendered unconscious. He did not recover consciousness until this morning, and the effect of the shock has deprived him of his power of speech. It is thought, however that he will completely recover. Mr. Jones was in the act of placing a chain around a stump when he was hit.

On the Dever farm in West Ops, not far from Lindsay, three men were struck and rendered unconscious. The three, Frank Costello, John Gunn, and a farm labourer named Ryan, hurried for shelter when the storm suddenly came on. Gunn had just placed his team in a driving shed and the three men about to enter the stable when a lightning bolt killed the horses and stunned all three. Ryan, however, recovered quickly and dragged the other two men into the house. Costello and Gunn were rather seriously injured and badly shaken up.

Violent rain and hail storms accompanied by severe lightning, swept through many parts of the surrounding district, but beyond a couple of rumbles of thunder, Peterborough escaped.

Police Court

Two brothers, giving their names as McGrath, from Westwood, Asphodel Township, were put off the C. P. R. train yesterday noon, at the corner of Maria and Burnham streets. They were staggering around, according to the evidence of the police officers who happened to be in that vicinity. Yesterday afternoon and last night they spent in the Police Station cells.

The pair explained to Magistrate Dumble this morning that one of them had lost his ticket and they did not have enough money left to pay the fare to Westwood. The other gave his ticket, but when his brother was put off he dismounted also. Two large bottles of villainous looking whiskey were produced by the officers as having been found in the possession of the two men.

His Worship allowed them to go with the promise that they would take the next train out of town. The whiskey was returned to them as it was their property and the Magistrate would not order it to be retained. Westwood is in a local option district, but the McGrath brothers explained that they always kept a little whiskey in the house to use for medicine. They promised that they would not drink again if let go. His Worship said that they would have done better to make these resolutions before being brought to Police Court.

Only Three Officers of the 1st Battalion Escaped Unhurt

Eye-Witness Gives Vivid Description of the Exploits of Canadians in Seizing German Positions —2nd Battalion Assisted in the Work.

MAGNIFICENT GALLANTRY

OTTAWA, July 13.—An account of the exploits of the first Ontario battalion of the Canadian expeditionary forces is given in the eye-witness narrative compiled by Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian record officer at the front. Individual instances of splendid heroism and gallantry are told of by the observer. The narrative, which is a continuation of the story of the orchard battle, begins with the fighting in the middle of June. The narrative follows:

On the Canadian Battle Front, July 13, via London. — About this time (the middle of June) a British division was directed to make a frontal attack on a fortified place in the enemy's trench line, known to our intelligence staff as "stony mountain."

The first Canadian Ontario Regiment commanded by Lieut-Col. Hill, of the first brigade, was detailed to secure the right flank of the British division by seizing two lines of German trenches between Stony Mountain and another fortified place known as "Dorchester," which was 150 yards to the south. The defensive flank to thrown back to the right, if our men got through, would depend upon the advance made by the British division.

Working parties of the second and third battalions of the first brigade were told off to secure the lines of trenches and to connect them with our tranches, and finally to make the defensive flank.

After a few days of preparation the first Canadian battalion, Ontario Regiment, moved up and at 8 o'clock in the afternoon the battalion reached our line of trenches opposite the position to be attacked, when the second Canadian battalion, under Lieut.-Col. Watson, which was holding the trench position, withdrew to the right to make room for them.

The trench line on the right of the attacking battalion was held by the second and fourth Canadian battalions as far as the La Bassee Canal, with the third Canadian (Toronto) regiment in support. The left was held by the East Yorks.

An Artillery Duel.

From three o'clock until six in the evening the Ontario Regiment waited the command to charge and sang their chosen songs. The enemy bombarded our position heartily, though our artillery had the better of them. Fifteen minutes before the attack was timed to take place two 18-pounder guns which had been placed in the infantry trenches under cover of darkness on the instruction of Brig.-Gen. Burstall, commander of the Canadian Artillery, opened fire upon the parapet of the enemy trenches.

One gun under Lt. C. S. Craig fired over 100 rounds, sweeping the ground clear of wire and destroying two machine guns. Lieut. Craig, who was wounded at Ypres early in May and again while observing near Guinchy, was seriously wounded after completing his task here.

Lieut. Kelly, who was in command of the other gun, succeeded in destraying a machine gun when his own gun was wrecked by an enemy shell and he was wounded. The gun shields were tattered and twisted like paper by the mere force of musketry fire.

Just before six o'clock a mine, which had been previously prepared by the sappers, was exploded. Owing to the discovery of water under the German trenches its tunnel could not be carried far enough forward, and the Canadian troops had accordingly been withdrawn from a salient in the Canadian line known as "Duck's Bill" to guard against casualties in our own trenches when it went off.

However, to make sure that the explosion would reach the German line so heavy a charge had to be used that the effects upon the Canadian trench line were somewhat serious. Several of our bombers were killed and wounded, and a reserve depot of bombs buried under the debris. Another bomb depot was blown up by an enemy shell about this time.

These two accidents made us short of bombs when we needed them later on and we had to rely entirely on the supply of bombs which the bombers carried themselves.

The leading company, under Major G. J. L. Smith, rushed forward with the smoke and flying dirt of the mine explosion for a screen and met with a withering fire from the German machine guns placed in "Stony Mountain." But their dash was irresistible and almost immediately the company

PETERBOROUGH SHOULD BE WELL REPRESENTED IN 59th

Now that Capt. Maurice Park of the 57th Regiment has been definitely appointed to the 59th Overseas Battalion, it is up to the members of the Regiment and the young men of Peterborough, generally to see this popular young officer has a company of Peterborough soldiers to command. So far there are some forty-five Peterborough men in the 59th. This should be brought up to the strength of the old single company at least; that is, 126 men. Peterborough was asked for that number for the first contingent, and contributed the quota willingly; was asked for seventy-five for the second, and sent nearly one hundred for a half company for the third, and 142 went to Belleville, and now for this fourth call at least 126 men should represent Peterborough in the 59th. Captain Park is deservedly popular, not only with the men under his command in No. 3 Company, but with the Regiment generally. It is felt that he will in every sense be a worthy representative of the 57th Regiment and of Peterborough, and local boys should rally to the colours when they know they will have such a capable and likeable officer as Captain Park [illegible] be appointed to the 59th, and every effort should be made to see that another splendid quota of men from Peterborough is found in the 59th. Recruiting is continuing at the Armouries daily.

BERLIN CLAIMS A VICTORY OVER THE FRENCH NEAR VERDUN

Advance of Half a Mile Around Vienne le Chateau Reported in German Official Report---French Communique Says Fighting is Merely of a Local Nature.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, July 14.—The German troops stormed the French position north-east of Vienne Le Chateau yesterday, hurling the French back for more than half a mile, and capturing 2,681 prisoners, the War Office stated to-day.

"The gain at Lechateau," said the War Office, "is the most important made since the Crown Prince's armies began their new assault on the French lines west of Verdun. Impetuous charges carried the German lines forward for a distance of one thousand yards toward the Verdun-Rheims railway, now less than eight miles from the German trenches. Vienna Le Chateau, near the region of the latest German success, is 24 miles west of Verdun, on the western border of the Argonne. The captured positions comprise what is known as Hill No. 285," said the official statement. "Our booty included two field guns, eight quick firers, and a large quantity of sappers' tools. Our artillery fire in this region destroyed eight of the enemy's cannon."

BERLIN'S CLAIMS.

BERLIN, June 14.—During June forty-two enemy merchantmen, including twenty-nine British, nine Russian, three French, and one Belgian vessel, were sunk by German submarines, besides a number of small fishing boats. This represented a total of 125,000 tons.

Playground Is In Full Swing

The playground has been going right ahead with a full programme since the splendid opening day. Scores have been taking full advantage of the many activities and the merry shouts of happy children are heard all day. The sand box has been so well patronized by the little tots that another will be installed at once to accommodate the crowds of youngsters The swings and teeters are working overtime. The girls have entered in earnest with the classes in folk dancing and already are becoming acquainted with the steps of the national dances. The many singing games add a pleasing touch to the day's work. In addition to the raffia work, weaving and sewing already planned, Miss Johnson is preparing to introduce some sewing for the Red Cross Society.

The boys are taking to the new games with enthusiasm and four or five groups may be seen any day, each at some different activity. Baseball is an old stand-bye and a league is being arranged in which three and possibly four teams will participate Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

SIR ROBERT'S WELCOME.

Premier Sir Robert Borden is being well received in Great Britain as becomes the representative of Canada. Canada herself has created the conditions of welcome. There is no need for Sir Robert to tell the people what Canada has done. Canadian soldiers have told the story in gallant language. The British people also know that; but Sir Robert might, and can, tell them that the whole population of Canada is united in the determination to do their best to spend and be spent, in helping the Empire's share in war. He can tell them that we have put aside all minor considerations; that we, that is, the great mass of patriotic Canadians, have subordinated party politics, and gone in for Empire politics; that we have even postponed a general election. He also might tell them what he hasnk yet told us, whether or not there will be an election during the currency of the war; whether or not there will be the petty strife of party in a general election, while both parties are busy to the neck in helping fight the Huns. A general election has been an untimely idea any time the past year; and events — the demands of duty, the exigencies of the conflict — make it more untimely as these intensify. The politicians should set an example to the people of unity of action in promoting the cause of war. If the former will come closer together, work more closely together, the people will do likewise. In social life all petty distinctions are set aside, and men and women work together, no matter to which set they belong in normal conditions. People of different faiths, which kept them somewhat apart in the piping times of peace, are working together now with a common faith in the cause of Canada and the Empire. The politicians of both sides should do the same. If Sir Robert Borden could assure the British people that the politicians of Canada will do as the mass of the people, and keep them undivided in their devotion to the duty of the hour, he will assure them that, bravely as Canada has done, she will continue to do as well, and maintain or better her record of splendid service unbroken to the triumphant end—will not turn aside from the great work to puddle in the pool of party politics — to go asleep in the sentry box.

INCITING PARTIZAN FEELING.

The Toronto News seems to catch at every opportunity to grasp party advantage, and incidentally to stir the partisan spirit, in peril of the community of sentiment that should possess Canadian people at this time. Hungry for occasion it prints a screed on "Liberalism and Empire," in which grown and bearded, and wise men, are invited to listen to the voice of the babe and suckling. We are told that it was due to Liberalism that Great Britain was not prepared for war, that, in Britain as in Canada, it scoffed at "an emergency."

This is true in the narrow sense; but was Liberalism wrong in the policy of not arming the whole nation cap-a-pie, in not committing the error of burying her national activities, and crushing her whole people under the tremendous burden of militarism, a thing that, with all Germany's preparation for war, will be the instrument of her undoing. Britain for the moment is at a standstill in nearly all that contributes to the true greatness and prosperity, and happiness of the people. All her energies are devoted to waging war; as all the energies of Germany are even after years and years of fiendishly complete preparation.

If Britain in an hour of madness, had concentrated all her energies upon armed preparation in organizing, equipping and maintaining an immense standing army, she would have been commercially and industrially weakened, her people struggling under a burden of financial obligation, her civilization debased, her prosperity weakened, and her progress retarded in all that counts in sound national life. The question, as the News puts the case, becomes a choice between militarism and civilization, between bondage and freedom.

If Britain has failed under Liberal rule to foresee the "emergency," why did she fail under Tory rule? In the past forty years, the period of Germany's greatest military activity, Great Britain has had four Tory governments, the last from 1900 to 1906. Did these governments foresee the emergency? Did they provide for defensive or aggressive warfare? During all the forty years, of which twenty-two were under Tory rule, Germany was preparing. Why did not the Tory prophets foresee? Why didn't they crush the people with a standing army to meet the "German peril?" Because they had too much good sense; too much real patriotism; because they were better employed in promoting the progress of the country, and the prosperity of the people; in developing British civilization; too busy in applying the benefits that come from the liberties and free institutions that emancipatery and progressive Liberalism had won from restrictive and retrogressive or standstill Toryism. All the rights of freedom that Britain enjoys to-day, the great principles for which the United Kingdom and the Empire, and half the world are fighting to-day, were won by British Liberalism. All the evil principles; all the wrong; all the oppression; all the savagery, that come from militarism, the better half of the world is fighting against, to-day, in the interests of humanity, are the fruit of the spirit of jingoism that the News, slanderously, says animates the Tories of Great Britain, but is lacking in the Liberals.

OILING STREETS.

We have received from the British-American Oil Company a booklet on the advantages of its "Vulcan Asphaltic Road Oils." We have made a beginning with oiling our streets, and as the subject is so important, it deserves some space to deal with it. At the risk of giving a free advertisement, the page referring to the relative merits of watering vs. oiling streets and roads, is given—

Watering the road keeps down the dust so long as the moisture remains, but the constant application of water washes away the valuable binding material, thus destroying the road and making repairs necessary.

Oiling the road eliminates the dust, hardens and makes the road practically waterproof, retaining the precious binding material on the road, where it belongs, thus extending the life of the road and cutting out largely the cost of repairs.

Watering the road means, in any case, that all night long and all day Sunday the disease-laden dust is blown about, causing eye, throat and tubercular troubles, as well as destroying lawns, shrubbery, fruit, furnishings, merchandise, etc.

Oiling the road means that there is no dust to blow at any time. The original dust is disinfected by the oil and worked into the road, thus making it wholesome and sanitary to live or travel upon a properly oiled road.

Watering the road means expending large sums of money without receiving permanent benefit.

Oiling the road means that it actually costs less than watering, according to experience, and every gallon of oil used makes the road permanently better. It is like eating your cake and yet having it.

Watering the road attracts flies and mosquitoes.

Oiling the road, with Vulcan Asphaltic Road Oil, drives away all insects and makes life worth living for man and beast.

Peterborough seems to be behind-hand in the use of oil. Other municipalities have been using it for years. The book referred to contains illustrations of roads and streets in about forty municipalities that have tried oiling the streets with the most gratifying results. The trend of the evidence in connection with all these municipalities, is confirmatory of the advantages of the use of oil on streets and even country highways. So far as our brief experience goes, and the experience of other places, our city fathers have made a splendid innovation in the use of oil to keep down dust, to lessen mud, to improve street surfaces and promote the comfort and convenience of the taxpayers.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S LONE FURROW.

Insistence by the American Constitution on the total separation of the legislative and the executive functions of Government makes the burden of the President in critical times almost overwhelming. He is the sole judge of the duty of the duty of the United States. No Congressman, no Senator, no member of the Cabinet has the slightest responsibilitites to bear. The President is supreme, as much an absolute monarch for the time being as a Stuart in his palmiest time, or as one of the earlier Tsars of Russia.

The Secretary of State is the adviser of the President on Foreign Affairs. But the moment his policy differs from that of the President he must resign. He is in an absolute sense as much a servant of the President as a Private Secretary must be. So the heads of the other Departments are merely Executive Officers in the President's employment.

There is no such thing in Congress as a Party Cabinet. Congress is little more than a debating society. It can make laws and vote money, but it has no control, save that of occasional veto, in any imaginable circumstances of the President's conduct of the public business. It is true that a Declaration of War must come from Congress, but a foolish, irresponsible President could so involve the United States that he might force such a declaration to save the honour of the nation.

In Canada, as in Great Britain, responsibility is shared amongst the members of the Ministry, all of whom must have a seat in Parliament. If a Government misconducts itself Parliament may vote it out in the twinkling of an eye, and the odium of malfeasance rests not alone on the men, and their official comrades, but upon the whole party which they lead. In the United States neither Party has any responsibility for the Government of the country. A Democrat might be the President while Congress in both its branches might be Republican, and the destruction of a bad Government might wait for perhaps two or three years.

This constitutional rigidity perhaps has some advantages, but to a British citizen it seems laden with disadvantages, the chief of which is the committal to one man's keeping of the honour, the safety and the well being of a great nation. President Wilson has such a burden.—Toronto News.

The Terrible Death Roll of The Greatest War of the World

The official estimates of casualties in the war up to the present time issued by the French Relief Society are appalling. Of course, the estimates are only approximate, but there is only too much reason to fear that they under-estimate rather than exaggerate the extent of the world's greatest tragedy. Presumably, for instance, no account is taken of the civilians murdered by the Germans. The total casualties are placed at 8,770,810, France losing 1,400,000, Great Britain 488,000, Russia, 3,485,000, Belgium 247,000, Servia 226,000 and Japan 1,210, a total for the Allies of 5,787,810. On the Huns' side Germany's casualties are placed at 1,567,000, Austria's 1,236,000, Turkey's 181,000, a total of 2,983,000. It will be noticed that a large proportion of the Allies' casualties were suffered by the Russians, 3,485,000. This leaves a total of 2,302,810 for the Allies in France and Belgium. The total number of killed among all the belligerents is placed at 2,228,300 and the wounded at 4,837,500; the prisoners and missing are estimated at 1,705,000. Germany, Austria and Turkey have lost 988,000 in killed, 1,653,000 wounded and 462,000 in prisoners and missing. Great Britain's killed are figured at 116,000, wounded 220,000 and pirsoners and missing 83,000. France loses 400,000 killed, 700,000 wounded, 300,000 prisoners and missing. Russia lost 733,000 killed and 1,982,000 wounded; Belgium lost 47,000 killed and 160,000 wounded. All these figures are being daily rapidly and very seriously increased.

Compare these losses with those which were suffered in wars which used to be considered big wars. In the Crimean the Allies lost 174,500, including 32,000 British; and the Russians lost 170,000. In the siege of Sebastopol the Russians lost in killed, wounded and missing 102,870. In the Franco-German war the German dead numbered only 28,000 and the wounded and prisoners 101,000. The French lost 156,000 killed, 17,000 sick and wounded died while prisoners and 720,000 surrendered either to the Germans or to the neutral powers. There were also 143,000 wounded or disabled. These statistics which were considered terrible formerly, sink into insignificance when compared with the havoc wrought in less than twelve months in the present war. Many people will be disappointed to find that German casualties are exceeded by those of France and Great Britain, but after all there is not much of hope in them for the Teutonic cause and absolutely nothing upon which to base any hostile criticism of the British campaign. The fact that 488,000 Germans have been killed somewhere as against 116,000 British suggests a strong probability that Britain is holding her own. No doubt a large proportion of the German losses must go to the credit of Russia, but it must be remembered that Germany never loses a German if the sacrifice to two or three Austrians will answer the same purpose.

Then also it must not be forgotten that Germany can less spord to lose men than can the Allies. The German Army Law of 1913 provided for a great increase in the army and was regarded as even more important, for great rapidity of mobilization. But it only contemplated an army of 5,400,000 by the end of 1915. At that time the war strength of the field army was placed at 1,500,000 and the organized Landwehr at 760,000 men. A force larger than the whole field army has been completely wiped out and Germany must be eating up its trained reserves at a great rate. The Teutons have long ago outworn the advantage of rapid mobilization and in the matter of equipment the Allies will soon surpass them. Then will come the tug-of-war. If, as seems likely, the war lasts another six months, the German losses will probably be greater than they have been in the first twelve months. The enemy is evidently embarrassed financially and judging by the frantic and savage methods resorted to, which are the expedients of despair, must be getting badly demoralized. Such bluffs as the Imperial order to "break through to Calais" once more suggest that the Kaiser is getting rattled. The Germans always tell us what they are going to do, and then don't do it.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

50 Boys in Y.M.C.A. Pool For Lessons

The swimming campaign at the local Y.M.C.A. is getting bigger every day. One hundred and thirty lessons have already been given. Over fifty boys took advantage of it this morning and all made good progress. By the end of the week there are going to be a lot of happy boys and parents in Peterborough, because they will know when their boys go out to the river they will be able to take care of themselves. The number of boys has been growing each day, but there is still room in the pool. We want every boy in the city who can't swim to take advantage of this opportunity. Several seniors are also getting in and learning the art that they would have liked to have learned had they had the chance the boys have to-day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Saved From the Guillotine

A Story of the French Revolution.

By F. A. MITCHEL

During the last decade of the nineteenth century there lived in France the Marquis de Hauteville, a widower with two children, a boy and a girl, the former twelve, the latter ten years old. Jean, the boy was of an adventurous spirit and listened with great interest to those of his countrymen who had fought in the American Revolutionary war under the Marquis de la Fayette. When he became eighteen years old despite his father's wishes he embarked for the new world.

Jean de Hauteville had a cousin, Gastou Renaud, who had been the intimate companion of himself and his sister. After Jean's departure the child companionship between Gaston and Estelle de Hauteville ripened into love. For a time letters came from Jean from America, but after the receipt of one in which he announced his intention to visit the great falls of Niagara, which were on the American frontier, nothing was heard from him.

America was then so far distant from France that the marquis, his father, could get no news of his son. After writing to different persons concerning Jean with no satisfactory result he was in despair. Then Gaston [illegible] and instituted a search for his lost cousin. Estelle, though much relieved in one way by the offer, was much troubled in another. Having experienced the disappearance of her brother in that remote country she dreaded to send her lover there lest he, too, should not return. At the parting between the two she clung to him, with difficulty bringing herself to let him go.

On reaching Philadelphia, the port for which he had sailed, Gaston wrote that he was going to leave for Fort Duquesne, which was beginning to be transformed into the future city of Pittsburgh. From there he expected to proceed northward to Niagara. Another letter came, stating that he had traced his cousin to Cincinnati, a village on the Ohio river, and he was going there to look for him.

When Gaston left France the rumblings of that great convulsion, the French revolution, were just beginning. A great deal took place in France within a few months after his departure, but since at that time thirty to forty days were required for a vessel to make the trip from the French to the American coast, and news traveled very slowly to the United States territories in what was then the far west, Gaston knew nothing of the terrible events that were developing in his native country. On reaching Cincinnati he learned that Gaston had been there, but had left for a French settlement still farther west called St. Louis. Thither Gaston departed in company with a party of emigrants, who traveled much as the gold seekers half a century later crossed the "plains" to the Rocky mountains.

All this took a great deal of time. At St. Louis after diligent inquiry Gaston learned that his cousin had gone into the buffalo country to the northwest and had never returned. One of the party with whom he had started reported that he had been captured by Indians and had doubtless been put to death after torture.

Gaston was preparing for an expedition to go into the Indian country to satisfy himself as to whether Jean was alive or dead when he received news of the opening of the reign of terror in France. He also received a letter from Estelle announcing the arrest of her father by Robespierre and his adherents, and she had no hope that his life would be spared, since the radicals were getting rid of the nobles as fast as the guillotine would do the work. Gaston abandoned the search for one who was probably dead and started eastward on his way back to France.

It was a sad day for him when he arrived at Bordeaux and learned that the marquis had been executed under the charge of being an enemy of France and Estelle was in prison, likely to suffer the same fate. Not only did the revolutionists wish to stamp out the Hauteville family, but to confiscate the Hauteville estate. If Jean were dead and Estelle should be executed Gaston would be heir to the title and properties of the Hautevilles. He therefore realized that should he be known as one of the family he would undoubtedly die on the guillotine. He therefore concealed his identity until he could form some plan for future action.

There was a strong resemblance between the cousins, Jean and Gaston. Gaston was two years younger than Jean, and, since the latter had not been seen in France for two years, it was not impossible for Gaston to personate him. Gaston proceeded northward to the province now called the department of Haute, where the Chateau Hauteville was located. He found no one there except the old steward, Francois Maran, and his wife, Marguerite. These he took into his confidence and informed them of his plan.

This was to save Mlle. de Hauteville by claiming that she was not of that family and to personate his cousin Jean, who was heir to the title and estates. Gaston persuaded Marguerite Maran to sign a statement that when a daughter was born to the late Marquise de Hauteville it was dead. The marquis had longed for a daughter, and his wife, disliking to disappoint him, had employed Marguerite to introduce in the dead child's stead the babe of one of the tenants just born. This babe had since passed as Estelle de Hauteville.

Marguerite consented to sign this [illegible] to save the life of her young mistress, whom she devotedly loved. Armed with it Gaston went to Paris and one day sent in to Robespierre a card on which was engraved the name of the Marquis de Hauteville. Robespierre, astonished that a man should thus give himself up to death and yet delighted to have the marquis in his power, ordered that he be admitted.

"Monsieur"— began the supposed marquis.

"Citizen," corrected Robespierre.

"Citizen Robespierre," Gaston began again, "you hold in prison one whom you suppose to be heir to the title and estates of the late Marquis de Hauteville. This person is not a member of that family, but a changeling."

He handed the tyrant Marguerite's statement. Robespierre read it and looked up at his visitor for further development in this singular proceeding.

"I, Jean de Hauteville, now marquis of Hauteville, two years ago visited North America. While hunting buffalo in the far west of that continent I was captured by Indians. I escaped and have returned to find my father dead at your hands and the girl who was brought up as my sister in prison awaiting execution. I take it for granted that you wish to exterminate a family of the French nobility. You will not execute a noble in the woman you consider a noble. I, Marquis de Hauteville, am the last of my race. I ask that you release her and put me in her place."

There were many acts of heroism in those tragic times, but Robespierre had not thus far met with any such self sacrifice as this. It was some time before he made reply, his eyes meanwhile fixed intently on his visitor. What his thoughts were no one knows. Possibly, impressed by this example of heroism, he may have been thinking on a plan to save the hero. Possibly the De Hauteville estate interfered with such desire. Presently he said:

"Citoyen, France accepts the offer of yourself in lieu of one who has passed as Mlle. de Hauteville. She will be released immediately. Guards!"

Several soldiers entered and took Gaston away to prison. A few minutes later a messenger carried an order to the keeper of the Conciergerie prison to release Estelle. Then Robespierre gave Marguerite Maran's statement to his secretary to be filed among important papers. One more thing needed to be attended to in connection with the matter. An order was issued to a subordinate to investigate the man who had offered his life as a substitute for the released prisoner and ascertain if he were really the Marquis de Hauteville.

When Estelle returned to the chateau she learned from the Marans that her lover had returned from America and had offered his life for hers. She was about to return to Paris to reveal the imposture when she was stopped by Francois Maran.

"You cannot save his life by giving yourself up and revealing the truth," said the old servant. "Rather join the emigres in Belgium or England and send a statement, in which Marguerite will join, that hers is false, that you are Marquise de Hauteville and that the man who has personated the marquis is not the marquis at all. They will then investigate. Such problems are hard to solve at any time, but now they will be harder still. Meanwhile time will elapse, and perhaps a new man will be in power, or the thirst for blood will have been quenched."

Estelle saw the force of this argument. She adopted it except on the matter of leaving France. She chose rather to go into hiding. This she did, and Francois took her statement, in closing of, from Marguerite, to Paris, where he left them with Robespierre's secretary.

Francois' surmise was correct. There were plenty of noblemen and noble women whose identity was unquestioned to satisfy the appetite of the revolutionists for blood without sacrificing one who might be a commoner. Besides, those were times when the situation was rapidly changing. Gaston remained for a long while in prison while a notary was investigating his identity, drawing pay all the while and in no hurry to lose his job by making a report. Meanwhile the guillotine was working much more slowly and a more conservative element was gaining the upper hand. When the reign of terror was over Gaston Renaud was released, and Estelle came out of hiding.

It was a joyful meeting of the lovers at the Chateau de Hauteville, rendered far more joyful for Estelle by the knowledge that Gaston had offered his life in place of hers. But another event followed the recall of the marquis. Jean de Hauteville, who had been given up for lost, had been captured by Indians and had been adopted into the tribe. It was many months before he found a chance to escape and make his way back to Europe. The reign of terror was then in full force, and he remained in England till it was over; then one day he surprised his sister and Gaston, who were now man and wife, by suddenly appearing at the chateau.

The only thing to mar the reunion was that the marquis had perished in the storm of blood.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

INDIAN RIVER DEFEATED BETHEL

INDIAN RIVER, July 14 — The prospects of a bountiful harvest could not be better. The hay crop will not be heavy.

Mr. John Menogue and son are putting up a barn for Wm. O'Leary.

Mr. John Fallon of Norwood visited Douro friends last Sunday.

The return game of baseball between Bethel and Indian River was played off on Bethel grounds on Saturday last, the latter winning by a score of 8—5. The game was fast and provided plenty of excitement. Mr. Elmer Davis of the 8th line of Otonabee was umpire, and was very fair in his decisions. The Bethel boys' lady friends entertained the Indian River boys to tea, when a happy time was spent. The Bethel people are very hospitable and all united in making the outing a pleasant one for all concerned. Another match will be played at Indian River, when it is hoped the Bethel boys and girls will be given as happy a time.

WEST FARMERS COME INTO THEIR OWN THIS YEAR

OTTAWA, July 12.—Senator Lougheed, acting Minister of Militia, this morning received from the president of a large insurance company, with agents over the west, a detailed and conservative report of crop conditions in the three Western Provinces. The pleasing feature of the report is that the crops are above the average in the different areas where they were such a complete failure last year that the Government had to supply the settlers with seed grain. The report received by Senator Lougheed can be summarized as follows:

Northern Alberta — Never better. Harvesting will commence about August 22.

Northern Saskatchewan — Weather cold in northern section and yield light. In most districts yield promises to be heavy. Heads commencing to fill. Harvesting August 10.

Southern Alberta—Crops in vicinity of Regina practically recovered from frost. In drought districts of last year yield will be above average. Harvesting August 15.

Manitoba — Crops need moisture and higher temperature. Crop is about average, and harvesting will commence August 15.

FEATURES OF THE TRENCH WARFARE EXPLAINED

The close contact of the enormous forces engaged in this war, equipped as they are, with the most destructive weapons known, is possible only by the highly developed modern trench.

Each side can completely cover the ground before it for several miles at least, and effectually prevent the open advance of any considerable number of the enemy. Because of the powerful searchlights, rockets, starlights, and other illuminants, it is equally true at night. So, the contending armies have, for the most part, in the western field, resorted to sapping. The engineers will select a sheltered spot such as the leeward side of a hill, or a gully, or ravine. They then start a trench leading toward the enemy line. It will continue directly toward the enemy line until it reaches a point where it would be exposed. Here it makes a turn to prevent exposure. From such first turn it zig-zags toward the enemy, the continual change of direction affording complete protection to every portion of the trench. From this leading in trench, trenches are [illegible] off, like the fingers of a hand, but are directed, in zig-zag, toward the enemy's battle line. At the end of each of these is a firing trench parallel with the enemy's front. These firing trenches are about five feet deep and wide enough for the men to move about in. It is from these exposed trenches that the enemy's attacks are repulsed by rifle fire, and from them that the last dash at the enemy takes place. They are too exposed for a force to remain in them longer than necessary. A very short distance in the rear of them is the first line of cover trenches. These are deeper and act simply as passage ways connecting series of underground bomb-proof rooms or chambers. In these, the trench guard waits. At the first word, they rush from their shelter to man the firing trench.

Back of the first line of shelter trench, there are successive lines of similar trenches for reinforcements. The men in the first line shelter trench remain only forty-eight hours at a stretch, and are then relieved for four days, at the end of which time they again return. In the more stubbornly contested sections, there are as many as ten or more successive lines of shelter trenches all branching off from the leading in trenches.

As far as possible, the trenches themselves leading to the shelters or bomb proofs are roofed in by timbers covered with earth and sod, and thoroughly protected, in other sections, by heavy bomb-proof netting.

As the trenches advance toward the enemy, the older ones are improved, and made more substantial. Their walls are reinforced and they are faced with concrete and drains are put in to carry off the rain water. Where possible, even water mains have been laid to supply water. Before long, these trenches become semi-permanent fortifications. Where ever an enemy trench is taken, it is simply made over and converted.

The area directly in front of each firing trench is, of course, filled with all possible obstacles and entanglements; the favourite of these is barbed wire, spread, entangled and twisted as much as possible. When cut, it simply curls up and makes more entanglements. It is when the enemy's charge is caught in these entanglements and checked, that the rifle fire from the trenches is most [illegible]

TO A HUMMING BIRD.

On thy light gossamic wing,
Fleet as sunbeams glancing ray,
Quaffing deep the honeyed Spring,
Of each floweret by the way.

Like a vision of delight,
Glide for thee, the Summer hours,
Ever winged their fragrant flight,
With sweet perfume of fair flowers.

For when chilly frost winds blow,
Beauteous blossoms fade and die,
And, beneath cold drifting snow,
All their trancient glories lie.

Then, where summer reigns serene,
Cloudless skies are ever bright,
Fields and forests robed in green,
Thou wilt speed thy happy flight.

So, when from this world of our's,
Life's fair hopes and joys decay,
May we, in celestial bowers,
Find the bliss that lasts for aye.

Defy Dyspepsia!

Among the symptoms of Dyspepsia or Indigestion may be mentioned a heavy, cutting pain soon after eating; a distended, full feeling of the stomach and bowels; belching of wind and flatulence; a burning sensation in the stomach, which indicates acidity; heartburn; palpitation of the heart; oppression of breathing; pain under the ribs and shoulder-blades; headache through the temples and eyes; dizziness, coated tongue and constipation; sometimes nausea or vomiting.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt is the natural specific for all these conditions. Being an antacid, it immediately relieves the acidity of the stomach and stops the fermentation. It stimulates the secretion and muscular action of the stomach and bowels, and overcomes the constipation. When its use is kept up the normal action of all the organs of digestion is re-established.

ANOTHER LAWN SOCIAL MAKES BIG SUCCESS

Congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart Escaped the Downpour and Record Sheet Shows a Perfect Weather Average

SUPPER WAS A BIG FEATURE

The open season for garden parties, lawn socials, or sward soirees, which ever term you prefer, has been singularly favoured by the strawberry moon from its first to its waning quarter. And last night the new "haying moon" smiled ingratiatingly from its faint crescent upon the annual big night arranged by the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart. As usual it lived up to advance announcements. The vast lawn swarmed with people from late afternoon until after ten bells, and every person seemed to enjoy themselves. A freshening breeze followed in the wake of a threatening thunderstorm, and an abundance of ice cream and lemonade routed whatever humidity remained. By the way, that storm-cloud that rolled from the west caused consternation among the corps of workers who had everything in readiness for the al fresco supper. Rain seemed inevitable, and just when hopes were badly shaken the clouds swerved to the south, fanned along by sighs of relief from the committees who had worked so assiduously for the social affair.

During the remainder of the evening the weather man was in his best mood and eventually proved the most important individual factor contributing to the social's success. Hundreds ... were served by a large staff of helpers, every one of whom had a particular duty and did it. The various booths were generously patronized. After supper the 57th Regimental Band under Mr. Gliddon, provided a fine programme.

There were so many assistants that the entire list would be very extensive. This morning Rev. John J. O'Brien, pastor of the Sacred Heart church, who with his assistant, Rev. V. J. McAuley, gave the committees their heartiest support, stated that he was highly pleased with the success of the lawn social and expressed his deepest gratitude to all those who in any way helped in making it so successful.

On arrival in Chicago Colonel Roosevelt and his party, who are travelling in a very unpretentious manner, like any ordinary citizens, will leave by the Soo Line and join the Canadian Pacific main line at Moose Jaw. The party strike Canadian soil at Portal, where they take the Canadian Pacific to the coast. Ex-President Roosevelt is due at Banff on Thursday morning, where a stay of three days will be made to allow the party to get a glimpse of the Canadian Rockies. Leaving Banff on Saturday Colonel Roosevelt will travel through to Vancouver, and thence to Seattle by the C. P. R., making only a two-hours' stay in Victoria.

Summer-Spoiled Skin Removed By Absorption

As undue summer exposure usually leaves an undesirable surface of tan, redness or roughness, often freckles, too, the sensible thing to do is to remove such surface. There is nothing better for this than mercolised wax, which actually absorbs an unwholesome complexion. The thin layer of surface skin is itself absorbed, gently, gradually, so there's no inconvenience, no detention indoors. Spread the wax lightly over the entire face at bedtime and take it off in the morning with warm water. If you will get one ounce of mercolised wax at the drugstore, use it for a week or so, you may expect marked improvement daily. When the underlying skin is wholly in view your complexion will be a marvel of spotless and beautiful whiteness.

Don't let these summer wrinkles worry you; worry breeds more wrinkles. Banish them by bathing the face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz. dissolved in half pint witch hazel. Used daily for a while it will be found wonderfully effective.

LITTLE PROSPECT OF McDONNEL ST. CARS

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, general-manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway, states that the Company has no further statement in reply to the city's question for a definite announcement regarding the Company's proposed service extension on McDonnel Street. Y.M.C.A. Campaign Closed With A Splendid Total of $12,0 2

Final Receipts Were Handed in Yesterday;—Clock Completed Its Circle Last Night and the Event Was Quietly Celebrated—Large Gathering at Corner of Hunter and George Streets.

The hands of the Y.M.C.A. "campaign" clock completed the circuit and struck the $12,000.00 hour last night. The accomplishment of the object of this work was reached yesterday and the total sum received was $12,026.00. Mr. George A. Gillespie, president of the directorate of the Y.M.C.A. stated that the last donations were received yesterday, but he did not mention the names of the donors. Naturally there was a feeling of elation among the "Y" workers, and the conclusion of the campaign was quietly celebrated.

Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Meserve, Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., Mr. Jos. Wearing and Mr. McCarroll met at the Association's building and marched ahead of the Salvation Army band, then returning from their park concert, to the corner of Hunter and George streets. Followed an impromtu finale to the campaign. Mr. Gillespie announced that the goal had been reached, and that he and all the directors desired to express their gratitude to all those who had contributed and also to those who had in any way assisted in the campaign.

It was reported a week ago that $360 was still required and as the town had been very thoroughly canvassed the amount required was made up by additional contributions from members of the employed staff of the Association, together with a generous contribution from Wm. Blackwell, architect, who has kindly consented to make the drawings for the Y.M.C.A. alterations as his donation to the fund. That the employees of the Association have the interst of their work at heart may be appreciated by the statement that the General Secretary, Physical Director and Boys' Work Secretary are making a total contribution of $500 or one-twenty-fourth of the whole amount being raised. The Board of Directors and leading workers of the Association have given toward the fund about five times as much as their annual contribution.

A meeting of the Board of Directors was held last evening, preceding the gathering at the clock, and a rough draft of the plans for alterations were examined. As it will be necessary to make these plans more complete, tenders will not be called for the alterations until after a special meeting of the Board, which will probably be held next week.

Germany Somewhat Angry At Attitude of Roumania

LONDON, July 13—A Berlin despatch received by Reuter's Telegram Company, by way of Amsterdam, gives the substance of what is described as a thinly-veiled threat at Roumania contained in an article in the semi-official Frankfurter Zeitung, which, under the heading, "Roumania's Hour of Fate," charges that country with holding up war material en route from Germany to Turkey.

The Frankfurter Zeitung claims that under her treaties with the central powers Roumania is bound to adopt a friendly attitude towards them, and says, according to the despatch:

"As Roumania has no present need to fear Russia and does not act upon the American theory, which is accepted by the Entente powers, regarding the export of war material, Roumania's maintenance of prohibition upon transit is dictated by considerations of her own interest, well or ill comprehended. She therefore desires to weaken Turkey and support attacks on the Dardenelles."

The Frankfurter eitung, the correspondent adds, argues that Roumania has interpreted her duties regarding neutrality in a way directly injurious to Turkey, the ally of the central powers, and concludes:

"Germany and Austro-Hungary are now free to decide whether they will or will not consider themselves bound by their agreement with Roumania. Their interest in the further independence of Roumania continues to exist, but we can conceive a case arising, perhaps in the coming peace negotiations, when this interest, in support of which no obligation any longer exists, must take rank behind more important interests of the central powers themselves."

Crop Conditions In West Are Good

Reports From Saskatchewan and Alberta Encouraging

The crop situation along the western lines of the Canadian Northern Railway, is on the whole, ideal, according to the reports received by the officers of the company here to-day.

Equally satisfactory reports were wired to the head office of the C. N. R. from the Department of Agriculture for Saskatchewan and Alberta. That from Saskatchewan reads:

"Crop conditions for the two weeks ending July 10th are excellent, and ideal growing weather is general throughout the province. Most wheat fields are showing in head, but some are uneven, owing no doubt to the effects of frost in June. Oats and barley stands are promising. Wheat averages from twenty to twenty four inches in height and nearly all is in shot blade. The set back due to the frosts and cold weather is almost retrieved by the ideal conditions during the past eight days, the weather being showery and warm."

From the Department of Agriculture in Alberta, the wire is as follows:

"Weather throughout the Province warm, with showers. Some heavy rains in central district. Light hail reported in south east and north west. In south east grain all headed out, doing well, abundant fodder crops, stock in the best condition for years. In the south west grain same, wheat thirty six inches high, abundant hay, stock splendid. In the north west very good but too much moisture; roots two weeks ahead of last year; stock in excellent condition; alfalfa ready to cut."

You may believe you are buying tea cheaply and economically because it is low in price. Have you considered that if you paid ten cents a pound more and bought Salada it would only cost you an additional twentieth part of a cent per cup, and you would always be sure of pure, clean tea of delicious flavour instead of the annoying dust and dirt so often found in ordinary tea?

COMPLETE REPORT OF RESULT OF MAHOOD VS. HAYES LAW SUIT

Manifest Error in Judge's Written Statement of Award — Jury's Verdict is Also Given—Plaintiff Must Pay Costs.

The judgment in the Mahood vs. Hayes action for $220.04, is repeated to-day, owing to a slight mistake in Judge Huycke's summary. The result of the whole case is that Mr. Mahood is allowed $59.93, but this must be applied on the defendant's costs. The defendant, Mr. Hayes, has paid $70 into court, and the balance of this sum, $10.17, remains to him. The jury's award is appended and explains the manifest oversight in His Honor's written judgment. The word defendant is printed in italics to denote the change. The jury's verdict was written in the form of answers to questions submitted by Judge Huycke at the recent sittings as follows:

How many days at $7 per day did the plaintiff work for defendant with his mixer at the Monaghan sidewalk contract for which he should be paid, and what do you allow him therefor?

Ans.—13 1-2 days; $94.50.

Was the price agreed on for the C.G.E. contract $1.00 per cubic yard or 4c per cu. foot?

Ans.—$1.00 per cu. yard.

Did plaintiff by his contract agree to smooth the upper surface of cement work on said contract?

Ans.—Yes.

If he did so, did he smooth it as agreed?

Ans.—No.

If not, how much, if anything, do you allow defendant for such neglect or omission?

Ans.—$92.10.

Was there, or not, at the time of contract, a custom or usage applicable to such work and contract as this, when defendant put up the forms, for the plaintiff contractor to be paid for all openings not filled?

Ans.—No.

JUDGE'S FINDING

A special verdict was taken from the jury, which was in every instance in favor of the Defendant. The only question reserved for me was the quantity of concrete put in on the C. G. E. work by plaintiff for defendant. In making this computation I have given plaintiff the benefit of every uncertainty possible under the evidence as to the quantities. I am not at all sure that he is entitled to all of them, but the differences are very light and I prefer to do this rather than to inflict upon him a possible though small, injustice. I accordingly allow him 4,533 cu. ft. concrete, or 167.88 cu. yards, at $1.00, amounting to $167.88

Add for wages admitted 4.05

$171.93

Deduct—

Cash paid $90.00

Amt. for smoothing cement surface as jury allowed 22.10

$112.10

Bal. to plaintiff $59.93

For which the plaintiff is hereby given judgment. Defendant, therefore, owes plaintiff $59.93, and did so owe him at commencement of action. But tender was pleaded and I find proved. The first tender was $60 and the second $70, which last sum was paid in court. It is true these tenders were made by cheque only, but the circumstances of refusal of render both tenders good. I must find accordingly. These tenders, both or either of them, constitute a good defence and the costs of the action must therefore be paid by plaintiff forthwith after taxation.

Of the money in court, $10.17 is the defendants, and the balance, $59.83, belongs to plaintiff. This balance will be applied on defendant's costs of action when ascertained by taxation.

Mr. D. O'Connel was J. E. Hayes' counsel and R. Ruddy acted for Mr. Mahood.

Thousand People Living in Arras

Remnant of Civil Population Dwells Mostly in the Cellars

ARRAS, July 9, via Paris, July 14.—Shells have been dropping into Arras at intervals to-day as they have been for 250 days. Each 24 hours a few more buildings crumple or burn, although the fire brigade is still efficient in extinguishing flames.

One thousand civilians out of a former population of 35,000 are still here. There were 4,000 in December when the Associated Press correspondent visited the town. A few score of the inhabitants have been killed or wounded, while the others have been persuaded by the military authorities to go away. None of those remaining thinks of sleeping anywhere except in a cellar. The rest of the time they spend out of doors, when no shells are falling.

The streets which formerly were filled with traffic, now are grass grown. Two postmen deliver the mail, which comes regularly once a day by military post. Several shops located underground are open for business. Displayed on cellar doors are baskets of fresh vegetables, which can be bought at about the same prices as in Paris. Inside the principal grocery stores are many standard brands of British, French and American canned goods.

About half the outer walls of the beautiful City Hall still are standing, but there remains only one jagged corner of the imposing belfry which once adorned the great square of Arras. A citizen occupying a cellar on the other side of the square counted the shells which struck the belfry and says that it took 360 to shatter the beautiful bit of Spanish architecture.

An advance angle of the French works is located in a little suburb just outside Arras. Visitors there talk in whispers and take hasty glances through loop-holes at the German trenches forty yards away. The French trenches pass through the gardens of a ruined chateau. Rose bushes and other flowering plants droop over the sides of the military works. Every house in which once was an interesting suburb has been wrecked by shell fire.

WITH OTHER COUNCILS

The Lindsay Council is on record as being in favour of the government ownership of the telephone systems of Ontario, as they are in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lindsay's tax rate this year will be 27 mills on the dollar—an increase of 2 mills over that of 1914.

40 Per Cent. Increase in Life Saving Equipment on the Local Boats

New Regulation Demands Adequate Protection for Passengers—Extra Life Boats, Belts and the Extra Provision of Air Tight Tanks Under Benches Making Them Floating Rafts—Several Boats Equipping To-day.

A new navigation regulation applying to all craft plying on local waters requires a forty per cent. increase in the life-saving equipment which each vessel carries. Mr. Dave Runnett, Wharf Master at the George Street docks, pointed out this morning that the tug "Bob Hall" then tied up was being fitted with an eight-passenger live boat, swung from davits on the top deck. The Geneva carries an extra life boat on top and an extra life belt. At the same time there are the usual life preservers, one for every passenger up to the capacity limit, and air tanks are being placed beneath all the benches, each of which will float eight persons. The Geneva is thus being equipped and the Stoney Lake and all the other boats will likewise have to comply with the regulations, even down to the tugs.

FORMER 57th OFFICER DOING HIS BIT IN GERMAN WEST AFRICA

Lt. Col. Brennan Sends His Regrets at the Death of His Old Comrade, Major Geo. W. Bennett---Tells of Gen. Botha's Campaign Against the Enemy.

Lt.-Col. Miller has received the following most interesting letter from Lt. Col. Fred Brennan, V.D., officer commanding the South African Irish Regiments, part of General Botha's expedition, and formerly Major of the 57th Regiment. Lt.-Col. Brennan who is well remembered here, writes as follows:

Karibib, 27-5-'15.

Dear old friend and comrade,—My sister, Mrs. Breault of Norwood, sent me a bundle of Peterborough papers and I got them two days ago, and so I have had a few hours' good reading and have learned the good work you are doing in the old town for our king and country. Local papers that I have received have told me of the glorious work the Canadians have been doing on the continent and in one paper I see that Major G. W. Bennett has been killed. I assume it must be our old comrade, Geo. Bennett of Peterborough, and if so will you please convey to any friends of his my sincere sympathy for them in their loss. George and I were together in my first camp in 1889 and now, after 35 years of good service, he has died as any of us would wish to die, for the empire we have loved and served so long, and in the noblest and most just of causes. God rest his soul, and may his memory be long preserved in the city that he has honoured in his death.

The papers I have from Canada are up to March 23. It is probable, therefore, that others have gone, too, whom I knew in the old days.

I know how you feel in this struggle and how much you wish you could get off twenty or thirty years. For myself I had passed the age limit they fix here for officers (who retire at 52 years). But mine has been an exceptional case all through and so I am in the heart of Africa doing my little bit to curb the crazy ambition of Kaiser Bill.

In this country I held no combatant appointment, but for years have been doing service as Surgeon-Major in the old Transvaal Volunteers. At the time of the union I was gazetted again to the same rank in the union forces, as I had always taken charge of the Cadet camps. All the medical officers attached to existing volunteer units were placed on the reserve list except those in the two existing companies of the South African Medical Corps.

When the trouble started here in August there were three infantry battalions in Johannesburg, and they were equipped and sent off to German West Africa. Then, later, it was found that more troops were needed, and the authorities came to the conclusion that it was posible for me to train another infantry corps, as I was supposed to be the best known man amongst them. So I undertook the task and succeeded. The Government gave me a very free hand and appointed me to command the Regiment. They gave me regular officers for my Major and Adjutant and all the other officers I selected myself. So you see I had my own way to an extent rarely given. I called the corps the South African Irish, and I recruited it in Johannesburg in a fortnight, and the movement became so popular that I could have raised a second battalion.

An Irish Regiment.

So I command to-day an Irish regiment that would make your heart glad—north and south, Carsonite and Redmondite, Catholic and Protestant, stand and work side by side in harmony, and in the eight months we have been enrolled the words religion and politics have never been mentioned. Three of my companies are commanded by Catholics, the others by Protestants. Two of the latter are each 6 ft. 3 in. in height, and good Orangemen, one of them from Derby itself. In every company I have Catholic and Protestant officers, and if nothing else were accomplished, I have demonstrated to the world that Irishmen can work side by side in a common cause.

Off to German Africa.

Well, from October till December 8th we were kept busy in the Transvaal, owing to the rebellion there. Then we left for German West Africa and landed at Walfish Bay on Christmas morning. Since then we have been pushing forward, and now we are in possession of the whole of this country south of latitude 22 with the capital, Windhuk and most of the railways. The fights, of course, have been small affairs compared with those in France, but they have been frequent, so that we have lost pretty heavy in the total. My own most narrow escape was on May 3, from a big mine that the Germans had laid for us. The supply question has been our greatest trouble, for food has been difficult to get owing to transport troubles. In this country water is scarce—the wells are far apart and the Germans have poisoned them whenever they have had time to do so. They make war disgracefully, and adopt any dirty trick they can. They admit they tried to put disease germs — cholera — into wells, and their commander here says they will continue to do so.

So you see they do not deserve to be treated as soldiers. But General Botha is dealing very gently with them, and in this town where we are now the inhabitants are living comfortably in their houses, while our troops are sleeping on the ground without tents or any shelter, and only two worn blankets to cover them. The weather here is now getting colder, the nights being such as you would have in Canada in late November or early December. But the feeling is that the Germans cannot hold out here much longer and so we may be back home before many months. Then, if matters are satisfactorily settled here, a force may be raised to serve in Europe, Egypt or East Africa.

I notice many names I know among those of you who are doing good work. Clegg, Lech (is that Gus) Stevenson, Eastwood, Hounsell. To all of these please give my regards and to any other of the old boys whom I knew. Dennistoun, I see, has gone with his sons, and Birdsall's boy is also at the front. Who is the Col. H. Rogers? It cannot be Harry?

Forgive this scribble in pencil. I cannot write in any other way, and I have hurried over this. But after reading those Peterborough papers, I felt that I must sent greetings to you all. How proud I am of my country and how pleased to hear references to the Canadians. With best wishes and the hope that I may one day visit Peterborough again, I shall close.

Big Barn Raising On Ennismore Farm

A big barn raising on the farm of Joseph Dorin, 5th Concession of Ennismore, yesterday afternoon, proved quite an event. One hundred and twenty-five men gave their assistance and the immense barn was hustled to its completion. The work was finished in good time and was followed by supper served on the lawn. Many ladies were present and the afternoon's labours concluded as a picnic. The neighbourly spirit was strikingly exemplified in the generous response of the farmers from the surrounding concessions. There was not a hitch in the upbuilding nor an unaward incident of any kind.

Peace Proof of Strength

Time Ripe to End the War Because Germany Has Shown She Can't Be Beaten

BERLIN, July 14.—The internal troubles of the Social Democrats are causing increasing interest, particularly are they likely to result in sensational developments when the Reichstag meets. Nobody ventures a prophecy as to whether the party will be permanent even after the war or whether it marks the passing of a healthy phase, because it is provoking a nation-wide discussion of officially forbidden topics.

The two principal factors differ not in the ends desired, but as to the means of achieving the mutual goal, which is a permanent peace, guaranteeing future military, political and economic superiority for Germany, at the earliest moment practicable.

Dr. Meyer, who, with his associates, has been bitterly attacked as being unpatriotic and helping German's enemies, speaking for himself, emphasized the point that the enemy need extract no comfort from the Socialist "minority views," he said that the peace talk most emphatically did not indicate an internal weakening; on the contrary, it was proof of the present strength of German's position. He said:

"The very fact that the German armies are standing on the enemy's soil leads us to believe the time is ripe for discussing how the war is to be ended. We most emphatically do not advocate the throwing down of arms to bring about peace. We do not desire to see Germany crushed or beaten, but we do believe that the time has come now and has been ripe for some months to end the war, since Germany has shown that she cannot possibly be beaten.

No Annexation.

The Government should come out with a declaration of non-intention to annex anything as an indispensible preliminary to permanent peace. This, we believe, would put the masses not only in France but in England as well, in a mood for peace negotiations. We believe that the first suggestion could come from Germany without humiliation, in view of her impregnable position. While we are irrevocably opposed to annexation on the continent, we are also opposed to colonial annexation on principle. We would not oppose a military or customs convention with Belgium in the peace negotiations. We would oppose this only if it were imposed on Belgium by force of arms. We do not, however, desire a return to the status quo ante bellum. We desire general disarmament as security against another disastrous war through far-reaching international agreements.

"We believe that neither side can be beaten."

Painful Accident To An Employee

Mr. Wm. Cartner, Bolivar Street, met with a rather painful accident at the Canadian General Electric Company's plant, this morning, when he had his hand torn in some cogs.

It is understood that Mr. Cartner was engaged in setting up a machine. He put his hand in some part of the machinery to see if it was hot and the suction drew it amongst the cogs. A couple of fingers were badly torn. He was taken to Nicholls Hospital in Comstock's Ambulance.

TWO PRIVATES HOME FROM FRANCE TO-DAY

Private Perrin of Lindsay, accompanied by a comrade in arms, passed through Peterborough this morning returning from the battle lines in France and Belgium. They arrived on the early C.P.R. express from the east and stayed over in this city for the train to Lindsay. They wore their uniforms and scars of war. Private Perrin walked with a crutch, having lost one leg at the knee, and his companion is also permanently incapacitated. Through a city of peace they passed as young men who had given all they had for the defence of the Empire. In their minds there could have been no misgivings concerning their duty, and had they chose they might have passed with a prouder bearing. They had heard the call and responded. They have been discharged from the service, but their names have been transferred to the pension roll through which the country will endeavour to requite the services they have so cheerfully given.

More Mounted Rifles For Front

OTTAWA, July 13.—The Militia Department has called upon Lt.-Col. Monroe, O.C. of the 8th Canadian Counted Rifles now in camp at Barriefield to furnish a draft of 153 officers, non-coms. and men to go to the front this week.

This is the second draft the Mounted Rifles have been called to furnish since they came into camp.

Efforts will be made immediately following the departure of the draft to recruit the regiment up to strength.

CONTRACTOR KELLY BACK IN WINNIPEG

Special to the Examiner.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 14. — Thomas Kelly, contractor for Parliament Buildings, who has been in the United States since June 26th, suddenly and unexpectedly returned to this city to-day, just before an injunction was asked for to compel him to attend the Royal Commission.

An enthusiastic Conservative convention opened here this afternoon. It is expected that Sir J. A. M. Aiken, M.P., will be offered the provincial leadership and will accept it.

PRESENTATION WAS MADE

An interesting event took place at the De Laval works last evening, when Mr. Ed. Lee, the popular foreman of the Machine Shop, who was recently married, was presented with a handsome clock by the employees of the shop. The presentation was made by Mr. F. H. Dawson of the Drafting Department. Mr. Lee was married at Beacon, N.Y., some two weeks ago.

Wheat Advanced Almost 6 Cents

Wheat ranged over six points on the board to-day, going from a low of 103 3-4 to 109 3-8, apparently under strong pressure. Grains were quite active and wheat was decidedly the leader. The impetus to buying was not very evident and the rise went unexplained.

Bathing Suits So Meagre N.Y. Police Act As Censors

NEW YORK, July 13—Beginning to-day Coney Island will be under a close censorship of women's bathing garments. Captain Glidden, in charge of the police there, said the matter of ultra styles had been called to his attention and he had made a careful investigation.

"Hereafter," he said, "women will not be permitted to wear the following:

One piece suits.

Knitted jerseys with open sleeve holes.

Skirts that do not reach to the knees.

Garments with low necks and low backs.

Tights without a bathing dress over them.

The Captain also said that women must wear stockings, that he had seen several girls without stockings and their legs bare far above the knees. Although they invariably had dimpled knees he does not approve the practice. Some of them even had pink dimpled knees.

"But, I think, that pink on the dimpled knees is a trick," he said. "It is just as easy to make up a knee with paint as it is a face. We will be glad to have women come here to bathe, but they must not make vulgar exhibitions of themselves.

"I have assigned several detectives to patrol the beaches and whenever they see a woman in what they consider an immodest suit they will serve a summons on her to appear in court, or they may arrest her if she refuses to leave the beach. Coney Island will be kept clean and married women need not fear to permit their husbands to come here."

Many young women were warned yesterday to return to their bath houses and put on more clothes, and hereafter summons to court may be served upon the darling girls who believe the beach gives license to exhibit charms which the dictates of modesty insist shall be a man hidden mystery.

The scores of police censors who patrolled the beaches yesterday noted that no kaleidoscope ever possessed such brilliance of colours as those to be seen in this year's bathing suits. Cerese socks that reach only to where the calf becomes important may be matched with the tiniest pleated skirt of black and white stripes, a dazzling green blouse with no sleeves and armholes that plainly show the wearer has forgotten her corset and other things, and all topped by a brilliantly blue jockey cap.

Last Week In The Big Leagues

Alexander Pitching Grand Ball For the Phillies—Brooklyn's Good Showing

Brooklyn, by continuing its good work of the week before, crept into third place in the league standing, and thereby created the surprise of the year, for only a few days previous to this the Dodgers seemed surely tied in their old accustomed position in the cellar. By defeating the Giants four out of five, the Braves four straight, and the Cubs three straight in their last three series the Dodgers have made the best bid for the pennant of all the teams in the league, not excepting the Phillies, which began the race so auspiciously. Brooklyn up to date has won eight straight games, and twelve out of the last thirteen games they have played. Now they are in third place, only three games from the top, which is held by the Cubs.

The pitching staff of the Dodgers has carried the team to its high place every one of the youngsters and veterans distinguishing himself making the fight for victory. Coombs and Rucker especially have come back strongly, and Pfeffer and Sherrod Smith are going along in invincible style. Dell, too, is again starting a victorious march, and if these pitchers keep up their present gait Brooklyn seems destined to once more celebrate the spoils of victory—a feast they have not had since 1900.

The Giants, too, are beginning to make a race of it. After a distressing engagement at Brooklyn, the club braced against Philadelphia and, returning home, took three straight games from Cincinnati and are just now out of the first division. With continued good pitching and the usual heavy hitting, McGraw can be expected to lead his followers out of the darkness of the second division in a short time.

The Red Sox continue to play championship ball, and now they are just shy of the lead, a game behind the White Sox, who seemed so far out in front it would take a spyglass to see them. Boston has the material and should catch the White Sox, even though that team is playing a brand of baseball which wins pennants.

With all of the teams in the major leagues playing their best ball now the games are decidedly interesting and hard fought. It is the popular idea that good baseball is not possible until half the race is over, and this year it seems little different from the others. The Yankees are daily proving themselves first division calibre, but they seem a trifle short of the balance and finesse of the leading teams in the league. Donovan has a good chance to finish fourth, the position the team now holds.

The pitching of Grover Cleveland Alexander, of the Phillies, is beyond that expected from any modern twirler. So far this year he has held his opponents to one hit on three occasions, has pitched two two-hit contests and several three-hit affairs. When he is in form he is practically unhittable, and to him can be accredited the present position of the Phillies.

The entire plant of a Pennsylvania asphalt block manufacturing concern is mounted on freight cars so that it can be taken wherever there is work for it to do.

LAWN BOWLING

Bowling enthusiasm always manifests itself with increasing strength up to the great annual tournament day. This day is always a fixture, and is held on the first Monday in August.

On that day bowling rinks from many miles around gather here for trials of skill.

Last year two Peterborough rinks skipped by Skips Moore and Fitzgerald, won out against all comers.

This year promises to be very interesting in its strenuous competition.

The members are taking great pride in their work and their efficiency is worthy of comment.

An increasing number of members are enjoying the games in the evening.

Last evening there were a number of interesting contests, among which Skip Moore won out with his usual skill and success, beating his opponents handsomely.

One of the causes which greatly contributes to the enjoyment of the evening games, is the good lighting system.

Last night this was amply proved by the approbation of the green committee.

The green committee is composed of [illegible]. They test the illumination from its various scientific points of view. The different lights must blend their rays so that all must be decentralized into a unification and equality of illumination.

The green committee is very impartial. Should there be a bright or dark spot anywhere, they will withhold their approval until the dispersion is absolutely correct.

The green committee was almost the despair of the light committee. But it is now felt that in the approval of the green committee no member can now discover anything to disapprove of, and that the light committee has won a marked success.

Every member can now feel assured that they can now enjoy the game with keen enjoyment both in the afternoon and evening.

FOB CONTEST.

The fobs have arrived and are now in possession of the T. Brightman rink.

Brightman's rink will defend them against the Waddell rink to-morrow afternoon, the game to begin at 2.30. The following rinks have been drawn for the contest, it being understood that the loser automatically takes his place at the bottom of the list and the next rink plays the winner.

Should the winner of the fobs fail to play the challenging rink, which will always be the next rink on the list, within two days, the fobs will be forfeited to the challenging rink:

1—T. Brightman.
2—R. M. Waddell.
3—T. C. Elliot.
4—W. H. Dayman.
5—R. G. Sturgeon.
6—J. W. Maynard.
7—J. H. Renwick.
8—D. H. Moore.
9—R. Cottrell.
10—Geo. Cairns.
11—T. E. Pratt.

There will be twelve ends to each game. Dominion rules to apply.

Good Game For the City League On Saturday

Saturday's City League games will bring together the Classics and Thistles in one battle, and the East City and Empires in the other. Both should be good games. Manager Johnston's Empires have been showing great improvement of late, and they say they will give the League leaders a great argument for the honours. Both previous games between the Classics and Thistles have been lively exhibitions and there is every reason to expect that Saturday's battle will be of the same class.

Will Play in Lindsay Friday

A team representing the local City League will journey to Lindsay on Friday afternoon to play a picked Lindsay team. The following players are expected to report at the Oriental at 12.30 o'clock on Friday, to go to Lindsay: Cavanah, Swanston, Huycke Long, Sherrett, Jackson, L. Rose, Neary, Smythe, Knapman.

was in possession of the German front trench and "Dorchester," but those who were opposite to "Stony Mountain" were stopped by fire from that fort, all being killed or wounded.

Advanced Without Leader.

The leading company was followed by bombing parties on the right and left flanks. Lieut. C. A. James, who was in charge of the right bombing party, was killed at the time of the explosion of the mine. Those who remained advanced without a leader.

Lieut. G. N. Gordon, in charge of the bomb party on the left, advanced in the direction of "Stony Mountain," but his bombers were almost all shot down. A few reached the first line trench, including Lieut. Gordon. He was soon wounded, and was afterwards killed by a German bomb party while lying in the German first line trench with two other comrades, who had exhausted their supply of bombs. They were almost the only survivors of the bombing party.

The second company, under Capt. G. L. Wilkinson, at once followed the leading company and the bombers, and both parties charged forward to the second line trench, where the enemy presented a firm front, although stragglers were retreating through the tall grass in the rear. The bombers went to work from right to left to clear the trench. Many resisting Germans were bayoneted and some prisoners were taken and sent back, and later, together with some of their escort, were killed by machine gun and rifle fire from "Stony Mountain" itself.

Captain Wilkinson's company was followed almost immediately by the third company under Lieut. T. C. Sims, as the other company officers, Captain F. W. Robinson and Lieut. P. W. Pick had been killed by a shell at the moment our mine blew up.

This company began to consolidate the first line German trench which had been captured, that is to say, reverse the sandbag parapet and turn the trench facing enemywards. It had suffered heavily in its advance across the open space between the opposing lines, and Capt. Delamere's company was the fourth sent forward. Captain Delamere had been wounded and the command devolved on Lieut. J. C. L. Young, who was wounded at our parapet. Lieut. Tranter, who took command, was killed in a moment. Company Sergt.-Major Owen then assumed command, and led the company with bravery and good sense.

Lieut. F. W. Campbell, with two machine guns, had advanced in the rear of Captain Wilkinson's company. The entire crew of one gun was killed or wounded in the advance, but a portion of the other crew gained the enemy's front trench and then advanced along the trench in the direction of "Stony Mountain." The advance was most difficult, and although subjected to constant heavy rifle and machine gun fire, the bombers led the way until further advance was impossible, owing to a barricade across the trench which had been hurriedly erected by the enemy.

Gun on Soldier's Back.

The machine-gun crew which reached the trench was reduced to Lieut. Campbell and Private Vincent, a lumber-jack from Bracebridge, Ont., the machine gun and the tripod. In default of a base Lieut. Campbell set up the machine gun on the broad back of Private Vincent and fired continuously. Afterwards, during the retreat, German bombers entered the trench and Lieut. Campbell fell wounded. Private Vincent then cut away the cartridge belt, and, abandoning the tripod dragged the gun away to safety because it was too hot to handle.

Lieut. Campbell crawled out of the enemy's trench and was carried into our trench in a dying condition by Company Sergt. Major Owen from Woodstock Ont. In the words of Kingslake, "and no man died that night with more glory, yet many died and there was much glory." The working parties detailed for the construction of the line adjoining our trenches with the hostile line which had been captured, moved out according to arrangement, but the heavy machine gun fire from "Stony Mountain" forced them back to the cover of our trench, and all further attempts to continue work while daylight lasted came to nothing.

The efforts of the battalion were now confined to erecting barricades just south of "Stony Mountain" and north of "Dorchester," and to holding the second line trench. The supply of bombs ran short, and Pte. Smith, of Southampton, Ont., son of a Methodist minister, and not much more than 19, was almost the only source of replenishment. He was, till Armageddon, a student at the Listowel Business College.

History relates he was singing the trench version of "I Wonder How the Old Folks Are at Home" when the mine exploded, and he was buried. By the time he had dug himself out he discovered that all his worldly goods, including his rifle, had disappeared. But his business training told him that there was an active demand for bombs for the German trenches a few score yards away. So Pte. Smith festooned himself with bombs from the dead and wounded bomb-throwers around him, and set out, mainly on all fours, to supply that demand. He did it five times. He was not himself a bomb-thrower, but a mere middleman.

Twice he went up to the trenches and handed over his load to the busy men. Thrice, so hot was the fire, that he had to lie down and toss the bombs (they do not explode until the safety pin is withdrawn), into the trench to the men who needed them most. His clothes were literally shot into rags and ravels, but he himself was untouched, and he explains his escape by saying, "Oh, I kept moving."

So through all these help the spirit of man endured and rejoinced indomitably. After all, the supply of bombs ran out and the casualties resulting from heavy-machine gun fire and rifle fire from "Stony Mountain" considerably increased the difficulties of holding the line. The bombers could fight no more. One unknown man was seen wounded standing on the parapet of the German front line trench he had thrown every bomb he carried, and, weeping with rage, continued to hurl bricks and stones at the enemy until his end came. Every effort was made to clear out the wounded, and reinforcements for the third battalion were sent forward, but still no work could be done, and a further supply of bombs was not yet available.

Bombs were absolutely necessary. At one point four volunteers who went to get more were killed, one after the other, upon which Sergt. Kranz, of London, England, by way of Vermilion, Alta., and at one time a private in the Argyll and Sutherland Regiment, went back and fortunately returned with a load. He was followed by Sergt Newell, a cheesemaker, from Watford, near Sarnia, and Sergt-Major Cuddy, a druggist, from Strathroy.

Gradually our men in the second German line were forced back along the German communication trench, and the loss of practically all our officers hampered the fight. The volunteers who were bringing forward the supply of bombs were nearly all killed, and the supply died out with them. The British division had been unable to advance on the left, owing to the strength of the fortified position at "Stony Mountain" and the German line north of that fort. The Canadians held their ground, however, hoping for the ultimate success of the attack on the left in the face of heavy pressure on their exposed left flank.

The enemy meanwhile had been accumulating strong forces, and finally at about 9:30 the remnants of the battalion were forced to evacuate all the ground that had been gained. The withdrawal was conducted with deliberation through a hail of bullets, but it cost us heavily. One splendid incident amongst many may perhaps explain the reason.

FRESH FAME FOR BEN MILLER

Pte. Gledhill is 18 years of age. His grandfather owns a woollen mill in Ben Miller, near Goderich. Ben Miller was till lately celebrated as the home of the fattest man in the world, for there lived Mr. Jonathan Miller, who weighed 400 pounds, and moved about in a special carriage of his own. Pte. Gledhill, destined perhaps, to confer fresh fame on Ben Miller, saw Germans advancing down the trenches, saw also that only three Canadians were left in the trench, two with a machine gun and himself, as he said, "running a rifle."

Before he had time to observe more, an invader's bomb most literally gave him a lift and landed him uninjured outside the trench with his rifle broken. He found another rifle and fired a while from the knee until it became necessary to join the retreat. During that manoeuvre which required caution, he fell over Lieut. Brown, wounded, and offered to convoy him home.

"Thanks, no," said the lieutenant; "I can crawl."

Pte. Frank Ullock, late a livery stable keeper at Chatham, N.B., and now with one leg missing, said, "Will you take me?" "Sure," replied Gledhill, but Frank Ullock is a heavy man and could not well be lifted so Gledhill got on his hands and knees and Ullock took hold of his Webb equipment, and was hauled gingerly along the ground toward the home trench. Presently Gledhill left Ullock under some cover, while he crawled forward, cut a strand of wire from the entanglements, and threw the loop back lasso-fashion to Ullock, who wrapped it around his body. Gledhill then hauled him to the parapet, where the stretcher bearers came out and took charge.

THREE OFFICERS RETURNED

All this of course, from first to last, and at every place, occurred under a heavy fire. It is pleasant now to think that Frank Ullock is under charge of Dr. Mutray McLaren, also of New Brunswick, who watches over him with tender care in a hospital, under canvas, of 1,080 beds; a hospital that is larger than the General, the Royal Victoria, and the Western of Montreal, combined. Gledhill was not touched, and in spite of the experiences prefers life at the front to work in his grandfather's woollen mill at Ben Miller, near Goderich.

Out of 23 combatant officers who went into action only three missed death or wounds. They are Col. Hill, who fought his men to the bitter end with high judgment and courage; Lt. S. A. Creighton and Lt. T. C. Simms.

Dominion Day, after several days of heavy artillery fire, our troops were relieved and the headquarters moved to the north. Here a trench line was taken over from a British division, and here for the present we must leave them. When Dominion Day came they remembered with pride that they were the army of a nation and those who were in the trenches displayed the Dominion flag decorated with the flowers of France, to the annoyance of barbarians, who riddled it with bullets. Behind the lines the day was celebrated with sports and games, while the pipers of the Scottish-Canadian battalions player a selection of national airs. But the shouting baseball teams and minstrel shows with their personal allusions, the skirl of the pipes and the choruses of the well-known ragtimes, moved the men to the depths of their souls, for this is the first Dominion Day that Canada has spent with the Red Sword in her hand.

120,000 MINERS QUIT WORK IN THE OLD COUNTRY

Russia Takes Prisoners
Nearly 300 Austro-German Officers and 23,000 Men

In an Engagement Near Lublin Last Week---East Coast Towns Kept a Close Lookout for Zeppelins Early To-day---Terrific Assault on Dardanelles Continuing.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 15.—Russia took nearly three hundred German-Austrian officers and twenty-three thousand men prisoners near Lublin last week.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 15.—The Manitoba Legislature will be dissolved Saturday. Nominations will take place July 29, and elections on August 5th.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The Germans have launched a new drive in North Poland, and Russians have fallen back slightly.

ATHENS, July 15.—A terrific assault by the Allies by land and sea on the Dardanelles is continuing.

LONDON, July 15.—Despite the Government's threat, Welsh miners will quit work to-day.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—East coast towns kept a close lookout for Zeppelins early to-day following a report from Amsterdam that a German dirigible, headed westward, passed off the Dutch coast last night.

AMSTERDAM, July 15.—The entire district surrounding the great German naval base at Kiel has been placed in a virtual state of siege, according to Berlin despatches to-day. By a military decree all constitutional rights such as inviolability of private houses, freedom of speech, and right of assembly have been repeated.

Berlin despatches contained no explanation.

WAR CARNIVAL IS BEING HELD AT CRACOW

Special Cable to The Examiner:

GENEVA, July 15.—A despatch to the Tribuna from Innsbruck says:

"Archduke Joseph Ferdinand is expected to-day at Cracow, to preside over a war council.

"If within the next few days the Austrians cannot stop the victorious Russian advance the whole front must retreat. Since the loss of the positions south of Lublin the revictualling of the armies has become impossible. Large Austrian reinforcements have hurried to the Province of Lublin, but the Russians, though fighting against superior forces, continue advancing.

"The Austrians have been returning to Galicia since July 10 and are now at Wrawy. The Russians defeated the Austrians at Zamos and surrounded and captured two Hungarian battalions.

"It is reported from Lemberg that an important council of war was held there on July 10, and that as a result of it a number of superior officers were disgraced.

"A despatch from Laibach says a strong Italian cavalry patrol reconnoitering recently made a daring dash toward Trieste and arrived within three miles of the town and then retired. An Austrian attempt to invade Italian territory at Kreusberg was repulsed with heavy losses. The Austrians succeeded at Kellerwald in forcing back the Italians. The Italians were reinforced, however, and regained the position. At Gargav the Austrians tried to drive back the Italians into the Isonzo, but failed. There are daily engagements east of Montfalcone, where the Italians have taken a large number of prisoners."

Every Coal Miner in South Wales Colliers Quit Work in Defiance of Government

British Government Facing the Most Serious Internal Trouble Since the Beginning of the War---120,000 Persons Made Idle by the Walk-out.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CARDIFF, Wales, July 15.—The British Government to-day faced the most serious internal trouble since the beginning of the war. In open defiance of the Government's threat to enforce the War Munitions Act, practically every coal miner in South Wales collieries quit work to-day.

It is estimated that 120,000 persons were made idle by the walkout.

The strike will probably only last until the end of this week, the miners said to-day. In the meantime they believe an investigation by the Government will prove their strike well founded.

"We do not want to embarrass the Government at this time," said one of the strike leaders to-day. "But we believe now is the time to strike against organized greed. The collier owners are making huge profits out of the war.. We know that they plan to close their pits indefinitely when their coffers are filled at the end of the struggle and starve us into submission to their terms. All we ask is a fair deal for our men and their families."

Mt. Julian Women's Institute Meet

The Women's Institute of South Burleigh held their monthly meeting July 3rd at the home of Mrs. John Thompson, Mt. Julien, at which there was a good attendance, although a very heavy rain fell. It was the occasion of the annual visit of the Provincial delegate, Mrs. Parsons of Cochrane, who has been making a tour since May, visiting the different institutes of her district.

She gave a stirring address on "The Magnetism of Personality" and the pleasing and forceful manner in which she presented the subject delighted her hearers.

On Sunday evening she gave another address in Eden Methodist Church on "Individual Responsibility," and from her wide reading and close study of the present-day conditions in the world, especially the war, was able to make the meeting highly interesting to all.

Mrs. Parsons has had several years experience in Women's Institute work and has also been connected with the National Council of Women.

Our institute is now ready to send a box of goods for hospital use in the war zone, and a bale of clothing for the Belgians.

We were pleased to welcome at our meeting a number of ladies interested in Institute work from Montreal, Peterborough, South Dummer and Harvey.

At the close of the address a dainty lunch, of tea, sandwiches and cake was served, which was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

RUSSIA FORTIFIES ROUMANIAN FRONTIER

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, July 15.— A despatch to the Tagesblatt from its correspondent at Czernowitz says:

"The Russians are fortifying their Roumanian border. Many thousands of men are at work digging trenches parallel with the border and building barbed wire entanglements. The operations are being hurried with all speed."

The Russian government of Bessarabia borders Roumania on the east. Austria-Hungary is reported to have pledged Roumania to undertake the conquest of Bessarabia and transfer it to the Balkan State in exchange for Roumania's active support in the war.

Russia, on the other hand, has attempted to win the support of Roumania for the Allies by promising the cession of the Hungarian territory of Transylvania, which borders Roumania on the west.

Experiments are being conducted in Austria with a method for producing illuminating gas from sewage sediment.

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, July 15.—The French War Department to-day gave out the following official statement:

"In Belgium, after the bombardment reported in the official statement last night, the Germans attacked the trenches captured by the British troops on the east bank of the canal to the southwest of Pilken on the night of July 5. They were easily repulsed.

"In the region to the north of Arras, north of the Chateau de Carieul and at the "Labyrinth" there occurred during the night trench-to-trench combats with hand grenades.

"Arras and Soissons were bombarded by shells of large calibre. In the region of the Somme at Frise and at Fay (west of Peronne), as well as in the Champagne district near Perthes, mine battles occurred.

"In the Argonne, German attacks which were concentrated in the region included between Marie Therese and the Chevauchee Heights have been definitely stopped.

"Between the Meuse and Moselle in the forest of Apremont there was artillery cannonading but no infantry action.

'On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

60,000 Eclesiastics In Italian Army

How Thin People Can Get Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds, and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of the food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines where they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be done by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

CAUTION—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh developing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

The Point of Contact

YEARS AGO, retail buyers met retail sellers at the counter. To-day they meet first in the columns of the newspaper The advertising is the vital point of contact. There, may be seen what is wanted, how, when, and where, it may be purchased.

EACH MORNING, when the shopping expedition for the day is planned, the EXAMINER is consulted in thousands of homes. Its advertising pages, with descriptions of goods and prices, is a never failing guide to the ladies of Peterboro.

PRACTICALLY all the shopping is done at the breakfast and tea table, when the list is made out. This is the modern way.

120,000 MINERS QUIT WORK IN THE OLD COUNTRY

Mt. Julian Women's Institute Meet

The Women's Institute of South Burleigh held their monthly meeting July 3rd at the home of Mrs. John Thompson, Mt. Julien, at which there was a good attendance, although a very heavy rain fell. It was the occasion of the annual visit of the Provincial delegate, Mrs. Parsons of Cochrane, who has been making a tour since May, visiting the different institutes of her district.

She gave a stirring address on "The Magnetism of Personality," and the pleasing and forceful manner delighted her hearers.

On Sunday evening she gave another address in Eden Methodist Church on "Individual Responsibility," and from her wide reading and close study of the present-day conditions in the world, especially the war, was able to make the meeting highly interesting to all.

Mrs. Parsons has had several years experience in Women's Institute work and has also been connected with the National Council of Women.

Our institute is now ready to send a box of goods for hospital use in the war zone, and a bale of clothing for the Belgians.

We were pleased to welcome at our meeting a number of ladies interested in Institute work from Montreal, Peterborough, South Dummer and Harvey.

At the close of the address a dainty lunch, of tea, sandwiches and cake was served, which was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Russia Takes Prisoners
Nearly 300 Austro-German Officers and 23,000 Men

In an Engagement Near Lublin Last Week---East Coast Towns Kept a Close Lookout for Zeppelins Early To-day---Terrific Assault on Dardanelles Continuing.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 15.—Russia took nearly three hundred German-Austrian officers and twenty-three thousand men prisoners near Lublin last week.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 15.—The Manitoba Legislature will be dissolved Saturday. Nominations will take place July 29, and elections on August 5th.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The Germans have launched a new drive in North Poland, and Russians have fallen back slightly.

ATHENS, July 15.—A terrific assault by the Allies by land and sea on the Dardanelles is continuing.

LONDON, July 15.—Despite the Government's threat, Welsh miners will quit work to-day.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—East coast towns kept a close lookout for Zeppelins early to-day following a report from Amsterdam that a German dirigible, headed westward, passed off the Dutch coast last night.

AMSTERDAM, July 15.—The entire district surrounding the great German naval base at Kiel has been placed in a virtual state of siege, according to Berlin despatches to-day. By a military decree all constitutional rights such as inviolability of private houses, freedom of speech, and right of assembly have been repeated.

Berlin despatches contained no explanation.

WAR CARNIVAL IS BEING HELD AT CRACOW

Special Cable to The Examiner:

GENEVA, July 15.—A despatch to the Tribuna from Innsbruck says:

"Archduke Joseph Ferdinand is expected to-day at Cracow, to preside over a war council.

"If within the next few days the Austrians cannot stop the victorious Russian advance the whole front must retreat. Since the loss of the positions south of Lublin the revictualling of the armies has become impossible. Large Austrian reinforcements have hurried to the Province of Lublin, but the Russiand, though fighting against superior forces, continue advancing.

"The Austrians have been returning to Galicia since July 10 and are now at Wrawy. The Russians defeated the Austrians at Zamos and surrounded and captured two Hungarian battalions.

"It is reported from Lemberg that an important council of war was held there on July 10, and that as a result of it a number of superior officers were disgraced.

"A despatch from Laibach says a strong Italian cavalry patrol reconnoitering recently made a daring dash toward Trieste and arrived within three miles of the town and then retired. An Austrian attempt to invade Italian territory at Kreusberg was repulsed with heavy losses. The Austrians succeeded at Kellerwald in forcing back the Italians. The Italians were reinforced, however, and regained the position. At Gargav the Austrians tried to drive back the Italians into the Isonzo, but failed. There are daily engagements east of Montfalcone, where the Italians have taken a large number of prisoners."

Every Coal Miner in South Wales Colliers Quit Work in Defiance of Government

British Government Facing the Most Serious Internal Trouble Since the Beginning of the War---120,000 Persons Made Idle by the Walk-out.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CARDIFF, Wales, July 15.—The British Government to-day faced the most serious internal trouble since the beginning of the war. In open defiance of the Government's threat to enforce the War Munitions Act, practically every coal miner in South Wales collieries quit work to-day.

It is estimated that 120,000 persons were made idle by the walkout.

The strike will probably only last until the end of this week, the miners said to-day. In the meantime they believe an investigation by the Government will prove their claims well founded.

"We do not want to embarrass the Government at this time," said one of the strike leaders to-day. "But we believe now is the time to strike against organized greed. The collier owners are making huge profits out of the war.. We know that they plan to close their pits indefinitely when their coffers are filled at the end of the struggle and starve us into submission to their terms. All we ask is a fair deal for our men and their families."

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, July 15.— A despatch to the Tageblatt from its correspondent at Czernowitz says:

"The Russians are fortifying their Roumanian border. Many thousands of men are at work digging trenches parallel with the border and building barbed wire entanglements. The operations are being hurried with all speed."

The Russian government of Bessarabia borders Roumanie on the east. Austria-Hungary is reported to have pledged Roumania to undertake the conquest of Bessarabia and transfer it to the Balkan State in exchange for Roumania's active support in the war.

Russia, on the other hand, has attempted to win the support of Roumania for the Allies by promising the cession of the Hungarian territory of Transylvania, which borders Roumania on the west.

120,000 MINERS QUIT WORK IN THE OLD COUNTRY

Mt. Julian Women's Institute Meet

The Women's Institute of South Burleigh held their monthly meeting July 3rd at the home of Mrs. John Thompson, Mt. Julien, at which there was a good attendance, although a very heavy rain fell. It was the occasion of the annual visit of the Provincial delegate, Mrs. Parsons of Cochrane, who has been making a tour since May, visiting the different institutes of her district.

She gave a stirring address on "The Magnetism of Personality," and the pleasing and forceful manner in which she presented the subject delighted her hearers.

On Sunday evening she gave another address in Eden Methodist Church on "Individual Responsibility," and from her wide reading and close study of the present-day conditions in the world, especially the war, was able to make the meeting highly interesting to all.

Mrs. Parsons has had several years experience in Women's Institute work and has also been connected with the National Council of Women.

Our institute is now ready to send a box of goods for hospital use in the war zone, and a bale of clothing for the Belgians.

We were pleased to welcome at our meeting a number of ladies interested in Institute work from Montreal, Peterborough, South Dummer and Harvey.

At the close of the address a dainty lunch, of tea, sandwiches and cake was served, which was followed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Russia Takes Prisoners
Nearly 300 Austro-German Officers and 23,000 Men

In an Engagement Near Lublin Last Week---East Coast Towns Kept a Close Lookout for Zeppelins Early To-day---Terrific Assault on Dardanelles Continuing.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 15.—Russia took nearly three hundred German-Austrian officers and twenty-three thousand men prisoners near Lublin last week.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 15.—The Manitoba Legislature will be dissolved Saturday. Nominations will take place July 29, and elections on August 5th.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The Germans have launched a new drive in North Poland, and Russians have fallen back slightly.

ATHENS, July 15.—A specific assault by the Allies by land and sea on the Dardanelles is continuing.

LONDON, July 15.—Despite the Government's threat, Welsh miners will quit work to-day.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—East coast towns kept a close lookout for Zeppelins early to-day following a report from Amsterdam that a German dirigible, headed westward, passed off the Dutch coast last night.

AMSTERDAM, July 15.—The entire district surrounding the great German naval base at Kiel has been placed in a virtual state of siege, according to Berlin despatches to-day. By a military decree all constitutional rights such as inviolability of private houses, freedom of speech, and right of assembly have been repealed.

Berlin despatches contained no explanation.

RUSSIA FORTIFIES ROUMANIAN FRONTIER

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, July 15.— A despatch to the Tageblatt from its correspondent at Czernowitz says:

"The Russians are fortifying the Roumanian border. Many thousands of men are at work digging trenches parallel with the border and building barbed wire entanglements. The operations are being hurried with all speed."

The Russian government of Bessarabia borders Roumania on the east. Austria-Hungary is reported to have pledged Roumania to undertake the conquest of Bessarabia and transfer it to the Balkan State in exchange for Roumania's active support in the war.

Russia, on the other hand, has attempted to win the support of Roumania for the Allies by promising the cession of the Hungarian territory of Transylvania, which borders Roumania on the west.

Experiments are being conducted in Austria with a method for producing illuminating gas from sewage sediment.

British Easily Repulse Germans

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, July 15.—The French War Department to-day gave out the following official statement:

"In Belgium, after the bombardment reported in the official statement last night, the Germans attacked the trenches captured by the British troops on the east bank of the canal to the southwest of Pilken on the night of July 5. They were easily repulsed.

"In the region to the north of Arras, north of the Chateau de Carieul and at the "Labyrinth" there occurred during the night trench-to-trench combats with hand grenades.

"Arras and Soissons were bombarded by shells of large calibre. In the region of the Somme at Frise and at Fay (west of Peronne), as well as in the Champagne district near Perthes, mine battles occurred.

"In the Argonne, German attacks which were concentrated in the region included between Marie Therese and the Chevauchee Heights have been definitely stopped.

"Between the Meuse and Moselle in the forest of Apremont there was artillery cannonading but no infantry action.

'On the rest of the front there is nothing to report."

60,000 Eclesiastics In Italian Army

Special to The Examiner:

Rome, via Paris, July 15.—According to a Vatican report, there are now about sixty thousand Italian ecclesiastics in the Italian army. They are engaged variously as chaplains, as Red Cross workers or as officers.

Cardinal Falconio, former Apostolic delegate in the United States, recently visited his ancient Franciscan Monastery of San Antonio, where he found over a dozen of his fellow monks dressed in uniform and full of enthusiasm to go to the front.

Cholera Increasing In Austrian Camp

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BRESCIA, via Paris, July 15.—Austrian prisoners say that cholera is daily growing worse among the Austrian troops, especially those who have returned from Galicia, and that there are many fatalities as a result of the disease.

The Italian authorities are submitting all prisoners to a severe medical examination. Men suspected of having the cholera are isolated.

MAGIC

BAKING POWDER

WAR CARNIVAL IS BEING HELD AT CRACOW

Special Cable to The Examiner:

GENEVA, July 15.—A despatch to the Tribuna from Innsbruck says:

"Archduke Joseph Ferdinand is expected to-day at Cracow, to preside over a war council.

"If within the next few days the Austrians cannot stop the victorious Russian advance the whole front must retreat. Since the loss of the positions south of Lublin the revictualling of the armies has become impossible. Large Austrian reinforcements have hurried to the Province of Lublin, but the Russians, though fighting against superior forces, continue advancing.

"The Austrians have been returning to Galicia since July 10 and are now at Wrawy. The Russians defeated the Austrians at Zamos and surrounded and captured two Hungarian battalions.

"It is reported from Lemberg that an important council of war was held there on July 10, and that as a result of it a number of superior officers were disgraced.

"A despatch from Laibach says a strong Italian cavalry patrol reconnoitering recently made a daring dash toward Trieste and arrived within three miles of the town and then retired. An Austrian attempt to invade Italian territory at Kreusberg was repulsed with heavy losses. The Austrians succeeded at Kellerwald in forcing back the Italians. The Italians were reinforced, however, and regained the position. At Gargav the Austrians tried to drive back the Italians into the Isonzo, but failed. There are daily engagements east of Montfalcone, where the Italians have taken a large number of prisoners."

BRITAIN TO INSURE AGAINST AIR RAIDS

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 15.— The government has completed a scheme for State insurance against damage by aircraft and bombardment in which it will work in connection with fire insurance offices.

The rates to be charged in all districts will be identical, and for private dwelling are fixed at two shillings per cent against aircraft and three shillings against aircraft and bombardment.

How Thin People Can Get Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds, and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of the food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines where they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be done by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength-giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals it mixes with the food and turns the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

CAUTION—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

Every Coal Miner in South Wales Colliers Quit Work in Defiance of Government

British Government Facing the Most Serious Internal Trouble Since the Beginning of the War---120,000 Persons Made Idle by the Walk-out.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CARDIFF, Wales, July 15.—The British Government to-day faced the most serious internal trouble since the beginning of the war. In open defiance of the Government's threat to enforce the War Munitions Act, practically every coal miner in South Wales collieries quit work to-day.

It is estimated that 120,000 persons were made idle by the walkout.

The strike will probably only last until the end of this week, the miners said to-day. In the meantime they believe an investigation by the Government will prove their claims well founded.

"We do not want to embarrass the Government at this time," said one of the strike leaders to-day. "But we believe now is the time to strike against organized greed. The coiner owners are making huge profits out of the war.. We know that they plan to close their pits indefinitely when their coffers are filled at the end of the struggle and starve us into submission to their terms. All we ask is a fair deal for our men and their families."

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Josiah had credit enough to saw off his fine, but the teachers of his school thought he'd made a grand example and so they accused him from graduatin', while George's teachers were buildin' high on what he would do to the world; and all this was made clear in the letters sent home to the old grandfather. Josiah said that George was willin' and eager to square things, but he wouldn't hear of it.

Josiah went back home expectin' a little blow-up and that was all; but the grandfather had his full share o' that Stannard blood, and he had ripped into Josiah full extended, had disinherited him, had spoke the piece about door-darkenin', and had plumb scratched his name out—of the list. Josiah didn't care a mite, in fact he was on the bit to try his luck; so he had said good-by to the gel just as he had alluse said good-by to her.

They had lived side by side and he was considerable older in years but was less grown-up 'n she in a lot o' things. He never had made love to her except with his eyes, holdin' that the longer the wooin' and the shorter the engagement, the better it was all around; and so this last time he had just crowded back all the things he wanted to say, and had left her.

He ... and had told him to look after the gel, and to be good to his old grandfather, and never to worry about him for a minute, and after that he had the whole world to pick from. He chose to be clerk on a steamboat runnin' from New Orleans to Memphis, and he went to work in earnest. He wrote home occasional, the same as Kate's brother did, and, like him, he never gave his right address. In about two years he had got along so well he was ready to buy a share in the company and get married, so he went back home with a high heart.

His grandfather had died in the meantime and George was on the point of marryin' the gel, but old Josiah didn't aim to kick up a mite o' fuss until he found out that she had been true to him until George had let her read the letter which those bloomin' college teachers had wrote home about what the woman had testified to in court, and had let the gel believe it was all true and a lot more.

"Then it was that I took him by the throat," sez old Josiah, his eyes bright and his face hard. "I didn't care about him gettin' the estate, he was full welcome to it, nor I wouldn't have let on if he had won the girl honest; but when he had took this course, all the devil in me woke up and I meant to slay him, but she found us, and she stopped me. She told me right out that she had cared most for me, but that when she had found out what kind I was, she had turned again' me.

"I still held him while she talked, held him as powerless as though he had been a child, while she stood before me with her white face filled with terror. 'And you could marry a man,' sez I, 'who would knife his friend in the back?' 'He did it because he loved me, Stephen,' sez she in a low voice. 'He does love me. Let him go, let him go.'

"And then something broke inside me," sez the old hermit, "and I laughed. I looked into her face and laughed. 'Oh, I'll let him go,' sez I. 'I'll give you his life as a present; but keep him from me in the future, for if ever I meet him again, I'll sure take my revenge.'

"He hung limp in my arms, I threw him towards her and he sank at her feet. I looked at them a moment and I can still see her face, white as chalk and lined with terror; but madness boiled in my veins and though my eyes felt seared as from a flame, I laughed in her face again—and left her. 'Stephen, Stephen, Stephen,' she called after me; but I did not pause, and I never saw her again.

"I rambled the world after that, I sailed the seas, I burrowed in the mountains, I lived with the Injuns, I tried to lose myself; but always and ever, I have heard her voice calling after me, 'Stephen, Stephen, Stephen,' and at last I came here and built me this cabin so that I could sit at the door and listen to her voice, and gaze into her eyes, and wear my own sackcloth and ashes.

"She loved me, I might have had her even that last time I went back; but instead I yielded to the curse of my line—I hurt her most because I cared most for her.

"The wedding was postponed but after all she did marry him, he sold the estate, went away, and I never heard of him again until now. All these latter years I have dreaded lest he had punished her because she loved me most, and now he has come to me, bringing a child like her, and I see the old meanness still in his heart and ready to spring out and rend this child because she cares for him. This is my story, and now you come and say I must not take revenge."

He glared into my face with his jaws set tight and his lower lip stickin' out a little, and I felt mighty serious. "If the' was any way that you could take revenge," sez I, "I might agree to it's bein' all right; but you've told me yourself that a feller didn't even have a right to feel irritated at a man in such a fix as this one."

"I am goin' to have my revenge, all right," sez he; and then his face softened out until he looked like the sure-enough father of the whole bloomin' human race; and he put his hand on my shoulder and sez: "Well, small voice of your instinct in pryin' into my affairs, and I also reckon it was the right thing to do. I'm goin' to have my revenge, boy, but it's not to be the kind I'd have enjoyed most, even twenty years ago, and you needn't worry a mite."

I just stood and looked foolish and he kept on smilin' down at me. "The' won't be any call for this man ever to know who I am, nor Kate either, nor any one else, for I expect you to lock up my secret and throw away the key. You go on back to Kate and tell her that everything's all right here, and if she don't seem comfortable by the time you get back, you'd better let me know about it at once."

I told him about havin' had poison put in the carcasses of the bulls and to keep his dogs from straying, and then I prepared to move on, still feelin' in sort of a daze. There was one thing 'at I'd been suspicious of for some time, and so just as I was turnin' away, I sez: "Where'd you ever get hold o' those goats you've got Tom Smith herdin'?"

"Oh, Corrigan picked 'em up for me from a feller who about busted up on the experiment—but who ever told you that I owned 'em?"

"You did," sez I, "just now."

He grinned at me again, and sez: "Well, if Tom Smith happens to find out that I'm the owner of his goats, I reckon—well, I reckon you'll have to have your ears trimmed, and I reckon I'll have to do it."

And then Hellion and I rode back to the Lion Head, and it sure did seem as though I had been a mighty long distance out o' my course.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE.

WINKIN' THE KINDLY EYE.

When I reached the Lion Head I was still so full of the old hermit's story that I hardly knew who I was; but I found things buzzin' so there that I soon got shunted into place.

Kate had appeared to be rational by the time they had reached the house; but the minute the Begum had found out a gel had been hurt, she had cut right in, taken full charge, put her to bed, and ordered absolute quiet. The boys were all talkin' about how the Begum had come out, and acted just like an ordinary, soft-spoken, sure-fingered, quick-witted home body.

They had tried to hero-worship Isaac some, but Isaac hadn't yet found out exactly what had happened there in the draw, and kept tryin' to give some fittin' excuse as to why he had forgot to bring the full canteen when he had gone back after water; so they had turned in and made a fuss over little Connie.

Connie had known all that was goin' on and hadn't lost his head for a second, and now he'd wag his tail knowin' whenever one of the boys would chuck him under the chin and call him a game little devil. Connie was a wonderful bright, merry little dog and had got so he'd frisk a while with each one of us every evenin'. Shorty had loosened up some since Connie had pinched him and he used to bellow out a few endearin' terms to the little silver blue mite every now and again, that would have shook the cobwebs loose in a mule stable.

The Begum didn't join us at supper that night, sendin' word by Flames that she'd have her needin's sent in on a tray; but the' wasn't a single kick from airy man, and I managed to get the job o' grubtotin'.

The Begum was settin' just inside the open door o' the sittin'-room, when I tiptoed across the porch, and as she had her hand over her eyes, she didn't hear me 'til I got plumb to the threshold.

"Hissssst-" sez she, holdin' up a suppressin' hand at me.

I looked at her as sober as a burro, but I was mighty uplifted inside. She had her face screwed up fiercer 'n ever I'd seen it, but her eyes were fair brimmin' over with motherness. I've seen that look all up and down the world and it has made me a heap o' bother, off and on, 'cause it's some akin to insanity, I reckon. It hasn't an ymore fear o' death 'n it has respect for reason, and it regards force, argument, and mild suggestion as bein' equally insultin' tyranny.

I own I've seen it so seldom in the eyes of women, that every time I do come again' it, it sort o' hobbles me with a queer kind o' reverential awe; but it's just as plain in the eyes of all the other animals, and I never saw a worse case of it, than that old cow with the crumpled horns and hoofs had. When she tried to remove Isaac simply because he wanted to borrow a little nourishment for his adopted calf, she was givin' an able exhibition of how imprudent it is to take any liberties with genuwine motherness.

"How is she, ma'am?" sez I in a soft whisper.

"Hush!" sez she, like the air-brakes on a passenger train "She is asleep."

"Did she say anything rational before she went to sleep?" sez I.

"She did," sez the Begum, shuttin' up her lips tight right afterwards, but nowhere near able to keep 'em from joinin' in a little with the beamin' in her eyes. Then the Begum looked at me so blame tender I felt all loose and rubbery, and she sez: "She looked right up into my face, put her hands to my cheeks, and sez, 'Oh, you can't imagine how good this is!'"

Of course, bein' nothin' but a man, I couldn't see how this remark proved she was rational, but it was so downright satisfactiry to the Begum I took it in on her valuation, and tried to study out a plan to have a few words in private with Kate.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

CINDERELLA ROSE

How She Met Her Prince Charming.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Rose Lathrop addressed the last envelope, slipped its inclosure inside, sealed and stamped it and yawned wearily.

It was 5 o'clock of a March afternoon, and the Kendals' library looked like a casket of glowing jewels.

To be Mrs. Kendal's private secretary had one disadvantage—Mrs. Jeremiah Kendal paid such high wages to her chef and her chauffeur, her butler and her French maid that she economized on the salary of her secretary. So Rose Lathrop, who should have received at the least $20 a week, accepted $10 and made the best of it.

"Some day," dreamed Rose in the library, "I shall write a book, and then—then I shall go back to mother and father."

There was a tap at the door, and a trim little maid entered.

"Miss Lathrop, Miss Hazel says will you please come and see her before you go home?"

"Tell her, Celeste, that I will be there in ten minutes."

[illegible] but Rose did not want to keep Hazel Kendal waiting.

Just now Hazel was confined to her rooms with a badly sprained ankle, the result of an automobile accident.

When Rose entered Hazel's boudoir, wearing her shabby little blue serge suit and blue velvet toque, Hazel looked up from her nest of embroidered satin cushions.

"Oh, good afternoon, Cinderella Rose!" she called playfully. "Do come and drink a cup of tea with me and talk! I want to growl at some one. Do you mind?"

"Not a bit," laughed Rose, drawing a chair to the fire and sitting down. "You are such a gentle bear, Miss Kendal!"

"Appearances are deceitful. I feel so fierce and unreasonable. You know tonight is the night of Mrs. Carter Philly's bal masque. Oh, Cinderella Rose, I want to go!" Hazel smiled, but her eyes were full of rebellious tears.

"I am so sorry," said Rose, putting down her teacup. "I wish there was something a poor Cinderella could do to help you."

"There is," said Hazel, blinking the tears away and biting into a pink frosted cake.

"Oh, tell me! I shall be so happy if I can," said Rose, remembering all the pleasures Hazel had put in her way.

"I'll tell you—listen," said Hazel, drawing the little secretary close beside her. "Tonight is Mrs. Carter Philly's bal masque. I am all ready to go, and now I cannot. But somebody will be there who is going away. I want to get a message to him before he sails tomorrow. Will you take it, Cinderella?"

"How can I?" asked Rose blankly.

"Wear my dress. We are the same size. Deliver my message to him. I thought perhaps he would come and say goodby, but it is too late now. And, oh, Rose, it is all my fault, and I don't blame him a bit! But if I could get a message to him tonight he would come before midnight."

"Tell me what to do, Miss Kendal, and I shall be happy to do the best I can," said Rose gently.

Hazel threw her arms about the blue serge shoulders and kissed the fair face under the little hat.

"You are a darling, Cinderella," she cried, and then went on rapidly: "My costume hangs in the wardrobe yonder. I was going as Cinderella, with my hair in curls and such picturesque rags and tatters, Rose!"

She gave Rose many other instructions and finally sent her home in a taxicab, with a great bundle of clothing.

"I shall be terribly frightened," whispered Rose ere she went, but added, "I shall send your Prince Charming to you, Miss Kendal."

Rose kissed her hand and vanished.

Hazel Kendal's idea of Cinderella's rags was, indeed, amazing.

Rags and tatters, but picturesque ones, of rose and gray china silk, with smoke colored silk stockings and slippers.

Rose slipped on the gray silk mask and enveloped herself in one of Hazel Kendal's evening cloaks.

The taxicab engaged for the evening waited at the curb in front of the shabby boarding house.

Rose leaned back on the soft cushions and was whirled uptown to Mrs. Carter Philly's mansion.

She laughed as she thought of the letter she would write to her parents. If they could only see her now in all her ragged splendor!

Later, up in Mrs. Carter Philly's dressing room, Rose felt a thrill of fear at going down among so many strangers, but the crowd of girls and women in picturesque costumes accepted her as one of their own kin and [illegible]

HAD DIARRHOEA.

Little Boy Was Cured By Using

DR. FOWLER'S
Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Diarrhoea arises from many causes such as, change of water, change of climate, change of diet, catching cold, the eating of unripe fruits, etc.

Never neglect what, at first sight, appears to be a slight attack of diarrhoea, for if you do some serious bowel trouble may ensue.

Mrs. Wm. Bartlett, Stanley, N.B., writes: "Last summer our little boy, age 1½ years, took diarrhoea. He got so bad as to pass blood. We procured a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and after I had given him the third dose he was all right. I would not be without it, as I consider it a household remedy. It is a Godsend to any family."

There is nothing that can take the place of "Dr. Fowler's."

There is nothing "Just as Good."

fully tried to guess her identity, and presently she was in the brilliantly lighted ballroom.

While gayly attired figures came and went Rose's eyes were on the alert for one who might be Archie Brooke.

It was very confusing, for there were two young men dressed as Prince Charming. One was short and dark, the other tall and fair, but their features were concealed.

Just then the tall prince came up to her.

"Ah, Cinderella, you must have saved a dance for the prince!" he said.

"There are two princes," retorted Rose.

"But only one Prince Charming," he laughed and whirled her away in an old fashioned waltz.

"How did you guess that I couldn't dance the modern dances?" she asked after awhile.

"My mother doesn't approve of 'em," he said and then hastened to cover his blunder by remarks about their companions.

Rose was remembering something Hazel had told her about Mrs. Carter Philly's son, who was home on leave. He was a lieutenant in the army, stationed in the southwest.

"It must be Lieutenant Philly," she thought with an inexplicable throb of relief that this was not Hazel's Archie Brooke.

It was a wonderful dance, and when it was over he begged for another later on, and Rose was left to dance with the other men who crowded around.

All at once, in an interval, the other prince stood bowing before her.

"Will you dance with me, Cinderella?" he asked, and when they were gliding around he whispered tensely:

"Is it you, Hazel?" and then Rose knew that he was Archie Brooke. "You said you were going as Cinderella," he added in an unhappy tone.

"Come into the conservatory, Mr. Brooke," said Rose, and when they were there she slipped Hazel's note into his hand.

"Hazel sent you this; she is sorry," she said, and he tore open the missive.

"I must go now—before it grows any later!" he exclaimed. "Will you excuse me, Miss Cinderella?' And he vanished.

Rose stood by the fountain watching the darting goldfishes in the basin.

She was wishing that other Prince Charming was there—the sound of his deep voice thrilled her yet.

She looked up and he was there, his dark blue eyes shining through the eyeholes of his mask.

"In another hour, Cinderella, we will unmask," he said. "May I have the supper dance with you?"

Rose shook her head.

"I am sorry, prince, but I must go before the clock strikes 12."

"But I want to see your face," he protested.

"I am a Cinderella, indeed," she said in a sorrowful tone.

"And I am not to see you again?" he questioned.

"I am really Cinderella and I must go now," she said, leaving him.

"I shall know your voice anywhere!" he called after her, and her heart answered:

"I should know yours among all the men in the world!"

Her lips were mute, and he only saw the ravishing smile below the edge of her mask.

When the ball was over Lieutenant Philly astonished his mother by demanding the invitation cards turned in at the door.

He sorted them over, compared them with those who he knew were present and found Hazel Kendal's.

"Was Hazel Kendal here, mother?" he asked.

"No, dear; Hazel is laid up with a sprained ankle. Do put away these cards and go to bed!"

But Tom Philly put Hazel's card in his pocket and the next day went to call upon her.

Hazel had been carried down to the library, so that it was into the mellowed light of the beautiful room that he was ushered by the butler.

"Lieutenant Philly," announced Martin, and Hazel, who held his card in her fingers, flashed a look at Rose.

"Don't go, dear," she said. "I want you to meet Lieutenant Philly, Archie's friend and mine."

At the very first sound of Rose's voice Philly went red.

"Perhaps you have met before," said Hazel mischievously. "Miss Lathrop was at your mother's ball."

"Yes, we met there," said Philly eagerly, and Rose murmured something unintelligible.

Then Hazel, to cover their confusion, explained to this friend of Archie's how she had sent Rose in the guise of Cinderella to seek Archie.

"We are to be married when Archie comes back," she concluded. "Rose has promised to be one of my bridesmaids."

"I have promised Archie that I would be his best man," he said quietly.

Martin brought the tea things in, and the three over a quiet cup cemented a triple friendship that was unchanged until Archie's return made them a quartet.

* * * * * * * *

It was after Hazel's wedding and the young couple were leaving for their new home in the west when the bride kissed her prettiest bridesmaid and held her tightly.

"Oh, Cinderella Rose," she whispered, "I am so happy about you and him!" She touched the engagement ring on Rose's finger. "Now I've lost my Cinderella! You will be a princess indeed now!"

Tom Philly's tall head bent over them.

"Didn't Cinderella marry the prince?" he asked. "Yet to him and to the fairy godmother she was always sweet Cinderella!"

"Please don't forget the fairy godmother's husband," added Archie Brooke.

Face Massage.

With the tips of the fingers massage the forehead from temple to temple, with a rotary motion, then slide down to the chin and work upward from the chin close to the side of the nose to the eyes. Slide down again each time a little further back, and repeat the motion until the entire face has been covered.

Next work under the eyes with the middle finger from the nose outward, to the corners of the eyes. Remember that the movement should be rotary and always up and out toward the ears.

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thng thait would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

French Officer Tells of Underground Campaigning in War

A French officer, at present convalescent in England, relates the following incident of the underground campaigning, that is, a feature of the fighting on the western front. "It was at Dug-out X that, after what is termed 'efficacious artillery preparations,' the Allies succeeded in taking a group of houses in the northern part of the village, of which the enemy still held the other positions very firmly.

"Towards evening the order was given to try to 'turn' the village — otherwise put, to oust the enemy. But before undertaking this operation it was necessary to gain possession of a vast structure which our men had nicknamed "the Gaol," on account of the dreary, dark aspect it presented before the bombardment.

"Precisely at ten that night we attacked resolutely. Crawling in close formation, as silently as silkworms we advanced to some twenty yards from the main building when responding to a shrill order, we rushed forward.

"A terrible 'popping' ensued, cutting down our first rank. But our attack had been made too rapidly to be swept back. We got into the place, and our next task was to dislodge its occupants.

Enemy in Hiding.

"Among the wreckage on the ground floor not a human being could be perceived. A French sergeant, followed by four men, went down a few steps and was killed with a bullet. As he fell he shouted: "Vive la France!" adding, in gasps, 'Down in the cellar boys, quickly! The enemy is hiding there!'

"It was almost certain that there was another exit to the cellar. Some of our undauntless started to scout and presently one, nicknamed Forlorn-Hope, came back triumphant. In the darkness he had seen a human figure step cautiously from a sort of trench dug about a hundred yards behind 'the Gaol,' and move towards the middle of the village. Then, sliding over the slimy ground he reached the narrow, meandering communication passage, termed a 'boyau,' and found that it led into subterranean depths.

"He guided us to it. It was the exit prepared by the 'Boches' to be utilized 'in case of necessity.'

"The captain called for thirty volunteers. Sixty men stepped forward and, following the captain, this little bunch of braves entered the underground passage.

"The remainder of the company kept alert at the other—the main — exit. What seemed a long silence ensued, then some dull detonations and after wards the voice of the captain was heard coolly and clearly saying, 'Attention on the other side! Forward!'

"We who had been at the main exit went down the steps without encountering any resistance. We finally reached a large low hall, dimly lighted by an oil lamp.

"When our eyes had become accustomed to the queer semi-obscurity of the place we discerned a weird spectacle. Around an oberlieutenant some forty men were assembled. They seemed stupefied, and were standing 'hands up.'

"Here and there, by the flickering lamp-light, we noticed corpses while at the same time, our ears were assailed by the moans of men badly wounded. In a corner were some gunners, lashed to the quick-firers.

"Turning to us with a smiling countenance, our captain said "Here's the bag, boys! It seems that they didn't expect us to come this way!' The German officer changed colour became ashy grey, but uttered not a word.

"In a few phrases the captain told us what had happened. Surprised by our fellows' sudden intrusion, the enemy's men had made very little resistance. Realizing that they were surrounded, they had speedily surrendered. Six of our men had been wounded, but none gravely.

"Then we counted our 'loot' which consisted of seven quick firers, 2.9 rifles, some hand grenades, a nice stock of barbed wire, some cart ridges and enough other stuff to fill up a small arsenal. The bag was indeed good one and it gladdened us."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Skirts vary so much that the style selected for them must depend upon the use for which they are intended and also upon the material of which they are to be made. In such a skirt as the one shown utility is the principal feature. This at once suggests serviceable fabrics, such as will lay nicely in the pleats and which will have sufficient body to hang in straight lines at the lower portion.

This skirt has four gores. It may be made with either the raised or regulation waistline and measures 2¾ yards in the medium size.

The gores are arranged to form double tucks at each side of a front panel and of a back panel. This makes a compact garment, with the closing at one side of the panel in the back. It may be placed at the side of the front panel if preferred.

The suspender trimming is a matter of taste and may be omitted. It is easy to make, as it consists of only straight pieces of ribbon velvet. Wider ribbon may be used and then it is likely to make a fold and to present a softer appearance. This will be better for skirts that are worn with waists of very sheer stuffs.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,238, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 5¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 2½ yards of velvet ribbon for the suspenders.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Reception to New Pastor and Wife

Hastings Methodists Extend Welcome to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. — Other News

Special to The Examiner.

HASTINGS, July 13.—Monday being the 12th, numerous visitors wended their way to Norwood to join in the celebration.

The morning train to Belleville was crowded with Orangemen and their friends who were anxious to celebrate there.

A reception service was held on Friday evening in the Methodist church for the new pastor and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Snell. The programme was given by members of the congregation and was well rendered. At the close of the programme the ladies served refreshmets of which there was an abundance, and were much enjoyed. The chairman for the evening was Mr. R. C. Doxsee, who performed his duties very creditably.

The excursion to Jubilee point on Wednesday last under the auspices of the Sunday school of the Presbyterian church, was well patronized. The steamer Rainbow with barge left the wharf here in good time and the trip up the lake was much enjoyed, Jubilee being reached, the party partaking of dinner, after which a good programme of sports was run off, consisting of baseball, foot races, tug of war, etc. These sports were much enjoyed, and the afternoon passed all too quickly until the hour for leaving was announced, and reluctantly the steamer was boarded. The sail down was delightful and the wharf was reached in the early evening. Everyone was well pleased with the outing. The committee in charge is to be congratulated on the success of the undertaking.

The local Orange Lodge marched to the Methodist church on Sunday evening and listened to an address by Rev. Mr. Snell, the pastor of the church.

The business men have decided to close their stores on Wednesday afternoons during the months of July and August, and give themselves and their clerks more time for outdoor amusements. We commend the action as being worthy.

The stork called on July 1st and presented Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilkins with a baby duaghter.

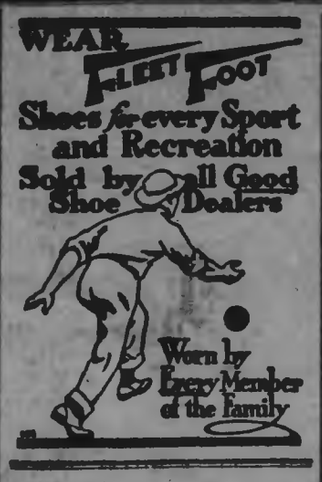
IF I SHOULD DIE

By Rupert Brooke

Here is a poem that for sheer beauty equals any the war has produced. The author, known as a brilliant poet, was one of the young Englishmen who went to the relief of Antwerp in Winston Churchill's naval brigade. He died afterwards of sunstroke in the Dardanelles. The poem appeared in "New Numbers," a quarterly.

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of Home.

And think, this heart, all evil shed away,
A pulse in the eternal mind, no less
Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given;
Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day;
And laughter, learnt of friends; and gentleness,
In the hearts at peace under an English heaven.



Regimental Letters

A new significance is beginning to attach to the regimental letters of different arms of the military service. The London correspondent of the Nottingham Guardian, says the most complimentary is that adopted in the case of the R.F.A., who have come to be known as the "Ready For Anything Boys."

Again, the men of King Edward's Horse tell you that their initials imply readiness on the part of the regiment to "Kill Every Hun." The unkindest interpretation is that put upon the letters R.A.M.C. Some soldiers back wounded from the front make complaint of "missing things" when the care of their belongings passes into the hands of the Royal Army Medical Corps. So with rough wit they insist that R.A.M.C. means "Rob All My Comrades."

The Army Medical men take the gibe in good part, for they know that the soldier's attire means nothing, and that in point of fact he is hugely grateful for all they do for him.

GERMANY'S GIBRALTAR

Heligoland is Island of Steel, Concrete, Cannon and Zeppelins

About a million sterling a year every year since 1890 has been spent on Heligoland by Germany. In that year, when it was ceded to her by Great Britain, the island was crumbling fast, being literally eaten into by the waves of the North Sea. Since then its red marl and sandstone cliffs have been strengthened with great granite buttresses 16 feet thick and 240 feet high. All cracks and fissures in the crumbling cliffs have been filled in with ferro-concrete, so that now the sea battles in vain against the walls of the little island, for it is only a mile in length by some one-third of a mile in width.

To the south of the lower part of the island a shelter has been built for torpedo boats, submarines, and small cruisers, at a cost of more than £2,000,000. A high cliff separates this low-lying part of the island, the "Unterland," as it is called, from the high land, or "Oberland." The whole length of the top of this cliff is heavily protected by barbed wire. A road up the cliffs leads almost directly to a little town. This little town, complete with its church and school, contains only a few hundred inhabitants, chiefly the workmen employed in the fortifications and the garrison, with their families. Farther north are the newly-built Zeppelin sheds and aeroplane hangars. Since the war began many buildings have been razed to the ground, and every person not actively required for defence has been sent away. The island itself is connected by cables with Cuxhaven, and there is a powerful wireless apparatus installed.

All over Heligoland there are powerful searchlights by which any vessel can be detected at night, no matter from what direction she approaches. Many parts of the island, as well as the buildings, have been heavily armour-plated, and some of Krupp's biggest 12-inch and 15-inch guns, mounted on disappearing platforms and cunningly hidden, guard all approaches from the sea. The ocean for some miles round is all mapped out in squares, each gun having its square or squares upon which it can be instantly trained or fired, should an unlucky hostile ship be in that little space of sea.

The King of Italy has always been favorably disposed towards England, as has been his Consort. They chose an English governess for their charming young daughter, the Princess Yolanda.

When one of the enemy is captured he is disarmed by taking the bolt from his rifle and bayonet is confiscated.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, July 12.—Business firms have balanced their books for June, and find that on the whole the showing is somewhat more encouraging than for the month previous. Particularly in payments has there been an improvement, fewer drafts being returned. Bank clearances in all our principal cities have been fairly satisfactory, though as all expected, considerably behind the same month last year. Attention now is all focused on the crops and news of rain or drought is followed with a keen interest in the city as in the country. Times like the present bring home to all of us the fact that Canada is an agricultural country, and primarily dependent on the products of the farm.

The usual mid-summer dull has overtaken the farm produce market. In grains, particularly, business has declined. The week has been marked by few price changes.

WHEAT

The crop situation is favorable in Western Canada with good rains and warmer weather. In some sections of the south-western States there has been too much rain. In Ontario weather has been favorable, and on the whole the American crop will be up to expectations. As few look for a cessation of hostilities, it is anticipated that prices will hold fairly firm. No. 1 Northern is now quoted $1.40; No. 2, $1.37½; extra No. 2, $1.34; Ontario wheat, $1.11 to $1.15.

COARSE GRAINS

—With the usual summer dullness on the market, there have been few price changes and although a few loads of grain have been sold here and there, the total volume of business is small. We quote as follows: Oats, C.W., No. 2, 65½c; other grades nominal; Ontario oats, 55c to 57c; American corn, 83c; barley, malting, 70c to 75c; feed, 65c; buckwheat, 74c; rye, $1.05 to $1.10. The Montreal market quotes: Oats, C.W., No. 2, 65½c; extra No. 1 feed, 61c to 62c; local white, 60½c to 61c; barley feed, 72c; buckwheat, 79c to 80c.

MILL FEEDS

Demand is active for mill stuffs for the local trade. Quotations: Bran, $25; middlings $29; feed flour, bag, $1.85; corn meal 90 lb. sacks, $3.30; cotton seed meal, $35 to $36. The Montreal market quotes bran, $25; shorts, $28; middlings, $33 to $34; moullie, $35 to $40.

HAY AND STRAW

Taken as a whole, the new crop, which is now partially harvested, will be an average yield. Some sections, however, will be short of hay on account of the clover failing to stand last summer and frosts this spring. We quote as follows: Baled hay, No. 1, $16.50 to $17; No. 2, $14 50 to $16; baled straw, $7 to $8. At Montreal the market is apparently strong with No. 1 hay $21.00 to $22; No. 2, $20 to $21 50; No. 3, $19 to $19.50, and clover $18.50 to $19.

EGGS AND POULTRY

Receipts of eggs at the principal centres are in advance of the same date last year. The export demand, however, sustains the market in the face of these increased receipts. There is a decided scarcity of eggs in England. The official returns show that for the first five months of the present year imports of eggs into the United Kingdom numbered only 4,-664,190 great hundreds as compared with 7,755,497 great hundreds for the corresponding period last year. Canadian eggs will help to make up the deficit. The price in the country runs about 20c. On this market eggs in cartons are quoted 26c to 28c; seconds 23 to 24c; No. 1, 21c to 22c; and No. 2, 18c to 19c. On the Montreal market, straight gathered stock sells at 21c, selected at 24c to 25c.

Poultry quotations follow: Old fowl, live, 12c to 14c; dressed, 15c to 16c; spring broilers, dressed, 22c to 28c; old turkeys, live, 16c to 18c; turkeys, dressed, 22c to 24c; ducks, dressed, 17c to 18c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

Since our last report there has been an easier tone in the butter market. This has been the result of a lessened demand from local sources to Montreal. To date, however, receipts have been considerably below those of last year and holders, therefore do not look for lower prices. Recent sales at Montreal have averaged 28½c to 29c for finest creamery butter. On this market quotations are: Creamery prints, 29c to 29c; solids, 28c; dairy butter, 25c to 25c.

The statistical position of the cheese market is summed up in The Trade Bulletin as follows: "The exports of cheese from Montreal during the week ending July 3rd, were 82,164 boxes as compared with 78,744 boxes for the same week last year, making the total shipments 511,698 boxes for the season, against 288,518 boxes for the corresponding period last year, showing a decrease of 212,579 boxes. The receipts also show a large increase, 90,974 boxes being received last week against 75,345 boxes for the same week last year, showing a total of 622,404 boxes as compared with 392,507 boxes for the corresponding time in 1914, being an increase of 228,577 boxes. Statistically therefore the recent shrinkage in values appears to be the result of supplies splurging ahead of requirements." Prices at country boards have been lowered and demand from the other side has been nil. It is believed, however, that just as soon as English dealers believe that prices here have reached rock bottom, they will again start to order supplies.

LIVE STOCK

Brisk trading was prevalent on the live stock markets this week, 800 more cattle being handled this week than last, and an excess of 6,300 head over the corresponding week last year. Representatives for the French government were still on hand and the steady demand for export cattle accounted for the large offerings. Prices on good beef cattle were 25c to 35c above the week previous. The great demand for canned meats kept the price on canners and cutters firm. Quotations averaged about as follows:

Heavy choice steers, $8.60 to $9.10; handy choice steers, $8.35 to $8.60; butcher steers, good, $8.15 to $8.35; com. to med., $7.25 to $7.85; heifers, $7 to $8.40; cows, choice, $6.75 to $7.20; com. to med., $4.75 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $6.25 to $7.65; feeders, $6.25 to $7.25; stockers, $5.50 to $7; canners and cutters, $4 to $5.50.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMAN POSITION IN THE FIGHTING NORTH OF ARRAS

Enemy Loses Heavily in Attempt to Push Forward Their Lines Between St. Mihiel and Port A-Mousson---German Attacks on the Labyrinth Have Been Without Result, Says Official Communique.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER IS TORPEDOED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, July 15.—After several days of fierce battling north of Arras, the French have captured a German trench south of Chateau Carleul, the War Office reported this afternoon. It is admitted that this gain is partly offset by a loss in the Beaurain Woods, where the Germans have obtained a foothold by storming positions occupied by the French several weeks ago.

The enemy lost heavily in a renewal of the attempts of last week to push forward their lines between St. Michiel and Pont-a-Mousson.

Caught between a crossfire from machine guns and mitrailleuses, a German regiment that attacked near Feyenhaye was forced to retire.

The Germans' attacks in Labyrinth with hand grenades and bombs continue, the official communique declared, but without result.

ANOTHER NORWEGIAN VICTIM.

YARMOUTH, Eng., July 15.—The Norwegian steamer Rym, carrying a cargo of coal, was torpedoed without warning and sank in three minutes off Shipwash last night. Her second officer was killed by the explosion. Fourteen members of the crew were landed here to-day.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The Evening Star's Petrograd correspondent to-day cabled that the German Kaiser, in addressing landsturm regiments leaving Frankfort for the Russian battlefront, declared:

"We have staked our all. If the enemy is victorious Germany will no longer exist. Perhaps the war is a mistake on our part, but the present is not the moment to say it. We must save our country."

The Kaiser, the correspondent reported, appeared "aged, nervous and grey."

OTTAWA, Ont., July 15.—The War Purchasing Commission is determined in so far as possible to see that food purchased for soldiers in training at the various military camps is of the best quality.

Any complaints which are made by officers and men will at once receive the attention of the commission.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The British Government at the present time is not even considering the possible terms of an early peace, Premier Asquith declared in the Commons this afternoon.

The Prime Minister's statement was in response to a query put by D. M. Mason, the Liberal member. Mason asked if the Government is at present taking any steps to ascertain upon what terms Germany would consent to an immediate peace.

LONDON, Eng., July 15.—The Daily Chronicle to-day says: "Mischievous reports having been current as to the personal relations of some Ministers of the Cabinet, it may be as well to state that whatever difference may have existed, there is now complete harmony. The relations between the Prime Minister and Mr. Lloyd-George continue to be what they have always been, of the most friendly character."

CARDIFF, Wales, July 15.—The Executive Council of the Miners' Organization met this afternoon. It was expected they would confer with the Government officials later in the day, and would advise the men to return to work on daily contracts, pending a final settlement.

MEETING OF THE POULTRY ASSOCIATION

A meeting of the Poultry Association was held last evening. The President, Mr. J. Kelly was in the chair. After the regular routine of business, Mr. P. H. Smedmar gave a paper on the filo system of raising and housing of poultry, which was very interesting. There were a nice display of birds on hand. Mr. Geo. McClelland had six of his choice Buff Orpingtons which were a treat to look at. Also Mr. Abbott had a display of nice Barred Rocks and Golden Campines. President J. Kelly was selected to act as judge for the evening, which he did very satisfactorily.

A communication from Mr. Cunningham containing his resignation from office as he cannot give the necessary time to it, was received on condition that he act until next meeting, when a successor will be appointed.

The members were pleased to see the ladies interested and would like to see more attend those meetings, which are very interesting.

Mr. Geo. McClelland will prepare a paper for next meeting. Birds to be discussed next meeting will be Rhode Island Reds and any other variety that members wish to bring.

Bailieboro School Makes Fine Record

Inspector Odell of Cobourg writes that the rivalry produced by writing for the prize of a gold watch has had a good effect upon Bailieboro, as every candidate writing at Bailieboro centre passed the Entrance examination. Harry Porter of the Bailieboro school wins Mr. Burnham's gold watch for this year for those from South Monaghan taking the examination.

Will Appeal Award In the Samson Suit

Mr. F. D. Kerr stated to-day that he had been authorized by the township of Asphodel to appeal the judgment in the Samson vs. Asphodel case in which the plaintiff was awarded $350 by His Honour Judge Huycke a short time ago. The claim for damages arose out of an injury to Miss Samson of Percy township, who was driving on the Hastings-Norwood road when her horse, frightened by the township's stone crusher, caused the buggy to upset, with injuries to the young lady.

TWO DEPARTING OFFICERS GUESTS OF THEIR COMRADES

Captain M. H. Park and Lieut. A. F. Tomlins Say Farewell at a Banquet Held in Their Honour

TWO POPULAR OFFICERS

The officers of the 57th Regiment last evening said farewell to two of their members when an informal banquet was held in the mess, in honour of Captain Maurice Park of C Company, who is going to the front with the 59th Battalion and Lieut. A. F. Tomlins of the same Company, who has been transferred to Toronto. Nearly all the officers of the Regiment were in attendance with Lt. Col. Walker presiding, and the affair was most enjoyable. Speeches were made by all present expressing regret at the departure of and best wishes for the future to the two officers who are about to sever their connection with the Regiment.

During the evening Captain Park was presented with a cheque by the officers of the Regiment and a beautiful bouquet from the wives of the officers. He leaves to join the 59th Battalion at Kingston to-morrow. During the banquet which was served by T. H. Hooper, the Band of the Regiment played a number of enjoyable selections.

Captain Park and Lieut. Tomlins have been in charge of C Company which claims, with a good deal of foundation for the claim, to be the best company in the 57th.

WOUNDED LOCAL BOY RECOVERING

Mrs. B. F. Ackerman has received a letter from Miss M. Field, of Montreal, sister of Sergt. A. F. Field of the 57th Regiment, who is wounded and a prisoner in Germany. Miss Field supplies the cheerful information that her brother's condition shows great improvement, that his fractured shoulder has knit and his other wounds are healing, although of course he is still in hospital. Sergt. Field was first reported killed at St. Julien.

The latest news in regard to Capt. Chas. Ackerman is that his condition shows splendid improvement.

Theft Charge Dismissed

At Lakefield, before Magistrate Langley yesterday, Nat Pearson, of Buckhorn, was accused by Charles Albert Bishop, of sealing certain poles from a lot of Bishop's. The poles were used in a fence by Pearson.

The Magistrate dismissed the case, remarking that if there was any collecting to be done it should come through a civil action. He thought that Pearson had some colour of right to take the poles.

Mr. Joseph Wearing appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. C. R. Widdifield for the defendant.

SHORTAGE OF FARM LABOUR IS EXPECTED

According to C. P. R. advices there is likely to be a shortage of farm labour in the west in the fall. There are already over 100,000 of our Canadian young men under arms, and the war may demand more. Immigration is, of course, at a standstill. It will be impossible to get men from the east, where men are scarce, and in any case the west does not want men who, after the harvest, would be a burden on the people.

The question is, where will the men come from? The press is advising the farmers to hire men now and to hire them for a year in advance. There is, indeed, talk of a famine of unskilled labour in the fall. Many thousands of men, not merely from Canada, but the States, have left for Europe, since the war started. Where will the men come from, and particularly in view of the added acreage, which will mean more labour, as there is fully 30 per cent. of increase under cultivation? The States expects the largest crop in its history; and experts in the west insist that our crop, if the favourable conditions are maintained, will be the largest that we have produced. It is now the question of labour that is agitating the minds of the farmers. Several towns and municipalities have suspended their programme of public work in order that all the labourers possible should be on the land for the harvest.

PRZASNYSZ FOR SECOND TIME IN HANDS OF GERMANS

Russian Fortified Town Captured by German Troops, Berlin Claims — Was Held by the Foe Once Before in Spring Campaign.

RUSSIANS RETREATING

Special to The Examiner.

BERLIN, via wireless, July 15. — The Russian fortified city of Przasnysz, 50 miles north of Warsaw, has been stormed and captured by German troops, the War Office announced.

The Russians are falling back on the roads leading to Makof and Ciechanof, having abandoned some artillery in their retreat from the city. This is the second time German troops entered Przasnysz. Early in the spring campaign Prussian regiments took the city after three days' struggle in which both sides lost heavily.

Peterboro' Branch of Red Cross Society Reports $815 on Hand and $300 Will Be Sent to Headquarters

MANY SUPPLIES SENT

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough branch Red Cross Society, was held in the green room at the Y.W.C.A. on Wednesday, 14th inst.

The treasurer reported $815.00 on hand and several new members. It is hoped that the membership may go on increasing. The roll call yesterday showed 67 members to date, and each $2.00 membership adds to the Red Cross friends.

It was decided to send $300 to headquarters this month, $200 of this to be used for food supplies, to be sent to any Peterborough men who are prisoners of war. The branch will be glad to know of any names of prisoners who are not already known through the press, as a list will be sent with the money. Please notify Miss L. Davidson, Tel. 67.

Last week three large cases containing surgical dressings, etc., were shipped from the Red Cross room on Simcoe street, valued at $300. The contents were from the following: St. Andrew's church Women's Patriotic League, 4,694 articles.

Deborah Bible class of St. Paul's church, 984 articles.

57th Band Has Had Very Busy Week

This is proving a week of industry for the 57th Regimenal Band. They have been engaged every night, at some social affair or another. Monday night they were out; Tuesday night they attended the Sacred Heart Church lawn social; Wednesday night at St. George's Church garden party; to-night at the Knights of Columbus and Friday night at Victoria Park. At two of these events at least their services were given gratis — St George's Church and the Knights of Columbus, the proceeds of which affair will be given for purchases for the soldiers. And at them all there have been large attendances and good programmes.

There will be a Garden Party held at the home of Mrs. J. J. Cocks, 614 Reid St., Friday, July 16th. Eight little girls of St. Andrew's Sunday School are taking this way of making money for the Red Cross. 14-12

SHORT CHANGE MAN ARRESTED AGAIN

William Barr Who Was Sentenced to 90 Days Here—Picked Pockets at Sudbury

William Henry Barr, about whom Chief Thompson has received a letter from the Chief Commissioner of Police, A. P. Sherwood, informing him that Barr had been convicted in Sudbury, Ont., on March 26th, for picking pockets, and sentence suspended, will be remembered here in connection with the short change game on the C.P.R. last September. At that time he was sent to prison for 90 days with his partner, named Rose, restitution of the money being made as well.

Bernard Smith of Havelock, it will be remembered, was the victim of the short change artists. He boarded the C.P.R. 8.05 local bound for Tweed. On taking his seat in the coach a man (whom he recognized as Rose) sat opposite him and asked him for a match. Almost simultaneously Barr asked Mr. Smith if he had a five dollar bill. Mr. Smith took out some bills, at which Barr requested two ten dollar bills for some smaller bills. Smith consented, and handing him the two bills received in exchange a roll of bills which he counted and found to be four five dollar bills and four of one dollar each. He complained of the shortage of one dollar, and Barr, taking his money, counted it and admitted the deficiency. Putting his hand in his pocket Barr gave him four quarters and returned a roll of bills. While Smith counted the returned roll Barr left the train, which was by this time commencing to move out of the station. The roll last returned to Smith contained only four one dollar bills. He complained to the conductor of his loss and returning found that Rose, the man who had asked him for a match, had also left the train.

A couple of others were also victims of Rose and Barr at that time. They made quite a fuss when arrested, and some of the police officers carried around sore spots on their faces for a while after the two prisoners were sent to prison.

The letter to Chief Thompson was as follows:

"I beg to inform you, for additional record, that William Henry Barr, who was sentenced at Peterborough, Ont., on October 2nd, 1914, to 90 days in jail for short changing passengers on C.P.R. trains, was convicted at Sudbury, Ont., in March 26th, 1915, on a charge of attempting to pick pockets, and allowed to go on suspended sentence, under the name of Frank Howard."

MR. PERCY G. S. WEBB ON CUSTOMS HOUSE STAFF

Mr. Burnham, M.P., stated this morning that Mr. Percival G. S. Webb had been appointed temporary clerk at the Customs House, relieving the strain occasioned by the collection of war taxes.

THE HERRING DIDN'T WORK.

The attempt to weaken the charges and proof of the stealing in connection with the Manitoba Parliament Buildings, before the Mather Commission by bringing a baseless charge of wrong-doing and conspiracy against opponents, has miserably failed. Mr. Fullerton, K.C., was "credibly informed" by "fourteen Conservative members of the Legislature," who petitioned for investigation of "charges" against Liberal public men. No evidence was offered to justify these charges. The "members" were not allowed to testify as to the source of the information on which they based their "charges," and undertook to establish in court by evidence. Though the commission has not yet made a finding, there is prima facie evidence in the refusal to furnish evidence, that these charges were imaginary, and only made as a red herring to be drawn across the trail to lessen the bad odor of the Parliament Buildings charges, which have been proven, aside from the confession of guilt, implied in the government resigning when the case looked fatally black.

THE CHOICE EASY.

We don't know what Rumania may do in regard to rmeaining neutral or declaring for the Entente Allies. She seems to be between two fires. Alliance with the Entente will realize her territorial ambitions, but the Huns and Austrians are making promises of territory to induce her to remain neutral. There is a double difference in the two sets of promises. In the case of Germany and Austria, there is abundant reason to know that Germany won't, if she could, as she can't keep her promises. She has to win to be able to reward Rumania, and there is no certainty, not even a chance of her winning. She won't keep her promises either she has broken treaties and regarded the most solemn obligations to which she has put her hand, as "scraps of paper." She is not to be trusted, and her whole policy and action in, and precedent to the war, have been to make her unworthy of trust—to lie like a German will hereafter be a popular simile, which the Kaiser ha a fixed upon his people, has added to the folk speech of humanity. Rumania, can doubly trust the Entente Allies. They will be able to give her what they may promise; and they will keep their word—that's what they are fighting for; international good faith, honesty, honour, and freedom. Rumania can't have much difficulty in deciding upon which side of the fence to drop, when she gets ready to do so. Italy decided in her own interests, and in the interests of humanity.

TARDY VIRTUE.

It is a little hard on the members of the defunct Roblin Government, to have its old friends, admirers and beneficiaries of its methods, slang-whanged and denounced, now that the government has fallen to pieces of its own rottenness, and ha sno more favours to distribute. Months ago, and years ago, was the time for these suddenly virtuous persons to have logically voiced the denunciations. The Roblin Government was probably as bad when these persons were supporting it, right or wrong, especially wrong. They fall away when the end comes, and become champions of virtue now, as they were for years champions of the other thing—the Roblin Government. One is reminded of the aptness of the old couplet, reversed—

When the devil was ill the devil a saint would be,
When the devil got well the devil a saint was he.

DESTROY THE SPIRIT.

Germany, for a nation that aspires to the rather large job of dominating the world, adheres faithfully to the sneak-thief role. It can do nothing openly, nothing big in spirit or act, unless it is bad. It was said of old time, as a superlative expression of meanness that a man would "steal the coppers off a dead man's eyes," Germany has stolen the bronze lion over the graves of brave men on the field of Waterloo, to melt up for war munition making. Germany shows itself equal to any crime from baby-killing to petty larceny. It is a skulking, secret, sneaking nation in its conduct of diplomacy and war. It can't do anything straight that can be done crookedly. It breaks every law human or divine, outroges every sentiment of humanity; and shows itself conscienceless and ruthless in its attempt to win the dominance of its damnable cult of "force." The spirit revealed in a thousand ways would be a beautiful spirit to influence world domination. Every additional evidence of its malignity should be an additional peg in our resolve to destroy this spirit; should array the whole world against it, and first of all, as it has done, Britain and the Empire. As part of the Empire Canada, has daily a fresh call to extend herself to the limit, in order to give the greatest possible help in crushing the German spirit of militarism and force, the greatest concrete expression of vandalism and outrage the world has ever known and which, please Providence, will know no more.

SPLENDID WORK.

The regular monthly meeting of the local branch of the Red Cross Society gave evidence of splendid work. The balance on hand is the tidy sum of $815—with a place for all of it and more—contributed by the various auxiliary agencies of the work. During the past week three bales have been sent forward, of surgical and hospital supplies, comprising 11,334 individual articles. $300 of the cash in hand will be sent to headquarters, of which $200 is to be devoted to the purchase of food for Canadian prisoners of war, who do not, like Jeshurun, "wax fat and kick," upon the bill-of-fare served by their gentle German hosts, but are in as sore need of palatable and nourishing food as the wounded are of hospital dressings and comforts. We cannot withhold generous praise and applause for the splendid work done in the interests of Red Cross work in Peterborough. Many of us do not know of and cannot, therefore, adequately appreciate, the unostentatious but effective work going on silently amongst us every day, but with an echo three thousand miles across the seas, in the hospital wards and prison camps, where our soldier boys are paying the painful price of duty bravely done. We cannot think too highly, or help too much, the Red Cross work, which is the only form of contribution to waging war many of us can make. Those engaged in the work have to work hard, to sacrifice personal leisure and personal comforts, in a word, to do the work of the Good Samaritan, in obedience to the call of Him, whose words come to all of us as to the tempting lawyer—"go thou and do likewise."

THE REWARD OF VIRTUE.

We don't often have occasion nowa-days to charge Major-General Sam Hughes with meddling in the political game. But he has interfered in the Manitoba mess; he has taken Hon. Dr. Montague, the discredited Minister of Public Works in the Roblin Government, in hand. Dr. Montague was too ill to give evidence before the Royal Commission re the stealing in connection with the erection of the Parliament Buildings in which his department was chiefly concerned. He has suddenly recovered. The Minister of Militia has made Dr. Montague an "honourary major, with the rank of colonel," and ordered him "to report to the Canadian Medical Department in London." Whether the Minister of War has done this as a punishment or a reward — as a manifestation of his obsession to make heroes by a wave of his sword—is not known. The government of which the Hon. Sam is a member, has a faculty of performing remarkable cures. Hon. Louis Philippe Pelletier, Postmaster-General, became too ill to perform the duties of his office—no doubt he was tired by the exercise of cutting off heads. He resigned from ill health, but was miraculously healed. He was placed on the bench. He was too ill to sort letters, but not too ill to perform the strenuous duties of a judge. Dr. Montague was too ill to tell the commission about the crookedness and stealing he allowed to develop in his department, in fact—that was the excuse for his allowing it. But he, too, suddenly recovered, and is sent to the strenuosities of the battle line. It is twenty-five years since Dr. Montague practiced medicine, but he doubtless still remembers enough to look after wounded Canadian soldiers. Isn't politics a great game? A politician has only to make failure as a minister, muddle his department and show the greatest inefficiency, to merit reward and promotion. He may have been unfaithful and inefficient in one department, but that is only a signal to promote him to be unfaithful and inefficient in another. Our Minister of War shows, as a rule, a good deal of common sense and energy, even if complicated with a little fireworks, but he sometimes makes a "bad break," shows the partisan outbreak. Virtue is not its own reward, but has reward thrust upon it.

A NEIGHBOURLY TRIBUTE TO THE BRAVERY OF CANADIANS

Whether neutral or partizan, residents of the United States, our neighbours, have ungrudgingly given of praise to the bravery of the Canadians who have formed a part of the battle line of the Allies in France. Tribtue after tribute has been paid to their gallantry, to their stubbornness in holding positions against numerable attacks, preceded by asphyxiating bombs and accompanied by a veritable hail of shells from hundreds of guns, belching forth as the German infantryman advanced to the assault.

Such a tribute is that of The New York Sun, which gave the report of the record officer of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry battalion, and then made the following comment:

There have been hints by the romantically inclined of disappointment over the "unpictureseque" character of the European war, as though shovels were more used than guns, pickaxes than bayonets, and charges and countercharges had been replaced by the subterranean borings of miners and sappers. Some, of dull wit, bemoan the dearth of stories of personal experience, glowing tales of heroism, and profess weariness of routine reports of trench gains and losses, as though these were achieved by mere process of barter.

This war will adorn the pages of history with such records of heroism, individual and collective, as the world has never yet seen; just as it surpasses all other wars in horrors of suffering. The brilliant passages come slowly to light; but we wish to call the attention of [illegible] to-day in appreciation if any such indeed there be, that they failed to read and re-read and and linegringly ponder it, to the account in The Sun of Friday, July 9, of the service and suffering of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

In August, 1914, the "Pats" mustered 1,045 men; on May 7, of this year, after five months in the trenches, 63 answered the roll call, and on the morning of May 8th, the strength of the regiment was 150, surviving warriors. And this is but the dull statistical measure of a sacrifice typical of the spirit of the Briton on the stricken field. The report of the regiment's record officer, printed in Friday's Sun is a narrative of military courage, and devotion than which nothing finer was ever penned. The world must long treasure the memory of those brave Canadians.

Our cousins to the south appreciate to the full the heroic stand of the Canadians, before, during and since the Battle of Langemarck.

BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES

We hear a deal of arm-chair wisdom about the war and the navy. "Just twelve months ago Sir Percy Scott, the gunnery expert, startled the world by pronouncing the doom of the battleship and declaring for the submarine as the supreme engine of naval warfare," says the Freeman's Journal He wrote:

"Not only is the open sea unsafe; a battleship is not immune from attack even in a closed harbour, for the so-called protecting boom at the entrance can easily be blown up. With a flotilla of submarines commanded by dashing young officers, of whom we have plenty, I would undertake to get through any boom into any harbour and sink or materially damage all the ships in the harbour. If a battleship is not safe either on the high seas or in harbour, what is the use of a battleship? What we require is an enormous fleet of submarines, airships and aeroplanes, and a few fast cruisers, provided we can find a place to keep them in safety during wartime. . . . In my opinion, as the motor vehicle has driven the horse from the road, so has the submarine driven the battleship from the sea."

The test of war has been applied to this doctrine, and despite the submarine activity England's battleships absolutely hold the sea. It is true, of course, that some war-ships have been lost, "caught" (says a naval correspondent of the Liverpool Post) "by submarines as snipers catch unwary troops in the fields of Flanders"; but the mastery of the sea is held by the Grand fleet intact." Yes, and when the war is over, and, God approach the day! it will be found that all that kept the equilibrium of the world was Britain's navy.—Catholic Register.

THE NEEDS OF THE RED CROSS.

The Red Cross need is like the widow's cruse of oil—it is inexhaustable. Fully to meet that need would require a purse like the widow's cruse. Such a purse is a financial miracle, but the Red Cross must ask the Canadian people to perform that miracle.

Every time you read a report of a battle do you realize that it means a fresh addition to the task of the Red Cross?

Do you know that every bullet fired is only one more drop in the Red Cross cruse of inexhaustible obligation?

If the Government, when its General Staff demanded fresh supplies of munitions, replied 'Why do you want more shells?" would you not think the Government insane? When the Red Cross asks for more supplies do you not realize how much it needs them?

The need of the army is for shells, shells, and still more shells.

Every dollar you give to the Red Cross is a bandage which ties up some wound, and there are as many wounds to bind up as you have dollars to give.

Hand in your money to the local branch or send your subscriptions to the office of the Treasurer, 77 King Street, East, Toronto.

MANITOBA.

Out of the unsavoury mess of Manitoba politics there arises one vital fact that should be gratifying to all who desire decent administration of public affairs. That the Roblin Government went down, "unwept, unhonoured and unsung," is admitted by all—even by the retiring Ministers themselves. It was disheartening to find charges made that the new Government, led by Mr. Norris, had obtained office through a corrupt bargain with their predecessors. It is to the credit of the Norris Cabinet that they promptly met this charge, and took steps to have a full inquiry. The evidence shows that there was a remarkable exchange of confidences between the old and new Ministers, which now accounts for the air of mystery that surrounded the change of government. But while these proceedings were of an extraordinary character, and probably without precedent in Canadian political history, nothing that has been disclosed indicates that there was any corrupt act or intention on the part of the new Premier. The retiring Premier has sworn positively that there was nothing in the whole transaction reflecting on Mr. Norris, and the legal gentleman who made the charges has so far accepted this position that he has stated he does not intend to call Mr. Norris as a witness.

There has been enough rottenness exposed in this Manitoba affair to make most Canadians heartily ashamed. But they can at least have the comfort of believing that the man who has just taken upon himself the responsibility of governing the Province has not been in any way a party to it. There is ground for hope that better days are coming to Manitoba in the management of its public affairs. The outlook would have been hopeless indeed if the country had to believe that the change of administration was the result of a corrupt bargain between the leaders of the two political parties.—Journal of Commerce.

Onion Pickles.

Put small white onions in jars, add salt (a good handful for each gallon) and pour boiling water over them. Next day drain and heat in vinegar and water (half and half) just scald slowly. Fill jars or bottles, cover with cold vinegar, add a pepperpod and a scrap of horseradish.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association Formed Last Night

The Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association was organised last night, officers appointed and a constitution formed. The officers are as follows:

Hon. Pres.—F. D. Kerr.
President—G. R. Langley.
1st Vice-Pres.—Dr. Sutton.
Treasurer—Ray Scott.
Secretary—E. Walton.

The executive is to consist of the officers of the Association, and A. Cranfield, F. J. Jamieson, G. A. Carson, Ivon Lillico. If any other teams are entered they will likely be given a representative.

The principal features of the constitution are as follows:

Each match is to consist of two sets; home and home games to be played; should a club drop out all games are to be cancelled; all players shall be registered; the secretary of each club is requested to send in a list of names to the League Secretary; a team shall consist of four men; no player can play in more than four sets against any one team; matches are to be played on scheduled dates, or by mutual agreement on any date before the next scheduled game. If not played according to this rule, match to be awarded to the team ready to proceed on the scheduled date; all disputes to be referred to the Executive.

The following teams are expected to be entered at the outset: All Saints, South End, Golf Club, Bowling Green, Charlotte Street, St. Andrew's, Y.M.C.A., St. Paul's, Knox Church, and Sacred Heart.

If this League can be effectually carried out, it will go a long way toward creating a deeper interest in lawn tennis, especially the snappier cutting game which comes only with practice and experience. At the same time it might be remarked that the Churches are noticeably represented.

German Spy Well Known in Canada

MONTREAL, July 15.—The mass of fiction that has appeared during the last ten months with the "German spy" as its motif has nothing to compare with the revelations of Ignatius Timotheus Tribitch-Lincoln once Jewish missionary in Montreal, later British M.P., later still a German spy in England, and now a fugitive in the United States. Tribitch—that is the name by which he was known in Montreal—has been writing his "confessions" for the New York World, and they reflect small credit on the author.

No less a plot than to lure the British fleet into the North Sea under circumstances that would make it an easy mark for the Germans, was Tribitch's scheme. It failed utterly, as the Admiralty was forearmed, and fully aware of the man's perfidy. However, it makes interesting reading.

Many people in Montreal still remember Tribitch, and it is known that he visited this city, recently since his activities in England forced him to flee to the United States. He came to Montreal in 1901 and completed a course at a local college. in 1902 he was appointed a Jewish missionary in Montreal, but within a few weeks of his appointment he broke away and joined another church, being ordained deacon on Christmas, 1902. In 1903 he returned to England.

After the outbreak of war Tribitch found life in England "intolerable." He was insulted in his club. So he decided to revenge himself on the country of his adoption. As he writes:

"The plan I mapped out to achieve this will seem to many rather startling. It was certainly original. It was nothing less than a decision to find out important naval and military secrets and to betray them to the Central Powers, and having achieved that, to quit England forever, if still alive."

In pursuance of this laudable scheme, Tribitch offered his services in turn to the Home Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, and to Mr. Churchill. They had nothing to give the spy. So he tried to get into the Counter Espionage Department at the War Office.

Deep-Laid Plan.

"Now, my plan was nothing less than to lure part of the British fleet into a certain quarter of the North Sea on a certain day, and to have the German fleet within easy steaming distance. In order to procure this, I proposed just the reverse to Capt. —— and laid before him a carefully prepared scheme, the ostensible purpose of which was to destroy part of the German navy."

Tribitch was told that the plan was not feasible as it was not the policy of the Admiralty to reveal to him the whereabouts of the British fleet. So he left England for Rotterdam to visit the headquarters of the German espionage for England, at the German Consulate in the Dutch city. With the object of having something in his possession that would give him the entree with the British War Office, he played the double traitor with the German consul in Rotterdam, and secured "the absolute and unquestionable power and means to hunt down most, if not all, the German spies in England—had I wished to do so."

Secret Information.

On January 2, Tribitch returned triumphantly to London. He hurried to Whitehall to offer his information unconditionally to the Acting Chief of the Secret Service, whom he represents as "beside himself with excitement" on receiving codes, a list of spies, some addresses to which telegrams and letters were being sent by spies, disclosures of how they were being financed and through what channels, and "a document which would show what the Germans do and do not know of the British Army." The Secret Service officer promised to tell Lord Kitchener of what Tribitch had done, and also to give the spy further employment." A naval officer who is and has been for ten years the chief officer in England's Secret Service, met Tribitch by appointment, thanked him profusely and promised to give him matter to send to Rotterdam to hoodwink the Germans. But Tribitch waited and nothing happened.

Finally on January 7 he remonstrated with the Acting Chief of the Secret Service. On January 25 he was granted an interview with the Director of Naval Intelligence, and left with the impression that he was still unsuspected. He soon became uneasy, however, and a long talk with the Director of the Admiralty led him to believe that he was not progressing very favourably. Then came a telegram from the Director of Intelligence requesting him to call and bring his passports. He describes the visit thus:

"I was puzzled by the request to bring my passports with me. As it turned out, it was a trap. I called on the Director of Intelligence. Two gentlemen in civil attire were present. Capt. —— put an innocent-looking question to me. This showed me that the game was up. I expected to be arrested at once. Indeed, I cannot understand even now why they did not arrest me. However, I kept up the play and finally after a clever tactical conversation left the room unmolested. Next morning I left London and sailed on the steamer Philadelphia the following day, January 30, for New York."

His Queen Career.

Tribitch has had an extraordinary career. His real name is Isaac Trebitch. He was born at Paks, the son of a Hungarian Jew. In 1896 he came to London fleeing from the Hungarian police who wanted him for theft. Here he professed to be converted to Christianity. He was taken in hand by a London society and sent to a home in Bristol. He did not stay there long—in fact, it was a peculiarity of this plausible gentleman that he never stayed anywhere long. He exhausted his immediate locality and then went on to the next oasis. He came back to London and entered a Jewish mission. After six months' instruction he was refused baptism. Tribitch retaliated by stealing the watch and chain of the director of the mission and disappearing with a passport he had appropriated.

Eighteen months afterwards the director received a letter from Tribitch saying he was longing to receive forgiveness and professing repentance. The director visited Hamburg, where the letter came from and found Tribitch as a convert at a Jewish mission. He took the nine hours of leaving. He was next heard from at a school in Holstein, where he stayed only a few months. Then he went to London where he announced his arrival to the director in a letter beginning "Dear Brother in Christ." The reply was that if he were still in London in twenty-four hours the police would be informed. He made another hasty exit and turned up in Canada.

Curate's License.

On leaving Canada he got the Archbishop of Canterbury to give him a temporary license to act as curate of Appledore-cum-ebony in Kent. In this district he is still well remembered as the preacher who could move the women to tears with his eloquence. At this time he had altered his name of Isaac to Ignatius, which has a more Anglican sound. By this time he had acquired five or six languages and when he had spent nearly a year at Appledore he found it too quiet. He resigned his curacy and became a teacher at a Quakers' school in York. This, backed up by a recommendation from the vicar of Appledore, led him to the notice of B. Steebohm Rountree, who employed him for three years as investigator of social problems in Belgium, France, Germany, Switzerland and Hungary and lent him large sums of money later. He was employed because he was a linguist and he did the work so well that he was three and a half years in Mr. Rountree's employ.

Then he heard that a Liberal candidate was wanted for Darlington. Mr. Pike Pease had been so long member that the average Liberal candidate thought the fight hopeless, and there was some difficulty in getting a candidate. Tribitch, who by this time had become Mr. Ignatius Tribitch-Lincoln (he was naturalized in 1909), went off to Darlington, addressed the Liberal executive, hypnotized them, and was adopted at once. He was returned by a majority of 29. The Darlington people, however, got in touch with some of his former acquaintances and learned that their candidate was a man with a past. Before the general election in 1910 they firmly intimated to Mr. Lincoln that he must withdraw. He did so, and devoted himself to the oil business in Roumania and Galicia. There was a meeting of his creditors in 1911 at York and a composition of five shillings on the pound was arranged. No further funds have since been available for the discharge of his liabilities. Mr. Rountree was the chief creditor, claiming over £7,000.

RECRUITING FOR THE 2nd UNIVERSITIES' COMPANY

There are many men in Canada who are anxious to go and play their part in the great war, who are willing to go as officers, but from want of adequate military training, or for other reasons are unable to obtain commissions. There are other men who would prefer to join the ranks simply because they realize the enormous responsibility of the wastage of life which results from the bad leadership of an improperly trained officer.

Some of these men hesitate to go in the ranks, merely because they are uncertain of finding the congenial companionship of men of similar training and tastes.

Now, there is an organization in Canada exactly suited to the requirements of such men, and its existence should be brought clearly to the notice of every young man in Canada.

The universities of Canada are working loyally together to raise company after company, and to send them overseas to reinforce as units that famous regiment, the Princess Patricias Canadian Light Infantry.

These companies are composed of men from the Universities of Canada, the friend sof such men, and, broadly speaking, from men of that type.

It must be clearly understood that they are not all University men, for there are bank clerks, lawyers, architects, engineers, ranchers, and others, and it has been found that such men pull well together and enjoy military life to the full. If the existence of such a force was known throughout the length and breadth of Canada there would be no difficulty in recruiting a full company within a week.

The First University Company, under the command of an excellent leader, Captain Gregor Barclay, has been for some time in England. An eminent military authority has declared this to be the finest company which has ever sailed from Canada.

The second University Company was composed of men of a splendid type, and was embarked recently at Montreal.

The third Universities' Company (and note that the plural is deliberate), is recruiting with fair rapidity and there is every hope that it will reach the high mark of success attained by the first two companies.

There is certainly no difficulty in obtaining officers, but it is harder to find picked men for Sergeant-Major, Company Quarter - Master - Sergeant, Platoon Sergeants and Section leaders, on whom largely rests the success of the Company. Indeed, Canada needs chiefly a training school for non-commissioned officers.

The general principle is followed of giving commissions to well qualified men from the University or from the district which furnishes the recruits.

The West has certainly been a great recruiting ground for the Universities Companies, and the men have proved themselves good soldiers, well disciplined and efficient, with fine physique. It is hoped that the Maritime Provinces will rival the West in furnishing recruits. Indeed, in the Second Company men, doubtless Canadians, came to join from Oklahoma, Arizona and Missouri.

A recruit can be examined medically and attested in his own district, and transportation will be provided to Montreal.

All information can be obtained from Captain A. S. Eve, 382 Sherbrooke Street, West, Montreal, the headquarters of the successive companies.

The newspapers and publicity agents, by their voluntary aid, freely given, have shown themselves to be the most efficient means of furnishing recruits, but we ask every reader to help the men to join the Company they are looking for, and the Company to find the men required.

Von Hindenburg Is Dismissed

PARIS, July 14.—A neutral traveller, just arrived here from Germany, has told the Temps that the best informed persons in Germany believe that Gen. von Hindenburg has told the Kaiser that the war has reached its climax for Germany, and that as no greater advantage can be expected it will be well to seek peace and thus prevent a continuation of a profitless butchery.

At this the Kaiser is said to have ordered von Hindenburg to be silent and to leave his presence. Immediately afterward he issued an order giving Gen. Mackensen von Hindenburg's place. The party which preaches "war to death" considers that it has won a great victory in von Hindenburg's disappearance.

CURZON AND WAR STOP BAGDAD RAILWAY PLOT

How British Control Terminus of Kaiser's Pet Road at Koweit on Persian Gulf

Koweit is a port at the head of the Gulf of Persia, and is the only point in Turkish territory along the gulf that is suitable for a railway terminus. Koweit is the natural outlet from Mesopotamia to the gulf. When he was Viceroy of India Lord Curzon saw this, and being aware of the importance of securing India against German designs in Mesopotamia declared a protectorate over Koweit, concluding a treaty with the Sheik of that territory. This happened in 1901. Thus in the long and tortuous shiftings of the negotiations of the powers over the Bagdad railway Britain held the key that locked Germany from the gulf. So long as she controlled the vital coast line Britain did not feel compelled to offer more than diplomatic resistance to the wormings of the German agents in Mesopotamia.

Hands Off the Gulf

But at that time the British Government made no secret that it would go to war rather than let any other great power establish a naval base or control a port on the Gulf of Persia. In 1903 Lord Cranborne, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, declared that "it is the intention of his Majesty's Government to maintain the status quo on the Persian Gulf, and its maintenance is incompatible with the occupation by any power of a port in those waters." After the change of Government Sir Edward Grey, the new Foreign Secretary, said in 1906: "We should regard the establishment of a naval base or fortified port on the Persian Gulf as a very grave menace to British interests, and we should certainly resist it by all the means at our disposal."

The practical possession of Koweit gave Britain an unchallengeable right to the control of that part of the projected Bagdad railway from Bussora southward to the gulf. No matter what the windings of Wilhelmstrasse diplomacy were in the endeavor to keep the other powers out of any influential part in the affairs of the Bagdad Railway Company, Britain always had that vital terminus. In 1909, after Russia and Britain had by their agreement of 1907 solidified their opposition to the Bagdad railway, Germany was forced to the temporary expedient of suggesting that British engineers construct and control the line from Bussora to the gulf. That not being practical, as the British were opposed to the whole Teuton project, Germany in 1911 virtually coerced Russia into an agreement by which Russia not only withdrew opposition to the projected line through Mesopotamia, but agreed to connect it with a line to Teheran, the capital of Persia. Russia's policy before that event had been "No railways in Asia at all."

Amarah Battle Decided

All of these Teutonic schemings, consistently piloted along with amazing aggressiveness and diligence ever since Emperor Wilhelm went to Constantinople, and got from Abdul Hamid the promise of railway rights to the gulf, have come to naught. The war has ended German dreams as to making the valleys of the Tigris and Euphrates virtual Teuton colonies, and of securing an inland route from Berlin to the Indian Ocean. Von Moltke first conceived the scheme when he was on the staff of Sultan Mahmud in 1837 and 1838.

But the success of the British-Indian expeditionary force at Amarah, half-way from Koweit to Bagdad, has given the British control of Mesopotamia, and ended the menace in this quarter. Incidentally the control of lower Mesopotamia gives Britain a bulwark for her interests in Southern Persia that may in time be exceedingly valuable.

MOUSTACHE IS TEUTONIC

Guards Borrowed and Jealously Guarded This Military Fashion

The correspondent who writes to a contemporary suggesting that the British War office authorities should insist on soldiers being clean-shaven instead of ordering them to wear moustaches might have alleged Teutonic influence in the adoption of the moustache of the British army. The idea was first borrowed from a batch of Austrian officers quartered with some of our troops on the South Coast during the Waterloo campaign. It was taken up by the Guards, who very much resented any attempt on the part of mere line regiments to follow the new fashion. The Winter campaign in the Crimea led our men to grow full beards for warmth, and these, modified into flowing whiskers ("Piccadilly weepers," as they came to be called) on their return to London, were long regarded as the mark of the man of fashion.

An Afterthought.

"I have just been reading another list of rules for living a hundred years."

"Stuff and nonsense!"

"Maybe you are right. I notice that most of these old chaps who have lived to be ninety-eight and a hundred years old seem to formulate their rules for longevity rather late in life."

Minister to Balkan Country

Britain's representative in Roumania is Sir George Head Barclay. His wife is a most beautiful and fascinating woman. The post of British Minister carries with it a salary of $18,000 a year, out of which must be defrayed the expenses of residence.

Sperm whales are the richest prize of the ocean yielding spermaceti from the cavities in their heads, ivory from their lower jaws, and rich yellow oil from their sides.

New Phase Is Developing

LONDON, July 14.—The operations are entering a new phase in the eastern war theatre, the Russians having been successful in their counter-offensive against the Austrians in the region of Krasnik. They have taken new positions in the hills to the north of that town and apparently are waiting for the Austro-Germans to make a move. It is not expected that this will be long delayed, for Gen. von Mackenzen has had time to receive reinforcements and supplies of guns and ammunition for his next great effort to secure control of the Lublin-Cholm railway.

Petrograd, Berlin and Vienna all officially described the situation in South Poland and Galicia as unchanged.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

DISTINGUISHED CONDUCT MEDAL FOR AN ASHBURNHAM BOY

Miss Alma Beavis, 119 James street, has received the following letter from her brother, Sgt. R. Beavis, at the front:

June 28, 1915.

Miss Alma Beavis,

Peterborough, Ont.,

(My Dear Sister,—I wrote you when I was in Versailles Hospital, wounded. I have been back up the line again. Dear sister, I have been wounded and also gassed. I am now in another hospital. I am in No. 6, Sationary Hospital, Le Havre, France. It is some job to stay out of hospitals in this country where the horrible Germans are. Did you receive the pin I sent you? I sent a stick pin set with pearls. It was a dandy. I hope you received it.

I am sending you a picture of the military hospital, Versailles, which I want you to show Miss Erskine. How are all the people in Peterborough. Bert Carpenter was killed near me. Well Alma, I have won a Distinguished Conduct Medal and have been made a Sergeant for bravery. I am feeling fairly well only for the effects of the gas, which is awful. You can't realize how it is.

I have two friends in Hartfleur and they are with the Y.M.C.A., and are both Scotch ministers and both come down to the hospital to see me. They were very surprised to hear from me because I had been reported dead up at the camp.

Well, remember me to everybody and tell them it is awful. I got my medal for carrying one of our officers from a Jack Johnson hole just twenty yards from the German trenches. He was wounded five times when I got out to him, and while I was bringing him in he was wounded aagin. The poor stretcher-bearer has to go in some dangerous places. I was carrying a wounded man on a stretcher and the man who was helping me and the man on the stretcher were both killed and I did not get a cratch. Dear siser, I am the only stretcher bearer left in the battalion in the last battle.

Well, I will close. Remember me to Mr. Pogue, Mr. Nelson and Mr. Cowan, the Young Men's Bible Class teacher, and also Mr. Gage. I am,

Your loving brother,

R. BEAVIS.

My address:— Stretcher Bearer, 1st Canadian Brigade— 64,006, Sergt. R. Beavis, No. 6 Stationary Hospital, Army Post Office, London, Eng.

St. George's Lawn Social Was a Great Success

The weather man was in a good mood yesterday, otherwise he might easily have put a damper on one of those open-air functions which depend so much upon summer-like conditions. As it was, yesterday was an ideal summer's day, plenty of warm sunshine, tempered with a delicious breeze and the evening was equally delightful. Small wonder, therefore that a large and continually increasing crowd thronged the grounds on which stands the little Anglican Church of St. George, between McGill Street and Braidwood Avenue, South Peterborough.

On arrival your representative found booths of varied descriptions, where articles of fancy work, homemade candies, ice creams, cakes, soft drinks, and various other articles were disposed of in exchange for coin of the realm. There was also a "lucky dip," while in the Sunday-School-room an ample and appetizing supper was served. How it was done at the modest price is a puzzle, for it was decidedly good. Among the large audience might be seen many sympathising friends from the Anglican Churches of St. John and St. Lukes, thus showing that the mother and sister churches watch with pleasure the growth of the little Church and congregation in the South End.

At 7.30 p.m Mayor Buller, accompanied by Mrs. Buller and their son, arrived on the scene, closely followed by Mr. Burnham, M.P., Mr. G. Gillespie, M.P.P., and Canon Davidson, Rector of the Mother Parish of Peterborough. The Band of the 57th Regiment, which had kindly given its services, then struck up a national anthem, "God Save the King," followed by "O Canada." Mayor Buller in a trite, impressive speech, said how he had watched the Rev. Jas. Prices work from the commencement, and eulogized his industry and perseverance. He had attended several similar functions at St. George's and he hoped that when war conditions had again shaped down into peaceful lines he would be present at either the laying of the foundation stone of, or the opening, of a Cathedral-like building to represent the Church of England in that part of this growing city. The Mayor's remarks were received with marked applause.

The Rev. Jas. Price, Rector of St. George's, then called on Mr. J. H. Burnham, the Federal Member of Parliament, to make a few remarks, which were brief and much to the point. He was followed by Mr. G. Gillespie, member of the Provincial Parliament, who made a neat speech. Canon Davidson then proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor and his wife, and the two members of Parliament for their attendance, incidentally remarking that the presence of himself and sundry members of St. Johns' congregation stood behind him in his interest for the welfare of St. George's Church. The vote was seconded by Mr. H. Rush and in acknowledging the courtesy, for the vote was unanimous, Mayor Buller declared the social as being formally opened.

That the whole affair was a success may be inferred from the fact that upwards of two hundred tickets were sold before the day, while the gate receipts would appear to be considerable. During the evening the Band discoursed popular music and shortly after ten o'clock the gathering broke up, each and every one expressing themselves in high terms as to the pleasant evening spent.

The following is a list of the stalls:

Italian Army Making Gains

ROME, July 14. — The Austrians have ceased their offensive at all points against the Italians, who are advancing unopposed and are trying to initiate trench warfare along the Isonzo line. Meantime the Austrian fortifications are constantly being strengthened and are being stubbornly held.

The Italian advance, however, is progressing slowly and steadily, the heavy artillery being used with great result against the Austrian fortifications, which are gradually crumbling into ruins. By this method the Italians are compelling the Austrians by degrees to evacuate positions which were generally considered to be impregnable.

The task of breaking through the natural Alpine fortresses is more difficult, as the Austrians now have been fully reinforced. One of the chief difficulties the Italians are meeting with is the destruction of the wire entanglements in the mountain passes by indirect artillery fire.

King Watched Fighting.

King Victor Emmanuel, who is in the danger zone, watched the bombardment of Malborghetto for over an hour.

According to an Innisbruck despatch, the Germans are concentrating a new army, under command of Gen. Lundendorf, in the vicinity of Munich. Its destination is said to be Trent.

The Russians are returning about 6,000 Italians who were held prisoner in Galicia by the Austrians to Italy. The men will be sent home by way of Roumania.

As the Austrian aviators outnumber the Italian airmen, France is sending some of her aviators to Italy.

The King has signed at the headquarters of Lieut.-Gen. Count Cadorna a decree establishing a supreme committee, composed of the president of the Council of Ministers and the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, Finance, War and Marine, which will give special attention to increasing the supply of arms and other war munitions.

"Another decree names Lieut.-Gen. Alfredo Ballolio Under-Secretary of State for Arms and Munitions."

Austrian prisoners say that cholera is daily growing worse among the Austrian troops, especially those who have returned from Galicia, and that there are many fatalities as a result of the disease. The Italian authorities are submitting all prisoners to a severe medical examination. Men suspected of having the cholera are isolated.

CZARINA OF RUSSIA INSPECTS HOSPITAL—The Czarina is taking a great interest in the hospital work connected with the Russian army, and spends a great deal of time among her wounded soldiers. She is here shown inspecting an emergency hospital near the battlefield.

Wearing and Mr. J. C. Smith of the Hamilton Co., waited upon Judge Huycke and explained the necessity of this precaution. The action is similar to that adopted by the C.G.E. Co. a short time ago.

GERMANY AT A LOSS FOR A NATIONAL HERO AND IS VOTING ON THE QUESTION

AMSTERDAM, via London.— Germany is looking out for a new national hero. A Leipzig magazine has asked its readers to compile a list of candidates for such an honour, but the replies have been most embarrassing.

Three months ago the list certainly would have been headed by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, six months ago by the Crown Prince, nine months ago by the Kaiser. But the popularity of the War Lord has waned, since the war did not end in a rapid victory that of the heir apparent has sunk into oblivion and the "Saviour of East Prussia,' as Von Hindenburg used to be called, is hardly mentioned now.

It is significant that the Leipzig poll is headed by Lieute nant Von Weddigen, the late commander of one of the pirate submarines; Captain Hersing, commander of the submarine which brought the Lusitania to her doom and Captain-Lieutenant Von Mucke of the defunct Emden, who succeeded in getting back to Gremany after an eventful voyage across the Indian Ocean and Arabia.

Lieutenant Von Weddigen is dead, Hersing is now active in Turkish waters and Von Mucke is busy lecturing in Germany and making money out of his personal adventures. Such are the three heroes of Germany, and it will be noticed that ther is not an army man among them, despite the iron crosses that have been distributed right and left to "distinguished officers."

A year ago it might have been lese-majeste for a newspaper to confess that the Kaiser was no longer the most popular hero in Germany, but things have changed greatly in the Fatherland since then ,and such popularity as the Kaiser enjoys rests solely an the belief that he did all he could to prevent the war, and not at all that he is doing all he can to win it.

It is admitted that as a general and as a tactician he has failed direly, and Germany was relieved when it became known that the Kaiser and his sons had been wise enough practically to give up their commands.

The "military' achievements of the Crown Prince are a matter of ironic comment in the officers' casinos in Germany. In some of these places the Crown Prince is called "Back-to-Cecilie," which is a plain hint that the officers in the field would rather see their future War Lord in his Berlin chateau living a quiet life with the Crown Princess.

The downfall of the Prince's popularity has been a hard blow to militarism in general, as the Prince was considered the supreme hope of the Junker and "mailed-fist" party.

Nothing is known of the Kaiser's other sons, except that Prince Eitel accompanies his father in his "decoration tours," and that Prince August Wilhelm has moved to his beautiful Villa Ingenitz at Potsdam, "where he expects to pass a quiet summer," the papers say.

While the Hohenzollerns have been heroic only in times of peace, members of other royal families in Germany have done work in the field The Crown Prince of Bavaria is slowly moving out of Belgium, the Duke of Wurtemberg is in command in Northern France, and several members of the reigning families of Saxe-Weimar, Saxe-Eisenach, Hesse and Lippe have fallen in action, and the German people cannot help making comparisons between the latter, who speak little and die for the cause, and the Hohenzollerns, who do so little and talk so much.

Like the Kaiser and his sons, all the Prussian generals have failed to make a reputation except von Hindenburg, and even von Hindenburg now is almost as forgotten as his "victories," which were so speedily discounted.

Von Kluck, one of the "hopes" of Germany, is only notorious for the failure of his "dash" on Paris, von Bissing for his relentless bullying of Belgians, von Bullow for putting a bullet through his own heart during the siege of Liege, von Heeringen for the bombardment of Rheims aCthedral, and von Beseler for his vain attempt to capture Verdun.

The man of to-morrow may be Field Marshal von Mackensen, who is now engaged in terrific fights in Galicia, Von Mackensen was the commander of Danzig before the war, and had the German Crown Prince under his orders. Every now and then the news reached Berlin that the General and the Prince had quarrelled; the Kaiser had to intervene, and on two occasions the Prince had to make excuses to the General for using violent language in his presence.

Von Mackensen is known to be another apostle of "frightfulness," and a typical story of his methods is related in Berlin. A conference of generals was held at the Imperial Headquarters with a view to setting Galicia "free." The conference was headed by the Emperor and attended by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, Field Marshal von Mackensen, General von Folkenhayn, the Austrian General Conrad von Hotzendorff, and a score of others.

Action was suggested by von Falkenhayn and approved by Hotzendorff. Von Hindenburg examined it and in his capacity of generalissimo on the eastern front was asked whether he was prepared to accept it.

The Field Marshall thought it over and said: "I cannot accept the responsibility of this. It would mean bringing whole armies to a terrible slaughter. I am a soldier, not a butcher."

Had a smaller man than von Hindenburg uttered such words in the presence of the "All High Person" he would have been promptly offered accommodation at the fortress of Wesel where "naughty" officers generally are sent.

After a short pause General von Mackensen was asked his opinion, and he said, "I take the responsibility of the whole undertaking. Never mind the cost, never mind the lives." So von Mackensen was entrusted with the carrying through of the plan von Hindenburg had rejected as murderous.

New Home Treatment For Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics.)

With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about two minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

Mt. Julian as Popular as Ever

Mt. Julian resort still continues to enjoy its old-time popularity. Mr. Thompson reports "Business as usual," with good prospects for a busy season. The following are a few of the recent registrations: Messrs. Andrew Wilson, Robert Scott, Wm. TENDER WAS $10,560

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission held this morning for the purpose of considering the tenders for three 1,500 Kilowatt Transformers for the new sub-station, it was decided that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario should be authorized to accept the tender of the Canadian General Electric Company at $10,560.00 for the local commission, provided they approved of accepting this tender and that they should be requested to have an agreement prepared and sent to the local commission for execution.

The tenders were as follows:

Oiled, Insulated and Water Cooled only—Canadian Croker Wheeler Co., $10,400; Canadian Westinghouse Co., $10,750; Canadian General Electric Company, $9,905; Canadian Moloney Electric Co., $10,400.

No. 2—Oiled, Insulated and Self Cooled — Canadian Croker, Wheeler Co., 11,200; Canadian Westinghouse Co., $11,380; Canadian General Electric Company, $10,560; Canadian Moloney Electric Co., $11,100.

Prisoners of War In German Camps

Camps and hospitals for prisoners of war are prominent features of Germany to-day. They number 267, some of which contain between 10,000 and 20,000 prisoners. The latest information give the number of prisoners interned as 900,000.

The lot of the prisoner is something like that of a Mexican peon or a Virginia slave in the old slavery days. He has a sort of communal life. He is not confined to a cell, but his freedom of movement is restricted to a camp compound.

If he chooses labour, he is sometimes contracted out to an employer for a pittance of 12 or 25c. a day. He is fed and clothed and housed by people who grudge him the scraps they fling him, and his lot is an unenviable one.

A neutral correspondent in Germany has written an interesting account of one of these prisoners' camps. It is usually surrounded by a high wooden fence, surrounded in turn by an outer bristling web of double-barbed wire. Between the two fences there is a passage for the guard houses and offices, the kitchens, canteens, bath houses for the prisoners, and then the prison barracks proper. There are no windows, only skylights in a sloping roof. On a layer of tarred paper wooden berths are built along the walls, leaving room for a passage in the middle. This is in the newest camps; in other camps prisoners sleep on sacks filled with wood shavings, which are raised up along the walls during the day.

Food regulations are much the same in all camps. The basis for the distribution of food is 2,700 calories (heat units declared by German science to be necessary for the maintenance of a tolerable existence.

This is administered in the form of black bread and soup, a diet which gives the Canadian prisoner an acute sense of starvation. If he has money he is allowed to buy extra food and tobacco in a canteen. The prisoners themselves do the work in the kitchens, serve the food and perform all the other mental tasks in the camps. They are allowed to amuse themselves as best they can by primative theatricals and some games.

"When I asked how they were treated,' says this correspondent, I received conflicting answers. One general conclusion, I drew, however, namely, that many are without friends to send them gifts of food, clothing and other necessities. I was much impressed by the desirability of one central organization for the distribution of gifts to British prisoners."

Such an organisation is to be found in the Red Cross, of which thousands of grateful prisoners of war can say with truth, "I was in prison and ye came unto me."

The concern of the Red Cross is, however, primarily with the wounded. It is only the overflow of its treasury that it can devote to prisoners of war.

The Canadian Red Cross has a special department in London, which has been sending 300 parcels a week to prisoners' camps. This amount is, of course, insufficient, but it can only be increased by an increase in public subscription.

A year ago the detention of a dozen Canadians in a peon camp in Mexico would have set Canada in a blaze of indignation. In spite of the many claims on the publics' purse it is to be hoped, however, that the thousands of Canadians now languishing in Germany will not be forgotten.

If you wish to "Come Unto Them" in their prison, you can do so by means of the Red Cross.

Subscriptions should be sent to 77 King street, East, Toronto.

French scientists have decided that carrier pigeons are influenced by magnetism and that, with the growth of wireless telegraphy much less dependence can be placed upon them.

Meet Every Friday at the Juniper Island Pavilion—The Officers Elected

STONY LAKE, July 15.—The Juniper Island Pavilion presents a busy scene every Friday from ten to five, when the ladies of Stony Lake gather for the purpose of preparing supplies to be used by the Red Cross Society at the front.

A membership fee of fifty cents has enabled the Association to purchase a large quantity of material, which will be added to from time to time as donations are received.

Already several of the cottagers have responded most generously to the cause. A most unique method of raising money was adopted recently by the Misses Denne. A very large number of people were present to hear them.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church had a booth on the grounds and in the two hours which were spent there took in about $150.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church, who served lunch on the Church grounds during the day, and also sold ice-cream, etc., were well patronized.

It is said that the number of persons attending the celebration exceeded that of any previous year.

Miss Muriel Staright is spending the week at Stoney Lake.

Took Fifteen Years to Change Farmer's Mind

But at Last He Has Become Reconciled to the Canadian National Exhibition

TORONTO, July 14.—To receive an envelope that had been stamped and addressed for at least fifteen years waiting to be forwarded to the Exhibition offices through the reign of two British monarchs, is the unique experience of Dr. Orr, Manager of the Canadian National Exhibition.

The novel epistle, carrying a stamp with the late Queen Victoria's head, came in yesterday by a gentleman living in Eastern Ontario. For some years he was a regular exhibitor at the Fair, but for some unexplained reason back in 1900 he developed a grouch against the C.N.E.

At the moment that he decided the Fair was not being run according to his ideas, he had his entry ready for mailing with the stamp affixed to the envelope and the address written in a fine bold hand. He put the envelope aside, tore up his entry and neither came himself nor sent his cattle for exhibition that year.

Nor the next, nor the next, nor at any time since, though it would appear from the tenor of his belated communication just received he several times was on the brink of forgiving and forgetting, but each time his prejudice proved too strong and he replaced the letter in its resting place.

Now, however, he appears to have become fully convinced that the Fair was not altogether to blame, and feeling that there is no room for fighting at home when so much of it is going on at the front, he has sent along a few words of approval of the patriotic nature of the Fair in 1915, and assures the officials that after a lapse of a decade and a half he has again become a friend and patron of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Don't Let Your Patriotism End With the First

Flying your colours two or three times a year, and cheering when the band plays "God Save the King" doesn't make you a patriot.

AN ITALIAN LEADER

Duke of Aosta a Soldier of Clear Vision and Outstanding Ability

The Duke of Aosta, who commands one of the five Italian field armies, has been called the Sir John French of Italy, and the description is no exaggeration. By profession a soldier, the Duke, who is a cousin of the King of Italy and brother to the Duke of Abrussi, Commander-in-Chief of the Italian fleet, holds the rank of lieutenant-general.

He has distinguished himself by his masterly handling of artillery, and has introduced many reforms into the Italian army. Indeed, it is due to him in a great measure that the military efficiency of Italy reached its present standard. It was the Duke of Aosta who, when what is known as the Deport gun was first brought before the Italian Government, urged that the army should be equipped with it, and the Italian artillery was in process of rearmament with this gun, which is an actual improvement on the French "75," when the war started.

Furthermore, the Duke of Aosta was indefatigable in his efforts to develop the Italian armament works, these having provided that country with a 16-inch howitzer, which is said to have all the qualities of the Krupp 17-inch, yet to be much lighter and handier.

A remarkably handsome man of polished manners and many accomplishments, the Duke was a particular favorite of the late Queen Victoria. He was married in 1895 at the little Roman Catholic Church at Kingston-on-Thames to Princess Helene of Orleans, who is recognized as one of the most beautiful and accomplished women in Europe. She is a sister of Queen Amelie of Portugal, and a great friend of Queen Alexandra.

The Duchess was born in England, and it was at Twickenham that she met the Duke, who was then heir-presumptive to the Italian throne. But his prospects of becoming King of Italy vanished when the Prince of Naples was born. An enthusiastic sportswoman, who has shot big game with the Duke, and who takes the keenest interest in aviation, the Duchess has much in common with her husband.

What is claimed to be the highest garage in Europe has been built in the Alps at a point 6500 feet above the sea level.

Recent official figures show that the sewers of the cities of the United States are long enough to girdle the earth.

WEDDING BELLS

DAWSON—BATESON.

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Bateson, Bailieboro, on Wednesday, June 30th, 1915, when their niece, Miss Myrtle Irene Bateson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bateson, of Midland, Ont., was united in marriage to Mr. T. Albert Dawson of Bailieboro, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Wm. T. Wickett of Fraserville in the presence of a number of the most immediate relatives.

The presents were numerous and costly, attesting to the popularity of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and chain.

After all had partaken of a sumptuous wedding dinner, the happy couple left on an auto trip to different points in Eastern Ontario, amid showers of best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity.

On their return they will reside in the township of South Monaghan.

NEW BATTALION WILL BE 77TH

153 Men From the Mounted Rifles Going Overseas This Week

KINGSTON, July 14.—The 8th C. M. R. have been called upon to furnish another draft for overseas, and some time during the week 153 officers, NCOs and men will leave the camp for the front. The battalion is in splendid shape, and it seems regrettable that such a fine body of men should be broken up to furnish reinforcements rather than be permitted to go overseas as a unit. The 8th are conceded to be the finest body of Mounted Rifles in Canada, and can hold up their heads among the best in the British service. It means discouragement and much hard work for officers to lose men in the form of drafts, and it is destructive to the best interests of a corps. But the officers are all determined soldiers and will again turn in and make the 8th a credit to the Canadian Expeditionary force.

The New Battalion.

The new battalion recently authorized for this division has been designated the 77th Battalion, and will be mobilized in Ottawa. When it was decided that the 59th Battalion should remain in Barriefield, and the new battalion should be organized, Ottawa was promised the battalion, and the Ottawa papers failing to see the real situation have been persistently claiming that the 59th Battalion was going to the capital city. It is not yet known who will command the new battalion. Recruits will be received at Barriefield for this battalion, and will be shipped from time to time from the camp.

GERMAN WOMEN'S WAR TASKS "WORK BY DAY, WEEP AT NIGHT"

"We work by day and weep at night," was the heroic remark of a German woman in a hospital in Berlin to Miss Angela Morgan, the poet, and Miss Rebecca Shelly, delegates to the recent Women's Peace Congress at The Hague, who arrived home recently on the Holland-American liner Rotterdam.

After the conference Miss Shelly and Miss Morgan went into Germany "to get the German point of view," as Miss Morgan expressed it at the Woodstock Hotel.

The two young women had many adventures in their journey. On the voyage back the Rotterdam was held up eleven days at the Downs and Avonmouth by the British Naval authorities. The cargo was not molested, but three German passengers were taken off. In the cargo were 50,000 canary birds.

"Between Rotterdam and Avonmouth," said Miss Morgan, "three British ships were torpedoed in the path of our ship, including the Leland Liner Armenian. We passed through the wreckage of the sunken ships, and during the time we were detained we saw submarines, Zeppelins, torpedo boat destroyers and other machines of war, and witnessed the departure of the steamship Franconia, now a transport, with 3,000 Canadian soldiers bound for the Dardanelles.

A Thrilling Incident.

"On the transport the young soldiers were cheering all day long. One night they all burst into the strains of 'Tipperary.' They sung it through. There was silence for a minute, then suddenly from our ship Vernon Stiles, the American tenor, who had been appearing at the Saxon Court, singing through the megaphone, burst into the strains of "Auld Lang Syne." Then followed "Annie Laurie."

"As his voice died out across the water another silence fell, and then from the 3,000 young men there came a long, deep cheer. With that cheer ringing in our ears the great ship slowly passed out to sea."

In Germany the young women had several dispiriting experiences.

"At one of the American Red Cross hospitals in Munich," said Miss Morgan, "we saw scores of poor men who had been blinded in battle. They were making pitiful efforts to learn to read and write under the new conditions. One poor fellow had had his face so mangled that he will have to wear a mask over it the rest of his life. He had been engaged to marry when the war started, but his romance was at an end.

"All that he had was his Iron Cross, which he clung to like a baby with her doll.

"We were in Berlin, at a soup kitchen," she said, "when the lady in charge of the kitchen approached and said, not unkindly, but with deep woe:

"'Please do not talk English, I cannot bear to hear it.'

"We learned later she had lost in the war her husband, her two sons and her two sons-in-law. Every male member of her family had fallen."

Germany's Exalted Spirit.

"There is a wonderful spirit everywhere in Germany," Miss Morgan continued. "The soldiers sing as they march away, the children and grown-ups sing in the street. The whole people seem to be living in a state of wonderful spiritual exaltation."

"The women of Germany are united in the effort to do the work which was abandoned by the men when the summons to war came," Miss Shelly said. "There is an organization of girl scouts, many of them from the best families, who labour in the fields after school hours tilling the soil and raising food."

Miss Morgan earnestly insisted, and Miss Shelly concurred, that neither wished to be regarded as pro-German, but as pacificists, and opposed to war and specifically to the shipment of ammunition to any of the combatants by America.

"One of the saddest things we heard," said Miss Morgan, "was a report in the American Red Cross Hospital in Munich, the head of which is Dr. Jung, of Washington, that the history of many hundreds of cases shows they received their wounds from American ammunition."

Summing up her experience in Germany, Miss Morgan said:

"Before we can ever abolish militarism we must have international understanding. We hate the people and the thiugs we don't understand. We will never have brotherhood among nations until we have understanding."

An Empire Holiday in a German Prison

A young Montreal Guardsman who was captured by the Germans at Langemarck, in France, while ministering to a wounded comrade like himself blown up by a shell, writes from his prison at Giessen in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, with the cheeriness which has characterized the British forces, all through the war. By the courtesy of his family we were permitted to publish the following portion of a letter received from him some four weeks after it was written. Like all the prisoners in Germany he begs that food should be forwarded to him the enemy's rations not being especially inviting.

It would seem from what appears in this letter, that Great Britain has a naval brigade in the trenches assisting the Empire's soldiers.

Giessen (Allemagne)
Compagnie No. 4, Baraque 6.

Dear Father,—It is just over five weeks since we were captured and I have heard nothing of any mail for me as yet; some of the boys have received letters from England, but not from Canada as it would take at least ten days longer to get any from there. Of course all mail and parcels to us are free.

On the 24th we had sports and games; the Canadians and British sailors taking most of the prizes which were composed of tobacco bars of chocolate, tinned sardines and such like. We also had a fancy dress parade with all manner of costumes. A Frenchman blackened up and dressed in one of the Highlanders kilts and bare feet was a cannibal chief, others represented German farmers, while Napoleon was carried around on a table by four Frenchmen at the head of the parade, and French, Russian, Belgian and British soldiers and sailors all marched around singing and making a great noise.

On another occasion we had quite a fine concert. A large accordion and a French horn furnished some classical pieces, and accompanied the singers. We had French comic and sentimental songs, Belgian love songs, some good British songs by the sailors, Russian songs and dance; Highland dances and several songs by our own boys, and a couple of comic sketches by some clowns who were dressed up for the occasion.

It seems hard lines for us to be shut up like this during the fine weather; still it is the fortune of war, and we can only be thankful that we are alive after all we came through. I shall have some great tales to tell when I get home, which I hope will be before many months are up. On Sundays we have a service conducted by a preacher belonging to the French Protestant church. The service is mostly in French but he speaks to us in English, and we sing some of our own hymns and repeat some of the prayers in English.

I often drill our boys when the sergeant is busy, or gets sick of the job; it is quite a task, as there are over seventy of them and there are all the other soldiers using the same ground, and we have not any room to spare, still it is good practice for me anyway, and I rather like it.

We are having fine warm weather out here now and I guess it is the same in Canada. If you are sending a parcel I would be glad of a book or two as we find the time rather long. We go to bed at eight and get up at six, so we do not lack for sleep at any rate. 'How is Dr. getting along this summer? Have you hear how Volney Rexford is? He was hit in the hip the day before we were in the scrap."

MILLBROOK'S GOODBYE TO LIEUT. DR. DEYELL

The Town Hall on Tuesday was crowded with a very large representation of the citizens of Millbrook and Cavan, to do honour to and wish Lieut. Deyell God speed, on the eve of his departure to the firing line in France. The Council saw fit to make a presentation to him and unanimously adopted Councillor Richards' motion to purchase a gold watch for him. Reeve Doak issued a circular asking the citizens to be present and the full hall showed that the response of the people on an occasion of this kind is whole hearted. Dr. Deyell served in the Town Council for several years, and ably discharged the duties of the office. We are proud of his bravery in going to the front, and we wish him all kinds of good luck and a safe return to his loved ones at home.—Millbrook Mirror.

How Canadians Have Shifted About—Toward the end of February the Canadian division first took over three miles of trenches at Fleurbaix at point marked (1) on the map. On March 10th it was in reserve at Neuve Chapelle when the famous drive attack was made. Its location at that time is marked (2). In April it was moved north to Ypres salient, and following 22nd of that month was engaged in a conflict near St. Julien that reduced its strength by half. When its ranks were brought up to full strength it was put into action opposite Festubert in May. After a month of offensive work here it has been shifted again to near Messines. Wherever they go the Canadians seem to come in for hard fighting.

CAPTURED IMPORTANT HEIGHTS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, July 16.—Italian Alpinists, resuming their offensive in the Valsampezze region of the Tyrolean Alps, have scaled and captured several important heights, including the Faizarego Pass, 6,864 feet above the level of the sea, Gen. Cadorna reported to-day.

The success at Faizarego gives the Italian troops advancing toward Bozen Trent railway, the position dominating the mountain road for several miles. The artillery is being moved to the height to shell Austrian trenches at the north-western base of the mountain.

Artillery engagements have occurred at several other sectors of the battlefront, Gen. Cordorna reported, but infantry actions of the last 24 hours have been of minor importance.

Russian Warships Sink The German Submarine U51 in the Black Sea

This is the Craft Supposed to Have Sunk Three of the Allies' Warships and Several Merchant Vessels---Germans Preparing For New Drive on Calais.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, July 16.—Russian warships have sunk the German submarine U-51 in the Black Sea, according to advices from reliable sources to-day.

Submarine U-51 is the famous craft which escaped the British blockades in the English Channel, Straits of Gibraltar and at the Dardanelles. It is supposed to have sunk at least three of the Allies' warships and several merchant vessels, and after refitting at Constantinople, ran the gauntlet of the Russian fleet in the Bosphorus and got into the Black Sea, where it caused immense damage to Russian shipping. Apparently it has now definitely and finally met its doom.

FOR NEW DRIVE ON CALAIS.

LONDON, Eng., July 16.—"Eighty thousand Germans and numerous guns left Aix La Chappelle Wednesday night and Thursday morning bound for the Yser, apparently for a new drive on Calais," said a Rotterdam despatch to the Daily Mail to-day. However, British and Belgian lines have been materially strengthened also recently.

Enemy Strongly Reinforced Are Striking Hard Along The Russian Battlefront

Special to The Examiner.

PETROGRAD, July 16.—On both wings of the 800-mile battle front reaching from the Baltic to Bukowina, Russia's enemies, reinforced by fresh troops, are striking hard, the War Office admitted to-day.

In the extreme north, in the Shavli and Riga region along the Baltic, the Germans thus far have been checked by Cossack regiments. Further south in Poland the Czar's armies have been forced to evacuate some trenches, and in Southeast Galicia have given ground before heavy attacks by the Austrians.

The official despatches to-day tend to confirm reports that the Germans have withdrawn from Southeast Galicia for a new offensive in Poland, leaving the Galician campaign to the Austrians.

Germans Launch New Drive On North Poland Front

LONDON, July 16.—The German armies in the east have resumed the offensive in the Narew River region of North Poland, and the official report received from Petrograd last night reports that a certain amount of ground has been lost by the Russians in the initial encounters.

Whether the new movement is the beginning of a serious campaign against Warsaw from the north, or merely a feint, cannot yet be determined. Some British experts, however have interpreted the inactivity of the Teutonic allies in South Poland and Galicia during the last few days since the Austrians received a severe check in their campaign south of Lublin as showing that the enemy's high command had decided to transfer the scene of chief activity to the north.

Another question that remains unanswered for the present is whether or not Field Marshal von Hindenburg will reappear on the scene with this resumption of activity in North Poland.

The German forward movement in the Narrow region, according to the Petrograd official report, was inaugurated on Monday evening, and on Tuesday attacks in great strength were delivered in the direction of the Russian fortress of Lomza and along the adjacent Pissa River. At one point the Germans captured over a mile of Russian trenches which were, however, recovered by the Grand Duke's troops in a subsequent counter attack.

Further to the south, in a battle between two small rivers, the Russians appear not to have fared so well, as in Petrograds' words, they "declined a decisive engagemnt," and retreated early on Wednesday to their second line of defences. These battles, however are believed here to be more skirmishes compared with the heavy fighting which is expected to follow.

The situation in South Poland and Galicia remains quiet. It is stated by Petrograd that a total of 207 officers and 2,84 men were taken prisoner by the Russians in the fightifg last week in the Lublin region.

Turks Made Advance In Mass But Were Repulsed, Losing Heavily

LONDON, Juy 16.—The official British press representative with the allied forces in the Dardanelles, in a despatch dated July 7 and reaching London by way of Alexandria, Egypt, July 14, says:

"A successful allied advance on the left wing June 28 alarmed the enemy seriously, causing him to bring up heavy reinforcements, including raw troops, and he has been launching vigorous counter-attacks ever since in a vain exort to recover his lost ground.

"Enver Pasha, the Turkish Minister for War, hurried down from Constantinople to stimulate his troops, a great banier being hoisted on Achi Baba to signalise his arrival. There had been some dissension among the Turkish leaders especially regarding the advisability of counter-attacks, but Enver Pasha insisted upon general attacks, which were undertaken repeatedly with great bravery and tremendous losses, masses of Turkish troops fading away before the allies' artillery.

"Meanwhile the Turkish Asiatic battery were active, causing some annoyance at our landing places, but there were few casualties, since all the troops were too well entrenched to be harried, except by direct hits.

"The allied men all pay tribute to the extreme gallantry and indifference to death shown by the Turkish infantry, but their methods of attack are crude and wasteful. They are lacking in knowledge of how to carry out an assault scientigcally.

"The Turks generally mass for an attack behind some natural barrier. Generally, our artillery is informed of their massing before the attack is launched, whereupon, knowing all the ranges to a foot, we break up the mass with a torrent of shell.

"The Turks recently have been adding extensively to the defensive possibilities of their positions in an effort to prevent any further advance by our troops, and the Turkish soldiers have been given special orders prohibiting their retirement under any circumstances. Their officers have been directed to shoot soldiers who attempt to retire."

WAR PROFITS FOR STATES.

Americans to Grow Wealthy Out of Profits of the European Struggle.

CHICAGO, July 15.—The U. S. will be "enormously wealthy" if the European war continues six months longer, Edward N. Hurley, Vice-Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, said here to-day in announcing the plans of the commission to promote foreign trade.

Mr. Hurley will be joined by members of the commission in Chicago on Monday, to begin a tour of the Central West and Pacific Coast for the purpose of promoting close co-operation of the business interests with foreign nations. At the sessions here on July 19 and 20 the commission expects to get first hand information from bankers, men identified with the meat packing industry, and manufacturers.

Germans Sink Forty-two Ships During June

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BEALIN, July 16.—A despatch from Stockholm to the Overseas News Agency says the Swedish Minister in London has delivered to the British government a sharp protest "against the perpetual molestation of Swedish commerce." Norway and Denmark, the message adds, support the protest.

Included among the items given out to-day by the agency was the following:

"During the month of June twenty-nine British, three French, one Belgian and nine Russian merchantmen were sunk by German submarines. The total loss of the Entente Allies by submarines, including fishing steamers, which mostly were armed patrol boats, aggregated 125,000 tons.

"The loss of human life was remarkably small, the submarines using every precaution and giving ample warning and time for crews to leave their ships if no resistance were attempted."

Financial Exhaustion In Germany

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., July 16.— Financial exhaustion is bringing Germany to terms, according to the Financial News, which gave a prominent display to-day to a report that Germany, through the United States, is "making tentative peace proposals." The News declared it had the information from most reliable sources.

EARLY PEACE IS NOT BEING CONSIDERED

SPECIAL CABLE:

LONDON, July 16. — The British Government at the present time is not even considering possible terms of an early peace, Premier Asquith declared in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

The Prime Minister's statement was in response to a query put by D. M. Mason, Liberal member. Mason asked if the Government is at present taking any steps to ascertain upon what terms Germany would consent to an immediate peace.

Asquith's announcement confirmed statements made a few weeks ago by high officials, who said that England is convinced that Germany "has reached and passed the high peak of her efficiency," and intends to continue the war without thought of peace, at least until the German armies are pressed back behind their own borders.

INFORMATION UNCERTAIN REGARDING STUART HAYES

In the midnight list of casualties, published in this morning's papers, appears the name of Stuart F. Hayes, son of His Honour Judge Hayes, of this city, as unofficially reported prisoner. To a slight extent, this news contradicts the reports that the young man had been killed, but as Judge Hayes has heard through intimate sources at the front that his son had been killed, there is little hope that the statement is correct. In answer to cables sent to England, Judge Hayes received a telegram on Sunday informing him that word had reached the British War Office that Stuart F. Hayes was unofficially reported prisoner, which corroborates the information given out in the recent casualty lists. It is to be hoped that the young hero has been spared, and that the family will get official word to that effect before long. — Guelph Mercury.

SIMPLE FARE APPEALS TO ROYALTY

"A meal fit for a king," is a common expression, but the sad eyes of truth inform us that kingly fares are often very simple and that the royal appetite may become jaded and cloyed by too much product of French chefs and may long for substantial, plain dishes.

Simple fare is quite the rule now both at Buckingham Palace and at Windsor Castle, and this will continue as long as the war is on. Meals in the royal household have never been so elaborate during the present reign as they were in King Edward's time. King George is not nearly so much of an epicure as his father was. He has to be exceedingly careful what he eats and he avoids rich food both for prefence and of necessity, for he occasionally suffers from indigestion.

Both the King and Queen prefer boiled fish and meat cooked quite plainly without an abundance of cunningly-seasoned sauces which delight the heart of a clever French chef. A recent dinner menu at the palace consisted mainly of boiled turbot, a dish of cutlets, a fruit salad and a savory. Champagne is rarely drunk except on special occasions, but the label and everything which might signify the brand is removed.

The Czar of Russia is said to employ upward of 1000 people in one way or another in his kitchens. Though possessed of a good appetite, the Russian sovereign is not fussy over his food, and providing the dishes are good, will eat most of the things set before him. On the other hand, an imperial banquet is a magnificent affair with regard to food, wines, plate and service generally.

The German Emperor, likewise, is said to possess a fine appetite, and even after a late dinner will be able to enjoy a plate of cold meat in his private apartments before retiring to rest. The Kaiser, in the public eye, eats as far as possible on a military plan like his own soldiers. However, during this campaign he is generally followed by the latest thing in field kitchens, so one may imagine he does not subsist, like poor Hans, on bread and sausage for days. When in public the Kaiser may be seen lunching on the same fare as his men, accompanied by plenty of lager beer.

Nevertheless in the matter of entertainment his Teutonic majesty can be very lavish and thoroughly keeps up the national reputation of love of good cheer. The German court used to have a large kitchen staff under the superintendence of four chefs—German, English, French and Italian, respectively. Each chef was responsible for the famed dishes of his own country, for the imperial cuisine was never exclusively German, though the national dishes frequently appeared on the menus.

Austria Made Peace Offer To Serbia

SPECIAL CABLE:

ROME, via Paris, July 16.—A semi-official announcement, published in Rome, to the effect that when Italy's entrance into the conflict appeared inevitable, Austria-Hungary first attempted to make a separate peace with Serbia and then tried to conclude an armistice, which would allow her to remove her troops from the Serbian frontier, is causing a deep impression in Italy.

Although the news of these negotiations only leaked out in the present semi-official announcement, in view of the cautious methods of the Italian Foreign Office, the Italian press assumes that the Italian government possesses the proofs of its assertions.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Jim had a round napkin ring which he had loaned to the Begum as she insisted on usin' napkins at every meal, and after some manipulatin' I managed to roll this implement across the floor, and while engaged in chasin' it, I took a side-eye into the bedroom and saw that the bed was close to the east window, and as the evenin' was still and purty warm, I knew 'at the window was open.

As soon as the Begum had buried her appetite, I toted back the dishes and hunted up Flames. It was easy enough to keep on the good side o' this boy if he was just rightly handled. Lickin's and scoldin's and downright cussin's didn't have any more effect on him than on a whale; but if you spoke to him kind and trustful and asked him man to man if he was able to put through some clever piece o' devilment, why he responded to it noble, and in these cases he never did give short measure.

"Flames," I sez, as soon as I had him alone, "what I want is for the Begum to be kept out on the porch for a while."

"What for?" sez he.

"'Cause," sez I, "I don't want to be bothered by her."

He drilled his little ferret eyes into me a minute, and then he gave a grin, nodded his head knowin', winked wise, shook his finger at me, and sez: "Take all the time ya want, I'll keep the Begum busy."

"Listen," sez I, "don't you hit her with nothin' and don't you swear at her and don't—"

"If you don't like the way I'm goin' to do it," sez he, "do it yourself."

"You are the only one who can do it right," sez I, "and I was only givin' you a few suggestions."

"Leave it to me," sez he, "leave it to me."

He started in by pretendin' to trip over Isaac's empty barley pail and then to kick, and abuse it verbally. The Begum rushed out on the porch and they engaged in makin' threats and promises to each other free and hearty. Flames, pore little chap, hadn't never noticed the symptoms of motherness, and so he was free to be agrivatin' to the full, and he sure did an able job. A woman with a keen taste for general managin', and a boy no kin to her go to war on about the fairest terms I know of.

As soon as they had reached their best travellin' gaits, I stole around to Kate's window and began to call to her gentle. Her head was close to the window and she soon heard me. "Who is it?" sez she after a bit in such a glad tone that I knew she thought I was Tom Smith.

"Just Happy," sez I, and somehow my voice sounded mighty lonesome.

She said she ached and felt all tired out, but that the' wasn't anything serious the matter with her, and I told her that the old hermit was takin' the best o' care of her father, but that they both wanted her back as soon as it could be fixed, and that we'd have to cook up a purty high-actin' tale to explain how she happened to be where she was. Things went purty wide and free at the Lion Head: but still the findin' of a fainted gel in one of our gullies demanded some sort of an explanation.

She told me that the big man with the scar under his eye and the little man had been prowlin' around the Horse-shoe again and that she was pirutin' around in search of me when her boss had suddenly shied and whirled, throwin' her off—which gave me a fine chance to bawl her out for not usin' a saddle.

I really worried a lot about that big man with the scar and the little man; but I didn't speak of it. What I spoke of was how on earth we could cook up an excuse for her bein' in the neighbourhood, gels wearin' fawn-skin suits bein' so everlastin' scarce. "The Begum's the one we got to fool," sez I, "so you judge what sort of a tale would fool a woman and not prejudice her again' ya."

We tried out several projects and finally settled on one which stood a fair chance to get by. Kate's father was visitin' Bradin up on Horse Crick on account of his health, and Kate wore a suit give to her by an uncle who was an Injun agent; but she needed some new clothes and was on her way to Elliot, meanin' to stop over until they were done. The boss she was ridin' was a new one from clear to the south so the' was no knowin' where he would go to, and this made up purt nigh as convenient a tale to stick to as the whole truth would 'a' been.

"Anything you want me to do for ya, Kate?" sez I.

She hung silent a moment, and then said she'd like me to send a message to Tom Smith.

"Sure," sez I, "where'll I address it to—Texas?"

"Every night at nine o'clock," sez she in a low, secrety tone, "I go up on a hill across Red Deer Crick and a little to the north o' Sand Crick, and I signal to him with fire. He signals back to me from a high mound on his range, and—it's mighty comfortin'."

"What's your signals?" sez I.

"Two flashes mean come, three all right, and four stay away," sez she.

"Are those all?" sez I.

"There is one more," sez she, in the tone that allus made me feel lonesome. "You just keep drawin' the blanket quick across the flame until it looks like a great, kind eye winkin' at ya—he know what that means."

Of course he knew what it meant, and so did I; but I was full cheerful about it, and after gettin' all the details of how it was done, I said good-night to her and hurried around to save as much as possible of the Begum's disposition.

I seized Flames by the scruff of the neck and spoke to him harsh until I had him far enough away and then I shook hands with him hearty, told him I'd sooner trust him 'n airy other man I knew of, and hurried away to saddle a pony.

Hellion ran at my stirrup and we had to make purty fair goin' in order to get our signals out on schedule; but I found the location and the dry wood and blanket in the shelter without any hitch. The other part of me, the part that sits off to one side and grins at what the known part of me does, had a lot of fun that night watchin' me send out love signals to another man; but the known part of me felt somewhat like kickin' over the traces.

I started out by sendin' a batch o' quick flashes, and as long as I was keyed up to doin' it at all, I sent a full measure of 'em. Presently they began to come back to me from out of the night, twinklin' away among the low hangin' stars, just as the gel had said, for all the world like a great, kind eye, winkin' at me.

The old hermit's tale came back to me as I signalled, and I reckon I sent some of those love-winks to that other Kate, who hadn't had a square deal any way ya looked at it. The old hermit had finally found himself, and sittin' at his cabin door with his hoofs soaked plumb into his own instincts, had learned how to help others without gettin' caught at it, and if ever Kate found the joy her heart was cryin' for, the roots o' this joy would reach back to her mother's sorrow—so I looked up into the sky as I waved the blanket, and my thoughts all rested on the mother.

As soon as I figgered I had sent Tom Smith all the love winks good for him, I switched into a series of double flashes, and when he answered with three, I squatted down beside the fire with my pipe doin' its best to sluice comfort into me and Hellion leanin' up again' me and gazin' into the coals with his sad dog-eyes while all around us the night seemed tryin' to whisper of the uselessness of man's tryin' to fight again' fate, and up above, the stars kept sendin' down their signals as though tryin' to tip me the wink not to be too easy took in by the outside o' things.

Purty well torn up I was between one feelin' and another as I sat smokin' my pipe, strokin' the dog, and waitin' to tell Tom Smith what I thought he ort to know.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO.
TOM SMITH'S TALE.

Tom Smith finally crept in on foot. I knew of his comin' by the hair risin' on Hellion's neck, this bein' as far as he ever went when I was close to him, and so I had time to cover my eyes with my hands and peek through 'em at Tom Smith's face as it came into view. It was shinin' radiant when the rays of the little fire first fell on it, but when he saw who had been doin' the telegraphin', it fell with a crash.

"What are you doin' here?" sez he.

"Oh, I got fretful and couldn't sleep," sez I, "and so I just strolled over here as bein' a likely place to find some company."

He took himself too serious, Tom Smith did, and every now and again I found myself tempted to hurrah him a little; but I soon gave him the details of Kate's accident, and while he was still probin' me for more news, I sez to him as offhand as ever was, "Did you know that Bill Stern chased Panther Emmons out of a saloon over at Tascosa last spring?"

There was nothin' wrong with Tom Smith's nerve. He didn't change expression by so much as a shadow; but then he wouldn't have give himself away any farther if he had. When a feller slips out o' cover and ropes a perfectly innocent remark, floppin' it square over on its back, why that ort to bring out some show of interest, and when it don't it's plumb suspicious.

"Who is Bill Stern?" sez Tom Smith, about fifteen seconds too late.

"Oh," sez I, "he's brother to Buck. Buck is the one the Panhandle Kid got in the same saloon."

This time Tom Smith puckered up his eyes and winced. "Is the' anything else you think I ort to know?" sez he, lookin' off into the dark.

"Yes," sez I, "I think you ort to know that it's time to either tell Kate that you want to marry her, or else to say good-by to her. Lives mighty often get wrecked just from takin' things for granted."

He didn't answer, and presently I spoke again. "The's one thing I've allus wanted to know, and that is, who the deuce was the driver that brought Kate to Big Jeff's, and who you were suspicious of at first sight."

"That," sez Tom Smith, "was Welchy. He was just like all the rest — made his get-away easy enough, but couldn't make his stay-away."

"The only way to make a real stay-away," sez I, "is to make a real get-away. Hidin' out is no get-away. The's a genuwine fence between in-laws and outlaws, and the only way for an outlaw to make a real get-away is to climb that fence and get in among the inlaws. I'm not sayin' the fence is right; but I am sayin' it's there."

"Yes," sez he, speakin' it husky and bitter, "and the fence is only a foot high on the inlaw side, but it's ninety foot sheer on the outlaw side, and you're not welcome if you do manage to climb back."

I shook my head, though I had to own to the truth of what he said. "Tom Smith," I sez, "you remind me a heap more of a boy playin' at bein' an outlaw, than of a real, regular, out an' out, man outlaw; and sometimes I doubt if there's one bit o' sense in your hidin' out this way."

"I wish I could believe that," sez he, and he spoke so earnest that we both kept silent a spell.

"Did you have a step-mother?" sez I after a time.

"No," sez he; "I was raised raised a pet."

"If that's the truth, Tom Smith," sez I, "I'm convinced that any jury in the West 'd clear you, no matter what you did: but your parents 'd get the limit if ever they came up for trial. Tell me some of it."

"My father was a small-like man," sez he, "and my mother was a large, fine-looking woman. He had inherited some property and had made lucky investments, I suppose, because we allus had plenty and he never seemed to be energetic enough for a shrewd business man, as I look back on it, now.

"My mother had energy enough for two, though, and she took a lot of it out of me. She was what you'd call romantic, and she dressed me up in velvet with curls clustered to my shoulders after the pattern of a picture she had of two princes what got smothered in a tower."

"I'm not a slave to superstition," sez I; "but if wearin' such clothes as you mention would make folks want to smother a child in a tower, it seems to me that a parent who set much store by her offspring would have chose some other style."

"It wasn't on account of the clothes," sez Tom Smith. "A duke, he did it to keep 'em from heirin' a throne he had claims on himself. He was full uncle to 'em, and he had already spoiled his own brother's chances by drownin' him in a hogshead o' wine."

"Well," sez I, "I'd heap prefer to be drownded in wine than to be smothered in a tower; but seems like to me 'at this here duke would have got shot up a few, himself, for carryin' on that a-way."

"He did get killed by a relative which wanted the throne for himself," sez Tom Smith.

"It must 'a' been genuwine Kentucky blood in that family," sez I. "Were they kin to you?"

"No, no, o' course not," sez he.

"Then why do you tell me about them?" sez I. "What I want to know about is the way you were raised a pet. Bein' a pet in the family you've been tellin' about would be ample excuse for any life-lovin' kid to leave home."

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

Hard to Explain.

Simmings and Wehner were bosom friends. One day at the club they fell to talking.

"Do you carry any life insurance?" queried Cummings.

"Yes," was the answer. "I have $10,000."

"Who's payable to your wife?" asked Cummings.

"Ten," said Wehner.

"I don't care much for moving picture shows," said the grouch. "The films they show are too improbable."

"Whaddy ya mean improbable?" asked the boob.

"Why, I saw one last night that showed a daughter helping her mother to wash the dishes," replied the grouch. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Tulips of Haarlem.

Holland is famed for its bulb growers, and Haarlem is a specialized horticultural nursery for all Europe and the United States. The tulip, of course, is the typical bulb, the symbol of this amazing Dutch industry and a standard of value—as wheat is the agricultural barometer and pig iron the industrial indicator. The Dutch growers produce 2,000 varieties of tulips. They sell $1,000,000 worth of bulbs to the United States every year.

M'TOTO NA LANGI

The Story of James Chapin

JAMES CHAPIN, AS HE IS TO-DAY.

THE FEATHER SHEDDING TROGON

THE RARE AND ELUSIVE OKAPI

JAMES CHAPIN, IN THE CONGO WHERE BARBERS ARE SCARCE.

JAMES CHAPIN, BEFORE HE LEFT FOR AFRICA.

By Ernest Dupuy.

THREE thousand miles of weary tramping through fever haunted jungles in the miasmic heart of the Congo basin, strange encounters with savage beasts and with human beings almost as savage, the discovery and classification for science, under enormous difficulty, of rare forms of African flora and fauna in spots never before trodden by the foot of white man—all these things belong in the adventures of James Chapin, the Staten Island boy who, with Herbert Lang, has obtained for the American Museum of Natural History, in New York city, the most complete collection of natural history specimens that has ever been wrested from the mysterious depths of the dark Continent. Six years of work—of exhausting toil under the grilling sun and teeming rains of equatorial Africa—were necessary before the great task was completed.

Now Chapin is back with the first instalment of the great collection, while Lang, still in Stanleyville, is superintending the final packing of the rest of the fruits of the expedition—forty-five tons in all and consisting of more than forty thousand separate specimens. The rare okapi, the bongo, almost as rare but less widely known; the dwarf elephant of the Congo basin, a species that for many years scientists have argued about; black, square mouthed and white rhinoceros, scaly ant eater, buffalo, giant eland and heretofore almost unknown varieties of dainty antelope are represented in the huge packing cases full of trophies that when at last brought here will necessitate the building of a new wing by the Museum authorities in which to display them properly.

Chapin, a tall, loosely knit young chap of twenty-five—he was nineteen when he left Columbia University in his junior year to go to Africa—with steady blue eyes and a trick of frowning when he is engaged in thought—probably learned in the blazing sunlight of Africa—does not at first glance resemble a man who has hiked his way through the African wilds. His skin, while tanned, is not of the hue that one would expect from one who has lived and worked under the equator. But for all his youthful face he carries himself like one accustomed to giving orders, while, as for the tan, he has had his long sea trip from Boma, via Liverpool, to New York, in which to get rid of the effect of the sun's rays. He was already an ornithologist of some note in scientific circles before he left the United States.

He was a member of the Staten Island Association of Arts and Sciences when he was fifteen years old, and had at that time one of the most complete collections of North American bird life in existence. Some of the rarest specimens at present in the American Museum were presented to it by him.

Young Chapin is very modest and refuses to believe that he has himself accomplished anything wonderful, although he gives great praise to Mr. Lang for what he has done. As for adventures, he shook his head and laughed when I asked him if he had had any unusual experiences.

"No, I never was in great danger," he said. "And I had no adventures."

"How about animals?"

"Well, the nearest I ever came to a wild animal was when I shot a bird that dropped in a thicket about thirty feet away. As I walked toward it what I had taken for a heap of brush suddenly resolved itself into a rhinoceros, who clambered to his feet, looked me over, snorted and ran away."

Of course, it all depends upon the point of view. So far as the writer is concerned, if a perfectly good rhinoceros should suddenly appear and snort at him from a distance of thirty feet—well, modesty forbids boasting of the speed records that would be broken. No adventure!

He also told of how, while asleep in a village in the Ituri district, a hyena entered his room, ate a number of birds he was going to stuff and ended by making away with one of his shoes and a puttee.

"I knew nothing about it until morning, when we found his tracks," he explained. "We hunted about and I even sent men along the trail to see if he could be found, for the hyenas are fond of using the trails when the grass is high. But I never got my shoe and puttee." It was only after much fencing that he would admit that hyenas have often attacked sleeping men, and that the natives barricade the entrance to their huts usually to keep them out. No adventures!

To be awakened in the middle of the night, while their caravan was camped in an open space in the high grass, and to find that one of the shelter huts of grass raised by the natives had caught fire and the entire camp was in danger of being swept by the flames did not seem to be an adventure to him, either. "That was only an incident," he demurred. He told how the natives are accustomed, because of the cool nights, to light fires in their huts. It was one of these fires that had set the hut ablaze. The grass started, and it was only by energetic work and skilful burning of back fires to obtain a clear space across which the flames could not jump that they were able to escape the fire and save their trophies. No adventures!

They had one of their bearers killed by a lion, but he would not give any of the details. He also told of lions that were said to have killed a number of the natives, but they did not have much trouble with them. They could be heard roaring occasionally, he said.

When questioned about the snakes in the region through which the expedition had gone Mr. Chapin admitted that there were great numbers of them, most of which were poisonous. The water snakes, however, were not. "Still," he added, naively, "as one could meet almost any kind near the water, it was not well to take it for granted that they were really water snakes."

Of pythons they saw numbers and killed many. "One could see them often, festooned in the branches of the trees. Then the natives would come running and tell us of a python and we would shoot it. None of them were more than six yards long." Imagine tramping through a jungle where six yard pythons hung looped from the trees! The black cobra, a near relative of the deadly cobra di capello of India, is a very common variety of poisonous snake in the Congo, he said.

The subject of crocodiles came up when he said that he was so glad to be able to get back to the swimming tank at Columbia, where he has taken up his studies where he left off six years ago. "One cannot get much chance to swim in a country infested with crocodiles. I used to do the best I could, but the very thought of the old college tank fairly made me itch all over. I managed to get a few swims, though." He said that the natives were often eaten by crocodiles. As far as bathing went the hardest part was drying off. The heat was so great that one would be bathed in perspiration, he said. It was hard to dry clothing that had been washed, also, on account of the humidity in the air, unless in a clearing by a village, where the sun's rays had direct access.

During the years spent in Africa Mr. Chapin became very well acquainted with numbers of the natives. The expedition had all sorts of trinkets dear to the savage heart, which they were ready to barter for valuable specimens. This, in fact, was the method through which they got their okapi, which has never been seen by white man at large in its habitat. Chapin endeared himself to the blacks by giving them fish hooks. The Congo native, he said, while an ardent fisherman, has but the most meagre equipment. A bent pin or needle or a piece of copper wire is his hook, and he loses more bites than he manages to pull in. A real fish hook, therefore, is most highly prized.

"M'toto na Langi," which, translated, means "the son of Lang," was the name bestowed upon Mr. Chapin by the natives. The name stuck, and as M'toto na Langi he is known from one end of the Congo to the other. Conditions are primitive in the Congo basin. Every one knows every one else, and, although the posts are widely separated, there is the same community of interest and gossip as in a little village.

Mr. Chapin related some ludicrous happenings that resulted when a Belgian consular official travelling through the Uele district, who had with him a small cinematograph outfit, gave some picture shows to the natives.

"One of the films depicted King Solomon and his court, every one bowing to the floor when the King put in an appearance. A native who had seen the film, arriving at a distant post ahead of the Consul, informed the chef de poste that there was a white man coming who had the Lord with him in an iron box."

"Another film, I remember, showed a troupe of trained elephants. As the elephants coming into the foreground increased in size they would be greeted with resounding cheers by the natives. One part showed an elephant emerging from a tank of water after a plunge. When I asked one of our workmen why the elephant grew so large after coming out of the water he at once replied that there was medicine in the water."

The celebration of midnight mass on Christmas eve, 1913, in the depths of the African forests, was another experience of Mr. Chapin. This was at the mission church at Avakubi. The church, not yet completed, was roofless.

"The deep blue of the star studded sky above the walls of the church," said the young explorer, "brought to mind the Paulist church in this city. The church was decorated with palm fronds and canna lilies and the illumination was by candles and rude oil lamps. It was most impressive and beautiful. The only trouble was that we were nearly frozen. The nights are very cold there at times. After the mass we were glad to sit by a roaring log fire at the padre's house and warm ourselves up."

Interesting details of the hunting of the okapi, which is found in the Uele district of the Haute Ituri, were given by Mr. Chapin.

"The beast is either shot or trapped," he said. "In the first method the work is done by one man, who must be a skilful hunter. Armed with his old muzzle-loading musket, the native will roam through the forests until he picks up an okapi trail.

"Sometimes the man will follow the trail for days before he gets within gunshot of the shy beast. There are a few hunters, but they are rare. Some of our specimens were obtained this way. The common way, however, is to trap them, either by dead falls by pits or by means of snares which catch their legs. Sometimes they are alive when found, and for a short time Mr. Lang kept a young one captive, but it died at last.

"We obtained our okapi from the native hunters by barter. Brass curtain rings, salt, copper wire, cloth and galvanized iron wire were our mediums of exchange. We saw the snares, and also saw pits, but never were able to see a pit prepared for the animal. Most of our animals were obtained through the native hunters. We were not there to do all the hunting ourselves, for we had much other work to do, so we depended on the natives for much of the hunting. They knew Mr. Lang wanted specimens, so whenever they got anything they would bring it in."

Just how many okapi the expedition got Mr. Chapin would not say, nor, in fact, would he give the exact number of any of the groups, declaring that the museum would announce the details at the proper time. The writer was able to ascertain from other sources, however, that the okapi group, which will be the best group of the animal in any museum, will contain six fine specimens.

Most curious, perhaps, of the many strange birds that Chapin secured in his explorations was the trogon, the tropical bird whose plumage falls out when it is handled. The African variety, known in scientific terms as Hapaloderma, is not uncommon in the Congo basin, but because of the great difficulty in preserving and mounting the skin and plumage not a single specimen has ever been brought unharmed to this country before.

Several trogons were obtained by Chapin, but despite his skill as an ornithologist he was only able to mount one, which will be one of the museum's most valued exhibits.

The plumage of the trogon is most brilliant. Ranging in color from golden green to crimson, and from steel blue to yellow, some varieties are barred with stripes of white. The trogon's coloring stands out against the jungle foliage with dazzling brilliancy.

The contour feathers, which furnish the coloring, are so loosely attached to the skin that unless handled with the greatest care they fall out in tufts. It was only by dint of the most skilful handling that Chapin managed to obtain a perfect skin.

Mr. Chapin also said that they had obtained a fine group of square mouthed rhinoceros and of giant eland. A huge whites bull rhinoceros, from the vicinity of the Lado Enclave, was obtained in the Uele district, and is, he says, a magnificent specimen. The front horn measures 106 centimetres, or a little more than a yard.

"The white rhino is protected by the Belgian government," said Mr. Chapin, "and we had no permit to hunt it. But they allow the natives much latitude in these matters, and when they had killed one it was perfectly proper for us to obtain the carcass by trade."

Of hippopotami they saw quite a number, although Mr. Chapin said that he did not see many at any one time. The largest group he had ever seen together was twenty. He said that at times along the banks of the Congo, in low water, one may see them by the hundred.

I asked him what he considered the greatest obstacle to Congo travelling.

"The sun," he responded. "The sun will get you if you do not take great precautions. Fifteen miles in five hours of marching is a good day's journey. One cannot go far in the afternoon because of the terrible heat. Most white men wear spine protectors, consisting of several folds of cloth, along their backs, to prevent the sun from sapping their strength. Even on a covered veranda one feels the sun. I have gotten headaches from being out on a veranda without a hat, the rays were so intense. And to go out in the sun without a hat would, of course, mean death.

"Quinine is necessary. We used to take ten grains at a time, sometimes every other day. If a man should go without quinine for any length of time he would fall a prey to fever even if acclimated."

During his travels Mr. Chapin learned to speak the three dialects of the Congo tribes—Kiswahili, spoken by the natives under Arab influence; Bangala, on the Upper Congo, and Flote, on the Lower Congo. Of course with the white men there the language most generally used was French.

"It seems odd, sometimes, to speak English," he told me." And at times he does give a bit of a foreign accent to his English words.

It was in 1907 that tentative arrangements were made by the authorities of the museum for an expedition to the Congo. Negotiations with the Belgian government ended with the acquisition of the patronage of the late King Leopold. To finance the expedition a group of members and friends of the museum, including John M. Trevor, Charles Lanier, Cleveland H. Dodge, J. P. Morgan, Jr., William K. Vanderbilt, A. D. Juilliard, Robert C. Cockt and William Rockefeller, came forward. In April, 1909, the museum was informed that the Belgian government had given its official sanction to the expedition and had appropriated 6,800f. toward the expense of Congo transportation. In return it was agreed that the expedition should obtain for the museum at Tervueren, Belgium, certain zoological specimens of which it was not in possession.

The scheme, as outlined, was for the expedition to push into the centre of Africa, making headquarters approximately 1,000 miles from the coast in a section at that time unexplored zoologically, and make a zoological survey of the entire Congo basin, while at the same time working upon other lines of investigation for other departments of the museum.

Much in the way of anthropology was accomplished during the first two years. The Mangbetu, one of the most intelligent of the Congo peoples, furnished much valuable data. Okondo, king of the Mangbetu, went out of his way to give the expedition opportunity to study tribal manners and customs. At Dongu, Faradje and Abbas much more material was acquired, including valuable insights into the life and characteristics of the shy dwarfs of the great forest.

At the outbreak of the war the expedition was in Stanleyville. The Germans, according to Mr. Chapin, at once started to invade the Congo from German East Africa, sending a column into the Kivu district and capturing a Belgian post on Lake Kivu. The Belgians sent troops to the frontier and active fighting occurred. Many of the wounded were brought into Stanleyville, and Mr. Chapin says that Mr. Lang, when he left, was preparing to furnish such assistance as he could in the matter of hospital supplies.

On October 29 the first shipment went down the river from Stanleyville on board the river steamboat Roi Albert. Other shipments were made at intervals, and Mr. Chapin himself started on December 11, 1914. He arrived at Boma too late to catch the Hawaiian, of the Hawaiian-American line, which had come from the United States with foodstuffs for the colony. He was then forced to wait, the museum having cabled him instructions to ship his material only under a neutral flag. At last he was allowed to take a British vessel, and he started for Liverpool on board the steamship Bornu. The Bornu was twice held up on her way up the coast. The first time was when the French gunboat Surprise, blockading the Kamerun, stopped her.

British Triumphs in Air Damper To Work of Zeppelins

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 14. — The Daily Chronicle prints an article which, it says in an editorial note, contains "inner knowledge of the change which has came over the German disposition with regard to Zeppelins."

It is stated definitely that since the triumphs of Lieut. Warneford, V.C., and the destruction of the air-shed near Brussels, Belgium has been cleared of Zeppelins, and the ascendancy of Britain's aerial armades is jointly noted by the suspension of Zeppelin raids on the east coast. The article says that over a month has passed since the LZ-38 was destroyed in its shed at Evere, and the LZ-37 was brought to the ground by Lieut. Warneford. The writer adds:

Offensive Has Been Broken.

"The aerial offensive of the Zeppelins, in short, has been broken. I do not pretend that there will be no more raids while the war lasts. To suppose that argues a very poor understanding of German determination. Yet it does remain a remarkable fact that just at the time of the year when, according to experts, weather conditions are most favourable for aerial activity, the enemy has been paralyzed by the discovery that he has now to face a new British war organisation, only recently established, yet marvelously efficient, as already proved by the inflicting on Germany of the most absolute check she has experienced for ten months.

"Information which has reached me from divers sources in Belgium, and upon which I have complete reliance, enables me to state that since July 6th not a single Zeppelin, save one, which was seriously damaged on June 7th, and which the Germans are trying to repair as best they can at Namur.

Was Newest Zeppelin.

"It would be quite impossible to exaggerate the panic accompanied by the fall of the blazing carcass of the Zeppelin destroyed by Lieut. Warneford and the blowing up of the hangar and its contents. What perhaps most affected the morale of the enemy was the fact that the LZ-37, Lieut. Warneford's victim, was a brand new Zeppelin, which was undergoing its first tests and had on board several of Count Zeppelin's chief engineers."

The LZ-38, according to The Chronicle's correspondent, was the most famous of all the Zeppelins. It was the LZ-38 which bombarded Ramgate and Southend and part of the London area. He adds:

"It had, therefore, a pretty busy lease of life before it blew up in the shed at Evere on June 7th. Then fifty men were burnt to death.

Only Fifteen Left.

There is no room for doubt, taking into account the Zeppelins destroyed by British bombs or by accidents of all kinds on the one hand, and on the other those that have been recently built under more or less secrecy that we are justified in concluding that the German air fleet at this moment cannot possess more than fifteen Zeppelins capable of taking the air. This calculation is supplied by expert authority.

FRENCH FETE DAY HONOURED IN LONDON

LONDON, July 14.—France's national fete day, July 14, was celebrated throughout the metropolis by an enthusiastic scheme for the sale of miniature flags which left no doubt about the warmth of London's regard for our ally. It was a rare thing in the afternoon to find anyone, rich or poor, old or young, who was not wearing the Tricolour. The celebration went on with a vigor and animation that not even the rain, which began persistently late in the afternoon, could quench. Millions of tiny flags were sold, in addition to a vast number of medals and replicas of the famous .75 guns.

There were many well-known actresses among the thousands of attractive flag sellers. Gaby Deslys held a prolonged reception at a red, white and blue stall at the Savoy Hotel and drew crowds every time she came outside to her brilliant red, white and blue car. She began the day splendidly, selling a flag for ten pounds, and almost immediately afterwards went one better by obtaining fifty pounds for another. This second flag was sold to Sir J. M. Barrie. Most of her takings were in gold and notes, and but one man in London is able to say the famous French actress accepted a penny from him. He was an English curate.

Ethel Levy conducted a brisk sale of flags at the Carlton, and other notable actresses who took a share in the work were Julia James, Mary Moore, Mille. Delysia, and Yvonne Arnaud.

Louis Pounds and Charles Coburn drew such crowds to the foot of the Nelson column that part of the programme there, the singing of the "Marseillaise," had to be abandoned. Coburn was giving his first rendering of the French national anthem when the police interfered politely, but firmly. Subsequently Coburn was allowed to sing in other ports of the square and during the afternoon from the steps in a corner the voice that won fame and money with "Two Lovely Black Eyes" and "The Man That Broke the Bank," was heard in the inspiring song of liberty.

Miss Lloyd George was one of the flag sellers in Whitehall, and made an irresistible appeal to politicians and others as they passed by. She was too late, however, in tackling her father, the Minister of Munitions had already purchased from another seller.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7269

This design offers a handsome dress which will be just as becoming to the stout woman as to the slender one and for this reason the pattern of it has been carried into the larger sizes.

The plain waist is rendered decorative by the long opening of the neck. This is trimmed with a small, flat collar and by shaped revers, narrower at the lower end than at the upper. The centre of the front of the blouse is carried over the belt in a square piecing, the back is plain and the sleeves also are plain, following the shape of the arm and made either long or short.

The three gore skirt is plain around the body and flares at the lower edge, where it has a circular cut. At this edge it measures 2½ yards in the medium size. It is trimmed with a cuff facing at the lower edge, but the use of this is optional and the skirt is complete without it. The effect of the cuff is dressy and it does much to make a plain frock ornamental.

Beach cloth, panama, poplin, voile, gingham, linen, pongee and taffetas are all used for these frocks and contrasting color is the best trimming.

The pattern, No. 7,269, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4⅞ yards of 44 inch material, with 1¾ yards of 36 inch plain goods.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

CARE OF THE EYES

Health as Well as Beauty Demands That Eyes Get Attention.

The woman who takes care of herself should give as much attention to her eyes as she does to her skin or to her hair. In the first place after driving or being in the dust of the city or country she should wash or bathe her eyes with tepid water. This removes the irritating dust or small particles. After reading or before going to bed she should bathe the eyes with salt water or tepid water to which is added a pinch of salt, and using an eye cup, will be surprised at the difference in the sparkle of the eyes. If inflamed they should be bathed several times a day. The dull, sunken eyes, the hollow circles and the shallow complexion of many women is due, however, to the complaints and diseases peculiar to women. The best thing I know for this is Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription, because it is a temperance tonic, being made of roots and herbs with pure glycerine. Dr. Pierce publishes the ingredients on the wrapper so it is not a secret, and I have seen many women cured by it and not only that, but the dull, sunken eyes, the sunken cheeks, and bust, have taken on a sparkle and healthful appearance. Thousands of women have testified to having been cured of womanly diseases by this Prescription. It speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear—compels the organs to properly perform their natural functions removes pain and misery at certain times and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, dragging-down sensations, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

Keep the bowels healthy by using Dr. Pierce's Pellets. They don't gripe.

Dr. Pierce's Medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

WHY WAR INEVITABLE?

Germany's Death Grip on Russian Trade Was Tightening

Several writers have explained why war between Germany and Russia was inevitable within a year or two anyway. Ten years ago, when Russia was suffering severely from the defeats of the Japanese War, Germany practically forced from Russia trade treaties giving German merchants a practical monopoly of Russian foreign trade. These tariff conventions were to end in 1916, and Germany had already intimated to Russia that she would require the renewal of the special terms. As Russian commercial business was rapidly becoming Germanized, Russia had to get ready to fight for her national business life. The Teuton had to be ejected from his mastership, or else Russian commerce would be merely a branch of the German organization.

The correctness of this view is amply borne out by statistics as to Russian foreign trade supplied by Mr. C. J. Just, Canada's special trade commissioner to Russia. In 1913, for instance, Germany sold more goods to Russia than all the other countries of the world combined. It supplied $320,000,000 worth, as against $85,000,000 worth from Britain, $37,000,000 worth from the United States, $22,000,000 worth from France, and $17,000,000 worth from Austria-Hungary. The market of 170,000,000 people, largely unorganized industrially, was held by German commerce with iron grip. It was a vital point in the success of German industrialism, and Germany was prepared to fight and beat Russia in order to keep her hold unimpaired.

But with the outbreak of war that supremacy of Russian business to German domination has ended. There was imposed a surtax of 100 per cent. against German and Austrian goods. The victory of the Allies means that Germany will be barred from special favors in the Russian markets. Britain, France, the United States and Canada will get a large part of the $320,000,000 worth of business Russia gave to German manufacturers.

Captain Loxley's Dog

The story of "Captain Loxley's little dog," which went down with his master on the Formidable, is cleverly told by the author of "Where's Master?" Many, especially lovers of dogs, will be delighted with the author's skill in telling all that the little dog thought and did, trotting up and down the big battleship. There were good and amusing times before the signal that there were submarines about, and the little dog enjoyed them to the full. When at last great seas broke over them and Captain Loxley, looking so proudly and so lovingly at the row of his men below, saluted the flag and said, "I go down with my ship," he remembered his dog, and his eyes dropped to Bruce—timid at his feet: "You and I, Bruce, we go down with our ship."—Observer.

Tennis balls can be cleaned with pipe clay mixed with enough water to form a smooth paste; add to this a quantity of yellow candle and allow it to cool. When brush all the dust off the balls, take a lump of the pipe clay rubber, squeeze and dissolve it in cold water to the consistency of cream. Apply to the balls with a sponge, let dry and wipe off gently.

OUR CIVILIAN ARMY

Small Host Does Special Work With French's Heroes

That the British Expeditionary Force has attached to it almost enough civilians to make quite a respectable Army in itself may surprise people who remember the attitude of the war office towards newspaper correspondents and other non-combatants. The object in employing them is to avoid diminishing the fighting capacity of the troops engaged, the theory adopted being that a soldier should only be employed as a soldier, and that all other necessary work should be left to civilians.

This civilian force, however, consists mostly of French, although there are certain numbers of British civilians doing duty with the British army in France. The majority are members of the Royal Automobile Club, who are driving the cars which they have placed at the disposal of the staff. Other British civilians accompanying the forces are the doctors, surgeons, and nurses who are assisting military medical officers in the base hospitals.

There are a considerable number of other posts for which civilians are eligible. Among them are the handling and dispatching of stores, the loading and unloading of trains, the driving of baggage-wagons, and the repair of roads, etc. The other capacities in which civilians are employed with the army at the front include those of traders, cutlers, artificers, mechanics, guides, chauffeurs, interpreters, and so on; while a proportion also find work in the postal, telegraph, remount, and sanitary departments, and so forth. The sanitary department employs a considerable number of civilians. These are divided into separate squads, each under the control of a medical officer, and their work deals with the provision of fresh water and the destruction of refuse.

Every civilian employed with the expeditionary force in the field is given a pass, or license. This pass bears the signature of either a staff officer or a provost-marshal, and is strictly personal to the holder. On it are entered the following particulars concerning the individual to whom it is given: Name, nationality, business, height, age, coloring and distinctive marks. If attested for service in the field, civilians are under military discipline just as are soldiers. These men, accordingly, wear uniform, but they do not carry arms. Those who are not attested wear, instead of uniform, a distinguishing badge, the color of which varies with the department in which they happen to be serving. Such badges are known as brassards, and are worn above the left elbow. The civilian element attached to the troops in the field also includes a considerable number of French Boy Scouts. They act as messengers, guides, orderlies, and so on, and are trustworthy, useful and obliging.

In Tropical Countries Liver Chill Very Common

In Northern latitudes also the liver is a very unruly organ and requires careful watching. The concentrated vegetable juices in Dr. Hamilton's Pills act directly upon the liver and stimulate its action to a normal basis. The blood is purified, the skin grows clear, headaches disappear and robust health is firmly established. No medicine for the stomach, liver or kidneys can compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. box all dealers.

IRON CROSS DANGEROUS

Germans Have to Cheer Up Those Who Have None

Iron Crosses have been distributed in such great numbers as to be a source of danger, from the fact that those who have not received them fear that they are not looked on as such good soldiers as the recipients. The 17th German Army Corps issued a proclamation that the undecorated are as good as the decorated soldiers, but that they must recognise that not every one gets the opportunity of displaying special bravery, and that if every one showing sense of his duty had received a cross the result would be the decoration of the entire German army.

2. What was the main object of sacrifice in those days was it to appease God, or develop a spirit of giving to God; and did they then have any idea that it prefigured the death of Jesus?

3. What are the chief benefits to the givers, for giving money to the church, to missions, and to the poor?

4. Which dies the richer, and has lived to greater purpose, the man who has given away to religion and charity $20,000.00 and leaves no earthly estate, or the man who has given away very little and dies with an estate worth $20,000.00? Why?

5. Verse 5—Would you say, or not, and why, that such visions, or dreams, as Solomon had are unusual to-day to spiritually minded people?

6. How could Solomon distinguish this dream, given by God, from an ordinary dream of which all of us have experience?

7. What evidence is there that God still gives his children their choice as to what they would like, or that he chooses for them?

8. If God does not choose for his children, does he influence them in their choice, and what is the difference in the two supposed methods?

9. Verse 6—Of how much service is it to us, to be able to praise God for the lives of our fathers and mothers?

10. What degree of probability is there that fathers and mothers in Heaven can look down upon their sons and daughters here and rejoice at their prosperity?

11. Verse 7—Granted that Solomon came to the throne by the appointment of God, why may not the humblest of us claim that we occupy our present positions by his appointment?

12. What is true humility, and when a man depreciates himself beyond what the facts warrant, would you say, or not and why, that it is a sign of humility?

13. Is true humility always a sign of greatness, and are great men ever boastful?

14. Verses 8, 9—Solomon's chief desire was to have wisdom to properly administer the trust committed to him; what should our chief prayer be, in our circumstances?

15. What reason is there to justify us in depending upon God for the necessary wisdom to administer the trust committed to us, no matter how important our duties may be?

16. Verses 10-13—Why did Solomon's choice please God?

17. What are some of the evidences that God gave Solomon the wisdom for which he prayed?

18. Verses 13-15—If our prayers are for goodness and not greatness, to be of service and not to be served, what reason is there to believe that God will give us every necessary thing without our asking?

19. What reason is there, if any, to believe that every true Christian will have all the riches and honours that are good for him?

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as they can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Operated by an electric motor, a fountain has been invented that uses the same water repeatedly so that there is no appreciable consumption of the supply.

The hatching of eggs by artificial heat has been practiced in China and Egypt since prehistoric times, huge brick ovens being used in the latter country.

A new electric fuse plug is equipped with four wires that can be brought into service in succession so that it is useful until all four have been burned out.

Blood Thin and Weak Too Nervous to Sleep

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers of Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

FRENCH HAVE RECAPTURED HILL NO. 285

NEW GERMAN OFFENSIVE PROVES FAILURE

NEW GERMAN ATTACKS IN THE VOSGES WERE REPULSED BY FRENCH

Enemy Advanced Shoulder to Shoulder in Compact Mass That Offered a Great Target to the French Guns--Were Driven Back With Heavy Losses When They Tried to Advance After a Fierce Bombardment.

GERMANS HAVE BEEN REINFORCED

SPECIAL CABLE:

PARIS, July 16.—The Germans are hurling heavy forces into an attack on the French positions in the Vosges, the War Office reported this afternoon.

Along a front of nearly two miles, extending from Champenaux to Vesouse, the Teutons made simultaneous charges on the French trenches yesterday, but were driven back after fierce fighting, with heavy losses.

Whether the new German activity in this region indicates the beginning of a German offensive in Alsace Lorraine, forecasted by the French military experts several days ago, is not yet known. Official despatches indicated that the Germans have been heavily reinforced, but did not state whether the new regiments came from the Galician battlefields.

The Germans first shelled the French positions, particularly near Leintrey, with showers of high power explosives. Then they rushed the trenches, advancing double quick, shoulder to shoulder, in a compact mass that offered a great target to the French guns.

In their retreat they left behind several hundred dead and dying.

The recapture by the French of Hill No. 285 in Western Argonne, christened "daughter of death," because of the bloody combats fought on its slopes, was announced by the War Office this afternoon.

This height, near Vienne Le Chateau was stormed and captured by the German Crown Prince's army on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—Secretary of State Lansing and German Ambassador Von Bernstorff, had a long conference to-day. The subject, according to popular belief, was Germany's proposal to relax on her submarine campaign if Britain and the Allies will open the blockade of German shipping. It is considered here impossible that Britain will consider such a proposal as the blockade is now almost absolute.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 16.—The Canadian casualties have now amounted to a total of 10,202. The killed number 1,747, the wounded 6,586, and missing 1,869.

The story emanating from German sources via New York stating that all that remains of the 13th Battalion of Montreal and the 15th Highlanders of Ontario, is a few prisoners in Germany, is a characteristic German exaggeration. That these battalions lost heavily in killed, wounded and missing is indicated by the casualty lists. But it is untrue that the regiments have been wiped out as claimed by the Germans.

DOOMED TO CATASTROPHE.

PETROGRAD, July 16.—"Germany's armies are doomed to ultimate catastrophe, despite some temporary successes," the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of the Czar, told correspondents who interviewed him to-day.

"The Germans thought to crush us in two or three months and impose conditions of peace," said the Grand Duke. "In spite of long preparation and perfection in military technique they have failed. It was a cruel mistake. They have suffered mortal blows."

MORE GAINS IN AFRICA.

LONDON, Eng., July 16.—The Anglo-French troops have occupied the important market town of Ngaudere, in German Cameroon, West Central Africa, the Colonial Office announced to-day.

Ngaudere is a city of about 35,000. It lies in North Central Cameroon.

LONDON, July 16.—That the financial situation is beginning to tell on the Germanic powers is stated by the Financial News to-day. The News displays with great prominence reports "in close touch with German sources of information," that Germany is making tentative peace proposals through the United States.

LONDON, July 16.—The Bulgarian Premier has given his solemn pledge to Turkey that Bulgaria will remain neutral at least until autumn, the Sofia correspondent of the Evening News wired to-day.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—That German Ambassador Bernsterff suggested to Secretary Lansing to-day a plan he believes may serve as an entering wedge for peace's restoration in Europe, was confirmed this afternoon on reliable authority.

BERLIN, via wireless, July 16. — The Germans are continuing their drive on Warsaw from the north, sweeping onward through Przasnysz the War Office announced this afternoon.

The official statement also contained the admission that the French have driven the Germans from a section of trenches south of Souchez.

HARRY K. THAW FREE MAN NOW

Nine-Year Fight For Freedom Has Been Won—Is Admitted to $35,000 Bail.

THE STATE WILL APPEAL

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 16.—Harry K. Thaw, who shot and killed Stanford White on the night of June 26, 1906, walked from the courtroom a free man at noon to-day.

Justice Hendrick accepted the finding of the jury that declare Thaw sane and immediately after announcing the decision admitted Thaw to $35,000 bail. Warned by the deputy marshalls the big crowd in the court room attempted no demonstration. Thaw himself sat unmoved by the decision. When the court overruled the state's attempt to block his release on bail, he turned on Deputy Attorney General Cook a quiet smile of triumph. His nine years' fight for freedom had been won, but Thaw was the most undemonstrative person in the great crowd in and around the Supreme Court building.

The state immediately entered an appeal from Justice Hendrick's finding.

GERMANY'S LAST RESERVES CALLED

ZURICH, July 16.—It is becoming more clear that Germany has now called upon her last reserves and that every available man is being sent to the fighting line. Germans of 45 years of age residing in Switzerland have been called to the colours. The most typical case is that of a German of 43 years residing in Basle, who, never having been a soldier, was called on a month ago. A few days ago the family received a letter from the Russian frontier, where the man had been sent after a fortnight's military training.

Hardly anyone is refused by the doctors. A German in Zurich, who had lost four toes on his left foot, was declared fit for the service. Such men are utilised to guard the lines of communication, which liberates the more robust men for service at the front. Germany has every available man in uniform and can no longer make good the wastage. Everything now depends on a last desperate effort to burst through the allies' lines which is being prepared and expected to take place before the end of the month.

JUDGE DECLARES THAW IS SANE

Special to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, July 16.—Judge Hendrick has declared Harry K. Thaw sane.

SCARCITY OF DYE STUFFS IS GROWING ACUTE

Supplies Are Practically Exhausted and No Relief in Sight—Reason for Shortage—Demands From United States Manufacturers to Get Dyes From Germany

BONNER-WORTH COMPANY AFFECTED

The scarcity of dye stuffs is not only affecting United States manufacturers, but is being felt in Canada and even in Peterborough. Mr. Joseph Worth, of the Bonner-Worth Company, stated that within three months the Canadian supplies would be exhausted. The quantity received from England since the war began has been less than in times of peace. Two factories that were making dye-stuffs have been manufacturing lyddite. The outbreak of war found the Canadian consumers of dye stuffs largely supplied, but their stocks have been steadily disappearing and there is no promise of replenishment until after the war. And even then it would be a year, Mr. Worth believed, until new goods would be received.

A complete cessation of supplies will result in hundreds of thousands of employees in this country and in the United States being thrown out of work. In the latter country an effort was being made to provide their own any line dyes, but the demands from the woollen manufacturers indicated that they were face to face with an actual scarcity. Hence their complaints against the blockade of German commerce.

Mr. Worth left no doubt that the conditions are increasing in the seriousness of their nature. He even suggested that persons desiring high-coloured goods should purchase them now while they can. With the present state of affairs extended through the next few months it will merely mean that coloured stocks will be exhausted. With no dye stuff, there can be no dyeing of yarn and cotton, and of course no woven material. He stated that he was not positive where the most recent shipments of dyes had come from, but it was everywhere admitted that this country is practically depleted of dye stuffs, and with no relief the end of coloured materials cannot be far remote.

WHEEL OF AUTO WAS SMASHED

An automobile, the property of Mr. Rose, Margaret Avenue, is minus a rear wheel this afternoon. Mr. Rose was driving south on George street, about 11.30 o'clock to-day, when the trouble occurred. He was driving with one wheel on the car track and when he got opposite Mr. Soden's Book Store he attempted to turn out to avoid a street car. In doing so his auto swerved and the right rear wheel struck the curb, close to a hydrant. A new wheel will be necessary.

CAPT. PARK OFF TO JOIN 59th

Three Recruits From the 57th Also Left For Barriefield Camp This Morning—40 Peterboro' Men Off to Front From Kingston To-day.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Capt. Maurice Park of the 57th Regiment, left this morning for Barriefield Camp to report for duty with the 59th Battalion Canadian Expeditionary Force, to which he has been appointed. His many friends will wish him every success.

With Capt. Park were the following three local recruits, who will be attached to the 59th Battalion:

Percy Tuffin, R. R. No. 1, South Monaghan, aged 19 years. Mother resides in England. No previous experience.

James Burns Buskin, 258 Barnhart street, married. Wife lives same address. Three years in the Scots Guards.

Arthur Reginald Carpenter, 225 Euclid avenue, aged 19 years, single. One year in 57th Regiment. Born in Peterborough.

The draft from the 8th C.M.R. for immediate overseas service left Kingston to-day. They will in all probability be sent to Canterbury, Eng., where the first Mounted Rifle draft has been stationed. About 40 Peterborough men left to-day, the list including Walter Flowers and other well known local boys. A number of relatives of the men selected were in Kingston to-day, saying good-bye to their dear ones.

BARRIE, ONT., July 16.—As Lt.-Colonel Fred Sneath, commanding the 35th Simcoe Foresters, attempted to board the train for Toronto to-day, he slipped and fell under the wheels. Both legs were severed, and he may die from shock.

He rose in the regiment from private to commanding officer, and it was expected that he would shortly be given command of an overseas battalion. He served in the north west rebellion.

Still an Englishman After 50 Years in U.S.

A touch of feeling growing out of The European war found its way into the trial of Charles Stielow, during the examination of David Newman, a Ridgeway farmer. He has stood the test well and it looked as if he would be the twelfth juror selected, when finally Attorney Blake asked him if he knew of any reason why he wood not make a fair juror.

"I do not think that the defendant would want me to sit in this case if he knew my nationality," said Newman.

"What is it?" said Attorney Blake.

"I am an Englishman," said Newman.

Wheeling in his chair, Judge Pound said, "You do not think you would want to sit on a jury where a German was accused of murder in the first degree with the penalty of conviction being death?"

"I would not," replied Newman.

"How long have you been in this country?" asked the court.

"Fifty years."

"And you are still an Englishman," suggested Justice Pound.

"Yes, sir," said Newman.

As he was being excused the court gave expression to the Pinafore quotation:

"In spite of all temptations;
To belong to other nations,
He is still an Englishman."

Stielow, the defendant, is a German.

Turkish Lines Are Stormed By Allies

400 Yards of Strongly Fortified Ground Along the Whole Front Captured—400 Prisoners Were Captured.

ENEMY'S LOSS HEAVY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 16.— Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, in command of the land forces at the Dardanelles, reports that on Monday the British right wing and right centre captured two lines of Turkish trenches to a depth of 300 to 400 yards. In the right section of the enemy his first and second trenches were taken, together with 80 prisoners. That night two counter-attacks were repulsed.

As anticipated, progress against the Turks is very slow owing to the natural and strongly fortified positions which they hold. But British military authorities express satisfaction with the gain of an occasional line of trenches, relying on breaking the morale of the Turks and on the exhaustion of their supply of ammunition. Germany's eagerness to have Roumania allow the passage of ammunition through that country to Turkey is taken to mean that the supply is running short.

The announcement is as follows:

"Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, commander of the allied forces at the Dardanelles, reports that on the 12th instant the forces under him made an attack at daybreak with their right and centre. After heavy and confused fighting, lasting all day, the troops succeeded in carrying two strongly held and strongly fortified lines of Turkish trenches opposite to them, the ground covered by the advance varying in depth from 200 to 400 yards.

"The second phase of the operation was then undertaken, and the right section of the enemy's lines was attacked. As in the former phase, the first line of trenches was easily carried, a preliminary bombardment having been very successful. Following up this success our troops took the second line of trenches, capturing some 80 prisoners, and by nightfall the line was consolidated some 400 yards in advance of our original position.

"In this part of the field in the course of the night of July 12-13 two counter-attacks were successfully repulsed. During the hours of darkness, however, it was found that the British right had pressed too far, and the Turks made a successful bomb attack and captured a section of the trenches.

Position Retaken.

"This position being vital to the safety of life a further attack was organised, and a brigade of the Royal Naval division, supported by French artillery, was sent forward, and with the support of 75's retook the trenches. In the meantime the French had pushed their extreme right down to the mouth of the River Kereves Dere, where it runs into the sea. This position was maintained without difficulty.

"During the night of the 13th-14th, as on the previous night, the enemy counter-attacked, but without success.

"Thus in these successful operations the whole of the original objective of the attack was attained, except on one small portion of about 300 yards, which still remains in the hands of the Turks.

"Four hundred and twenty-two prisoners were captured, of whom 200 were taken by the French in the first attack."

The following report on the same operations was issued by the French War Office.

BATTERY BOYS ENJOYING A REST IN LONDON

Sergt. Hamilton of Cobourg Detachment Cables That Some at Least of the 24th Battery Members Are on Furlough

LIKELY PETERBORO' MEN

Local people will be interested in a cablegram from Sergeant Hector H. Hamilton of the Cobourg Artillery Detachment of the First Canadian Overseas Contingent, which was received by his mother, Mrs. Frank Hamilton, on Wednesday evening, from London, England. The cablegram states that he is resting in London with the members of the 4th Battery, 1st Artillery Brigade, off on leave at present.

Many Peterborough boys are with this battery, including "Buff" Guerin, Ned Simmons, Ambrose Doerris, Earl Downey, Bob May and many others. They have been in France since early last winter.

Sergeant Hamilton enlisted under Major Ralston. A letter from him, which was published in the Examiner some time ago, referred to the death of Sergeant Richard Boone, and his burial in a French Church yard.

This news should be quite a relief to the many friends and relatives of the Peterborough boys in this battery.

MANY CHANGES IN BUSINESS SECTION OF CITY

George Street From Simcoe to Charlotte Has Three Removals

George street has a busy appearance in the block between Simcoe and Charlotte streets. There will be three business changes on the west side of the street.

Carpenters are busy at the barber shop of Archie Brault, who has moved to Simcoe street, turning it into an up-to-date drug store to be occupied by Miss Coughlin.

Workmen are also engaged at Mr. Sutherland's old grocery store, getting it in shape for the United Cigar Stores. Then on the Barrie building is displayed a handsome new sign giving the information that the Morgan Hardware Co. is to occupy with Barries Limited, the Barrie block.

It is understood that the Morgan Hardware Co. will conduct both stores for a time, but increasing business has necessitated larger quarters than are at present occupied.

A Mail Cart In Collision

What looked to spectators for a few moments as a very serious accident, occurred at the corner of Hunter and George Streets, last evening. A mix-up occurred when Comstock's Ambulance, an automobile and a mail cart all approached the intersection together. The mail cart came off third best in the collision which afterwards occurred. It would appear that the gentlemen driving the auto thought the Ambulance was going north to Nicholls Hospital, but instead it was going to St. Joseph's. In turning out to avoid it he ran into the mail cart, and His Majesty's mail took a drop. The mail cart was badly damaged, two wheels being rendered practically useless. The driver escaped with a slight scratch on his head.

The equipment of all vessels landing passengers at its ports with wireless telegraph apparatus has been made compulsory by the government of Uruguay.

PREPARATIONS UNDER WAY FOR LAYING OF CAR TRACKS

A Start Has Been Made on Charlotte Street, West of Park, by the St. Railway Company.

The Street Railway Company made a start to-day on Charlotte Street, West, which leaves the pleasing impression with the residents of this section that Charlotte Street will be both paved and have street car service this fall.

Men are engaged to-day staking out where the poles will be placed which are to carry the wire for supplying the current for the cars.

Without oil, a badly cut up street, and dust from the Township of Monaghan, Charlotte Street has not been as attractive for householders this summer as it will be when the work is completed.

The residents would like to see an improved lighting system and sufficient boulevard to keep the trees alive when the job is under way.

THE WEATHER

To-day will probably prove to be the warmest day of the season, as at noon the thermometer stood at 85 degrees and still rising. The record for this summer up to the present time was 85 degrees on April 25th, an exceptionally high figure for so early in the season. The weather during the last few days has been very uncomfortable but has been due rather to the humid atmosphere than the high temperature prevailing.—W. P.

MONEY AND JUSTICE.

Justice is pictured as blind; but justice seems to be halt and lame, as well as blind, in its dealings with a man named Thaw, who nine years ago murdered a man on the roof garden of the Madison Square building. He was arraigned, tried and acquitted of the charge of murder, though there was no lack of proof of guilt—he was acquitted on the ground of insanity, and has since the intervening time in and out of jail and lunatic asylums. Finally he has been declared sane, and thus, comes the responsibility for the murder he committed nine years ago, and now, he will, unhanged, doubtless take his position among the commonplace ruck of humanity, and cease to be a central figure in the morbid divagations of yellow journal exploitation. Exit Harry K. Thaw, the centre of a mess of social filth, the object of tortuous vagaries of justice. If he had not been possessed of money his name wouldn't have occupied ten lines at a time of the press that has prostituted pages to his sordid case. This continent may be held up as the model democracy, but money makes rank, and only poverty and its obscurity make man "free and equal."

THE LATE AUBREY WHITE.

It is a sad thing to suddenly find death within casting pleasure, as befell Aubrey White, Ontario Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests. His sad passing at his summer home in Muskoka will be a shock through the province, and will be felt in Peterborough, where Mr. White, as a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity, has often visited. His death removes one of the most important of Ontario Government officials. He has filled the position of Deputy Minister of Crown Lands for nearly thirty years continuously. He has held that position under five premiers, under five governments. That fact alone does not surprise one when one recalls the merit and value of his service. As a deputy minister he occupied one of the most important of administrative positions, not even excepting that of the treasurer minister. He is the real administrative force of his department, and his presence explains what to many seems a mystery — how a change of government takes place without disturbing the machinery of administration—the deputy minister is "on the job," and work goes on as usual, no matter what the colour of the political figure head of the department may be. Ministers may come and ministers may go, but the deputy minister goes on forever—practically—for it is seldom that a deputy minister is changed. Mr. White was a model deputy minister, and it will be a long time before another similar official of his department will arise with the wide knowledge of forestry and its complete interests, that Mr. White accumulated in nearly a generation of service, and intelligent and conscientious devotion to its duties.

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE.

Canada has by the great work of her soldiers, and the hearty response of the people to the imperial call of duty, won the right to a place in the front rank of the "Dominions beyond the seas." And this service may, apart from considerations of personal merit, account for the hearty welcome and the honours that are being showered upon the Canadian Premier, Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden, on his present visit. In honouring him Canada is honoured. He has been invited to a seat in the councils of the British Cabinet, and is to have an audience with the King. This is not altogether an honour to the man, though as a man, Sir Robert will have the dignity to gracefully do credit to the Dominion. It is an honour to Canada, a recognition of her high place in the Empire, a tribute to the patent splendid services she has given, and of her affection to the Mother Country—as equal to the latter-yet-first is preferred place in Canadian markets.

Sir Robert's admission to British Cabinet councils is a Constitutional event of great significance, something that, considering inter-imperial relations, was inevitable. It is a response in concrete form to the prophetic demand of Sir Wilfrid Laurier of fifteen years ago—"call us to your councils." A Unionist journal referring to the occasion, says:

"That the door should have been opened to Borden is one of the most momentous of all possible tokens of how far vision delegated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier has advanced towards fulfillment. The war and its exertions have brought within our grasp the attainment of that real Council of the Empire, for which Chamberlain raised his voice. That we should fail to strike in the flush hour would be a betrayal of all that has been bequeathed to us of the political genius of British history."

The unprecedented fact of Sir Robert Borden's admission to a British Cabinet meeting, heretofore closed to all but a British Cabinet minister, marks and makes another step in the development of that intangible, but tremendous force and entity, the British constution, a national acretion and expression of great principles of human government for human good. Sir Robert Borden may be considered fortunate and favoured in being Premier of Canada, but he is more fortunate and favoured in being Premier of Canada at a time when Canada's devotion and imperial interests, call him to the councils of the central power of the greatest Empire of history.

THE LETTER OF THE LAW.

The Conservatives of Manitoba have called an oecumenical council, a general convention of the party, the first time in twelve years the machine politicians have, in form, at least, consulted the people of the party in the province. One of the most significant evidences of the continued dominance of the machine, badly damaged in the Parliament Buildings scandals, but still in the ring, is the speech of Mr. George H. Bradbury, member of the Federal Parliament for Selkirk. He was indignantly eloquent in denouncing the lieutenant-governor of Manitoba for "unconstitutional acts" in bringing on the investigation into the stealings under the Roblin Government. Under the spell of his artificial indignation the convention passed a superfluous resolution, declaring its belief in the constitutional principles of responsible government," which by the way, (this same "responsible government") was blocked opposed, and fiercely fought against, by this same Conservative party, till the British genius of good government compelled surrender. Mr. Bradbury condemns the lieutenant-governor for refusing "to take the advice of his advisers and going over their head to the chief justice." Without entering into the constitutional question, it may be pointed out that he couldn't do anything else and do his duty. If he went after the heads of his advisers, he necessarily had to go "over their heads." There was prima facie evidence that "his advisers" were badly mixed up with stealing of the peoples' money, and that there was a strong case for investigation. The lieutenant-governor's advisers would hardly advise him to appoint a commission to investigate themselves, though their resignation was a confession of guilt, that has been justified by subsequent investigation. The Parliament Buildings' stealing was a serious matter. It was brought out in evidence tht the "stealings," in the form of unauthorized "extras," amounted to something like a total of $1,197,170—more in unauthorized "extras" than the total cost of the fine Parliament Buildings of the great Province of Ontario. A Winnipeg journal says:

On the six extra special contracts made between the Roblin Government and Kelly, without any call for tenders (over and above the main contract, on which $389,884.65 was paid up to October 29 last), the payments were as follows:

November, 1913	$ 152,897.25
January, 1914	123,874.70
March, 1914	128,656.80
April, 1914	227,497.75
June, 1914	143,565.00
July, 1914 (before the elections)	242,250.00
October, 1914	86,244.50
Total	$1,197,170.00

These, be it remembered, were all extras.

It was things like these, the whole machinery mess with which the lieutenant-governor's advisers were mixed up; and when the "advisers" could not be very well consulted in regard to investigating themselves, the lieutenant-governor naturally, if the truth were to be got out, had to "go over their heads." If his action was technically unconstitutional, it was judicially warranted if his action helped to rid Manitoba of a "gang of political brigands."

Mr. Bradbury's righteous indignation over the lieutenant-governor's unconstitutional action, does not extend to the wholesale plunder of the province, of which his "unconstitutional action" brought exposure. Mr. Bradbury's wailing over the laceration of the constitution is very much like the Kaiser's crocodile tears over the victims of his savagery, which he justifies to the hilt. German kultur and ethics are not confined to the other side of the Atlantic. The letter of the law is less important than the crookedness it is involved to condone, if not cover.

THE PROSECUTIONS TO BE MADE IN CONNECTION WITH THE MANITOBA SCANDALS

The prompt appointment by the Norris Government of two prominent Manitoba lawyers, Messrs. R. A. Bonnar and R. W. Craig, to advise as to the steps to be taken for the prosecution on criminal charges of the contractors for the Manitoba Parliament Buildings and the Ministers who connived at the gigantic frauds, has announced all talk of the complicity of friends of the Norris Government in criminal transactions. When contractor Kelly returns to Manitoba he will be arrested promptly on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Province. In the meantime Sir Rodmond Roblin, Hon. Dr. Montague, Hon. J. H. Howden, and Hon. Geo. R. Coldwell of the former Administration, all of whom are held to have been involved in illegal transactions, will be prosecuted on charges arising out of their own evidence before the Royal Commission on the Parliament Buildings contracts.

Much has been learned as to the methods by which the Messrs. Kelly secured hundreds of thousands of dollars for bogus extras. A reputable and entirely disinterested British architect has sworn that he was told the Government had to obtain its campaign fund for the election of 1914 from these extras, and that therefore a change of plans was essential. The Ministers of the Crown under whose administration the wholesale looting of the public Treasury took place, have all sworn in the most unreserved fashion that they secured no part of the plunder, and that they do not know what became of it or whether the contractor actually did contribute any large sum to the party funds before the election of July, 1914. The confidential Treasurer of the Conservatives of Manitoba, Dr. Simpson, who seems to have had almost unlimited power of producing money when it was urgently needed, is now at the front in northern France, and his evidence as to contributions to the party fund by the Messrs. Kelly is not now available.

The only way of forcing those implicated in the shameful affair to disclose the facts is by criminal action. If the Ministers expected from the Messrs. Kelly a contribution of a hundred thousand dollars with which they could buy their way back to power they were not likely to look very closely into the Kellys' accounts for extras. This attitude no doubt enabled the contractors to rob the Province of an enormously greater sum than they handed over to the campaign managers. The truth has been concealed up till now by evasion, and by the refusal of Mr. Thomas Kelly to give evidence. In a criminal prosecution the contractors are likely to tell the truth as a means of putting themselves in a favorable light before the jury. If they seek to show that they were only the "jimmy" with which the safe was opened they must disclose the names of the burglars. The prosecution will clear the air, for if similar offences have been committed by Liberals it is reasonably certain that the friends of the Ministers now under fire will tell all they know in the hope of discrediting the prosecution. Thus the ends of justice would be more amply served. —The Globe.

OUR DOMINION DIVINELY NAMED.

We are accustomed to take the expression of the "Dominion" of Canada for granted, but the original of that somewhat unusual word is known to very few. When at length the great scheme of Sir John Macdonald was realized, and the nine Provinces grouped themselves into one great confederation, a serious difficulty was presented by the choice of a suitable name. For a time almost a deadlock ensued. At length one old member of Parliament rose from his seat and told his colleagues that he had read in his Bible that very morning the words: "His dominion shall be from the one sea to the other." Accordingly he suggested that Canada should be known as the Dominion, or God's Land. The suggestion seized upon the hearts and imaginations of those present and it was promptly acted upon. If the above be not true it is at least well invented.—Exchange.

A SINGER AND A SONG.

Rouget de Lisle is dead and dust. Yesterday his ashes were moved to a place of greater honour. To-day his countrymen, with his song on their lips, are fighting for what the song has taught them for more than a hundred years.

Before war broke many held the view that France was decadent, and that from Frenchmen the fibre of manhood had disappeared. What has happened? German hosts surged over the French frotier in sudden attack. They found men to meet them. The people who, for a century, have sung the Marseillaise are still men and women of courage, able and willing to fight and suffer and die for la patrie.

Through all changes in the methods of war the song has held its place. Since it was written science has made weapons more deadly. War has found wings to ride the air, and has dived beneath the sea. But the sagacity of the scientist has not yet surmounted the art of the singer who a hundred years ago penned in burning words the message of defence of the land of France and resistance to the invader.

The spirit of France has lived with the song and to-day men thought to be decadent are showing themselves to be as iron shod as those hardy warriors who followed Napoleon across the sands of Egypt, over the Alps and Pyrenees and through Russian snows.

To-day Kaiser William has no more formidable opponent than Rouget de Lisle.—Ottawa Free Press.

PLEASANT FURNISHINGS.

A living room with a northern exposure was to be "done over" in an economical manner. To give a bright warmth to the room the paper chosen had a pale yellow ground with a faint suggestion of a green design, all of which harmonized well with the oak-finished wood-work. To cover the centre of the floor a brown wool rug was used. The furniture included an oak Morris chair, a table of oak built in plain lines, two comfortable wicker chairs, with cushions of pretty cretonne with a design combining yellow, brown and green. The sides of the windows beown denim was purchased at twenty-five cents a yard. To this was added a border of the gay cretonne, which added immensely to the effect. For curtains next to the window glass a fine creamy-white cheesecloth edged with a heavy, narrow lace was used.

In the one window, which was unusually wide, the clever homemaker arranged her beautiful ferns as a final touch. The piano was also placed in this room. Nothing used in the furnishings was of an expensive kind, but in the selection of each thing there was shown good taste, which goes further in making a home-like and pleasing room than does the actual cost.

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU

That if there are three houses to rent in this town, anyone of which would suit you, at least two of them will be advertised in these columns.

That YOUR NEXT POSITION may be advertised to-day.

That the next furnished room you'll live in is probably advertised in another column.

That if there's nothing a Want Ad. can help you to accomplish—you're leading too quiet a life!

That if you have need of a worker, you have need of a Want Ad.

That a Store should be advertised as REGULARLY as it is opened for business. A merchant who wouldn't close up for a while now and then "to save running expenses" should'nt stop advertising now and then "to save expense."

That sometimes a LITTLE more advertising will mean a GREAT DEAL more business for a store.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"A Traitor to John Dorr."

RUTH GALLON awakened at dawn and looked about her, trying to remember what had happened and where she was. Slowly there came back to her the scenes of riot in Bhala, the assault on the hotel and their own subsequent flight.

Around her the natives lay in postures of sleep. Not far away, within arm's reach, John Dorr was still unconscious of the new day.

Apart sat Sir Donald, ride on his knee, bowed in drowsiness after his night's vigil.

She called over to Faversham, and he roused himself, apparently much embarrassed that he had been found watching over the slumbers of his company.

A moment later the whole camp was up, and breakfast was soon dispatched.

"Now for a council of war," the baronet said presently. "So far we have made good our escape from the fanatics, and I believe now it would be wise to turn back and seek civilization again for the sake of Miss Ruth."

"Oh, I am good for any amount of this kind of travel!" she exclaimed. "And I am wild to go ahead and find the idol and the plans."

"[illegible] Bhala," Faversham remarked, with some brusqueness. "I don't intend that you shall risk your life again in such foolishness."

John Dorr had steadily grown more and more suspicious of the Englishman's attitude, and he now bitterly resented his assumption of guardianship over Ruth, the more so that he realized Faversham had extricated her once from a tangle of his making and was undoubtedly right when he proposed that she be placed in safety.

His first impulse was to insist that Ruth follow his plans, but second thought told him that he would be playing an unworthy part.

"Where shall we take her?" he demanded.

"Back down the river to some city where there are Americans," was the response. "Bombay would be best of all."

"But that would leave me so far away!" Ruth protested. "I know John will insist on keeping after the plans, and I don't want to be left out of everything."

John Dorr joined Sir Donald in arguing that there was little sense in going on a wild goose chase and that she would be far better off with good people of her own race.

"But who?" she demanded at last. "We don't know any one."

"I do," Faversham put in quickly. "I know some awfully jolly Americans, too, missionaries. Then there's your American consul, you know."

It was settled at last, and they returned by easy stages to Bhala and thence down the river.

Sir Donald was as good as his word, and Ruth found herself invited to stay as a guest at several houses.

She chose that of the American consul, a middle aged gentleman, who, with his wife, presided with true eastern hospitality over a little group of business men and missionaries.

Mrs. Reynolds received the girl with open arms, listened to the story of her adventures and thanked God devoutly that Ruth was at last under the protection of fellow countrymen. To John her language was plain:

"But that would leave me so far away!" Ruth protested.

"What in the world do you mean by dragging this young lady over half creation and making her run all sorts of risks?"

"But"—

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Reynolds severely. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself, sir, for your conduct. And of all the awful things—it's a wonder you haven't got her killed before now!"

John tried to explain that Ruth was a western girl used to looking after herself and that she had insisted on coming along.

The consul's wife sniffed.

"But you didn't have to come," she responded promptly. "I understand that you are merely going on idle gossip anyway. You shan't stir the girl out of my sight, I tell you! Go and find your plans and risk your own life. Miss Gallon stays here."

"And I'm sure there is no place I'd rather leave her," Dorr said gratefully.

To the consul he confided briefly that he was still determined to find the idol and get the hidden plans.

"You may be too late," was the quiet response. "A man named Wilkerson and another man and a lady have already gone up country, and I am informed that they are on the same quest."

"All the more reason why I should

"You may be too late," was the quiet response.

hasten," Dorr answered. Every hour may be precious. I must see Sir Donald immediately."

To his surprise, Faversham was very cold about the second excursion.

"So long as it was a case of getting Miss Gallon and yourself out of a bad scrape, I did my best," he told Dorr. "But I agree with your consul—an excellent fellow—that what you propose is ridiculous. The priests have ample warning, and I am informed that they took measures to secrete the idol. You can gain nothing by further search."

John argued with some temper, but Sir Donald was immovable.

And, as he most evidently had sound common sense on his side, Dorr could not afford to lose his temper.

"I suppose you'll help me out by letting me have that old servant of yours?" he said finally.

"Anything!" said Faversham cordially. "But I must certainly warn you once more that I shall feel guilty in even letting you go."

John's jaw stiffened.

"I guess it would be beyond your power to stop me."

Faversham shook his head.

"A word from me to the authorities and you would find yourself not only debarred from such a foolhardy expedition, but politely yet firmly made to leave the country."

John grinned.

"I suppose that's right," he agreed. "But you won't be a spoil-sport, will you?"

The baronet shook his head.

"No, I won't. But I can't go myself. I'll stop here and have an eye out for Miss Gallon. Then if a rescue expedition is in order I can be here to head it."

For the moment John was blinded by a blaze of jealousy.

While he was risking his life for Ruth's sake Faversham would sit comfortably within the protection of his club and plot ways of winning Ruth.

He curtly accepted the offer of the servant and went off to make his preparations. There made, he sought Ruth.

He found her in a strange state of excitement. Evidently the consul and his wife had not spared pains to impress upon her the dangers of the proposed expedition.

"They're old grannies," was John's disrespectful comment. "Ruth, you know that without these plans we're helpless to make 'The Master Key' into what your father wanted it to be. I set out to get those plans, and I've not come this far to turn back."

"I know," she said miserably. "But everybody says it is all foolishness.

Sir Donald—

"Oh, that quitter!" he interrupted. "I know he prefers sitting around making love to you to doing something really worth while."

There was the glimmer of a smile on Ruth's lips as she answered meekly. "Then you don't think that—sitting around—and making love to me—is worth while?"

For a moment John stood and stared at her. The blood rushed into his face.

Then the full meaning of her light evasion of his real meaning struck him like a blow between the eyes.

His heart was filled with love for her, a love that had grown and increased since the hour when he had first seen her at old Tom Gallon's door.

He had thought that his devoted service to her interests, his constant attention to the slightest detail that could insure her future happiness, would have published that love to her.

He was minded to tell her now, to forego all else in order to woo her for himself.

"Ruth"— he began. But some subtle change in her manner froze the hot words on his lips.

"Well," he went on, controlling himself by a tremendous effort and trying to speak lightly, "I'll be off. Thank heaven you'll be safe here."

There was a struggle in Ruth's breast too. Yet the memory of her promise to Faversham stilled her.

In that long and terrible moment she realized that John Dorr was all in all to her. Yet she was bound to another who had risked his life on the strength of her promise to marry him, and she could not speak what was in her heart.

She tried to look John bravely in the eyes, and the tears would come in spite of her.

She bowed her head, and so he left her, with bitterness in his soul, but the firm resolve to carry out his self appointed task no matter what the outcome.

Faversham was as good as his word, and the old native agreed once more to ask the hills and guard this stranger who, he was convinced, had lost his mind.

But his duty was plain and Sir Donald's injunctions not to be trifled with. That evening the two of them set forth, following in the track of Wilkerson and his party.

That John should have departed without further farewell hurt Ruth sorely.

It seemed to mark a definite break in their frank relations, and she felt that when he returned with the plans she would have to receive him on an entirely new footing—the footing of a business man with his employer.

And while the hurt was fresh she turned to Sir Donald gratefully. He had acted most delicately in all their experiences together. He had proved his devotion by coming with them to India and during the horrible nightmare when their hotel had been the center of assault by fanatical natives.

He had accepted her promise without undue exactions. He had seemed to be waiting till he and she could speak more definitely.

Faversham was by no means dull, and he played the part of a kind friend during the first days of John's absence.

He knew that Dorr was in love with Ruth, and he strongly suspected that her feeling for him had once bordered on love.

He would tear open no old wounds. He was devoted, cheerful, always at her call, but never insistent on his privileges.

The American consul liked him from the first and told his wife that Ruth would be a fool if she preferred a hare-brained idiot to a solid gentleman with no nonsense about him and assured position in society.

Mrs. Reynolds, having been rebuffed when she sought Ruth's confidences, merely stated it as her opinion that all girls were alike, a dogma the consul was too wise to argue.

But he gave Sir Donald the freedom of the consulate and saw to it that he every attempt to retrace his road to the coast he found himself cut off by wandering bands of Bhilmen whose attitude was too threatening to be mistaken.

"If you would only drop that idol," said Drake for the twentieth time, "they would be satisfied to take it and let us go."

Wilkerson laughed and shook his head. "That idol is going back to the States with me," he returned.

"But why in heaven's name?" demanded his companion. "You know that these people will never let us alone so long as they think we have it. You have the plans. What more do you want?"

"It brought me good luck and old Tom Gallon bad luck," was the response. "Do you think I don't want to keep it? It's my mascot."

Yet a couple of night alarms shook Wilkerson's resolution, and he agreed with Drake that they should surrender the image.

Here they were confronted with a new difficulty. None of their men had been allowed to know of the presence of the idol, and Drake asserted that to inform them now would be dangerous.

It seemed unwise merely to drop it by the wayside, as it might escape notice, and no good would be done.

It must be delivered to the priests and the condition made that the white men should be allowed safe conduct to the city.

How to do this occupied their minds until the day when they found themselves really attacked in force and had to take refuge in a native hut.

Here their position was so perilous that they had no time for anything but preparations for defense.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Tis-It Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

The NATIONAL—Canada's new Transcontinental Train

Scenic Gems on the New Route

With the departure from Toronto of "The National" on its first transcontinental trip a new way has been opened between Eastern and Western Canada; a new steel highway created linking the Atlantic and the Pacific.

The inauguration of through, fast service over this great all-Canadian route marks an important epoch in the Dominion's development. A vast area of productive land, of great scenic beauty, hitherto without modern transportation facilities, is made easy of access. Its mineral, lumber and agricultural wealth can now be tapped and its sporting paradises developed, while a new trail is created for travellers. The finest equipment that can be produced is being used in the service from its very inception, while the smooth roadbed and great steel bridges embody all that has been learnt in three-quarters of a century by those who build our railways.

"The National" will operate between Toronto and Winnipeg over the lines of the Grand Trunk, the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway, and the Canadian Government Railways, making a fast run between the two cities of forty-two hours. The first stage of the journey from Toronto takes the traveller through the heart of the "Highlands of Ontario," a region studded with beautiful lakes and winding streams, and replete with natural loveliness.

From North Bay the steel stretches away northwestward 235 miles, through the famed Timagami region to the Town of Cochrane. The train also skirts the famous Cobalt territory, the mines of which have produced in the last few years silver valued at a hundred million dollars.

From Cochrane to Winnipeg is practically virgin territory. The scenery along the line is fascinating. At Winnipeg "The National" makes connections with the Grand Trunk Pacific lines, which stretch clear across to Prince Rupert, B.C., there providing the Dominion with its first all-Canadian transcontinental route.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

10,000 FREEMASONS FROM ONTARIO FIGHTING FOR THE BRITISH EMPIRE

Will Be Honoured at the Grand Lodge Meeting in Hamilton Next Week---Officers and Men of the Craft From Niagara Camp Have Been Invited.

The fact that ten thousand Masons of Ontario are fighting for the British Empire will not be ignored when the Grand Lodge of Canada holds its sixtieth annual communication in the city of Hamilton next week.

When the Grand Lodge met at Niagara Falls last year the occasion was the hundredth anniversary of peace between Great Britain and the United States. Some of the leading citizens of the United States attended, and the proceedings were among the most remarkable ever held.

Patriotism and liberty will constitute the keynote of the coming Masonic gathering. When the "honour roll" is read, the following, written by Bro. Thomas Litster, of Zetland Lodge, Toronto, and delcated to M. W. Bro. W. D. Macpherson, K.C., M.P.P., Grand Master, will be sung:

When the cry from Belgium
Echoed through the world,
Masons' sons responded,
Freedom's flag unfurled,
Blood of British heroes,
Coursing through their veins;
Live or die, no matter,
Just as God ordains.

Forward they are marching,
On to victory,
Just our cause and righteous,
"Death or Liberty."

Some have crossed the border,
Some are fighting still,
Langemarck and Ypres
Gives each a thrill.
On the "roll of honour"
Etched with British blood,
Names of loyal Masons,
Died on field and flood.

Forward ever forward
May our steps incline,
Give to earth eternal peace,
Architect Divine.

Brethren at Camp.

Those officers and men at Niagara Camp belonging to the craft will be invited to Grand Lodge in this crisis year.

The Committee of General Purposes will meet at 11 a.m. on Monday, and the proceedings of the Grand Lodge proper will be held on Wednesday and Thursay, July 21st and 22nd.

The brethren of Hamilton have arranged for the entertainment of Grand Lodge, which now represents 60,000 Master Masons of Ontario. The chairmen of the various sub-committees are: Reception, R. W. Bro. R. V. Mathews; finance, R. W. Bro. James Dixon; entertainment, R. W. Bro. Lyman Lee; billeting, W. Bro. J. H. Schrader. The chairman of the general committee is W. Bro. S. H. Lees, and the secretary, Bro. Fred McBeth.

Central Bureau.

Notices of motion are many and interesting. One provides that in every Masonic district, where there are more than twelve lodges having concurrent jurisdiction, there shall be established a central Masonic bureau to which all application for initiation and for affiliation shall be reported.

R. W. Bro. W. J. Martin, D.D.G.M. of Penetanguishene has forwarded this amendment: 'That every brother, after receiving his third degree, must prove his proficiency in this degree, and that the same shall be placed on record in the secretary's books, and notice of the same be sent to the grand secretary before the brother is enlisted to his Grand Lodge certificate." At present those receiving third degrees are seldom examined thereafter.

New Officers.

According to the Masonic Sun, many brethren will seek elective positions at the coming communication of the Grand Lodge. W. D. McPherson, grand master, will be succeeded by S. A. Luke, deputy grand master.

For the position of deputy grand master five names are mentioned, viz., R. W. Bros. Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., Belleville; W. H. Wardrope, K.C., Hamilton; A. J. Young, North Bay; W. J. Drope, Grimaby; and Frederick Guest, St. Thomas.

M.W. Bro. E. T. Malone, K.C., of Toronto, will be re-elected grand treasurer.

For the position of grand senior warden apparently there are three aspirants, viz., W. Bros. Geo. Moore, Barton Lodge; W. F. Montague, Electric Lodge; and J. F. Mercer, St. John's Lodge, all of Hamilton. It is the custom to elect brother to the position of grand senior warden in the place where Grand Lodge assembles.

Three Toronto brethren's names are mentioned for the position of grand junior warden, viz.: V. W. Bro. Kenneth J. Dunstan, Ionic Lodge; W. Bros. R. W. Clewlo, C. Rehoboam Lodge; and James G. Cane, Zeta Lodge.

Rt. Rev. W. Bro. W. R. Clark, Bishop of Niagara, of Seymour Lodge, Ancaster, is the only name so far mentioned for the position of grand chaplain.

Among the brethren mentioned for the Board of General Purposes are: R. W. Bros. R. W. Brennan, Toronto; Alex. Cowan, Barrie; W. J. Martin, Penetanguishene; Roger Miller, Ingersoll; D. M. Grant, Huntsville, and others.

GERMANY GREAT HIVE OF INDUSTRY UNDER SPUR OF THE ARMY'S NEEDS

Factories, While Under Private Management, Are Controlled in Operations by Government and Maximum of Efficiency is Obtained.

LONDON, July 15.—Germans are boasting that there has been no munitions crisis in the Central Empire, and that there has been no need for separate Ministers of Munitions as in England and France, and no need for industrial coercion. Everything has been done through individual enterprise — a proof of the elasticity and efficiency of German industry. But a neutral correspondent just returned from Germany tells how the workers there slave under fear of the penalty of being sent to the front by the military authorities, how wages are fixed by the State in munitions factories, and how strikes are unknown.

"It is in the towns," he says, "and particularly in the industrial towns, where one sees how entirely the German nation is organized for war. The organization is not less complete in the rural areas, but its signs and outward effects are merely less obvious. Into these towns an enormous number of men have been drafted from the country to work in the factories, which are humming day and night with activity to keep up the supply of all things necessary for the fighting lines.

'In the general relations between capital and labour there has been a notable amelioration. Indeed, the impression one gains in travelling about Germany is one of absolute, settled industrial peace, but I know this has been secured only because all parties know that the first signs of dissatisfaction would be treated with the utmost rigor of the law.'

"Work for the army has been distributed with closest regard to the capacity, capabilities and character of the various factories, so that the work of adaptation to military needs has been reduced to a minimum. As the German railway system is so efficient, both distribution of raw material and collection of the finished articles are accomplished in perfect order and without delay. I noticed an enormous quantity of roughly-hewn timber lying outside many factories, and I was told that vast quantities of this have been brought from the woods of France.

Men Work Long Hours.

"At some of the largest factories the men often are at work for fifteen, twenty, and even thirty hours, with only short intervals of rest. When they finish work many of them are so worn out that they tramp listlessly home, passing every cafe, passing the latest official bulletin, and showing not the least interest in anything but getting home to sleep.

"Though it is said there are ample stocks of all kinds of ammunition, there is daily and nightly a feverish haste in the factories where this is made.

"At the beginning of the war a small percentage of the men's wages was voluntarily given to a fund for the wives of soldiers who had gone to the front, but owing to the increased prices of food this custom has been abandoned. No deductions now are made from wages except those for insurance which were in force before war time.

"There has been, and still is, a big demand for foreign neutral labour, and at one period there were numbers of Duthmen employed in the less technical sorts of factory and agricultural work. But the Dutchman did not feel comfortable as a workman in Germany in these times and he has returned to Holland in large numbers. He was not of course allowed to work in ammunition or other military factories, where pressure is high and wages very good. He was therefore, cut off from any of the advantages of special war work, and had ot accept the normal wages, which are not sufficient, in view of high food prices, to enable him to live, as well as he lives in his own country.

Government Fixes Wage Scale.

"The German Government has not officially taken over factories. It is well known that all factory owners who want government work can get it, and as this is the most, almost the only, profitable use to which factories can be put just now there is no lack of candidates for recognition as army contractors. Whenever a government contract for work is given out there is a clause which fixes the rates of wages for every grade of workmen, so that any questions of increases that the men might raise are out of the hands of the employer, and he points to the fact that both he and his workmen are in the hands of the State.

"Strikes therefore are unknown; a further deterrent being the knowledge that any man who does not do his utmost without murmuring will quickly be embodied in some regiment des-timed for one of the hottest places at the front.

"In factories where government and there is been competition to obtain work in these places. And men engaged there know almost certainly that, for some time at least, they will not be sent to the front, which seems to be the chief dread underlying all other thoughts and feelings.

"But for the presence of soldiers everywhere—men on leave, men drilling, or convalescents—the impression one would obtain from a tour in Germany would be that the entire nation was at work with tremendous earnestness to achieve the one nphaste in the factories weher this is tional object."

EVANGELIST SHARPE AND PARTY AT THE Y.M.C.A. TO-NIGHT AT 8

Preparing For the Campaign Which Opens Here on Sunday Night

Mr. Patterson, the advance agent of the Sharpe Evangelistic Party, is making excellent progress in the erection of the Big Tabernacle on Hunter street, which is to be used for the coming Laymen's Evangelistic Campaign. The work of erecting will be completed to-day and the interior arrangements, including the seating, lighting and the installation of big electric ceiling fans will be done tomorrow. At the first meeting to be held in this new and novel structure, which will be Sunday night, it will have the appearance of a bright, cool and comfortable summer auditorium.

Peterbrough is to see what Toronto has seen during the past several weeks—an old-fashioned, wide awake, soul-stirring effort for the salvation of those who need Jesus Christ as their saviour.

A very large attendance is expected from the beginning. And, indeed, several Christian laymen of the city have ventured to suggest that the structure now being prepared will not be large enough and that more spacious quarters will have to be secured.

A very important mass meeting of men, which will be of interest to all Christian laymen throughout the city, is to be held at the Y.M.C.A. to-night at eight o'clock, when Evangelist Sharpe and the various members of his party will be present to inspire interest in the coming campaign and to meet those who are interested and to get better acquainted before the big campaign begins.

Peterborough Branch of C.M.B.A. Leads in Injunction Action

Kingston Branch Donates $100.00 to Assist in the Present Movement to Oppose Increase of Insurance Rates.

MR. D. O'CONNELL ACTING

KINGSTON, July 15.—Branch No. 8, C.M.B.A., has voted a grant of $100 to the Peterborough Branch for the purpose of serving an injunction on the Grand Council of the organiation to deter them from putting into effect the increased rates. The Peterborough Branch has secured the services of Mr. D. O'Connell, the celebrated Catholic lawyer, and it is likely that there will be a merry fight in the courts over the increased rates. It is stated that at a recent meeting of the local branch the feeling was that the amount asked for by the Peterborough Branch should be sent at once and this was done. There was some discussion with the publishing of the monthly official organ of the organization which is called the "Canadian," and the members felt that the printing of a new constitution was also unnecessary at the present time.

Rumour has it that the ground on which the Peterborough Branch will fight is that the Grand Council increased the assessment of the members, especially the older members, without proper authority. It is stated that an auditing of all the books will be asked for as the members want to know just how the association stands financially and where all the finances have gone. Peterborough is being assisted by nearly all the branches in Ontario.

ACCIDENTAL DROWNING

LINDSAY, July 16.—At the inquest held yesterday before Coroner D. F. Blanchard to enquire into the cause of the death of John Martin, who was drowned in the River Scugog near the Riverside cemetery, the jury returned a verdict to the affect that the deceased came to his death from drowning, which was accidental.

French scientists have demonstrated that the opera of iodine and bromine pass through thin glass, even at ordinary temperatures.

SUBMERGED LOGS DANGER TO DIVERS

One Boy Received Gash That Required Several Stitches—Logs That Float Below the Surface

While diving in the lake a few days ago a Rink street boy struck his head against a submerged log, inflicting a wound that required several stitches. The injury was only a minor one, but the manner in which it occurred is a reminder that a similar accident may happen at any time. In various parts of the lake there are "deadheads," water-soaked logs too heavy to float on the surface. There are many of them and they may be found practically any place. A boy striking his head against one of these logs might sustain a severe injury, and the danger is more or less prevalent in diving. It might be remarked that with a proper swimming place, such obstructions would be removed and a full measure of safety assured, but the swimming place idea was a bloomer. It soared like a rocket and dropped like the stick. The hope of anything being done in this direction is now more remote than ever.

How Lightning Acted on Men

One Man Could Talk But Could Not Move

LINDSAY, July 16.—The three men who were struck by lightning on the 13th of July last are said to be recovering nicely. Francis Costello, who was sitting in the stable when the fluid passed through him is at the home of his father, Mr. Francis Costello, and apparently none the worse of his desperate experience, outside of a slight pain in his breast.

John Gunn has been removed to his home from Mr. Dever's farm, and is improving nicely also.

Mr. Ryan, who was stunned momentarily, is attending to his farm work as usual.

How the fluid effected the men was the peculiar part of the happening. Young Costello was found by his brother sitting with his back against the stable wall just as he was when struck, but unconscious. Mr. Gunn, who was in the act of catching one horse which was restless by the bridle rein when the team was killed, lay on the ground in possession of his faculties, talking about his horses that were dead, but could not raise himself from the ground or move his limbs.

Mr. Ryan was in the stable when knocked down, and behind him stood a horse which was felled to floor, but was uninjured.

The lightning had passed down in front of the horse stable, tearing off the boards, but did not other harm.

ROOSEVELT IS DELIGHTED WITH C.P.R. SERVICE

Special to The Examiner.

[illegible] R. they have a fine service," were the words of Theodore Roosevelt on arrival here yesterday. The former President of the United States is on his way to the Exposition at San Francisco, travelling in a democratic state accompanied only by Mrs. Roosevelt and secretary. When interviewed, he said he was on a holiday trip. When pressed on the world's events he switched the discussion to Rugby football. The ex-President expressed the highest admiration for the way the Canadians have rallied to the call of the Mother Country, saying the sacrifice was great, but all sacrifices were justified if the end was achieved.

Ex-President Roosevelt said he had heard a lot of the Canadians and the Canadian Pacific buildings at the Exposition and would surely visit them. It was his first visit to Western Canada for thirty years and he was delighted with the Canadian Pacific service. Col. Roosevelt remained in Banff yesterday to enjoy the famous sulphur baths and to-day reached Lake Louise, after which he will go through to Seattle over the C. P. R.

GERMANS WOULD INTERFERE WITH HIS SMOKE

Gigot, or never mind what regiment of the French forces fighting "somewhere in France," had received by mail a box of twenty-five real cigars.

Joy of joys, for Gigot had been driven to smoking anything and everything that would burn in a pipe, and at home he always smoked cigars.

"Ah!" he declares. "it's the little things that count here, and in my joy I forgot all about my wet feet, my muddy clothes, the oozing walls of earth about me, and the Germans in their trenches hardly a hundred feet away.

"Well, here's one smoke the Germans won't get," I cried to my corporal. After the posting of the sentinels for the first half of the night, as I was not one of them, I took out the fat, black treasure and sat down to enjoy it in a safe, quiet, corner of the trench, nine feet below the ground. My thoughts were fifty miles away with the dear one in Paris who had so well remembered me.

While I sat there nursing my cigar the other fellows were laughing and talking happy with their own letters and presents, oblivious of all danger. Then suddenly out of the night rushed the ear-splitting noises of a pre-arranged attack by the German trenchmen in front of us, seconded by their own artillery, as is generally the case.

Imagine a volcano rocking the earth just across the street from you, toppling down houses to the accompaniment of vast charges of dynamite, flames that burns the eyes by its brilliancy, acrid smoke that stings the nostrils. Mix these well with thousands of rifles and mitrailleuse bullets—then you have a pre-arranged trench attack.

Couchons!

Well, of course, we were in for it. "The dirty pigs," I grumbled as I carefully laid my cigar in a dry cranny of the wall and jumped for my rifle. No commands are given us in such cases, because words can not be heard. I got to my post, at the opening called the meutrier (murderer), and began pumping bullets as a matter of form, hoping it might be a false alarm. Indeed, I knew the Germans could not well take our trench and I believe they, too, knew it.

Perhaps I was prejudiced, thinking of that cigar spoiling for want of a man to pull it. Anyway, after we had tossed a hundred or so flaming balls along the line of attack so we could see if the Germans dared to leave their trenches for the open, their fire slowly dropped off, to a splutter. Toward ten o'clock it had quite ceased.

"Another Boches stuff," I said to myself, and at a nod from the adjutant we soldiers dropped down from our perches, and there being no wounded to care for I went back to my cigar. I relighted it and set about cleaning my gun, humming the while an old marching-song—I was glad.

Encore! Bis!

Just as my cigar was going good again and I was feeling comfortable, the Boches lit in once more. Practically the same kind of motions were gone through as formerly, but this time we were getting sleepy and did not want to be disturbed.

'Why can't you fellows leave us alone" shouted a fellow near me during a lull. Hardly had he spoken before I sighted the Germans leaping out of their trench opposite. They meant business this time. We quickened our fire, a dozen or more fell, and the rest kept coming, a good two regiments of them. We were out [illegible] with our bayonets, got jabbed in return, clubbed them with our guns, and were clubbed in return; but in the end they took it on the run, and retreated to their second line of trenches, where our artillery pounded them for an hour or so.

The dirty work of war was mine, for the rest of the night. I had to help carry in the wounded and identify the dead, doing it all on my hands and knees or on my stomach, all the while to the tune of Bosch bullets. It was not until breakfast time that I really got around to smoking that cigar. I hope I won't have as much trouble with the other twenty-four.'

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS SOCIAL A BIG SUCCESS

Hundreds of Citizens Attended and Enjoyed Themselves Immensely--Were Also Liberal Toward Cause

The lawn social at the Knights of Columbus grounds last night was largely attended and members of the committee stated to-day that the financial results should be very satisfactory. The club quarters were thrown open and the grounds were prettily lighted with Chinese lanterns. Streamers and flags added to the decorations. The 57th Regimental Band played a fine programme, their presence adding in a large measure to the pleasure of the evening. In the Council Chamber the young people enjoyed dancing and in a general sense the affair was quite successful. The following young ladies sold flowers: Misses Kathleen O'Brien, Bernice Giroux, Mary Galvin, Blanid Giroux and Gertrude McCabe. Members of the Kitchener League had charge of the refreshment booth, Miss Marguerite Clancy, Miss Bernadette Galvin, Mrs. Hartley, Mrs. P. Grady. The committee in charge of the social was composed of Messrs. M. J. Hickey, Dennis Larkin, Cecil Wolfe and Claude Brady. The music for dancing was played by Mr. Jack Davis and was excellent. The social committee desire to thank J. J. Turner and Sons, for hunting; the Y. W. C. A., for the use of chairs; the 57th Regimental Band and Mr. Glidden, the Canadian Kitchener League for their assistance, and F. R. G McPherson for lighting.

One of the members of the Committee stated that a large part of the proceeds would be given to the Kitchener League, and with the remainder it is intended to try to reach the Peterborough men at the front. Remembering Lieut. Gordon Campbell's residence to the battery, it is proposed to send supplies of tobacco, etc., to all the local men with the artillery through Gunner Ambrose Dorris, one of the members of the local Council of the K. of C. at the front.

Police Court

Chas. Johnston, the Finlander who has been seen about the city lately, and has one leg off below the knee, was charged with vagrancy in Police Court this morning. He has been selling shoe laces about the city for a living, and the Chief has had complaints that he would abuse people who refused to buy from him.

Johnston said he did not have any trade and lost his limb at the Hudson Bay Junction, Saskatchewan. He would get out of town at once if allowed to go.

The Magistrate directed the police to see that the accused got out of town at once. He was discharged.

SOMETHING SNAPPED AND BLIND GIRL HAS HER SIGHT RESTORED

Blind from her birth, Maud E. Lincoln, of Marblehead, Mass., secured vision as by a miracle a short time ago, when, to use her own expression, "something snapped" in her head and suddenly she could see.

In all her 21 years she has never learned the sight of the most ordinary thing. Although she could go about the house and perform domestic duties in the dark, the sight of people frightened her and the view of food appalled her.

Hitherto she had been able to distinguish only between light and dark and sometimes between one distinct colour and another. Now she can see distinctly.

Sight came to the right eye as she was putting the dishes in the china closet after the noon meal. Two days later, in the evening, as she sat with her parents, her other eye was uncovered and sight was given to it.

"It is a revelation — from darkness into light," she said as she told her story at her home, "and I am the happiest girl in the world.

"I went to the closet to put up some dishes. Of course there was no light in the closet and it all looked dark to me. The top of my head did not feel good. It hurt. It was as heavy as—as a load of bricks. Thats just the way it felt. I reached up with the dishes. Then suddenly something snapped in my right eye. That is the only way I can describe it—like that." And she snapped her fingers. "Then everything seemed all light and brightness. I did not know what to make of it. I could not realize what had happened. I looked around the room. I ran and looked out of the window. And I could see!"

The Pastor Got Distress Signal From Chemong

Pastor of St. Andrew's Church Made a Late Trip to Succor Two Members of His Flock.

A rather amusing story is being told to-day in connection with St. Andrew's Choir picnic to Chemong, yesterday. The members, in charge of Rev. Jas. Rollins, the Pastor, motored to Chemong, leaving the city at 4 p.m. After spending a couple of hours in a social way, supper was served. And by and by the time came to go home. But two of the flock were missing.

Then a search was begun. Finally, it was admitted that the couple—a fellow and girl—had gone for a sail on the lake. The party waited another hour and finally decided that they could not wait any longer.

Rev. Mr. Rollins, so the story goes, came back to the city with several members in his car and went to bed. His dreams were disturbed at 11.30 by the ringing of the telephone. The worthy Pastor, on answering, found that the call was from Chemong and at the other end of the line was the young man who had missed the returning car.

The Pastor answered the distress signal by boarding his auto and making the trip to Chemong after the young people. The only promise from the couple for the trouble to which they put their minister was that they would attend Church more regularly in future.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

MEETING TO-NIGHT
The Finance Committee of the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Association meets to-night at 8 o'clock at the City Hall.

AN IMPROVEMENT
When the steam roller had finished on Bethune street this morning, there was a greatly improved piece of road between Charlotte and King streets. The city put on considerable filling, which was well rolled into place.

THE SAME COAT
Lindsay's municipal building will not be painted this year. The town council has adopted a tax rate of 37 mills on the dollar and in the face of the high rate the consensus of opinion was that the town hall should wear the same coat of paint for another year.

LATEST SUGGESTION.
The latest suggestion for Chief of the Toronto Fire Department is Mr. Fred Dane, of the Ontario License Commission, formerly a member of the T. and N. O. Board.

CIVIC HOLIDAY
The date of Lindsay's Civic Holiday has been set for August 5th.

TO AID RECRUITING
Mayor Waltern of Hamilton, has announced that the city would discharge all its unmarried laborers and fill their places with married men, to make the single men understand that their country needed them.

Winner of The Name Contest

"Northern Navigator" is Name Selected by Northern Navigation Co.

"The Northern Navigator" is the name selected for the newspaper to be issued daily on the palatial steamers Huronic, Noronic, and Namonic, of the Northern Navigation Company, which leave Sarnia on alternate days for Duluth. More than 10,000 names were submitted by hundreds of contestants and not until every title had been carefully considered by the judges were the prizes announced.

Thomas Humphries, 283 Seward Ave., Detroit, was awarded first prize, a ticket for the cruise from Sarnia to Duluth and return. More than 20 others selected the same name, but Mr. Humphries' title being received first, he was awarded the prize.

"Northern Lights" was selected as the second best title, Frank W. Dove, 706 St. Urbain St., Montreal, Que., was the first to send in the name and received the prize. He will be the Northern Navigation Company's guest on a trip from Sarnia to Port Arthur and Fort William and return. More than 300 others submitted the same title.

Eleven submitted the title, "The Nornavic News," which was selected by the judges as the third best name. The letter from Miss C. M. Leavens, 33 Oakmount Road, Toronto, Ont., was the first to be received and she was awarded third prize, a cruise from Sarnia to Sault Ste. Marie and return.

That there was great interest in the contest which was conducted by H. T. Ewald, advertising manager of the Northern Navigation Company, is apparent from the answers received, letters being sent to Mr. Ewald from all sections of the United States as well as Canada.

"Some of the names were too long," said Mr. Ewald in discussing the titles submitted. "Others were too complicated while several were indicative of the route traversed by the Northern Navigation Company's steamers, but were too difficult to pronounce. Titles such as "From the Vasty Deep," "Osoma," "Passing Pictures," "The Spray," "The Foam," "Danny Dreamer," and "Neptune of the Lakes," were too general. We were greatly surprised when the titles began to run up into the thousands and only wish that it were possible to send three hundred instead of only three on these delightful lake trips as guests of our company."

A Raincoat Was Stolen

William Chorley Pleaded Guilty to the Theft When Arraigned This Morning

William Chorley, who pleaded guilty in Police Court this morning to the theft of a raincoat from the Palace Hotel, was remanded a week for sentence.

On Tuesday evening a young lady, who was attending the Lawn Social at the Sacred Heart Church, left her raincoat at the Palace Hotel until her return. When she went to look for the coat it was gone. Chorley had stolen it. He was arrested yesterday and pleaded guilty this morning.

The prisoner's finger prints will be sent to Ottawa for identification. The Chief will have any former record before the date for sentence. Chorley was a stranger to the city.

Conscription Favoured By Doctor in France

A medical doctor from Parry Sound, writing from France, says: "Conscription should certainly be in force in Canada. In France they have it, and a soldier drunk in the ranks is shot. In Parry Sound we discharged dozens of men for being drunk. In order to get out of the service all they had to do was to get drunk. Then they loafed idly around the town spending the money they had got from the Government. If we cannot defeat Germany on land inside of twelve months, they will have so many submarines as to badly cripple our trade. People here hold no spite at the United States, but look upon President Wilson as a big, defenceless boy waiting to be cuffed by the Kaiser without limit. I am almost ashamed to own the bit of Yankee blood that is in me."—Orillia Packet.

NOT ONLY AS BAD BUT MUCH WORSE

The Prussians Worse To-day Than a Hundred Years Ago

The following interesting letter was recently received and published by the editor of the London Morning Post:

Sir:—Being engaged in the compilation of an important family history, I have recently come across a number of original and unpublished letters, written by Sir Robert Peel when Secretary of the Irish Office, to Lord Whitworth, when he was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Some three weeks after the battle of Waterloo Sir Robert Peel, with two other members of parliament, went over to Paris to see the Allies march in, and the following extract is from a letter entirely in his writing, dated Paris, July 15th, 1815.

Dear Lord Whitworth,—As I owe my trip to Paris in great measure to the kindness and readiness with which you dispensed with my services in Ireland, it is but just that I should give you some account of my proceedings. Cooke, Fitzgerald, and myself left town on Saturday morning last, the 8th inst. Paris is surrounded by the troops of the Allies, and nothing could be more interesting than the present situation of it. The streets are crowded with officers and soldiers of all nations. The English are great favourites, the Prussians held in the greatest detestation; if they had entered Paris alone or if the Crowned Heads had delayed their entry, they (the Prussians) would probably have pillaged Paris; they have taken some pictures from the Louvre. . . . They have demanded the payment of 100,000,000 of francs from the city, and at this moment there are Prussian guards in the house of Rongeux and some other principal bankers, who are held as a sort of hostage for the payment of the contribution.

We drove to-day to the Depot d'Artillerie. We were told by the sentry that we were welcome to see the fusion, but that the Prussians had removed everything which it contained—the sword of Joan of Arc, the knife of Ravaillac, Turenne's sword. I am sorry for this, not on account of the mortification which it will inflict on French vanity, but because I fear the return of the King will be less popular than it would have been if he could have presented entire at least these national monuments and relics, which are exclusively French.

We paid a visit to Denon the other day. He had some Prussians quartered upon him and was very loud in his exclamations against ce bete feroce, as he called Blucher. . . . And believe me, to remain, dear Lord Whitworth, yours most truly,

ROBERT PEEL.

I think at the present time it would be of interest to publish the opinion of the great Robert Peel upon the Prussians of 100 years ago, their behaviour during the present war, showing that they have not only not advanced in their civilzation, but have retrograded.

Yours truly, etc.,
CHARLES J. PHILLIPS.

Good Bill To-morrow In the City League

There will be two good games in the City League series to-morrow. In the 2 o'clock game Manager Art Johnston's Empires will try to stop the winning streak of the East City team. The Empires have a dark horse team up their sleeve and promise to make things interesting for the team across the river. The Empires have been playing good ball and may surprise the fans to-morrow. Manager Fowler's Classics and the Thistles clash in the second battle. The losing team will be practically out of the running, so that it will be a fight for the honours. The Thistles are so anxious to win that they would not permit Huycke to pitch for the All Stars to-day in Lindsay, saving their star heaver for to-morrow. Smythe of the Thistles is slated to pitch to-day against the Scugog team.

CHANDOS WON FROM APSLEY

CHANDOS, July 13—The ball game between Chandos and Apsley was played on Saturday evening last. Mr. met with a very painful accident, when, in the first part of the game he was very badly cut over the left eye by the ball, which rendered him unable to play longer. Apsley team ruled one man out and the game continued with eight men on each side. Mr. C. Smith also happened with an accident by cutting his lip and loosening two of his teeth, but he continued to play. Mr. L. White was umpire; Mr. W. Musgrave, Chandos, Captain; Mr. J. Carrol, Apsley, Captain. Quite a number of ladies were present who did a considerable amount of cheering for their respective sides. The teams lined up as follows:

Chandos—L. Young, c.; A. Bouge, p.; C. Smith, 1st b.; M. Cleary, 2nd b.; P. Tanner, 3rd b.; H. Caldwell, r.f.; F. Tanner, c.f.; and W. Musgrave, l.f.

BASEBALL

The breaking up of the South Michigan League is proving quite a boon to the weak Canadian League clubs, who, are getting a number of the best players from the dead circuit. The Hams are also nabbing players. have the strongest teams at present, will have to be on the qui vive, or they will get left.

Uncle Connie Mack has the proper system. In an off year he sells the high-salaried stars and starts with increased ardor on his old specialty of picking 'em from the bushes and molding real players. It would not be in the least surprising to see the Athletics with a really great team next year. Cornelius McGillicuddy may, like the sun, be eclipsed now and then, but the breaks forth again. The lank Irishman is one of the 99 per cent. pure marvels of the great old game.

TENNIS

Members of the St. Andrew's Tennis Club met some of the Sacred Heart players yesterday afternoon on the latter's grounds. The games were arranged for practice purposes and provide a lot of good practice. St. Andrew's had the top share of the wins, Mr. F. C. Weber being particularly strong for St. Andrew's.

LAWN BOWLING

The first contest for the honour of wearing the fobs took place at the green between the Brightman and Waddell rinks. The score was:

Waddell .. ..0010021123—12
Brightman.. .. ..1103300006—13

The Elliot rink will meet the winning rink to-night and the Dayman rink will meet the winners within two days.

The details for the annual tournament are well under way.

CHRISTY AND TY DIFFER AS TO WHETHER SONS SHOULD PLAY BASEBALL

Star baseball players differ when it comes to being ambitious for their sons.

Christy Mathewson evidently wants Christy, Jr., to follow in his footsteps "Big Six" Christy takes pride in the ability of his youngster to play ball, and encourages him to handle ball and bat.

On the other hand, Ty Cobb says he doesn't want his son to be a ball player. Ty says he hopes Ty Jr. will turn out to be a lawyer or physician.

"I would hate to see a son of mine go through some of the things ball players have to put up with. Baseball is the greatest game in the world, but I do not believe boys should go into it blindly and thinking that it is a bed of roses," says Ty.

Christy and Ty can plan as they will, but the chances are that when little Christy and little Ty grow up they will follow their natural bent.

Four Aged and Wealthy Farmers Arrested For a Deed Committed 47 Years Ago

Away back in 1868 a gang of counterfeiters squatted on a little piece of land near Siam, Iowa. There were five of them, all desperate men, as befitted violators of the law in the days when the west was wild and Iowa was little more than a prairie with a settlement or two here and there.

A cave served as a rendezvous for the gang. They made their crude coins here and plotted for their disposal. But the counterfeiting venture wasn't as profitable as it might have been and the five desperadoes were ready for any game.

One day a confederate in the east brought word that a wealthy cattleman, Nathaniel Smith, was coming into that section to buy cattle and hogs, build immense corrals and fatten the stock for market.

There weren't many railroads in those days. The confederate rode from the nearest steam road on horseback. He pulled up at the cave just before dusk. He knew that in a few minutes, perhaps an hour, the money-laden cattleman would pass that way.

There were few banks at that period. The courier knew that the man would have the money with him.

So the gang lay in wait for the traveller. It was a moonlight night. The men saw a waggon pulled by a slow, plodding ox-team approaching. When it drew up they ran out and stopped the oxen. The cattleman was driving. They pulled him from the seat and murdered him in cold blood. A boy, the cattleman's son, who was with him, they let live for a few minutes.

The men took a chest containing $60,000 from the waggon and carried it into the cave. Then they rolled the body of the cattleman in an old blanket and carried it to an abandoned well a short distance away.

A Deed of Horror.

It happened that a widow, Mrs. next to the piece of land occupied by the gang. Nearby liver her daughter, who had married Jonathan Dark, a member of the gang.

The outcry of the cattleman as he was being murdered carried clear to the widow's house. Maria, the 14-year-old daughter of the widow, heard the noise and ran out into the moonlight. She saw the men passing with the body wrapped in the quilt. A little way down the trail she saw a boy holding an ox-team hitched to a prairie schooner.

One of them left the burying party and hurried over to the waggon. The girl saw the boy get down on his knees and plead for mercy. Then she saw the bandit go to the rear end of the waggon and return with an ax. As the boy knelt there begging for his life the man with the ax struck the lad over the head with it. He dragged the body away and buried it in a crude grave near the cabin.

A few days later the gang mounted their horses and rode away. They did not carry the treasure with them.

That was 47 years ago.

The Treasure Discovered.

A few days back the treasure chest was dug up—the $60,000 intact.

The other day Bates Huntsman, 70 years old; Henry Scribner and John and Henry Damewood, prominent and wealthy farmers, living near Bedford, Iowa, were arrested, charged with complicity in the murder of the stockman who came to buy cattle and hogs in 1868.

The arrests were the direct result of the plans of Samuel Anderson, of Lucas, Iowa, to file suit to recover a fourth part of the buried treasure. Anderson, who owns the land next to the claim occupied by the counterfeiters, claims to have been employed to dig up the treasure 12 years ago, but kept silent about it because he was unable to come to an agreement with the men regarding a division.

The evidence presented by Anderson, which brings in the widow of Collins and her daughter, Maria, was placed before Attorney-General Cossen. He appointed C. A. Robbins to take charge of the investigation and the arrests followed. All defendants are at liberty under bond pending a hearing of the case at Des Moines.

Jesse James Accused.

C. P. Huntsman, a nephew of Bates Huntsman, gave out a new version of the "treasure chest" case at Fresno, Cal., where he is in the real estate business. He declared that Jesse and Frank James and their outlaw band killed Nathaniel Smith and his son.

His uncle and his father, Dr. C. H. Huntsman, an Iowa pioneer, were going to the cabin of a sick woman when they ran into the James gang after the murder had been committed, and escaped with their lives only by agreeing to dispose of the bodies and the loot, according to the story.

Made Her Wash the Quilt.

This story is denied by Maria, who later married a man named Porter, of Quitman, Mo.

"You won't need to connect him with this affair," she is quoted as saying. "You will never know how good he was to me. Often we used to go to sake, keep his name out of this."

Mrs. Porter accuses the counterfeiters' gang and places no credence in the report that the James boys did the deed.

"The night of the murder," said Mrs. Porter, "I was awakened by noises outside. Five men carrying something wrapped in a quilt, were coming down the road. It was moonlight and they soon saw me. They told me that if I ever told what I had seen they would kill me. They put the body in an old shed near the house and then came in and made me wash the quilt.

"In the moonlight I saw a waggon drawn by an ox-team, standing in the road. In the waggon was a chest. I afterward found out that they had buried the chest in a locust grove. The body of a boy who was with the cattle buyer also was buried in a shallow grave near the same spot."

Some time after the murder Mrs. Porter moved to Missouri. Jonathan Dark, she said, becoming fearful lest the secret be revealed, followed her and later was killed by her sister in Mrs. Porter's house.

"Dark became angry because he thought we did not treat him right, and said he would kill me," Mrs. Porter said. "My sister—his wife—took my part, and she reached for his pistol she shot him. Dark died with his head in my lap."

ITALIAN TROOPS DETERMINED TO CARRY BRIDGE AT WHATEVER COST

LONDON, July 16.—A despatch to and most determined in character. Private advices describe the Battle of Isonzo as the greatest fought as yet on the Italian front, the attacks of the Italians being almost incessant and most determined in character. The bridgehead of Goriza has suffered greatly from the bombardment of the Italians, who seem resolute to carry the position at whatever cost in order to develop the operations on the east side of the River Isonzo. The whole front along this line is strewn with thousands of dead. The mountain slopes are also spotted with the bodies of attackers and defenders alike. The new Italian offensive seems to develop all along the front in the Tyrol, Carnia and Trentino. A new device has been adopted by the Austrians. Peaks and high slopes of the mountains have been fortified, and the men are under cover behind rocks and great stones built up all around the peaks. When attacked by great masses from below they blow up these fortified positions so that great boulders roll down on the oncoming enemy like an avalanche.

Capture Austrian Trenches.

The Italians have captured two miles of Austrian trenches in the Carnic Alps, according to a despatch received to-day from Villach, an Austrian town on the River Drave, 51 miles north-west of Laibach.

The Alpine troops, the despatches say, dragged their artillery to the heights near Rosthofl, which is situated at an altitude of 6,400 feet.

The Italians also are said to have captured two important ports south of Gorizia.

A semi-official announcement published in Rome to the effect that when Italy's entrance into the conflict appeared inevitable Austria-Hungary first attempted to make a separate peace with Serbia and then tried to conclude an armistice, which would allow her to remove her troops from the Serbian frontier, is causing a deep impression in Italy.

Although these negotiations only leaked out in the present semi-official announcement, considering the caution of the Italian Foreign Office, it is taken by the Italian press to indicate that the Italian Government possesses the proofs of its assertion.

British Doctor Gains Unique Distinction for Valor

Lieutenant Arthur Martin Leake, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, was the first man to be granted a clasp to his Victoria Cross since the order "For Valor" was instituted in 1856. He gained the coveted distinction during the South African war, through which he served as surgeon-captain in the South African Constabulary. The Cross was awarded for ministering to a wounded man, and also an officer, under heavy fire at Vlakfontein; while engaged in this arduous task, he himself was shot three times. The clasp, which is equivalent to a second Cross, was awarded for conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty during the present campaign, especially near Ezenobobo, where under constant fire, he rescued a number of men who had been badly wounded.

WEST VIRGINIA GAINS BY "DRY" REGIME

Comparative Figures Show Large Falling Off in Arrests Under Prohibition.

Charleston, W. Va., July 15.—Fifty towns and cities of West Virginia have reported to the State Department of Prohibition on the comparative number of arrests for the last two years, the first a "wet" years, the last a "dry" year. The record shows the total number of arrests in 1913-1914 in fifty towns was 14,971, and in 1914-1915 the State's first "dry" year, ending the first day of this month, it was 7,083. The comparative arrests for drunkenness in the two years were 7,619 to 2,730.

Twelve of the fifty towns show more arrests were made in the dry than in the wet years. These towns are Newburg, Keyser, Shepherdstown, East Bank, Clendenin, Elm Grove, Milton Oak Hall, Terra Alta., Alderson, Williamstown and Middlebourne.

Williamstown, Wood county, shows up the worst for prohibition. It is located on the Ohio River at the bridge which crosses the river at Marietta, Ohio. It, therefore, has been made the dumping ground for Marietta "drunks."

The best record for prohibition is shown in Charlestown, where in the last wet year there were 194 arrests, 143 arrests, 143 for drunkenness, while in the first dry year the total arrests were 30, with 14 for drunkenness.

GERMANS OCCUPY TOWN IN THE NORTH OF POLAND

Special to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 16. — Abandoning for the moment their attempt to outflank Warsaw from the south, the Germans, probably under Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who is reported to have said a few days ago that he would shortly astonish the world, have renewed their attack on the Polish capital fro mthe north.

They have not only captured a large number of prisoners south of Kolno, according to the report issued by Berlin to-day, but have occupied Prasnysz, a fortified town 50 miles north of Warsaw, which was taken by von Hindenburg in his great drive from East Prussia last winter, but was retaken by the Russians in their counter-offensive.

This claim is partly confirmed by the Russian official report issued yesterday, which stated that the Russians, in the face of strong German forces, withdrew to their second line of entrenchments.

This move on the part of the Germans has taken the military critics completely by surprise. It was generally supposed that Gen. von Mackensen would, after being strengthened continue his attempt to reach the Lublin-Cholm railway, thus forcing the evacuation of Warsaw. But, as in all their operations, the Germans have done the unexpected. The new offensive will probably be general, and extend from the Baltic around the East Prussian border to the Vistula, west of Warsaw, for all the Russian troops in this section must be kept busy to prevent them from concentrating at the point where the Germans hope to break through.

This is the second time Field Marshal von Hindenburg has tried this last effort, while it freed East Prussia of the Russians, cost the Germans an immense number of men and nearly involved them in disaster owing to the muddy condition of the ground. Now, however, there are only bad roads or lack of roads to contend with, but it is possible that the Germans have built railways to their northern front, as they have done in Central Poland.

Stock Markets

The steel stocks provided the leaders in to-day's market. Bethlehem went from 181 1-2 to 187 1-2 and Crucible completed a movement from 39 to 44 3-8, covering the past few days. To-day opening was 34 3-4 and a ten point rise was completed before three o'clock. The railways were quiet and there was much in the grains. Business on the whole was brisk, especially under the steel flurry.

UNIQUE WAR DEVICES

As might be expected from an inventive nation such as America, Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors are equipped with a number of ingenious devices, which are likely to give many surprises to an enemy. American soldiers wear uniforms which, for the purpose of making an army invisible, are said to excel the khaki of the British or the gray of the Germans. The color is olive-drab, which harmonizes very effectively with most landscapes. Experiments have also been made by painting American gun batteries with vertical stripes of red, blue and yellow. It was found that the stripes at a distance blended with trees and brushwood, making the weapons invisible.

Ingenious devices for disguising warships in time of war are included in America's naval plans. They consist of screens of wood and oilcloth so fixed that they can be lowered overboard and fastened to the ship's side. They cover and hide the guns, and are so painted as exactly to represent some particular vessel of one of the commercial lines plying between New York and Europe. The advantage of these contrivances is that they enable a ship on sighting an enemy of greater power or speed to don a peaceful and innocent guise and escape pursuit.

Uncle Sam has an ingenious plan for guarding his coast by means of a combination of wireless telegraphy and submarines, which it is likely that he will put into execution in the event of war. Roughly, the idea is for numerous submarines to patrol a few miles from the coast and act as advance guards. When a hostile battleship is sighted the underwater craft will send a wireless message to the nearest coast station, which, in turn, will bring American ships to the scene and prepare the shore batteries for action. Providing that sufficient submarines can be secured for this purpose the shores of the United States should prove almost invincible against the ships of a hostile nation.

A FINE BUILDING

The Examiner has to thank Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., who, with Mrs. Turner, is doing "The Panama Exposition," for a postal card picturing the twelve-story "Examiner" building in that city. In size and appearance it rather excels the Examiner building here, but it has the one fault that it is not in Peterborough—the building is better than the site.

Argonne Battle Slackens

LONDON, July 16. — Comparative calm, in the words of the French official report, prevailed along the western battle front to-day, after the fierce engagements in the Argonne early in the week. The accounts of the latest fighting in this region from Paris and Berlin are as contradictory as usual, but it is clear that no great offensive movement has been undertaken by either side, and that there has been no change in the line during the last couple of days of a magnitude that could be observed by a layman.

It is stated by the French War Office that the conflict in the forest has degenerated into a struggle with hand bombs and petards. The only fighting of importance has been in the western outskirts of the Argonne. The Germans have regained a footing in the Beaurain wood, but two other German attacks have been repulsed.

The French troops have seized a line of German trenches at one point in the region of the north of Arras. Elsewhere on the western front, however, the fighting during the last 24 hours has been confined to artillery duels.

Antipon in Canada

Spreading the Fame of the Great British Specific for Rapid Fat-Reduction

The burden of obesity is so distressing and so unprepossessing, and is generally so difficult to get rid of with any degree of permanence, that the introduction to Canada of the famous British Specific Antipon will be welcome in many quarters. The preparation is not unknown here already, but the obstacles in the way of its supply to the general public were necessarily great. All difficulties are now removed.

Ere the important discovery of Antipon the treatment for obesity, or reduction of weight included starvation dietary rules, sweating and purging, together with mineral druggings. All these things are weakening in the extreme, and, when obstinately persisted in, ruinous to the constitution. Antipon is diametrically opposed to such drastic methods.

To expel the superfluous fatty matter from the system is all very well, but the body must be amply nourished at the same time. Now, Antipon not only rapidly eliminates the excess of fat, but overcomes the unfortunate tendency to "run to fat." Ample wholesome food therefore becomes Antipon's strength-giving ally, and there is no need to dread that the extra nourishment taken will bring about a re-development of excessive fatty tissue.

Every dose of Antipon is a sure step in the direction of the recovery of beauty of form and vigorous nervous energy.

The decrease of weight is not a tedious process. Within twenty-four hours of the first dose there is a reduction varying, according to individual condition, between 8 oz. to 2 lbs. The scales will be the unerring recorder. The daily decrease is eminently satisfactory. When normal weight and symmetrical proportions are regained the treatment is no longer necessary.

Antipon contains only the most harmless vegetable substances in solution, the liquid being in appearance like a light red wine. It is palatable, refreshing and slightly tart, and never occasions any unpleasant reactionary effects.

Antipon can be obtained at all drug stores, from stock or to order; or in case of any difficulty, a large case will be forwarded direct from the Antipon Laboratories, Store Street, London, W.C., Eng., carriage paid, on receipt of remittance for 6 dols. 11c.

Austro-Germans Are To Concentrate Efforts on Warsaw

Lloyd-George Appeals To Miners To Go Back To Work

Germans Are Now Moving Two Huge Armies To Crush City of Warsaw

Only Four British Vessels Sunk by Submarines This Week---Big German Munition Depot Destroyed.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

GENEVA, Switzerland, July 17.—The German Government has taken drastic measures to suppress socialistic activities all over the Empire.

PETROGRAD, July 17.—The Germans are now moving two huge armies to crush Warsaw from the flanks.

PARIS, July 17.—A big German munition depot at Channy was attacked and destroyed by the Allies' airmen.

OTTAWA, July 17.—At a recruiting meeting Sir Wilfrid Laurier said it was the young man's privilege to answer the call to enlist.

LONDON, July 17.—Borden and Hughes will review Canadian troops at Shorncliffe.

LONDON, July 17.—The British navy has apparently chased German submarines. Only four British ships have been lost by submarines this week.

WINNIPEG, July 17. — The Manitoba elections are officially called for August 6.

LONDON, July 17.—In refutation of the German statement claiming victory in Argonne, the French War Office last night stated that German gains at no point exceeded 400 yards. Hill No. 235, which they occupied, has been recaptured by the British.

LONDON, July 17.—Despatches from Berlin say Roumania has emphatically refused to comply with Germany's demand to allow weapons and ammunition to traverse Roumania for Turkey.

PETROGRAD, July 17.—Semi-official statements show that Austro-German forces have been unable to penetrate further toward Warsaw, though there has been a slight success on the Dniester.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—German spy letters received this afternoon say that Americans will continue to lose their lives till shipping of munitions from the United States to the Allies is stopped.

PARIS, July 17.—French gains to-day gave the Allies the command of several roads leading to the Rhine, and a general advance is expected shortly.

LONDON, Eng., July 17.—With further gains announced last night it is apparent that the Allies are in possession of nearly all the German Kameroon colonies.

NO UNEMPLOYMENT NOW IN GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, July 16.—Unemployment having virtually disappeared throughout the United Kingdom, Mr. Edwin Samuel Montagu, financial secretary to the Treasury, asked and was granted leave in the House of Commons Thursday to withdraw the vote of $1,250,000 for works to be carried out in the relief of the unemployed.

This vote is an annual one, made in anticipation of a large number of men being thrown out of employment during any period of the year.

ROUMANIA IS HELPING THE ALLIES

LONDON, July 17.—A despatch to The Daily News from Rotterdam says,

According to information from Berlin, matters as to the Balkans are approaching a climax. Growing fear, especially as to the attitude of Roumania, is finding expression in covert threats as to what the Central Powers may do if that State does not allow the passage of arms and ammunition to the Turks. Continued refusal to permit munitions to pass is endangering the position of the Turkish army in the Dardanelles, and two important journals have declared, the Allies' success there would decide the whole war.

WHAT ROUMANIA EXPECTS.

Manifestation in favor of protest against threats to Roumania is uttered by The Verveerts, which says.

"Roumania remains firm in her refusal to allow the transport of weapons and ammunition. Excitement over the matter is easily understood. On the free passage of transports between the Central Powers and Turkey depends the fate of the Dardanelles. That is the greatest danger which threatens the defenders, and on the fate of the Dardanelles depends the fate of Constantinople. To-day this is the corner stone of politics carried on by the Central Powers.

"Roumania's obstinate refusal is based on the determination not to allow the opportunity of the world's war to pass unusued. As in the second Balkan war, it will now, with the least possible expenditure of money and blood, obtain the highest profits. But firm opposition must be raised against the attempts in certain quarters here to beat down Roumania by the application of the principle of Clausewitz.

ENGLAND AND SWEDEN.

"As to other means of following up the recommendation of the policy what words would the people of Germany use if England attempted to force Sweden to allow transports of ammunition and weapons or even machines? But the same words would be of exact application if the Central Powers were to attack Roumania."

"Lusitania Was Torpedoed With The Intention of Destroying Human Life"

Finding of Lord Mersey Who Presided at Board of Trade Inquiry Into Lusitania Disaster---Carried Nothing In Violation of United States Law.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, July 17.—That the Lusitania was torpedoed, "not merely with the intention of sinking the ship, but also of destroying human lives," was the official finding yesterday, of Lord Mersey, who presided at the Board of Trade inquiry.

Lord Mersey held that the German charge that the Lusitania was armed, that she carried masked guns and trained gunners, and that she was being used as troops transport, had been proven utterly untrue.

"The Lusitania, the evidence showed, carried a number of cases of cartridges, which were duly manifested, but no other explosives," read the official finding.

"She carried nothing which might have been construed as in violation of the United States law."

Lord Mersey further found that the liner was torpedoed without warning, and that none of the passengers were given the slightest opportunity to escape.

Captain Turner, of the Lusitania, Lord Mersey said, did not follow the Admiralty's wireless instructions in certain respects. But he expressed serious doubts if the liner could have escaped destruction if the Admiralty's advice had been followed to the letter. He declared that the sinking of the Lusitania should not be attributed to the fact that Captain Turner did not follow the Admiralty's directions.

"The advice given him by the Admiralty was not obligatory nor intended to deprive him of the right to exercise his own judgment," Lord Mersey said. "The blame for this cruel destruction of life must rest solely with those who exploited and committed the crime."

Lord Mersey said he thought everything possible had been done to get out the liner's boats and save the lives of the passengers. The stories of some witnesses about leaky boats and inefficiency of the crew in putting the boats over were in most instances held to be unfounded.

The Admiralty also was absolved of all blame by Lord Mersey. He declared the Admiralty officials devoted the greatest thought and care to the submarine peril, and had deligently collected all information to safeguard the Lusitania on its trip. This information, he said, was imparted to Captain Turner in belief that it would enable him to avert all submarine danger. The fact that the Cunard Company had ordered some of the boilers closed down, Lord Mersey also held was insignificant.

GERMANY AT THE HAGUE AND NOW.

LONDON, July 16.—"Let us recall that the exportation of arms and munitions was declared licit by The Hague conventions at the express demand of Germany. No international regulation, therefore, prevents the Austro-Germans from procuring war material from the United States."

This is the editorial comment of the Presse on the Austro-Hungarian note to America.

LLOYD GEORGE WILL MAKE APPEAL TO MINERS TO RETURN TO WORK

LONDON, July 17.—The Minister of Munitions Lloyd George will make a personal appeal to the South Wales coal miners to return to work if to-day's conferences do not result, in a strike which is seriously hindering the output of war muntions.

Lloyd George plans to go to Cardiff to-morrow. He will appeal to the patriotism of his fellow-countrymen and urge them to return to the mines pending arrangements for arbitration. Mass meetings were held all over the South Wales district last night. Even if delegates reach a settlement at the conference with President Walter Runciman of the Board of Trade to-day, it is unlikely that work will be resumed for several days.

LONDON, July 17.—Forty thousand women dressed in red, white and blue, colours of the Union Jack and of France, participated this afternoon in the greatest Suffragette demonstration in England since the days of militantism. Accompanied by 75 brass bands they marched from the Thames to Trafalgar Square in a patriotic procession to prove to the Government that women are ready to do their bit to help Britain win the war.

Forty-Four British and French War Ships Are Patrolling Atlantic

So Says Sir Walter E. Davidson, Governor of Newfoundland—It is Believed They Will Be Effective in Keeping Off German Submarines.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 16.—Provision for an effective patrol of the ocean areas around the east coast has been taken by the military and naval authorities of Canada and Newfoundland, with a view to preventing the Germans from establishing submarine bases in these regions should they have any intention of so doing.

Recent reports in the Canadian and American press that the Germans were planning to extend the range of the activities of their undersea vessels to this side of the Atlantic, and particularly to the St. Lawrence route, have been taken seriously here and on the mainland.

At the present time of course, the east coast of Newfoundland and the seaboard of Labrador are felt to be comparatively secure because there is such a quantity of field ice in the North Atlantic that submarine craft probably would not venture into these waters and if they completed a landing it is thought that it would be on the Canadian seaboard. Later the same waters will be filled with fishing vessels on the Grand Banks and a vast number of smaller boats operating from all parts of the coast of this island or cruising along the Labrador seaboard. The authorities have confidence in the vigilance of these vessels to make difficult the approach of submarines.

Governor Sir Walter E. Davidson is authority for the statement that in all forty-four British and French war ships are patrolling the North Atlantic, occasionally stopping off American seaports when there are rumours that German or Austrian ships may leave them. It is stated that this latter contingency is so remote that probably all these patrolling ships would be released for scouting against German submarines at the first alarm that submarines were making their way across the ocean.

HOLLAND IS PREPARING

Increase in Navy and Creation o Air Fleet Significant.

THE HAGUE, July 17.—The Dutch Parliament to-day took decisive action in support of a programme for a larger navy. The second chamber passed the Governments bill authorizing the immediate construction of two 7,000 ton cruisers and four 800 ton submarines, and appropriating $11,200,000 for that purpose. A second bill appropriating $30,000 for the purchase of naval hydroplanes, was passed by a large majority. The chamber also authorized the Government to keep the army under colours and ready to resist any attempted violation of Dutch neutrality.

Several speakers declared that the increase at this time was only an emergency measure and that the war had proved Holland must begin the construction of a navy commensurate with her position among the European powers. They suggested that the Government await the outcome of the war before deciding whether Dreadnoughts or submarines should be made the basis of Holland's new navy.

Ex-President Roosevelt Delighted With the Canadian Rockies.

CALGARY, Alta., July 16.—Remaining all day steadfast to his declaration not to make a speech, Theodore Roosevelt broke it this evening, when in answer to the clamor of hundreds of people who gathered at the depot at Banff to see him depart for Lake Louise, he made a brief speech from the rear of the observation car, stating that the scenery of the Canadian Rockies was some of the finest he had ever seen. He wished he had known of it earlier in life, for he would have come then. Sight-seers who gave any thought to the sentiment "see America first," should, if they know more of the Canadian mountains playground, make their way here instead of going abroad. In all his travels he had only seen one place to surpass Banff in bauty and that was in South America, and inaccessible. As the train pulled out the Colonel remained standing on the rear of the car waving his hand to the crowd.

Mr. Gordon Bury, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific, reached Banff before the departure of ex-President Roosevelt.

GIVE BABIES PLENTY OF AIR

Babies should live in a room full of sunshine and air. It must be well ventilated but never drafty, and the thermometer during the day should register from 68 to 70.

Of course the baby must be kept warmly covered but by no means with covers of any weight. Soft lightweight blankets and, if possible, of down or flees, as the latter gives a sense of warmth without any weight. Fresh air is necessary, quantities of it, and a regular diet for the baby, and the same for the older children.

THIRST QUENCHERS

Many Satisfying Drinks Made From Montserrat Lime Juice

Within the pale, yellow peel of a fresh cultivated Lime is one of the most fascinating juices that ever tempted the palate of thirsty souls.

On a blistering hot day, when the whole body is relaxed wih heat, half a wineglass of Montserrat Lime Juice a little sugar and broken ice in a glass of water, makes a summer drink that will linger in the memory.

Good wine cannot be made from wild grapes, neither can a wholesome palatable juice be pressed from wild Limes.

Montserrat Lime Juice is made from cultivated Limes, and the juice is wholesome, refreshing and palatable.

The Emperor Franz Josef Seriously Ill

ROME, July 17.—Emperor Franz Josef, of Austria, is seriously ill, according to the newspaper, the Idea Nazionale, which declared to-day it received its information from most reliable sources.

Poached Eggs With Cheese.

Melt two level tablespoons of butter, add two level tablespoons of flour, stir until smooth, add one cupful of milk. Stir and cook until thick and creamy. Season with salt and pepper and one-half cup of grated cheese. Stir until cheese melts. Poach four eggs carefully in salted water, arrange on buttered rounds of toast and pour cream sauce around them, garnish and serve.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment lessens the severity and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

Dipping in a strong solution of alum will give new life to old hair brushes.

Straight, Lank Hair No Longer Necessary

(Guide to Beauty.)

A simple and harmless fluid, hitherto little used for the purpose, has proved so wonderfully effective in quickly turning straight hair beautifully wavy, it bids fair to become "all the rage." You may be surprised to learn that this product is nothing more than plain liquid glycerine. More surprised, still, when you see how prettily it dries in the most natural looking curls, swirls and ringlets you could wish for. It makes a fine dressing for the hair, too, keeping it so soft and lustrous.

A few ounces of liquid glycerine, which can of course be found in any druggists, will keep the hair curly for weeks. It is neither curly nor greasy, but quite pleasant to use. It should be applied at night with a clean tooth brush—a perfect lily lovely wave and curliness will be in evidence in the morning. Best of all, lost who acquires the glycerine habit need never again resort to the barbarous curling iron.

To Restore an Old Black Leather Bag.

Buy a tube of ivory-black oil paint and apply it to the bag by rubbing it in. A piece of an old black stocking is excellent for the purpose. Let the bag stand for a couple of days, then examine it, to see if all worn places are well covered; then polish with Turkish towelling or old flannel.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Well, by joggin' him up with questions from time to time, I finally managed to worm out of him that what little time his father spent at home was spent in listenin' to part of what his mother had to say. He said his mother was an unusually gifted woman, but that she wanted to control everything in the world, and she was generally too busy to listen to suggestions.

It seems that after a fair trial of his father, his mother didn't wish to have any more males in that family and had expressed her desires in prayer; after which she had thought the whole affair settled and had schemed out her daughter's life from one end to the other. When Tom Smith arrived, his mother was indignant about it for a full year, and then as he had been a pretty baby, she thought she could compromise by raisin' him up as girlish as possible, makin' him keep his finger-nails clean, and wear white collars and shoes all the year round. She had also risked his future by tackin' the name of Lester Percival, on to his own, which I told him pointed at the beginnin'. I didn't want to hear.

"Is Lester Percival your regular, wished-on name?" sez I.

"It is," sez he with sadness, "and she wasn't content with callin' Percy, neither; she called me lovey, and darlin' and similar titles with sticky frostin' on 'em."

"There ain't no crimes on your head, boy," sez I; "and I'll stick to this even though you slew both parents before leavin' home."

Well, his whole childhood, or what was meant to be one, was just on this level. He was so loaded down with don'ts that he couldn't work around to the do's until it was time to take his four o'clock tea, and his mother was more of a pest to him than Moses was to the Children of Israel.

If you get up on a divide, you can see how the water wobbled before decidin' which way it'd flow, and sometimes nothin' but a small stone was enough to give the final touch. It's about the same with life. The day that Percy found a paper novel about how Gerald the Boy Avenger had wiped out a tribe of Injuns merely for torturin' his beloved parents was the turnin' point in Percy's life, and from that on he glowed with thoughts which were all his own.

He possessed a brace of parents which he was perfectly willin' to furnish to any Injun tribe which would guarantee a thorough job; but he was noble about it, and was determined that just as soon as the parents were beyond any chance of a recall, he would feel the blood-call, the same as Gerald had done, and would feed that tribe of Injuns to the wolves one at a time but no suspenseful delays between meals.

He had [illegible] double life: one life was open to the gaze of his ma, and it was black velvety, white collary, and curlful, the other life was practised before a lookin'-glass, and it was bloody and horrible. He read all the gory lies he could lay hold of, and lived 'em as far as was in his power. His mother was opposed to his playin' with other kids, and so he had to use her for a dummy enemy unbeknownst to her. She never sat down by a rose-bush without him wriggolin' up behind her and pointin' a stick at one after another of her vitals, and when she'd be gone to some meetin' or other, he'd be improvin' his time by stabbin' newspapers with paper-knives.

He didn't even have the public school as a safety-valve, but had been private tutored by a dreary and respectable old hen who had the idea that marriage was the main difference between old maids and mothers. Curiosity, like as not, had led her into marriage; but she didn't have any children of her own, and she had so much loose time on her hands in which to repent of the evil ways of her husband, that she had jumped at the chance of gettin' back to her old job of kid-herdin' once more—and she did it cheap and thorough, she was so pleased.

When she had been a regular teacher, she had wrangled a large-sized bunch, and from what Tom Smith informed on her, she wasn't much given to bawlin' out for help; so when she had her gift for discipline concentrated down on just one child, it was sure strong enough to take the hair off, and Percy had been more than willin' to turn her into the Injun tribe for good measure.

He owned up that his mother had thought a heap of him and had given him what she estimated to be every possible opportunity; but when he was fifteen years old she sent him to dancin' school and he never returned. He had been hoardin' up his pennies for a long time and he had used consid'able skill in gettin' hold of 'em. His mother was treasurer for a Sunday School, a missionary society, some sort of a drinkin' club, and several other ventures, and she kept the funds of each one in a separate bag and Percy had found out where she cached 'em, had elected himself to be an honorary heathen, and had assumed the responsibility of a tol'able fair portion o' these profits. When mamma had tested out his camel's back by layin' on the last straw in the shape o' dancin' lessons, he wasn't nowise surprised nor downcast to hear the back crack with a loud report.

Takin' this booty was his first step in bein' an outlaw, and tendin' to his private tutor was the second. He had been savin' up some eggs in a warm spot for just this purpose and when he was all ready to leave, he snuck around to her back fence and pelted her with them; and Tom Smith told me out and open that nothin' in his whole life had ever give him such a deep and holy joy.

When a lost calf or a wanderin' colt drifts into another herd, they're not set upon and abused as though they were stealin' the air right out of decent folks' nostrils; but a stray human gets his, good and plenty. Percy wasn't altogether fitted to rustle for himself, and by the time he had learned how to feast on a crust and to fast with dignity, his soul was so full of callous spots it didn't do true feelin' —sure it works that a-way, the same as fingers lose their fine sense o' touch when they get covered with nutmeg-graters.

He had been wronged in so many ways that his sense o' justice bobbed about like a can in a whirlpool, and he generally guessed the wrong answer. Ya see, he'd never been played with, so when a joke was handed to him, the only come-back he knew was to sink his teeth into the hand that was woolin' him—the same as a poor-handled pup is likely to do.

Still, somehow, somewhere, Percy had picked up a streak o' sand and it kept gettin' broader and deeper the more he was rawhided. He fought 'em just as they came until he finally wound up at a livery stable in Omaha. I could sympathise with him there, all right, for time was when I had had a big imaginary Injun fight in an Omaha restaurant.

Monody had told me all I wanted to know about him from that on, so I broke into his tale and sez: "Now, Tom Smith, if wasn't low-down meanness that was workin' out of you, it was just human nature, and I don't blame you a mite. I've heard in a general way about Welchy's gang, and the Panhandle Kid, and I don't want to know any of the names you've gone by the the West, except just Tom Smith. I'm not so soul-stingy, understand, that I wouldn't cash in a lie when I can buy the same result with the truth. I'd like to know something more about Panther Emmons, and also what it is that flatters you into thinkin' that the government is still anxious to have a little talk with you."

"Panther Emmons is treacherous and low-down," sez Tom Smith. "He and Welchy were of the same breed, but Welchy didn't have as long fangs nor as good nerve as Panther. The Stern boys were of a different stripe; they never wanted to commit nothin' unless the' seemed risk enough to sort o' justify the law-breakin', and this was about the reason why the gang split up. Buck Stern and Panther had it out one day, and Panther was showed up to be a coward. He swore that he'd have all the Sterns put behind the bars or made to dance on air, but at that time he looked upon me as bein' nothin' but a joke.

"After I had called Welchy, and had ordered him out o' the country, me and the Sterns threw in together. I was the quickest on the draw, and the quickest to think out plans, and fear and persecution had made me so reckless when things came to a crisis that they picked me out to be leader."

"Tom Smith," sez I, "I've seen you draw twice, and neither time was I able to tell where you drew from. I've practised drawin', myself, and allus counted myself something extra, so this has worried me a lot. Would you mind drawin' again, just to amuse me."

He was wearin' a vest over his flannel shirt, and he had a gun on his left hip. We had been sittin' on opposite sides of the little fire while we talked, and now he stood up before me and I stood up facin' him. He held both hands in front of him, spread wide apart and at about the level of his belt. Then he suddenly threw up his left arm across his forehead as though to ward off a blow and I found myself lookin' into the muzzle of a forty-five held in his right hand. I took off my hat and bowed to him.

"Did you see where I got it from?" sez he.

"No," sez I, "I didn't; but I know where you got it from—under your left arm. What I can't see, though, is how you got it so quick."

He opened his vest, which was too large for him, and showed me a long slit in his shirt with a flap which would guide his hand. Then he showed me his holster which was clever. A spring went around the cylinder, so that there was only one motion and no liftin' of the elbow; just a straight jerk and his gun was in the game.

"If I hadn't held my arm agin' my own so you wouldn't feel it," sez he, "you wouldn't have found it so easy to tie me in your shack that mornin'."

"Just plain vanity is what has got you into most o' your trouble," sez I, "and if it will do you any hestin' good, why, I stand ready to tie you again, right now, just to show you that it's a good like mine is better'n a good little one."

He sized me over and grinned. "I think I'll just keep my opinion," sez he, "without puttin' it to the test, but I'll match up with you on off-hand and incidental shootin' at any time you're curious in that direction."

We couldn't experiment right then, but afterward we tried shootin' from the hip and with arms bent and straight, and after whirlin' around and in a lot of other ways, and he had it over me a shade. I hadn't got to near my best shootin' at that time, though I wouldn't have believed it then; but even as it was, he only had it over me a shade, and he admitted I was about the best he had ever tried out.

"Well," 'sez he, after we'd settled down again and I'd steered him back to his yarn, "the responsibility of bein' leader was the most maturin' event in my whole life, and I own up that I'm considerable figgerin'. We never does give up a trail, and if while even an express company gets tired after a time, the government never dos give up a trail, and it takes good business judgment to be even a successful outlaw. After we'd made a good haul, we used to fix a meetin'-place and date and then separate, and some o' the crimes that gave us the most and the worst advertisin', took place while we were livin' the most respectable lives possible in some little old dead corner where nothin' was ever likely to happen.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Snake in the Image.

"THEY mean business this time," Drake growled as they did their best to barricade the single door and window. "I believe those hills are full of them."

"And our own bullies aren't up fighting with good grace, either," Wilkerson confessed. "These half whites have no sand."

"It's an odd thing," Drake said when the afternoon had passed without an assault, "that we hear firing, but none of it is directed at us."

"That's so," Wilkerson responded thoughtfully. "I wonder who it can be?"

He was soon to know, for after nightfall John Dorr and his single attendant rode furiously up to the hut and tried for admittance.

A few scattering shots told that they had been discerned in their flight.

For the moment Wilkerson did not recognize his old enemy, disguised as he was in native costume, but when he was sure he reluctantly opened the door and admitted him.

John flung himself inside and jammed the door to just as a second hail of bullets rattled on its surface. Then he stared at the man opposite him.

"Wilkerson!" he gasped.

"Yes, it's me," was the snarling response. "What are you doing here?"

"Some hillmen took us for enemies and chased us pretty much all day long," Dorr explained. "We saw this hut, and when it was dark enough to conceal our movements we made for it."

"And now you can make for some other place," Wilkerson said, handling his revolver meaningly.

John laughed.

"I feel myself that the place is too small for both of us. But it's white man against native now. If they get me they'll get you. Our only hope is to stick together now."

"I'll see you dead first!" snarled the other.

But Drake spoke up and silenced him.

"While you two are fighting for the benefit of the servants those hillmen are preparing to assault the hut."

A long look through a crack showed the hillmen closing up about them, and Wilkerson gave in with a bad grace.

He was glad of the help, however, when the firing grew hotter and they were hard pressed in the hut.

The natives proved themselves arrant cowards, and it depended on the three white men to defend the place.

This they did with such success that their assailants slowly withdrew.

"Now is the time for a sortie," said Dorr. "We've got to drive them clean away from here or else we'll be as badly off as ever."

Wilkerson and Drake agreed, and John promptly led them out in a wild rush against the nearest hillmen.

These were so surprised at the boldness of the maneuver that they fled, and soon the coast was clear except for a few too badly wounded to join in their comrades' flight.

Now that the immediate peril was past, Wilkerson and Dorr found themselves again antagonists.

But both were so wearied that by one accord they silently consented to a truce.

Yet Wilkerson could not resist taunting his rival.

"It looks as if you were always a little late," he said, throwing himself back in a settle while John dropped upon a stool by the table.

"I heard you got the idol," John replied in a dull tone.

"Yes, and what was in the idol too!"

Then, despite Drake's gestures of remonstrance, he went on: "I got the deeds and the master key and the idol and the plans Tom Gallon robbed me of. I guess I'm ahead in this game."

John nodded, his fatigue so great that he was unable even to reply.

"I guess that's right," said Wilkerson in an altered tone. "We'll catch a little needed sleep and get away before daylight. Time enough then to talk."

For a little while both men kept their eyes open, watchful each of the other.

Wilkerson was the first to laugh and say: "What's the use? I've got the things and the men to defend them. I'm going to sleep. You'd better do so too. Drake will keep watch."

John nodded carelessly and laid his head on his hands, folded on the table.

A moment later he was asleep, and not long afterward Wilkerson's saturnine visage was turned to the shadowy ceiling.

Drake sat in a corner on the packsacks, his revolver in hand.

The natives slumbered across from him, apparently oblivious of any danger.

When the hut was completely quiet except for the breathing of the sleepers Drake allowed himself to fall into a deep reverie.

Now that the quest was practically ended he had begun to think about his own part in it and reckon on his reward.

Long association with Wilkerson had shown him that he had nothing to expect from him unless by an appeal to his selfishness.

There was but one person who might reward him—the woman they both loved, Jean Darnell.

His mind went back to his first days of acquaintance with her in New York and he seemed again to feel the soft threads of the web she wove about him.

"I'll see you dead first!"

She had found him a young man at the precise point where a woman may either make or mar one for life.

He had been an easy prey for her tigerish desire for a slave. He had spent his little money lavishly upon her, without thought of other reward than to be near her, until Wilkerson had appeared out of the darkness of her past.

Even then he had still been faithful to her, obeyed her every behest, risked life and liberty in her service, even aided Wilkerson in an endeavor whose success meant that he (Drake) would be cast aside as no longer useful.

And now he sat on guard in a hut in a far country among a crowd of aliens whose very tongue was gibberish to his ears.

On guard for whom? For what?

That Wilkerson might finally succeed and win Jean Darnell of the tawny eyes and luxuriant beauty.

In that moment—was it to be too late?—Drake came into his own.

The mine and its wealth were as much his as Wilkerson's.

The plans were his as much as Wilkerson's.

Yet the man asleep on the settle had taken everything to himself and would continue to do so.

And Jean?

Drake laughed silently.

He knew her price. He remembered his last conversations with her, those half confidential talks when she had instinctingly warned him to keep a watchful eye on Wilkerson.

He had been given to understand that it was the gold she wished. And he (Drake) had the key to that gold in his own keeping for the while.

He set his teeth when he realized how Wilkerson despised him, had counted him altogether as a mere pawn in the great game.

He had not even troubled to conceal from him the hiding place of the plans!

They were once more within the idol, for Wilkerson had boasted that he had put them back and would leave them there till he reached America again.

He recalled his words: "Let the idol keep 'em for me, just as it did for

He peered around the hut, and, finding all asleep, he set the idol on his knee and bent over it.

He pulled at the eye which he had seen Wilkerson draw out. It came with difficulty. Then he held it up and looked into the dark orifice. There was nothing there.

He was about to throw the idol down in disgust when a glimmer of something bright within the head caught his attention.

He stooped over again and then froze into immobility. The spirit of the vile god was moving within.

The point of light grew into intense brightness. It approached the dark eye socket and glowed therein with frightful fire.

Drake's whole body oozed sweat; his hands clinched unwillingly about the form of the idol. He could not thrust it away.

Then the socket was filled, and the devilish eye bulged outward, phosphorescent, gleaming with wickedness. Drake felt his heart burst in his bosom.

Then the snake that had lain so long hid within the hollow of the image struck forth and, having struck, slipped away.

"God!" whispered Drake, with thickened tongue, and jammed the moving eye back into place.

Then he huddled the idol itself into its bundle, laced the thongs with stiffening fingers.

"God!" he whispered again. Then he fell across the bundle dead, without a sound to waken the sleepers.

It was three hours before the dawn that Harry Wilkerson awoke and looked about him. All the rest were still asleep.

He rose softly and peered out of the window. It was very dark outside, and he could see nothing.

He turned his gaze within and saw Drake huddled over the packs apparently sound asleep.

"The fool!" muttered Wilkerson. "I've got all out of him I want. But I suppose I've got to take him along a way yet."

He resolved to be rid of the young man so soon as he was through with Dorr. Then he paused, in deep thought, his ugly brows knit as the pronounced object of his hatred.

An instant was sufficient for him to make up his mind. He silently went to work and bound John firmly in his seat.

Then he tried to waken Drake. In shaking him he made sufficient noise to stir the natives, and they sat up and stared, sleepy eyed.

But when Wilkerson raised the swollen, discolored face and shrank back with a muttered oath, the natives rose as one and thrust him aside from the door and pushed through, panic stricken.

Only John's servant remained, kept to his post by the fear of Sir Donald's wrath. But he could not repress a gesture of terror.

"It is the god!" he whispered.

At this John wakened and, finding himself bound, struggled violently.

"Not yet!" snarled Wilkerson. "Here's where you stay!"

In the instant Dorr realized his helplessness. He did not even remonstrate when Wilkerson drove his servant out with curses and bade him begone and fired a shot after him for emphasis.

Nor did he speak while Wilkerson hastily chose the pack containing the idol, kicking Drake's body out of the way, and left on the run.

Speech was useless. He stared down at Drake's contorted form. Beside it lay coiled a little serpent, its bright eyes fixed on him, its head weaving to and fro.

Unknowingly Wilkerson had left him not only to famine and thirst, but to sudden death. He bowed his head and cried in agony, "Ruth, Ruth!"

serve two masters."

And the idol lay there wrapped in the bundle under his feet. The price of Jean Darnell!

The thought worked in his mind actively. He could not refrain from following it out to its logical conclusion.

Why should it be Wilkerson who returned with the plans and claimed her? Why should he (Drake) continue to play the slave?

A moment while they slept and the plans were his; then when Wilkerson unsuspectingly presented the idol and pulled out its eye there would be nothing!

It would be George Drake who held the master key to Jean Darnell's avaricious heart.

So he dreamed, open eyed, staring into a future where he played the master and not the slave.

And in his waking dream he touched the bundle and felt beneath the rude covering the hard contours of the image.

Again it ran through his head like a call: You have the price of happiness beneath your hand.

Slowly he yielded to the temptation. Gradually, with eyes constantly fixed on the motionless forms of Wilkerson and Dorr, he got the bundle between his knees; then he unlaced the fastenings tremulously.

The idol came out under his hand, and he stared at it, fascinated by its ugliness and the thought of the secret that it held.

No wonder that at every sight of it natives bowed in abject worship.

It held wealth, power, love, happiness!

He shook it softly. Yes, the plans were still within; he could hear the rustle of the folded papers.

INSTEAD OF MEAT.

The following recipe for curried oatmeal is one of a number given lately in an English magazine, to be substituted for meat dishes, as a war-time economy. The recipe reads as though it might provide a good occasional dish for cold weather use in this country.

The ingredients are a breakfastcupful of oatmeal porridge, a teaspoonful each of made mustard, curry-powder, and chopped chutney, four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, four tablespoonfuls of tomato stewed and put through a sieve, one oz. butter, salt, pepper, and grated onion to taste, browned breadcrumbs. Method —Put the butter into a saucepan, and when hot put in the grated onion — about a teaspoonful —and the curry-powder, and cook for a few minutes. Now add the porridge, which must be thick and as dry as possible, the cheese, tomato puree, mustard, chutney, and seasoning and mix all thoroughly together. Turn into a greased pie-dish, sprinkle the surface with browned crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven. Serve very hot with slices of brown bread and butter.

Kaiser, Descendant of King David

It ought not to surprise anyone, when it is announced that Kaiser Wilhelm claims to be a descendant of King David, the warrior-poet of Israel's brighter days.

More than once he has referred to his position as the annointed one of God, wielding the sword of the Highest, and speaking with the voice of the Omniscient.

We remember, of course, that the old monarchs of France were wont to refer to themselves as cousins of the Almighty — "Les cousins du bon Dieu."

The Kaiser sometimes appears to regard himself as standing in a much closer relationship to the Deity.

He has a reason for this of which few persons, perhaps, are aware. Everybody is familiar with his description of himself as a "divine instrument." It is not, however, so generally known that his belief in the divine origin of his authority is, if not attributable to, at least greatly strengthened by his firm conviction that he is a descendant of David, the son of Jesse, and therefore belongs to the same tribe and the same family as Christ did on the human side. Among his most cherished possessions is a genealogical tree showing this descent.

RINGS IN ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

There is, it is true, a fly in the ointment. It is only through his mother and his grandmother that he can lay claim to the ancient pedigree he covets. To connect him with the "Sweet Singer of Israel" he has to proceed by way of British ancestors. Scotland and Ireland have to be laid under contribution in order to make good his claim.

As students of the Old Testament know, the King of Judah at the time when Nebuchadnezzar captured and destroyed Jerusalem and carried off the people to Babylon was Zedekiah, a younger son of Josiah, a descendant in the direct line of Solomon and his father David. In the Book of Jeremiah it is narrated that Zedekiah's eyes were put out, and that he was taken in chains to Babylon, where he was kept in prison till his death. Nebuchadnezzar, it is also stated, slew all the sons of Zedekiah. But there is no word of the King's daughters, and this gives an opening for the romantic legend on which the Kaiser rests his claim.

The Prophet Jeremiah, then a very old man, succeeded, it is said, in preventing Zedekiah's eldest daughter, the Princess Tephi, and one of her youngest sisters from falling into the hands of the enemy. The three made their escape, accompanied by a few servants, and carried away with them several of the most sacred relics of their ancient race, including the stone which formed Jacob's pillow at Bethel, the Ark of the Covenant, and also Aaron's rod that budded.

After prolonged journeyings by land and sea and many adventures, they reached Ireland. Jacob's pillow, it is traditionally said, now forms the seat of the coronation chair in Westminster Abbey. It is through these survivors that the Kaiser traces his descent, on the maternal side, to King David.

Unfortunately for him, however, if his claim is allowed, King George of Great Britain must also be allowed to rank as a lineal descendant of David and Solomon.

How To Banish Wrinkles Quickly

If your face is disfigured with wrinkles, no matter what the cause, you can quickly dispel every line, even the most obstinate, by using a simple home-made wash lotion. Merely dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel—inexpensive ingredients found in any drugstore. Bathe the face in this, and—presto!—you scarcely believe your own eyes when you look into your mirror, and behold the marvellous transformation!

The remarkable astringent action of the saxolite so tightens the skin, wrinkles are literally pressed out. Best of all this result is not purely temporary, for the lotion also has a healthful tonic action, which tends to strengthen and tone up the weakened tissue, and added benefit may be expected with continued use. Use this once a day for awhile; it cannot injure the most delicate skin, the treatment itself leaves no trace—no one guesses the secret of your increasing youthful appearance.

Two New York inventors have patented machinery to cut coal in a mine, pulverise it and mix it with water and pump it to any desired destination, where it would be dried, the idea being to save costs of handling and transportation.

General Joffre an Absolute Master of Siege War, Such as is Now Being Waged in France

Those who are suffering from depression consequent upon reading the articles in certain pessimistic newspapers may be recommended to take a course of the war lectures which Colonel F. N. Maude, the well-known military critic, if delivering at the Shaftesbury Theatre, London, the first of which was given the other day.

Colonel Maude described General Joffre as a man in a million, and an absolute master of siege war, such as is being waged in France and Flanders. It was a siege of the whole of Germany, and the result was as certain as anything could be if we and our Allies had the will and the resources to continue.

Nobody had ever claimed, said Colonel Maude, that there were more than 8 1-2 millions of Germans who could be put into the field. The French Intelligence Department, who made very exact estimates of losses and published them, stated that up to the last week of June the Germans had sustained a net loss of 4,200,000 men, so that they had not many more than 4,000,000 to hold the two fronts, to say nothing of Italy.

Joffre's strategy kept the Germans in a constant state of agitation as to where he would next attack. There were, he estimated, 120 chances to one in the Generalissimo's favour against the German staff guessing where the supreme blow would fall.

Nobody could prophesy when the war would end, but we held all the trump cards, and when Joffre made his stroke he would ask for a million men, and they would be sent. The longer he delayed the great blow the more appalling would be the disaster to the Germans.

This question of German resources in fighting men is also discussed by another London writer who, in the Chronicle, gives his opinions and calculations in the following two paragraphs. He writes:

Heavy German Casualties.

We know, for instance, that Germany could muster at the outset (minus railwaymen, police, etc.) some eight and a half million combatants all told, and that at the beginning of the year she had about four millions on the two fronts. She had then suffered net losses of about 1,300,000, leaving a margin of only 3,200,000, or deducting inefficients and men over 39 years of age, only two millions. Nearly six months more have passed, for which exact calculations cannot yet be made. The casualty rate has almost certainly increased, for (1) the Germans suffered little in the first month of the war; (2) trench war fare has proved unexpectedly costly; (3) larger numbers have ben engaged (4) we know that the German losses about Les Eparges alone amounted in two months to 30,000 men and at Mesnil and Beausejour alone to 50,000.

The cost o fthe great Galician effort is estimated at between half a million and 600,000 men. We know that the British casualties up to the end of May amount to 256,600 men, which is more than a quarter of the maximum strength reached, and probably three-quarters of the average strength throughout the campaign. These and other facts indicate that the total German casualties up to date, including sick and prisoners, must now amount to about two and a half million men, and that, at the end of the first year of the war, the earlier reserves of four and a half millions will have fallen to less than a million efficient men, and a rather larger number of inefficients.

At the same rate, these will all have been thrown away by the end of the year, and the German armies will then become a rapidly diminishing quantity, a heartbroken remnant of the horde which once thought itself invincible.

In power of producing guns, ammunition, and other necessaries, also, the balance has now passed, or is passing, to the side of the Allies, whose superiority will become more and more marked.

But I repeat, the extremities of bloodshed are not foredoomed. If those who challenged the judgment of the sword will take no other, so be it. It is not our choice.

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Fight or Die—For human beings to kill one another is to my mind the most horrible thing in the world. The fight should be for one another because it is a fact that is obvious to any thinker that life is a continuous warfare. From the first gasping cry the struggle begins and ends only with the last gasp for air.

The advocates of the germ theory of disease have used the microscope too freely and for years they overlooked the greater danger from insects that were everywhere to be found without the aid of the magnifying glass. There is far greater danger to life from fleas, flies and mosquitoes than from the micro-organisms that are found to multiply so rapidly under certain disease conditions. It is found to be the bite of a flea whose natural host is a rat, that causes the bubonic plague. This flea is quite at home on a common squirrel and is not at all bashful when he finds himself next to the warm body of a human being. He is not adverse to using cat that killed the rat, as a means of travel to the home of man where he proceeds to avenge the destruction of his favorite feeding ground.

As a specific proof of the old saying that it's an "ill-wind that blows no good," we could turn back to the Spanish-American war. Since then typhoid fever and malaria have lost most of their terrors and the cholera is fairly well under control, while the present war in Europe will, in all probability, enable man to overcome typhus fever through the permanent destruction of body lice.

Without the carriers of disease the fight for existence would not be so strenuous; without filth, one great army of carriers would be destroyed. The fly breeds in, thrives in and carries filth to your food. Carelessness provides the filth, therefore you must fight carelessness. I have on my desk Farmer's Bulletin No. 671, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C., which tells about "Harvest Mites or Chiggers," several pages of printed and illustrated matter which will tell you what they are and what their life history is, where they thrive most abundantly, what they will do to you, what remedies to use, and how to destroy this irritating enemy. I could make a very good article out of a synopsis of that bulletin but it is better for you to read the bulletin. The department will send one to you for the asking because you have already paid for it in paying your taxes.

Any home can be kept free from rats at a cost of not over 25c per year, and yet it is conservatively estimated that each rat eat sand destroys over $10 worth of grain annually besides affording a breeding place for fleas. Kill the rats. A tablespoonful of dry plaster of paris mixed with two tablespoonfuls of dry corn meal and a teaspoonful of sugar, place in their runways and wheer other animals cannot get at it; then a pan of water near by will kill half a dozen rats, and the rest, if any, will leave.

Drain the ponds, screen the rain barrel, and punch holes in the bottom of all old cans or other things that hold rain water, and you will soon notice the difference in the number of mosquitoes.

Here is an old clipping from Health on "Insect Bites." It's worth repeating: "Stings and bites of insects are extremely dangerous at all times and especially when the system is not in a condition to resist the poison injected. In many insects the nature of the poison has not been ascertained; while in most of them it is of an acid, irritant nature, in others it may contain a powerful cardiac sedative and depressant, and in still others organisms in pure or mixed cultures may be introduced with the sting or bite. Apart from the natural poison used by insects it should not be forgotten that flies and other insects that live on carrion may easily carry contagion and inoculate the persons whom they bite or sting. In the case of ordinary bites or stings the chemical antidote is a strong alkaline solution, such as a strong solution of bicarbonate of soda or potash, which counteracts the acid of the sting. Suction of the wound in all these varieties of stings and bites will draw out some of the poison and until some antitoxine treatment mean be found which will prove an antidote to the bacterial poison introduced little can be done beyond a stimulating and supporting treatment with attention to the symptoms."

Soft Cookies.

Beat two eggs until creamy and gradually beat in a cup and a half of granulated sugar. Then add three tablespoonfuls of sour milk, and a teaspoonful of soda. The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousnes, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique positions. By their combined action on these eliminating organs, they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S ROMPERS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Rompers have become a necessity in this since 2, 4 and 6 years. Medium size the well regulated nursery of all children requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material. They may be used instead of other clothing or may be worn over undershirt and drawers. They should be made of something soft and not thick, and gingham suggests itself as perhaps the best fabric for this purpose. Linen is also used, but it is unnecessarily costly.

The rompers which we show in the accompanying illustration have front and drawers cut in one piece, while in the back the waist and the drawers are separate. There is an opening down the centre of the front and there is one across the waistline in the back. The neck is cut out in square outline and the sleeves are short. The edges of the trousers are straight at the knee.

It is not possible to do much in the way of making rompers ornamental, but plain bias bands of contrasting color are used as trimmings for this purpose and also wash braid.

The rompers pattern, No. 7,258, is cut

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Had "Cholera Infantum."

WAS WASTED TO A SHADOW.

Cholera Infantum is one of the most common summer complaints of infants, and many die who could be saved if taken in hand on the first sign of the trouble. It begins with a profuse diarrhoea, very often accompanied by vomiting, and the matter ejected from the stomach has a bilious appearance. The child rapidly loses flesh and becomes weak and languid.

Mrs. W. Fallis, 455 Jones Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for my three boys, and I do believe it saved their lives. One of them had cholera infantum so bad he was wasted to a shadow, and the doctor had given him up, but 'Dr. Fowler's' cured him. I have also used it myself for colic and find it an excellent remedy. I would not be without it in the house."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the original remedy for the cure of all bowel complaints. It has been on the market for the past 70 years.

THE ENEMY FAILS TO RE-TAKE HILL 285

THE AUSTRIAN ARMY CROSSES THE DNEISTER

DESPERATE ATTEMPTS BY FOE TO RECAPTURE HILL NO. 285

Enemy Tries Twice to Re-take the Much-Fought-For Position, But Both Attempts Were Repulsed by the French ----Violent Cannonading at Different Points on Line

MIDNIGHT SURPRISE ATTACK FAILED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 17.—(Official).—Two desperate attacks by the Germans to recapture Hill 285 in the Argonne region were repulsed, it was announced by the War Office to-day.

Violent cannonading was reported between Neuville and Roclincourt. The bombardment of Eparges and Sonvaux continued all night. The French dispersed a midnight surprise attack south-west of the forest of Parroy.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Apparently with no definite reason for it, officialdom was more optimistic today concerning the German-American outlook.

The general belief seemed to be that Ambassador Bernstorff had given assurances to Secretary Lansing which convinced the latter a satisfactory outcome might be counted on in the pending negotiations between Washington and Berlin.

That Ambassador had urged American mediation between Germany and Britain, in the interests of a modification by the former of her submarine methods and by the latter of her blockade, was known positively though unofficially.

It was recognized that it was for the President to decide whether or not to act on this suggestion.

It was obvious that officials thought the chances were much better than heretofore for continued amicable relations between Germany and the United States, and there were very great hopes of some move which would bring peace in Europe at least a little earlier.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 17.—The Canadian casualties now total 10,256, including 1,767 killed, 6,594 wounded and 1,895 missing.

LONDON, July 16.—Unofficial reports from Athens telling of pronounced progress of the allies in the Dardanelles campaign, are believed to be forerunners of official claims of significant successes.

The British dislodged the Turks from four lines of trenches near Derka Tepe, while the French gained an important success near Krithia. Farther north, on the Gulf of Saros, the British are reported to have landed reinforcements within three hours' march of the town of Gallipoli and behind the large Turkish forces that are opposing the advance of the allies up the peninsula. The last Turkish official bulletin dealing with events of Tuesday night and Wednesday reports having driven off torpedo boats and transports attempting to effect a landing at Ari Burnu. This may have been the earliest stage of the development now reported as accomplished.

Roumania Helps Allies

Very important is the report that Roumania has refused to listen to the German-Austrian demand that she permit munitions to flow through Roumania for the relief of Constantinople. It is believed that the months of hammering at the Dardanelles has reduced the munitions of the defenders to a point where the end is in sight unless means can be found to replenish the exhausted magazines.

The fleet is now enabled to double its participation in the struggle, and is raking the Turkish positions with artillery fire. The Turkish losses of the last six days are estimated to have reached 25,000 men.

DELEGATES OF THE COAL MINERS DID NOT AGREE

Executive Council Held Lengthy Conference But Adjourned Without Accepting the Government's Offer of Arbitration

MEET AGAIN MONDAY

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 17.—The Executive Council of the South Wales coal miners this afternoon adjourned after a lengthy session here without accepting the government's offer of immediate arbitration. The officials would not disclose what occurred in conference, except to say that the delegates had been unable to reach a unanimous agreement. The Council will convene at Cardiff on Monday.

German Plea To Lift The Blockade

WASHINGTON, July 17. — The German suggestion that the United States bring about the elimination of the submarine menace by obtaining through mediation the full observance of international law by both Great Britain and Germany was again laid before the Administration yesterday when Secretary of State Lansing had a half-hour's talk with Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador.

While the conference of the two was nominally about the Nebraskan case for which Germany has expressed regret and promised reparation, the real purpose, at least so far as the Ahbassador was concerned, was the presentation of his views on the last note of the German Government regarding the submarine issue. The Ambassador has regarded this note as a most friendly communication, offering to the United States not only a means of safeguarding the lives of Americans on the high seas, but also an opportunity for the United States to render a supreme service to the belligerents and the neutrals. He presented to Mr. Lansing yesterday his view on the latter aspect of the note at considerable length. Their talk was informal, it being stated that the Ambassador was not speaking by instruction, and that he brough no new proposal from Berlin. On the other hand, Secretary Lansing was not in a position to commit the United States Government in any way. All that the Ambassador said will be reported to the President next week.

The Ambassador's idea is that it is useless to look to Germany to make any concessions which would hamper her in her submarine programme except on the condition that England at least abandon her present efforts to shut off all trade with Germany While believing that the two Governments, United States and Germany, are now in no danger of a rupture over this issue, the Ambassador sees no prospect of Germany meeting the President's demands as they stand today.

He is of the belief, however, that the United States can bring about the abandonment of the submarine operations by securing these concessions from the British. This was the original German suggestion, and to it the Ambassador has now added what is mentioned in the last German note, that is, the proposal that the mediation be carried still further and be directed to the end that all commerce on the high seas shall be absolutely free in time of was as well as in peace.

BIG MILITARY TATTOO MAY BE FEATURE OF FAIR

Directors of Peterborough's Exhibition Meet to Prepare For Annual Event — Many Bands Will Likely Be Here

CONSIDERABLE BUSINESS

A shirt-sleeve meetihg of directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held in the Council Chambers last night. Mr. J. H Garbutt presided with the following members present: Messrs. Geo. A. Gillespie, C. E. Moore, R. Denne, T. H. Hooper, J. Cruikshank, R. Storey, T. Brown, R. M. Glover, Jas. Baptie, A. B. Mann, J. O. Bell, W. Roberts and Secretary Hall. The enthusiasm of the members would find no warmer expression than their presence in the wilting weather of last night. The directors fairly sizzled, but they also transacted considerable business.

A big military tatoo is one of the entertainment suggestions which may materialize. Mr. Glover reported that Mr. Gliddon had discussed it with him and had offered to visit various bands in this district for the purpose of training them in the music which would be played. The present intention is to mass the Peterborough, Lindsay, Port Hope, Norwood and Hastings bands. Mr. Glover has written Lindsay presenting the proposal to the Fair Directors there and suggesting that both Fairs share this plan.

The local directors are considering the idea of only one night entertainment at which the military tatoo would be a feature attraction.

Decorated Auto Parade.

Mr. Brown presented a suggestion which met with general approval. He proposed that a substantial prize be offered for the best decorated automobile proceeding from Central Park to the Exhibition Grounds, the design to be of a patriotic character.

Mr. Denne and Mr. Hooper offered to donate $10 each toward the prize, and it is also proposed to make a patriotic donation. It is expected that the directors will pool subscriptions for this event, the details of which are yet to be decided upon.

To Provide Meals.

Four churches asked for the privilege of serving hot meals on the grounds. They are St. James, All Saints, Park Street Baptist, and George Street Methodist. The latter are newcomers. R. M. Glover moved, seconded by A. B. Mann, that these communications be received, and that the churches be permitted to sell hot meals and be charged one dollar per foot frontage.

Dairy Prizes.

Mr. Gillespie stated that Mr. Ward's silver cup was gone, but he would offer a cash prize this year for the best cheese, white or coloured, made during the first half of August, to be competed for by the factories in his district.

The International Stock Food Company's cup was decided to be given to the best pure-bred cow, any breed and any age, scoring highest points in the dairy test.

Prizes will be offered this year for creamery butter.

Mr. Gillespie agreed to ask the Cheese Board if they intended to donate $15 this year.

Mid-Way Animal Show.

F. M. Londes, Albany, N.Y., offered the same price as last year for the exclusive privilege of a "merry-go-round." Mr. Brown suggested an advance of $5, and the secretary was authorized to offer the concession minus the exclusiveness, for $30.

Frank J. England, of Gibsonville, Ohio, asked the price of a large reptile and animal show, the concession to be 25 foot frontage and 30 feet deep.

Mr. Glover moved that the price for midway concessions, dining tents, etc., be $10 for the first twelve feet of frontage and 50c a foot for each remaining foot. Mr. Moore seconded it.

The charge for other concessions was left for further consideration.

It was decided to write C. H. Wilson, of Brockville to act as poultry judge; Wm. Marr, Cobourg, light horses; Job White, Myrtle, Ont.; R. J. Garbutt, of Belleville, sheep and swine; and others.

Mr. Garbutt said it had been suggested to him that Mr. William H. Ford, of Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto, be obtained as judge of the flowers. It was referred to Mr. Wise.

Joy-riding Party of London, Ont. People Comes to Grief When Car Skids and Upsets in a Ditch.

SPEEDING ON A HILL

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Ont., July 17.—Mrs. W Kemp, aged thirty-nine, wife of the manager of the Helena Costume Co., here, is dead, Marjorie Wright, aged twenty, is probably fatally hurt, and Percy Foster and Ernest Taylor badly injured as a result of an auto in which they were riding upsetting in a ditch early to-day. Foster, who is married, is chafleur for James C Duffield, the millionaire gas man, and was using his employer's car. The party went down a steep hill at terrific speed when the car suddenly skidded and upset.

NEW VEGETABLES AND FRUITS ON MARKET

Small fruits were plentiful on the market this morning. Huckleberries at 2 quarts for 25c.; cherries 10c. a qt.; gooseberries, 10c. a qt.; red and white currants, 10c. a qt.; and so on. Red raspberries were not very plentiful. They were offered at two boxes for 25c.; there were also a few strawberries. It is not very often that one finds strawberries running so late into the raspberry season. New beets, onions, carrots, etc., were sold at three bunches for ten cents.

Butter retailed at 27 and 28 cents; eggs at 22c. and chickens from 50c. a pair up. The market was a fairly large one, and from now on should find a big supply of new produce.

Corp. Colquhoun Writes From Front

"Battery Boys Are Having a Good Time" He States

Corp. Geo. Colquhoun, of the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, C.E.F., writing from France under date of June 29, to his parents here, says:

Dear Mother and Father,—Received letter, parcel and cake O.K, and the tobacco was just the same as if it came out of a case. The cake got a rough package, but it was eaten just the same, and went fine. We are still knocking about France, having a good time. In fact it is not as rough as I thought it would be when we left Canada. We have afternoons off to play ball or do as you like. Some sleep and others write, but our guns are always in action, ready to open fire at a second's notice.

We have lost six boys of the battery since we came out here, and five of them came from Peterborough, and one from Port Hope.

Orillia Town Hall Burned

Special to The Examiner.

ORILLIA, July 17.—Fire broke out in the Opera House and Town Hall this morning at 12.30 and the structure was totally destroyed. The loss is about $25,000, with insurance $18,000. The Council chamber, civic offices, market and opera house were all in the one building, which was erected 2 years ago. Of late the opera house has been used as a moving picture house. All the town records were saved.

DANGER OF FLOOD IS PAST.

Saskatchewan River Began to Fall Early in the Afternoon.

Edmonton, Alta., July 16.—The Saskatchewan River, which threatened another flood last night, started to fall early this afternoon and continued to drop during the evening. As there has been no further rise at Rocky Mountain House, 150 miles up the river, it is believed that all danger of a reoccurrence of the flood of three weeks ago is now over.

Simultaneously With the German Effort in the North the Austrians Have Attacked in South—Fighting in South Poland.

GERMANS AFTER RIGA

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 16—The Austro German armies now appear to be working in concert as the result of the German organization. Simultaneously with the German effort to reach Warsaw or the Russian lines serving that fortress from the north, the Austrians have attacked along the Dneister, and have succeeded in crossing that river at several points. Gen. von Mackensen's army, which doubtless had been waiting for Field Marshal von Hindenburg to move in the north, has also come to life again, and the fighting has been resumed in Southern Poland.

In fact, there is fighting of more or less severity all along the Russian front, except in Central Poland, where the Russians are in such strong positions that, in the opinion of military men, it would be impossible to break through.

The Germans claim to have made further progress with their northern operations, but with the Russians retiring it is not likely that the main forces have clashed as yet. The combined operations are the most gigantic yet undertaken, the aim being according to military experts, to squeeze the Russians out of Warsaw, and the great slice of country which they hold to the north, south and east of that city, and at the same time to attempt an invasion of Bessarabia.

So long as his effort to crush Russia or to break her power of offensive continues there is little possibility, military writers say, of the Germans attempting any important movement in the west, for it is believed that the Austro-Germans will for a long while require all their available troops in the east. Four German army corps, composed of Pomeranians and men from Schleswig, are said to have left Thorn to reinforce Gen. von Hindenburg.

Riga the German Objective.

The correspondent of the Morning Post sends the following from Petrograd:

"The German invasion of Russia is rapidly developing, while the Galician section of the general plan appears to be merely keeping up the routine activity. In another section, that between the Baltic and Lower Vistula, the enemy is moving with force and determination.

"The main strategic objective in DANGEROUS COMPARISON.

The Welland Telegraph in an appeal to pity the sorrows of the Finance Minister, says he has not only to wrestle with the financial problems of the war, but with two costly railways that the Liberals bequeathed him. This is flat failure in statement of fact. The Liberals only bequeathed him one uncompleted railway that was largely completed and paid for out of current revenue. It would be no burden if the Borden Government with the patriotic desire to discredit the Laurier Government had not degraded the construction of the uncompleted part to such an extent that the Grand Trunk Pacific Company looks askance at leasing and operating it. The Canadian Northern is not a gift of the Liberals. It is the adopted child of the Borden Government; and the Government have lavished upon a poorly built railway, millions of the peoples' money, with no prospect of the return of a cent, but a certainty of crushing financial obligations. If the Borden Government journals are wise they will not provoke comparisons between the railway policies and practice of the Laurier and Borden governments. The Borden Government has done its best to kill the Transcontinental Railway as it killed the project of a Canadian navy; in both cases, not with any object of national advantage, but in both cases with the object of purely party gain—to discredit their political opponents and make the country in more ways than one, pay the price of its exploitation of partisan interests.

STREET TREES AND PUBLIC AND PRIVATE RIGHTS AND RELATIONS.

Complaints, of the force of vigorous protests, have been and are being made, by residents in the vicinity of Homewood and Belmont avenues, in respect of the removal of some fine street trees, in the work of preparation for paving on Belmont avenue.

Are such complaints justified? Let us reason out the matter a little. In the first place the law of the land gives the owners of property opposite which they grow, an equal proprietary right in street trees, with the city or the public. This implies equality of moral right and legal and moral obligation. According to law neither of the joint owners can legally deal with these trees without consent of the other.

Is there any regard given to this common right? Not at all. The city authorities, without consultation attack, cut, hack, and destroy street trees not only without the consent, but against the protests, of property and tree owners. The city couldn't be more arbitrary and overbearing in this matter if we were under martial law or under German government.

In fairness and reason should there not be consultation between the city authorities and the owners of the property? We are told that "in the multitude of counsels"—not necessarily councils—"there is safety." By consultation a middle course might be agreed upon that would at once satisfy both public and private interests.

In this connection the question arises of the relation between our aldermen and the public. We elect—or permit them to elect themselves—aldermen to look after and protect our interests. This does not give them the right to work their own will upon the public, without reference to the rights, demands, or protests, of their constituents. Aldermen are elected as the servants, not the masters, of the public, and there should be some practical recognition of the obligations of this relation.

Is there not another ground of complaint? Residents in the vicinity of the destroyed trees, have spent thousands of dollars in building beautiful residence worthy of fine surroundings. The sites may have been, and doubtless were, selected on account of the setting of beautiful trees in the vicinity.

This may easily be a determining factor in the purchase of a home. A lady on Gilmour street was decided in buying a home by the fact that a certain stately elm in front of it had one large limb whose foliage hid an undesirable view. A few days ago the street-tree butchers came along and wished to destroy this limb. She protested and the pair passed on. The lady was seen to leave her house and go down town. The men sneaked back, and when she returned the limb was haggled off, leaving a long ragged stump, though there was no earthly reason for its removal. Was not this an outrage on the rights, and an injury to the interests of a ratepayer, who had had the main reason of her investment in taxable property ruthlessly, and in a sense, wantonly destroyed?

Who is to blame for this matter? Plainly the city authorities, who turn men loose to work their uninformed will upon the property of the public, that is, the collective body of private citizens.

The city authorities may attempt to justify, should they so far condescend to recognize the rights of taxpayers to consideration, the destruction of the trees on Belmont avenue. But anything can be justified; even the German Kaiser justifies all his cruelties, outrages and vandalism, from baby-killing to sinking passenger ships, from destroying orchards and grain fields to cathedrals and priceless libraries and works of art.

In both cases, if closely analyzed, there is the same accursed doctrine of force—might is right—applied. The city cuts down the trees because it has the power to do so, not necessarily because it has the right, or is confronted with the necessity.

It may be argued that the trees were in the way of street works. But could not some way have been devised, to preserve their stately beauty without preventing the usable construction of paving?

True the trees stood a little out in the street from the regular line of trees. In this way, they gave a park-like look to a purely residence street. When the street is paved, it would have been no sin, or public inconvenience to have the surb placed outside the trees. This would have left enough width of driveway—25 or 27 feet—to serve such a residence street—enough for the city and property owners to pay for and maintain.

If this were not done the curb could have been slightly curved outward as is done in Toronto and other cities, to save fine old trees.

The city could have done this consistently; it has set a precedent. In paving Charlotte street the curbing to the little ribbon of boulevard left, was curved outward with the idea of saving some dead trees, that have since been cut down. This incident shows a lack of consideration of the work the city has to do; and this shows a lack of intelligent concern, in the best interests of the city.

In another way the complaint of the Belmont avenue people is justified. If, as is plainly evident, by the exercise of a little judgment, a little taste, and a little care for private rights and the beauty of our streets, these trees had been saved, the waste of money in the removal could have been avoided. This may be a small matter in individual cases, but collectively the amount would be considerable.

The city has never spent a dollar in planting street trees; but it has spent hundreds of dollars in destroying, unnecessarily, stately and century-old street trees. It has cut down a great many street trees, but has never taken one step to replace them, something that even Germany in its splendid forestry policy, provides for.

The worst feature of the situation in the persistent and utter disregard on the part of the city authorities of the wishes of hte people, is their arbitrary and tyrannical application of the German doctrine that might is right. The practical effect is that the people are regarded as only objects of taxation; that they must submit to whatever their elected servants may decree; that legal rights, moral claims, and aesthetic considerations, are subordinated to a crude and unconsidered utilitarianism.

Peterborough can be made as it is largely now if left alone, one of the most beautiful tree sheltered cities in Ontario. This cannot be done without more care for our street trees. What we have, have been planted by private citizens, and not always with as good judgment as intentions. The lines of trees are not regular; the kind of trees has not been good. The result is that in laying sidewalks, they have to be, or are, placed so close to the well-grown trees as to endanger their life and, certainly to prevent their growth. When this does not happen the growth of trunk roots close to walks lifts the concrete, and in turn upsets the walk.

The duty of the city is to plant street trees; but this duty is utterly neglected. Miles of new streets have been opened and not a city-planted tree. Here is a chance to begin right, to plant the proper kinds of trees—suitable to the soil of the locality—in proper lines at proper distances, insuring the best conditions of future growth and thrift.

How are we going to get improvement of conditions; a proper recognition of mutual rights and responsibilities; a proper cordination of action in a matter that concerns the beauty of the city and the comfort and enjoyment of the citizens, who have to bear by mighty heavy taxation, the burden of city maintenance?

We have been looking to the Horticultural Society, the supposed embodiment of cultured, taste and public spirit; the recognized custodians of the cult of the city beautiful.

Appeals through the press, and personal appeals to the officials, to prevent the mutilation of our street trees by improper ways of cutting off branches, which is still going on, have been in vain. Indifference was the only reply.

Are we to submit in despair of having things improved? Are we to submit to all the disregard of private right, all the indifference to consideration of beauty in the treatment of our street trees, and be content with petulant and impotent protests?

We shall be driven to organize a protective association to protect ourselves against these we elect to protect us and our interests; whom we elect as servants, not masters; to enforce true recognition of the relations that should obtain, to mutual advantage between the governing and the governed.

BERLIN WILL NOT TOLERATE STRIKE AT KRUPP WORKS

CHIASSO, July 16.—According to a despatch from Munich to Swiss papers, the German military authorities have informed the management and union officials of the Krupps, where a dispute occasioned by the increased cost of living has arisen in several departments, that in no circumstances will a strike be tolerated. A mass meeting of the workers has been fixed for Sunday, when it is expected that appeals to their patriotism will prove effective and a settlement be reached.

Interesting Information Regarding Red Cross Needs and Activities

It must not be forgotten that Great Britain as the senior party in the Great Alliance, has had to give generously to the weaker allies, particularly in the matter of Red Cross work. The condition of the wounded in Montenegro and Serbia, particularly Serbia, have been appalling.

The need for medical help in the latter country has been due largely to the heavy mortality among the military doctors. A despatch sent was from Kragujeratch, the Red Cross headquarters in Serbia, shows that 95 Serbian doctors out of a total of 257 at the beginning of the war, are now dead, 82 falling victims to the terrible typhus fever. Thus Serbia having lost nearly one fourth of her medical men, is dependant upon outside assistance. Thirty five, however out of the foreign doctors who have enlisted for the Red Cross work in Serbia, have perished. These figures do not include medical students, nurses, and other helpers, among whom the mortality has been even higher.

Subscriptions for the Serbian relief work can be sent to the Canadian Red Cross Society, Toronto. Those who would prefer to give to the Red Cross work among Canadian soldiers should realise that every fresh contribution by taking from the British Red Cross the responsibility for Canadians leaves the British Red Cross freer for this necessary work in Serbia.

* * *

Sir Thomas Lipton, who transported to Serbia the English Red Cross unit in his ship the Erin, has written in a British Red Cross journal a very striking statement of the miseries of our Balkan Allies." It would be impossible for me," he states, "to describe the terrible condition that the country is in. The hospitals are full everywhere with typhus. In a hospital at Ghevhelj, there were 1,000 patients, and seven out of twelve nurses, and three out of six doctors, were ill with typhus. Typhus is also raging at the Serbian army's headquarters at Kragouyevats. The sole assistants in the hospital were Austrian prisoners, who acted as hospital orderlies. The matron in charge was short of every necessity, drugs, blankets and sheets.

"Travelling through the country as far as I could see, all the big buildings were flying the Red Cross flag. Something serious has got to be done at once regarding Serbia." A British surgeon in Serbia corroborates Sir Thomas Lipton's opinion. In the British Red Cross Hospital at Skolpje, the surgical staff for 14,000 patients consprises only six doctors. There are no nurses or trained attendants. There are only voluntary helpers called Bolnichars, who come and go as they please.

* * *

The following account of one of the details of the daily routine of a Red Cross Hospital will show the military precision with which these hospitals are conducted.

The hospital is warned before hand when a train load of wounded is expected. Just before the train is due, the Red Cross buglers sound the "Fall In" in the central square of the hospital. The orderlies required are paraded by the Sergeant Major, and proceed to the station platform.

The Registrar enters the trian and distributes tickets marked "Medical" or "Surgical," as the case may be, to the patients who are to be assigned to this particular hospital. As soon as this has been done and the "nominal roll" taken during which time a mug of beef tea is distributed to each patient, the orderlies bring stretchers and wheel chairs for the conveyance of the wounded to the Red Cross Hospital.

At the entrance gate the Commandant, the Senior Surgeon, and the Senior Physician are stationed, to decide in which ward each case is to be placed. A hospital kit is assigned to each patient as he arrives, consisting of a blue hospital suit, vest, day and night shirts, socks, handkerchief, towel and slippers. To distinguish the blue suit from that worn in military hospitals, the one worn by the Red Cross patient has a red band around the sleeves, and the trousers have a blue instead of a white lining.

The dress worn by the patient on entering the hospital is then taken by the orderlies to the Foul Linen Store. From there it is taken to the Disinfector. After disinfection, an inventory is made of it, and it is held in the pack store until the patient is able to leave the hospital.

Probably there never was a punhe fund administered with greater precision and discipline than Red Cross Fund. The public can be well assured that every dollar that they contribute is carefully expended. The great need of the Red Cross combined with this assurance of careful administration should stimulate public generosity to even greater efforts.

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU

That if there are three houses to rent in this town, anyone of which would suit you, at least two of them will be advertised in these columns.

That YOUR NEXT POSITION may be advertised to-day.

That the next furnished room you'll live in is probably advertised in another column.

That if there's nothing a Want Ad. can help you to accomplish—you're leading too quiet a life!

That if you have need of a worker, you have need of a Want Ad.

That a Store should be advertised as REGULARLY as it is opened for business. A merchant who would'nt close up for a while now and then 'to save running expenses' should'nt stop advertising now and then "to save expense."

That sometimes a LITTLE more advertising will mean a GREAT DEAL more business for a store.

BRITAIN AND THE COTTON SITUATION

LONDON, July 17.—The Parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News says this morning:

"The Cabinet, it is understood, have before them the question whether cotton should be added to the list of contraband articles, and it may be within the next few days they will be challenged to come to a decision.

"Ministerial opinion is divided on the subject. Some unionist ministers believe such a declaration on the part of this country would have an effect on indirect imports of cotton into Germany, whereas there is a strong case on the Liberal side that no effect would be produced on Germany's cotton supply, while the delicate negotiations between this country and the United States would be prejudiced by such action.

"It is well to remember, in view of the difference of opinion that prevails in Ministerial circles, that to put cotton on the contraband list would be merely a bit of shop window dressing. At present, under the order-in-council of March 11, we examine all ships with cotton cargoes, and when suspected we take them into port. The matter is taken up with the consignor and the consignee, and if bonafide is not proven we purchase the suspected cotton cargo.

"We could not prevent bonafide cotton cargoes going into neutral countries unless we went to war with these countries but we endeavour so far as we can influence action, to get the bonafide cargoes going to neutral countries consigned to a trust which undertakes that it shall not go into Germany or get a similar undertaking from firms of proved respectability.

"None the less, some Unionist Ministers are pressing for cotton to be added to the list of contraband. Although by having this done we should stop no more cotton traffic, it would look dramatic, and to those who have not studied the situation would appear to be drastic action.

"In reality, it is pointed out in influential circles, it would be far from anything that could be considered an effective war measure. On the contrary it would be injurious to us in this way:

"We have established a blockade, and we are still in negotiation with the United States for the full and free acceptance of that blockade which is designed to prevent supplies from entering Germany.

"If we in the midst of these negotiations suddenly declare cotton contraband, it might be construed as an admission we consider the blockade a failure in respect to cotton.

"We are stopping cotton going to Germany, and to take this step so prejudicial to our international interests, would be felt by the Liberals to serve none except malcontents who clamour for words instead of deeds. Liberal opinion is very stiff on this subject, an the considered view of the Cabinet is awaited in political circles with keen interest."

PULL TOGETHER

ARE WE, as a community, pulling to-gether? Or are we pulling in OPPOSITE directions? ORGANIZATION is the great community need of the day. WITHOUT organization men and women are apt to sink below the level of mules. EVEN mules, in times of danger or panic, have been known to CO-OPERATE. They sometimes KICK together. If it were given to mules to think, they would wonder at the ways of men. That men and women, living and working in the same community, should refuse to co-operate, is one of the riddles of civilization. The only benefits worth having are the benefits we can share with our NEIGHBOURS. INDIVIDUAL benefits count for little. It is the CO-OPERATIVE effort that brings EVERLASTING good. Good roads, factories, better schools, good markets can only be secured when ALL pull TOGETHER. Every man, woman and child in this community should give ONE hour each day to community WORK. But, don't WAIT for someone else to start it. There is work for YOU to do. Begin with YOURSELF.

Horrors of a Woodland Uncleared of War's Dead Since Last November

(By Richard Schayer.)

Rouen France, July 1. —There is a little strip of woodland near La Bassee that is known throughout the British expeditionary force as "Hell Glen." The name, while significant, hardly does this little grove justice, for that tangle of green holds more of concentrated horror than many miles of the battleground to right and left.

Of all the pictures of this war the memory of that little woodland strip will linger with me the longest. It so completely, and yet so simply, drives home the most awful aspect of this conflict.

Everywhere along the lines of the western front the great horror of the unburied dead exists. In no other war in history has the earth been permitted to bear on its surface, week by week, month by month, the grim harvest of battle. In this war the ground between opposing trenches has never been cleared of its dead unless one side or another made an advance. There are no armistices, no truces, no burial parties out between the lines after battle.

It is in this little woodland near La Bassee, "Hell Gate," that this most inhuman side of this generally inhuman war is so completely manifested. The wood itself is just a narrow strip of poplar, beech and birch trees, separating two big meadows.

Charge Upon Charge Fails to Break Deadlock.

It runs about half a mile up the fields, and at no place is it more than a hundred yards wide. On each side as close to the foliage of the woodland undergrowth as possible, runs a trench—British on the west, German on the east. These two ditches have been there since November. They have never changed hands, though charge upon charge has been launched through that patch of forest ever since the opposing armies came into their deathlock in this region late last fall.

It was my luck to visit this point in the British line a few days ago as one of an Army Service Corps supply party. I hope it will be my luck never to see that particular segment of this three-hundred miles arc of hell again.

The approach to this desecrated stretch of timber is, as usual, through a series of burrows and zig-zag ditches from which there is no outlook. As we entered these communication trenches we remarked the almost overpowering odor of creosote. I asked a quartermaster-sergeant why there should be such prodigal use of that disinfectant.

"If the wind was from the front of us you wouldn't need to ask," he answered. "It's them woods out there."

In the firing trench I found a group of disconsolate Canadian riflemen squatting on empty biscuit tins and wooden jam boxes. They seemed particularly morose and silent. Under their tan their faces looked drawn and haggard. They gave every evidence of men sick at heart and in body.

Why the Canadians Don't Dance Tango.

One I found who, on receiving a packet of cigarettes warmed toward me enough to ask what part of the States I hailed from and to give Buffalo, N.Y., as his address and Montreal as his birthplace.

"What's the matter with you chaps?" I queried. "You all look down and out"—

"Say, pal," he answered, in good old Americanese, "if you was to stick around here a few hours you'd know wot's the matter with this gang. It's them woods out there."

This repetition of the quartermasters phrase aroused my curiosity. I wanted to see those woods.

"Step up there an' take a look," he answered, jerking his thumb at one of the step-like nitches, out in the trench wait for a firing stand "There ain't much to see, but when the wind's right, as it was all last night, you'd soon know why this bunch ain't dancin' no tangoes, or givin' no three cheers. Don't stick yer nut up too far, or them snipers'll get you sure!"

Cautiously I raised myself upright and peered over the parapet. The smell of creosote was rank and pungent in my nostrils.

The ground beyond the trench dropped away to where the woods began. It was a veritable nightmare of a wood. Shattered and torn by thousands of shells, the broken trees stood, lay and slanted in every stage of life and death. Gaunt and bare, the dead trunks of poplars shot clean in two high above the ground stuck up out of the horrid tangle below. Other trees had been only half cut through, and their upper parts slanted weirdly down to the ground. Others had fallen against sturdier neighbours for support. Half of the broken forest was devoid of life.

The lower part of the picture was a tangle of broken boughs, tall ferns and bushy growth. Directly in front of me, not more than fifteen yards away, the shorn top of a poplar lay in sprawling confusion, tangled with smaller branches shot away from other trees. In the centre of this particular patch of green two objects that at first appeared so grotesquely out of place as to be impossible.

They were a man's legs from the knees down. Apparently he had fallen headfirst into that deep tangle of boughs and twigs in such a way as to leave his legs supported in the air. He had fallen backward, or sideways, for the boots on those stiff limbs pointed, toes first, toward the trench.

I knew him for a German by the shade of his dirty, tattered trousers and the high, square toed boots into the tops of which the trousers had been tucked. One trouser-leg still hung in the boot-top. The other had been torn from its hold and jerked halfway to the knee. Between boot-top and wrinkled trouser gleamed a livid stalk of leg. It was apparent the man had been thin and dark and very hairy.

I looked down at the Buffalo-Canadian.

"How long has that thing been out there?" I asked.

"Wot thing?"

"Those legs."

"Oh, them," he said, darkly, climbing up beside me. "I don't know. They was there when we was brought here three days ago. Must have been there since the last German charge about a week ago."

One Who Died As He Wrote in His Diary.

I shuddered and stepped down into the trench. The Buffalonian followed me.

I couldn't get the picture of that dead German's legs out of my mind.

"I suppose those woods are filled with bodies like that," I suggested.

"Sure," said the Canadian. "The chaps we relieved had made a charge through here. That is, they stated a charge, but turned back before they got half way into the woods. They said it was so horrible they couldn't go on even if the Germans didn't fire a shot. One feller told me he tripped in the branches and dove head first against a dead German. When he got to his feet he seen that the blow of his body had knocked the German's head clean off.

"An' another feller, who got into the wood quite a pace, found a German sitting with his back against a fallen bough. He'd died there from his wounds and had taken out his diary and was writing in it up to the last minute. He still held the diary in his lap and the Britisher brought it back with him and give it to the officer. The sergeant told 'em that the officer said the wounded German's writing was all about his family at home and the officer has sent the diary to be mailed back to Germany.

"Just think o' that poor wounded feller sittin' out there, two days and nights his diary said, before he died, with all that dead around him an' the smell an' everything an' writin' good-bye messages to his family. That's wot I calls some brave guy, if he was a German.

"Well, them Londoners couldn't charge through the wood. Wot they seen and the smell got their goats an' them came piling back. Their officer reported that nobody never could get through there. He told his colonel that it was a physical impossibility. It looks like them woods has everybody's goat. They has mine, all right, especially them legs stickin' out of that brush.

"Why doesn't some one go out in the night and cover them up?" I asked.

"I thought of it," he said. "But I aint got the nerve. I started to do it last night, but the wind was from the woods, and —well, I just couldn't make it.

"I'd rather be somewhere fightin' like h—ll and takin' my chances than just sittin' here guardin' this trench and watchin' them legs wavin' at me. And them woods is just plumb full of such. I heard an officer say they must be 5,000 dead British and Germans in that strip out there, some of 'em killed in November and lyin' just where they fell. An' the wounded lie out there, too, until they die. Lately, they haven't been chargin' through there. It's a wonder we ain't all dead of disease on both sides."

Then, with a sudden exclamation of impatient disgust, the Canadian seized his rifle and levelled it across the parapet.

"I ain't goin' to have them legs stickin' up there no longer," he cried, as he squinted down the sight. With the crash of his rifle the first warlike sound of the morning, the right leg of the half buried German trembled and sagged sideways a bit. From across the woods came a splatter of rifle fire, answered on our line with a scattered reply.

AN IMPORTANT LAW DECISION

LINDSAY, July 17.—A very interesting law case was heard in the court room at the Village of Cannington last Tuesday, July 13th, before His Honour Judge McIntyre of Whitby. His judgment given in this matter will be accepted as very important to two classes of people in the country, those being the cattle drovers and farmers.

The litigants in question were Mr. Lawrence Rodman, cattle drover, of Cresswell (plaintiff), who was represented by Mr. J. E. Anderson, of Lindsay, and Mr. Wm. Wright, of Brock (defendant), represented by Mr. H. P. Cooke, of Uxbridge.

The gist of the case as stated by the plaintiff, and which could not be denied by the defendant, was to the effect that the plaintiff, Mr. Rodman, purchased three head of cattle from the defendant, Mr. Wright, paying $1 down, the balance to be paid when cattle were delivered. After the sale by the defendant, cattle advanced in price by one-quarter of a cent per pound, and the defendant sold to another buyer at the advance. He claimed that delivery was not taken of cattle as agreed upon and therefore was at liberty to sell cattle at the increased price to a third party.

Judge McIntyre held that the cattle became the absolute property of the drover from time of deal, though possession remained with farmer. His Lordship gave judgment for the plaintiff Fodman of $10 and costs.

Beat the yolks of the eggs slightly add the salt and the remainder of the sugar to these and pour slowly into the coffee mixture. Cook until thickened, then add the whites of the eggs, stiffly beaten, and half a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat thoroughly and turn into a mould.

EVANGELIST SHARPE PREPARING FOR HIS CAMPAIGN NEXT WEEK

Addressed a Meeting of Citizens in the Y. M. C. A. and Explained the Object of His Visit—A Representative Committee of the Different Churches Was Formed to Assist Him.

Evangelist Sharpe held a meeting last night in the Y.M.C.A. to introduce himself and his following to the citizens before beginning his campaign.

Mr. Alfred Johnston was elected chairman. After a few remarks he called upon Mr. Sharpe to address the meeting.

Mr. Sharpe explained the object of his visit to the city; how Peterborough, like other towns, needed a revival. His object, he stated, was not to collect a following after himself, but to awaken in those he addressed feelings of religion at present dormant, and to gather them into the churches where they should rightly belong. He wished to create an influence against booze, gambling, dance halls, card playing, the theatres and other such amusements prevalent in cities, and so save souls for Christ.

Mr. Sharpe introduced the members of his little band who, in turn, briefly addressed the meeting. They were his wife, Mr. C. H. and Mrs. Rudd, Misses Kate and Elizabeth Stringer, and Mr. Patterson. Mr. Rudd is in charge of the singing and the choir; Mr. Patterson has charge of the building of the tabernacle which will seat 900 besides 100 in the choir. Mrs. Sharpe accompanies the Misses Stringer, who sing very beautifully together, several samples of their vocal power being given during the meeting. Coming to the business side of the question, Mr. Sharpe explained that he wished a committee formed with representatives from each of the churches, also a secretary and treasurer, who would be responsible for the collections, etc., a part he did not want to have anything to do with, as he stated he was not here to make money, any more than his necessary expenses.

Mr. R. J. G. Sutherland was appointed Treasurer and Mr. Alfred Johnston secretary.

The following were selected for the committee by Messrs. Riddell, R. J. G. Sutherland and Alfred Johnston, who withdrew from the meeting for that purpose:

St. Paul's Church—Wm. Maddill. H. B. Cowan. Baptist Church—John Riddell, J. G. Gillespie. George Street Methodist—Mr. Caldwell, J. J. Hartley, H. Stabler. Charlotte Street Church—James Sutherland, Sr., Mr. Hawley. St. Andrew's Church—Geo. Gillespie, Ald. Green. St. James' Church—Arnold Prest, J. O. Fife. Park Street Baptist—George Watley. British Govt. Exposes Plot

LONDON, July 17. — The British Government yesterday officially repudiated connection with an advertisement which appeared in the American Machinist May 6 concerning a new kind of high explosive shell, described as capable of causing wounds which result in death in terrible agony within four hours if not attended to immediately.

"The Government," says the official repudiation, "have reason to believe the advertisement was not genuine, but was published with the deliberate intention of creating a false impression. No order for an explosive of such description has been given by the Government."

An investigation of the company, which is alleged to have inserted the advertisement in the American Machinist, made on behalf of the United States Government, showed, according to the report of Assistant Solicitor Edwin Quigley, of the Department of Commerce, who made the investigation, that the company manufactured no bombs or shells, but turned out machines for use in drilling holes in metal. The company, it was said, explained that the advertisement was a mistake and that it would not appear again.

Fourteen Miles Of City Streets Have Been Oiled

Five Cars of Road Oil Have Been Used and it is Proving Entirely Satisfactory.

About 14 miles of Peterborough's streets have been oiled to date and the general verdict is that it is proving very satisfactory indeed. Five cars have been used so far to cover this portion of the city's streets and there is still quite a sum left in the appropriation. When Ald. G. Walter Green returns from his trip to the western provinces, he will be able to explain why a car of an alleged inferior grade was ordered and after explanations are satisfactorily made, more of the first grade will be ordered and other streets covered.

At the next meeting of the Board of Works it is likely City Engineer Peterson will have a report ready which will go into details, giving the cost so far, the approximate mileage covered and the cost of covering a corresponding area with water. The City Engineer has found that the oil in every way has worked out better even than at first expected. The facilities for applying it have proved to be very satisfactory indeed. And the present system for unloading the cars is working fine.

On some of the streets another application will be made before the season is over. Next year and for some time up to a certain period, it will not be necessary to use quite so much oil on the streets which have already been oiled. Of course repairs to the streets will tend to wear it off, but after using oil for a time it is not expected that so much repairing will be needed as it does not wear a road away as much as water.

Housewives are particularly pleased with the oil. The odor is practically nil and is only noticeable when it is newly applied. Once it has been applied there is no waiting with windows and doors closed on a hot, windy day, for the appearance of the watering cart. And it also keeps the mud down. A few minutes after a rain, the oiled road is practically dry, as the water is run off as if the road were paved.

HAVE CASKETS MADE OF TREES FROM OLD HOME

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 14.— When Anton Wieneke and his wife, old residents of Edwardsville, die, they will be buried in caskets fashioned from material taken from the old home. With a sentiment unsuspected by their friends, the couple have just made arrangements to that end. Wieneke is a wealthy farmer. The children and grandchildren constitute an extensive relationship.

Wieneke confided his plans to William J. Smith, who is vice-president of a woodworking establishment. He told Smith that the ordinary coffin with black cloth cover did not appeal to him, and said that years ago his wife and he decided that they wanted plain wooden caskets. They have been living for many years on a pretty country place just outside Edwardsville, and when they had reached their decision about a mutual distaste for factory-made caskets, it occurred to Wieneke that they might have their coffins made from timber cut on the home place.

That was three years ago, and the results of his idea have been slowly seasoning since. He had a couple of black walnut trees cut down, one selected by himself and one chosen by his wife.

The logs were then riven by hand into boards on the premises, and the resulting lumber was stored in the attic until it should become perfectly dry and ready for shaping up.

Then Wieneke drove to the Edwardsville planing mill, with which his friend Smith is connected, and delivered the waggon load of walnut lumber, which in itself was sufficiently valuable to have purchased several caskets.

To Joseph Rissoli the plant manager, and to Smith, Wieneke outlined the idea. He wanted the caskets for himself and his wife made uniform complete of the walnut material furnished, and hand polished. The caskets were to be made carefully to measure so, as Wieneke said, they would "fit good." The lumber has been placed in the dry kiln at the plant, and Smith says the company is but awaiting the final instructions from Wieneke to go ahead with the strangest order they ever had.

Caught In The Weeds And Had A Narrow Escape

Mr. Frank Whitehouse, representative of the Nordheimer Piano Co., had a narrow escape from drowning while bathing in Little Lake near the East City wharf last evening. He in some manner became entangled in some weeds and was in great danger, when Miss Scottof Maria street, waded out into the water up to her neck and pushed a plank out to Mr. Whitehouse, succeeding in rescuing him from his predicament.

A Comical Episode In The House

Mr. Henry Chaplin, "Leader of the Opposition," Chief Actor in Incident Described by Mr. T. P. O'Connor

HOUSE WAS AMUSED

(Copyright, 1915, Central News, by T. P. O'Connor)

LONDON, July 17.—Even in such tragic moments as the present the House of Commons has its inevitable lapses into comedy, and even into farces, and the chief actor in an extremely comical episode was Mr. Henry Chaplin.

It brings back even an old Parliamentarian like myself to the days of his early youth to see Mr. Chaplin. There was a famous and patriotic caricaturist in the early sixties, who, I believe, ultimately died in New York, who was the chief artist on a long since dead sporting paper called the "Tomahawk." Well I remember the savage picture which he drew immediately after the Derby of 1867. A young man was represented in a chariot, going the pace to Hades. All around him were the men who were helping him to shorten the road to his destination.

The young man was the Marquis of Hastings and within a few weeks of the appearance of the caricature he was in his grave. Although young, broken in health and in fortune, he had received his coup de grace at this very Derby which suggested the caricature. Betting wildly and drinking hard he had come to the end of his resources and his health; but he had one last desperate bid, and that was that his mare, Lady Elizabeth, who was favourite, might win the Derby.

I remember reading how, when he appeared in the tweed suit then universal on such occasions, he was received with wild cheering by the English crowd which always likes a daring sportsman. But when the race was over Lady Elizabeth was not the winner, but a horse known as Hermit.

Hermit was the property of Mr. Henry Chaplin and an outsider whom nobody ever expected to win, but Mr. Chaplin, who knew the horse better, had backed him for huge amounts, and it is said, netted sixty thousand pounds on the race, although some have put the amount as high as a hundred and twenty thousand pounds The race was full of elements so remarkable as to suggest rather the fictitious characters of the melodramatist than real life. Not very long before Lord Hastings had jobbed Mr. Chaplin of his fiancee. A few days before their intended wedding Mr. Chaplin and his fiancee entered Marshall and Snellgrove's, a well-known dry goods store, to complete the trousseau. Marshall and Snelgrove have one door in Oxford Street and another in Vere Street. The young lady made some excuse, slipped out through the Vere Street entrance, and soon was Lady Hastings. Thus Mr. Chaplin brought into this historicail race not only the feelings of a sportsman eager for success, but of a jilted lover eager for revenge.

When I first entered the House of Commons Mr. Henry Chaplin was one of the men I looked for. I had got the impression that a man who had played so reckless a part in the life of the reckless young nobleman must look sinister, vindictive and black-jowled. I was surprised, therefore, when I found myself looking on a man with rich, almost reddish hair, with the early Victorian short whisker, with the characteristic aquiline Norman nose, with finely chiselled mouth, and with rather fine, blue eyes. And the expression was equally different from my anticipation, for and good humour. When I came to its prevalent feature was kindliness know him personally afterwards the impression produced by his appearance was entirely realized, and at this moment I am in accord with every member of every party in the House of Commons in loving Mr. Chaplin as an excellent specimen of the good-natured, open-handed, typical English country gentleman. Indeed, so much does he look the part that he is universally known as "The Squire." There are scores of other squires in the House of Commons, but Mr. Chaplin stands beyond them all as "The Squire."

He is broad shouldered, stout, six foot two high; he looks still a strong man, though now and then a stick reminds the world that he has had his hereditary attacks of gout; but it is astonishing that he should survive in such vigour, for he belongs to a period of hard living that has practically disappeared from English life. He was one of the roystering youths that went among the intimates of King Edward when he was going through his storm youth as the Prince of Wales, and he must have been the equal of the best of them; for he began life as owner of thousands of acres in Lincolnshire, and with a rent roll of forty thousand pounds. It all very nearly went. In his old age he was glad to get one of the minor pensions given to impoverished statesmen, amounting to twelve hundred pounds a year. But nature has gifted him with perrenial youth of spirits as well as of appearance, and there is not to be found on his face or in his speech, or apparently in his memory, the smallest regret over vanished fortune.

I remember reading about his first speech in the House of Commons, which was made in 1868, the year after the historic Derby. Everybody who expected to find a brainless young fool was astonished to see that the famous turf man could express himself with ease, with grace, and with fluence. He can express himself with ease and grace and fluence still, but the language is so old-fashioned, the delivery is so old-world, and the whole manner so innocently pompous that people do not take him quite seriously. He represents, besides, nearly all the gnarled traditions of the squirearchy, always forsees violent revolution in any change in the existing system, and makes on the smallest occasion elaborate indictments of the modern world after which he limps painfully.

He is thus at once a darling and a plaything of the House of Commons; nobody taking him seriously, and yet everybody liking him while laughing at him. But Mr. Chaplin does take himself seriously, and at last in the creation of a coalition government he finds his great chance.

All the usual leaders of the Opposition have gone over to the Ministerial Bench. It was necessary that somebody, therefore, should lead the opposition. The front opposition bench had consisted of members of one party, like the Treasury Bench. It now consists of members of different parties, and there were several of the gentlemen who might have claimed the position of Opposition leader, for they had, like Mr. Chaplin, been also Cabinet Ministers in their day.

But Mr. Chaplin was the oldest of them in years and in service, and he insisted on his claim to be the official leader of the Opposition. There are two boxes on the Speaker's table. Before one box sits the leader of the House; before the box on the other side sits the leader of the Opposition. Mr. Chaplin immediately took his seat in front of the box on the Opposition side.

But there is one other way of asserting leadership. It is the duty of the leader of the Opposition every day to put a solemn question to the leader of the Government as to what is to be the business of the House of Commons for the next week.

When Mr. Chaplin rose to ask Mr. Asquith what was to be the business of the next week the whole House realised at once the situation, and for some minutes was rocked in delight at seeing the grand old gentleman with his Cicerconian sentences and his "barnstormer" elocution and gestures, jumping into the vacant place.

Summer need not be a Hard Time for Baby

It is not the heat of summer that is hard on babies. It is their food that is responsible for most summer troubles.

Milk is difficult to modify at home and, in the summer particularly, it is liable to contamination, infection and becoming sour. It is this that is mostly responsible for the epidemic diarrhœa and other complaints usually blamed on the summer weather.

The value of an absolutely dependable food is clearly proven at this season.

The "Allenburys" Milk Foods, Nos. 1 and 2 present advantages that are impossible with milk delivered to your door. They are prepared from the pure rich milk of carefully tended cows bred on splendid pastures—modified to resemble most closely healthy mother's milk. Packed in hermetically sealed tins, the foods are ready for immediate use with the addition of boiling water only.

Mothers who adopt this scientific method of feeding infants, which effectually replaces human milk and ensures steady, vigorous growth and health, are relieved of the many troubles and anxieties that attend the feeding of Baby during Summer.

Financiers Urge New Taxes To Pay Interest On War Loan

LONDON, July 17.—"In this national crisis, expenditures, both public and private, should be rigidly curtailed, and at the same time new taxation should forthwith be imposed upon all classes of the people in order that when the war shall be brought to a triumphant conclusion the nation may enter the period of restoration with its financial power impaired to the least possible extent."

This resolution was passed this evening at a meeting of the leading bankers and financiers of London. A deputation will convey it to Premier Asquith.

Harold Cox, well known as a political economist, addressed the meeting. He said that the loan would hardly carry the country over until Christmas, and that personally he did not think the war would end without England having to borrow $10,000,000,000. Altogether the interest on this, Mr. Cox said, would be $450,000,000, which with the sinking fund would be increased to $550,000,000, and another $100,000,000 would have to be added for the first two years after the war for pensions. The new taxes imposed last November, Mr. Cox added, produced $315,000,000, so that many more new taxes would have to be imposed.

NERVOUS CHILDREN

Hard Study and Too Little Exercise Leads to St. Vitus Dance

There is much criticism of modern educational methods that require too much work of school children, allowing them too little time for play and preventing sufficient out-of-door exercise. When the study of music or any other accomplishment, with the necessary practice, is added, the strain is increased. Under these conditions the blood becomes impoverished and fails to nourish the nerves. The child becomes restless and twitching of the muscles follow. Sometimes the child stumbles in walking and drops what it tries to hold. Pallor, listlessness and irritability are symptoms that early show that the blood and nerves are failing to meet the demands made upon them and that St. Vitus' dance has fastened its hold upon the child.

In this condition there is no tonic can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which build up the blood, strengthen the nerves and safely help to meet the demands of the growing child. Out-of door exercise, nourishing food, plenty of sleep with these tonic pills will cure even the most severe cases of St. Vitus dance. We offer the following proof: "Up to the age of ten years," says Mrs. Johnson of Hemford, N.S. "my son Calvin, was as healthy and rugged as any child could be. Then he began to complain that his eyes hurt him, and of pains in the head and began to fall back in his studies at school. Then I noticed a twitching of the muscles of his face and arms and later his whole body seemed to be in constant motion. Our family physician was called in and pronounced the trouble a severe attack of St. Vitus dance. He was under the doctor's treatment for some three months but did not seem to improve. We had taken him from school, and were careful that nothing should excite him but notwithstanding he grew worse and the least start would bring on attacks of hysteria. This went on for some months until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were brought to my attention, and we decided to give him this medicine. After using a few boxes there was a noticeable improvement and by the time he had taken nine or ten boxes he had recovered his former good health. There has been no sign of a return of the trouble, and I can scarcely say how thankful we feel for the complete restoration of our son's health."

Parents who find their growing boys or girls becoming nervous should lose no time in giving them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You may ward off an attack of St. Vitus dance, or if the trouble has reached that stage the Pills will effect a cure. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Enemy Has Crossed The Dneister River At Several Points

the north is evidently Riga, upon which the Germans have made several abortive attempts by sea. They have now poured considerable armies into the region between Libau and Shavli, and are advancing on a 60 to 70-mile front, with the left resting on the Baltic Sea and the right extending across the Libau railway to a point behind the river Windau, in the direction of the Popeliani station on the railway 26 miles short of Shavli. The left is making directly for Goldingen, and is well forward of the right wing of the line.

"The Russians are meeting the German advance at the river crossings on the Windau and Wento and at other suitable points, but the opposition is offered only by cavalry and outposts. There are no elements of military surprise in this movement of the Germans, which has been foreseen, and adequately provided against in every respect. Nevertheless, the Germans may be expected to advance some little time yet, in accordance with Russia's general plans of defence against an invasion.

No Political Considerations.

"Those plans are based solely upon military considerations. Nothing else counts. There are very few towns and the wealth of the country is mainly found in the castles of German barons, Russian subjects, whose opposition to the people of the soil forms one of the main items in the pitiful story of the Teutonic tyranny under shelter of the Rusisan throne for centuries past.

"Many of these princely possessions have been specially stocked in aid of a German invasion, and the Russian authorities have been busy investigating the loyalty of landowners in the Baltic provinces for some time past.

"It is improbable the Germans will gain much by an advance into the Baltic provinces on this occasion. Until they succeed in forcing the Russian armies to a general engagement, and are victorious in such a battle they have gained nothing whatever. Frontiers have in existence in war. Only armies and strategic points which they can utilise count for anything at all. On this principle Russian strategy has acted well, knowing that the victors will lay down from hers with perfect satisfaction to themselves when the time comes for mapmaking. At present only armies count."

PLEADED FOR PEACE.

MONTREAL, July 16.—The Canadian Eucharistic Congress, which has been holding sessions here for the last two days, closed last evening with a prayer for peace.

The prayer was uttered in St. Patrick's Church by Rev. Father Ethelbert, an English priest, who asked for peace in the name of the slain, in the name of the bread-winners who were no more, and in the name of the thousands of ruined homes and fortunes.

"Braundport" Has Extensive Summer Colony on River

Community Numbers Fifty-six and More are Expected — R. C. Braund is One of its Leading Spirits—Healthful Conditions for Children

"Braundport" has an every-day population of fifty-six. It is a community camp on the Otonabee River, near Yankee Bonnett and has become an established institution. A census of this summer community reveals the following campers: Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Braund and family, Robert Routley, wife and family, Mr. and Mrs. D. Law, Walton Routley, wife, and family, J. M. Green, Mrs. J. M. Greene and family, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Routley and family, and Major Jennings and family, who has recently been moved from Montreal to Toronto as Immigration Agent.

It is a big happy family, and it is understood that other additions are coming next week, some from Toronto. In addition to the above there should be included the maids, a necessary adjunct even to households under canvas.

This particular summer colony has benefited by the experience of half a dozen years or more and have ideal arrangements. All the tents are roomy and airy, are floored and double walled overhead. There is every protection against the weather; water is obtained from a driven well; the shore has been cleared for bathing; everything has been made sanitary and the location is naturally sanitary.

The population of "Braundport" has developed to such an extent that religious services are held there on Sundays, thus obviating the necessity of coming up town. Last Sunday there was an attendance of 45 at one service, and the collection amounted to $3.10. This sum was sent to the Salvation Army at the Temple. The healthful character of the summer spent at Braundport and its beneficial results especially for the children have practically constituted the camp a permanent one. In regard to music it is only natural, to expect that where Mr. J. M. Greene would be located there would also be a big Victrola and such is the case. Hence he speaks from experience if he assures customers of the enjoyment one of these machines provides for the summer camp.

A LIGHT HONEY CROP IS PRESENT PROSPECT

With only half the bees of last year and with conditions that have not been generally favourable, the honey crop will hardly be up to average, according to the opinion of Mr. Jas. Baptie of Springville. The bees had not sufficient stores last winter to survive until Spring, and their ranks were seriously depleted. Reports from the Ottawa district indicate a light honey harvest there. The nectar in clover has been light and the flower came on rapidly. However the buckwheat prospect appears to be more favourable.

A 1915 FISH STORY

BY SAM HUNTER

(In the Millbrook Mirror)

This season on the Kawartha Lakes has been one of unusually high water and good fishing. It is being enjoyed by the usual number, so far as one can observe, of both cottagers and hotel transients, despite the war pinch in money and means.

D. A. D. Picken of the Victoria House, has had the "Standing Room Only" sign up since the beginning of the season, and every day now is a red vest day in "Dad's" calendar. As someone has somewhere observed, "he does better than command success, he deserves it." Bass fishing has been particularly fine this season, the small mouth black bass of these waters, by the way, being a fish whose high game excellence is beyond anything to be found in the warm weed beds and the muddy bottoms of more southerly lakes and streams. To the cooler, purer waters and the granite shoals in which he is taken here should doubtless be given the credit for his alliterative qualities of firmness, flavour and fight. He certainly is a fighter and an artist when it comes to making the reel sing. A small mouth black bass of five pounds two ounces taken by Mr. R. J. McCracken, heads the list so far this season. It was taken with a garden fish worm on a fifty eight ounce cedar pole and was landed in something less than three seconds, and came down in the swamp eighteen yards from shore. Maskalonge fishing, too, has been above the ordinary, although the fish taken have been for the most part small—from five to ten pounds.

Jimmie McM———, ex river driver, and an old acquaintance of mine, from up Clear Lake way, was telling me to-day that the best 'lunge he had seen taken "on the hooks" this season was caught two weeks ago just this side of Young's point, and weighed 23 pounds.

"Me had ketched it," said Jimmie, an' he selt it to a fat Yankee from Cincinnatty at the price of a good tree mont's old calf. An' at that th' woman didn't want Larry t' sell it to him. "He looks too much t' me," she says, "like a dirty Dutchman," she says, with his mud-cat whiskers an' goggly eyes; an' if ye do sell it to him, Larry dear, soak him," she says, "or mix a bit iv paris green in with the salt ye rub into it. I've a lad fightin' with th" first contingent, an' gas poisoned, he was," continued Jimmie, "an' th' hates a German like she hates anny other kind iv dirt. If I had anny Sourkrout blood in me veins, I'd ate no meal she'd prepare for me—not till after this war's over annyway. 'Twouldn't be safe.

"So that twenty-three pounder was the biggest you've seen this year, was it, Jimmie?" I asked him. "I said th' biggest ketched with th' hooks," corrected Jimmie with a lowering of the voice and a confidential droop of the left eye lid. "Two days before fishin' come in this year, I was movin' an old cook stove over to the crib, an' dropped her be accident inta about three feet of water. It was getting dark an' I says t' meself, I'll lave ye where ye are till mornin', I says, an' got down on me belly on th' crib t' have a final luck at 'er. Th' was weeds growing all round where she lay, an' a big bass seemed to be plannin' hide and seek in through the holes on top where th' lids had fallen off, an' I thought I see a big fish disappear under th' crib as I putt me face down. In the mornin' Larry an' me was out bright an' early, an' started over in th' punt. When we got t' th' crib th' stove had disappeared. We was pokin' 'round lookin' for 'er when we heard a splashin' about fifty yards out, an' th' tail and about three fut iv a monster fish came t' the top iv the water, an' went down again. "T'row in th' pike poles, Larry," I yells, an' we jumped for th' punt, an' started for where we seen th' fish. Up he comes again just as we got t' where we first seen him, an' Larry, who was in th' bow, suddenly shoved his pike pole inta th' water, an' letta yell outa him. 'It's a whale, dad, an' he's ketched in th' cook stove.' 'An' then mister fish went down agin—an' we never seen stove nor fish that day, nor since—but he sure was a monster. He'd likely run his head inta it after a bass an' got ketched be th' gills backin' out. How big? I'm tellin' ye th' trute, an' nothin' but th' trute. I dunno, but anny tinsmith or stoveman 'll tell you them old 'Progress' (A.D. 1886) cookin' stoves has a pot hole nine and a ha'f inches acroat, so mebby ye can figger it out for yourself."

HEADACHE?

Thousands of persons who have never known a day's sickness in any other form are subject to frequent attacks of Headache that almost drive them mad.

Whatever the nature may be and the cause, the immediate condition that produces the pain is a congestion or filling up of the blood vessels of the brain with blood, thus causing a pressure on the brain cells and nerve filaments.

In treating all forms of Headache the first thing to do is to relieve the congestion of the blood vessels of the brain. Abbey's Effervescent Salt in laxative doses does this promptly.

Sold everywhere at 25c. and 60c.

Full blooded people who are subject to frequent attacks of Headache can be entirely relieved by taking laxative doses of the Salt every morning. Headaches from Indigestion and Biliousness are also entirely banished by continuing the use of the Salt until the normal action of the liver and stomach is restored. 6

Destruction of Wonderful Art Treasures By The Huns Is Italy's Greatest Danger

MILAN, July 17.—Bologna is in the dark. It is the first stage in their mobilization. Here is where we get the first impression of the Italian war. The train steams into the station at midnight. We grope about in vain in search of a cab or taxi. Here is one, happily. It is an hotel omnibus. The driver turns on a mysterious light for an instant. We see enough to get in, and in a moment the brilliant electric lamp is turned out, and the darkness is darker than before, for our eyes have been blinded by the sudden brilliancy. We sit three on each side, and suspect each other's presence; that is all.

The car rumbles along over the rough old pavements that seem to have been laid in the days of Cæsar. To the right and left we now perceive dimly the succession of square or round pillars of the endless arcades. The arcades might have been built in the time of Augustus. The absence of all light in the streets makes us think that this is the way things must have been in Roman days. Only our automatic chariot, in which we bump along, is a thing unknown to the ancients, who seem to have built this town.

Whenever will these arcades, with their dark masses of stone, end? We see light reflected on the thick stone flags. It comes from cafes, which, relatively speaking, are still open That is to say, the iron shutters are lowered almost to the ground, and one wonders how the customers get inside. Later on, we find that they enter by doors left in utter darkness. For the present, it is all a mystery. We pass an immense stone pile that almost leans over the old vast buildings in front of it. It is the cathedral in which the present Pope officiated before he was elected to the Holy See.

Venice in Gloom.

It is again midnight. Once more our train steams into a station. It is Venice this time and Venice, like Bologna, has called darkness to her aid. She is shrouding her canals in it, hiding St. Mark's, and her gondolas move more silently than ever. People speak in a whisper, as if afraid to reveal the presence of their art treasurers to the night hawks of war from across the Adriatic, where her enemies at one time were Turks. Her new foes are no better. They are if possible, worse, they come like thieves at night, and they kill and slaughter the unarmed as the Turks never did, except in the fury of battle.

Venice has been already visited thrice by these sinister night birds, She takes no more chances, and if the enemy knew it he would grind his teeth, because she has removed the richest of her treasures to places of safety. These treasure will return soon, no doubt, and Venice will be herself again. But, for a while, they have left the city of the Doges. Statues, pictures, lovely pieces of marble and bronze, and everything that was too beautiful and too sublime in art to be exposed to danger, was packed with religious care, and sent to a place where the enemy cannot wreck them with his treacherous bombs.

Days ago, the bronze steeds of Corinth in a conspicuous place, were removed. It was safer for them to be out of reach of dynamite and other modern explosives. In twenty days, Venice has become completely altered. She will resume her former aspect only when the Italian army returns victorious from Trieste. Then, eVnice will be en fete once more, and the gondolier will resume the song that is now hushed.

The Alpini Method.

It is night once more; it is darker and stiller than ever. But this time it is at the front. The order is to advance. It must be carried out. The Alpini are delighted. They are ready in an instant, and full of enthusiastic determination. Each one intends to outdo his comrade in bravery, and to have some difficult feat to perform, of which he will be proud the next day. They move on in silence. It is midnight, and the moon is down. So much the better. The darker it is, the better the Alpini like it. They can reach the enemy without being seen. The ground is rough and difficult, the hills around about are not high, but they are as hard to climb as the loftier Alps.

The mountain troops have a sure footing with these heavy-nailed boots, and the peaks to the right and the left are old acquaintances to most of them. The newcomers are indifferent, and find that all mountains are the same. The officer tells them that they must be on a certain ledge in an hour. They look up, "An eagle might do it," one would say. Yet in an hour the Alpini are there.

A path leads to the Austrian fortifications. The Austrians themselves had spread the report that the place was powerfully defended. It was impregnable. The Alpini find many more paths leading towards it; they advance without any paths. Shots are fired. The enemy has discovered them, and aims widly. The Alpini reply with deadly effect. Their fire multiplies. They crawl nearer and nearer, and the enemy's reply is hopeless. No guns are heard. Has the enemy removed them, or were they ever there?

In a sudden rush the Alpini resolve to carry the place. The Austrians are already in full flight. They escape in terror before an enemy that seems invisible. With disappointment the Alpini take possession of the fortifications. They had expected more resistance than that. It was no glory to capture a fort that looked like an impostore. "You have done it bravely, nevertheless," says the officer, encouragingly. "Had they defended it longer it would only have been worse for them."

Seven Brave Austrians.

But the enemy can, when he likes, defend himself with obstinacy. Not far from the conquered fort seven Austrians put up a fight worth recording. They held the pass with desperate energy. The Alpini approached from the right and left and still these daring seven held to their post. Crouched behind a ledge of rocks they fired until the last cartridge was spent. Three of them only fired at the end. The other four were dead. When the last three had no more ammunition they retired, and left their dead comrades to the care of the Alpini, who, as they reached the spot, took off their caps and saluted. They had met a foe worthy of them.

At another place the Alpini are at a height of nearly 8,000 feet. The pass is a most difficult one. The snow is still a yard or two deep in places. An Austrian force, not to be despised for its numbers and the artillery supporting it, disputes the pass. The Alpini find themselves up against rifle bullets and shells, when it would be foolhardy for a shell detachment to ignore. They decide to hold the ground gained, and to fortify it with rocks and logs until reinforcements can be sent. They work feverishly all night, whilst a desultory rifle-fire is searching them, and shells burst against the dolomite rocks. They succeed in making a tolerably good fortress out of a natural crevice, and when daylight comes they defy the enemy. They wave their caps, spiked on their bayonets, in the air, and invite the Austrians to target practice. The enemy uses up a good deal of ammunition.

All day long the bullets come screaming towards the fort of the Alpini, but the deadly missiles fly high over the crevice, or are flattened against the rocks. The Austrian batteries, likewise, pound away, but the shells burst with impotent fury against the solid walls of the mountain. A week after, the Alpini are still holding their trench against an entire fort and its garrison.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

What The Managers Say With The Race At Half-Way Mark

NEW YORK, July 16.— With the baseball season half over, confidence apparently is not lacking in the minds of big league managers as to the ultimate outcome. Following are their opinions, as expressed to the United Press to-day:

National League.

Wilbur Robinson, Superbas: "We're going to win that old rag—for several reasons. First, we have the best pitching staff in the league; second, we have the heaviest hitting outfit, and third, we have spirit."

Charley Herzog, Reds: "It's anybody's pennant, and the Reds have just as good a chance as any team. I have made some changes that will prove beneficial."

Roger Bresnahan, Cubs: "Don't take our little slump as any indication that we are through. We're going to win that pennant. It won't be long till we are on top again, where we belong."

John J. McGraw, Giants: "It's anybody's pennant, with every club in the league putting up the poorest ball in years. I can't see how the Giants can be counted out under the circumstances."

Pat Moran, Phillies: "I can't make any prediction as to the race. I am satisfied with the Phillies' playing. At any rate, I am confident they will not finish worse than third."

Miller Huggins, Cardinals: "If the Cardinals can win ten straight games the pennant will be ours. Every club in the league has an equal chance. I depend on my twirlers."

National.

Fred Clarke, Pirates. "It's the tightest and most remarkable race I've seen in many a year. Any club has a chance."

George Stallings, Braves: "Going with a big O.K."

Federal.

Rebel Oakes, Pittafeds: "I think that the Pittfeds will win the pennant, because we are now but three games from first place, and since climbing into the first division from seventh place, we have never lost our grip."

George Stovall, Kawfeds: "Kansas City is going to have a pennant-winner for the first time in years. Tinker's men are only temporarily on top. Bet your roll that we'll be back in August."

American.

Hughie Jennings, Tigers: "The middle of the season finds Detroit very much in the running. With some better pitching we could run away with the pennant. Even as we stand we will be contenders all the way and possibly winners. I fear Boston most."

Bill Donovan, Yankees: "I am building for next year, when I expect the Yanks to be pennant-contenders. However, I have the nucleus of a great team right now, and am confident New York will finish in the first division."

Bill Carrigan, Red Sox: "Our chances look good. The team is just rounding into shape; we finish at home, and we haven't had the nerve-racking job of setting the pace. We'll have to beat the Tigers and White Sox."

Clarence Rowland, White Sox: "We are off with a good lead now, and we will hold the lead we have and sweeten it. If Walsh comes back today I'll have a wonderful staff of pitchers."

Connie Mack, Athletics: "I don't want to talk about it. I haven't a thing to say. Don't quote me."

Lee Fohl, Indians: "I like the White Sox. They have the best pitching staff, a well-balanced club, and some heavy hitters."

LOCAL CITY LEAGUERS BEAT LINDSAY 4-2

The team representing the local City League which journeyed to Lindsay yesterday to tackle the Scugogville team, proved too much for the latter and won handily after a snappy game by 4 to 2. Huycke, of the Thistles, who pitched the full game for the Petes, allowed Lindsay but one hit and retired over a dozen by the strike-out route. A long fly by the veteran Workman, which got away from Knapman when the latter slipped on the wet grass and fell, gave Lindsay their two runs. The Petes played snappy ball all through. Lefty McElroy of hockey fame, pitched for Lindsay and made a good job of it. Dickie Butler of Lindsay, was umpire. The Peterborough team lined up as follows:

Swanston (East City), catcher.
Huycke (Thistles), pitcher.
Long (Thistles), first base.
Cherett (Empires), second base.
L. Rose (Classics), short-stop.
Jackson (Thistles), third base.
Neary (Classics), middle.
Cavanah (Thistles), right field.
Smyth (Thistles), right field.

Garvin Sees End of War October, 1916

Famous London Editor Says Germans Must Fall in East—Will Then Stake All in Final Blow

BY JAMES L. GARVIN,
Editor of The Pall Mall Gazette.
International News Service.

LONDON, July —The week has been full of strong encouragement.

The Kaiser is reported to have said the war will be over by October. The truth is the war will only be rightly beginning about October. It will hardly have risen to its climax until next spring. Then, indeed, it may be possible that six months' fighting will finish it, and that the war will be over by October of next year by Germany being beaten to the ground and Austria to pieces.

Great Britain, with the disappointed expectations of being ready long before now, will be about six months late in completing full military and industrial mobilization, but it will not be too late. We may still have to pay more instalments of the bitter penalty for past delays, but there is fair reason to think that they will be the last delays. Time is still the ally of the allies and the remorseless enemy of the Central Empires.

GERMAN SETBACK IN EAST

Germany had undoubtedly staked all on forcing before the winter a double decision on both fronts. There are further signs that in the East the whole tremendous campaign of the Central Empires will turn out, for all purposes bearing on the ultimate issue, not only a heartbreaking futility but a disastrous and irretrievable failure.

This prospect will remain the same whether the Grand Duke gives back once more, as he may, or wins where he is now standing, with mighty effect in the West, where no responsible leader, whether soldier or statesman, is blind to what the Germans may be driven by the situation to attempt. The allies are gravely prepared for all contingencies.

Everything is still overshadowed by the Grand Duke's great defence at the decisive point in the eastern operations. At this moment the invading phalanx after driving irresistibly forward for over two months, has been fairly fought to a standstill, and even driven some way back. It would be premature to assume that the turning point has come so soon. It is evident he is coolly prepared for the contingency of a further retreat.

That the Grand Duke could break the Teuton offensive upon his present lines, or even upon a front behind, still seems almost too good to hope for. It is now possible he may do even this, save even Warsaw, and baffle Mackensen as he baffled Hindenburg.

That ought to be decided within the next week or two and it will be an issue of transcendent interest sooner or later as the invaders try to push forward into the depths of Russia.

They are bound to fail in any case. If they fail sooner than later and are unable to carry even the line of the middle Vistula, with Warsaw and Ivangorod, their discomfiture will be of disastrous meaning to themselves and will foreshadow the fatal sequel.

INVADERS' WANING VITALITY

We emphasize our conviction that it will be impossible for the invaders to sustain the vitality and weight of their attack long enough to enable them to gain anything like an historic decision in their favor. They will never break the Grand Duke; in the end he will break them.

If the Germans cannot break our lines in the West during the next few months they can never do it. Their new levies, numbering not far short of a million, are ready. They may hope to bring men and guns in altogether unexpected numbers from the East and employ a battering and storming power hitherto unimagined.

But if the Germans see that no decisive contribution towards final victory is likely to be gained in the East, they will never wait passively to be ground between the upper and nether millstones by a concerted offensive of the allies when they have had time to acquire the final crushing preponderance in men and mechanism.

TENNIS

The following players will represent the South End Tennis Club in their games with the Golf Club on Monday next. At south end lawn Messrs. A. Cranfield and E. Maybee at the Golf Club Messrs. Jackson and Burness. The Golf Club will probably be represented by Messrs. F. D. Kerr, M. B. Hamilton, R. Cottrell and G. O. Cameron.

St. Andrew's will be represented by Messrs. F. E. Kerr, Bruce Hamilton, Rev. F. Harris, and E. Walton, in their games with the Y.M.C.A.

All Saints play St. Paul's and will likely be represented by Dr. Sutton, Messrs. Weller, Sisson and Rush.

The plant from which camphor is obtained in China has been discovered in the Philippines growing wild in great quantities.

FEATURES OF THE OTTAWA EXHIBITION.

The Central Canada Exhibition Association is announcing the main features of its 1915 Fair. A new Dominion Government grant of $5,000 has been put into the prize list, making the total premiums amount to $25,000 For the third year, the Association is paying the freight to Ottawa on live stock exhibits from all points in Ontario and Quebec. An excellent show of field and garden produce is foreshadowed for the new Agricultural and Horticultural Hall, finished last year. The prizes on these things, as well as live stock, have been increased. Altogether, the Ottawa Fair has now a total display space in pavilions of nearly 300,000 square feet. The manufacturers' exhibits promise to be very large, as space and motive power are furnished free. In the list of attractions are daily aeroplane flights, series of baseball matches, horse races, band music, day fireworks, live stock parades, and an unusually large Midway. Night shows will present a novel fireworks display and will also have a new feature, moving pictures, which will illustrate the war in particular. Grand stand seats are reduced in price and six-for-a-dollar admission tickets are again offered up to the opening of the Fair. The railways have granted low passenger rates and free return of live stock exhibits. As in former years there will be six days and six nights September 13th to 18th of complete programme. The final day will be marked by amateur sports in the afternoon.

An automaton figure of a man, constructed in Paris for advertising purposes, can be given more than 5,000 different poses by electric motors in its base, while a concealed phonograph makes it speak or sing.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figure "give us away."

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orilene taken at meal times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00 Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

Children Should Be Kept Off The Farmers' Vehicles

The presence of mind of an eleven year old youngster on Sherbrooke street probably saved the lives of a couple of younger playmates this morning when a team of horses which he was holding for the owner started to run away. Two youngsters, aged two and eight years respectively, were on the waggon with him, and the owner, who was selling huckleberries, went into a house between George and Aylmer streets, on Sherbrooke. It is not known exactly what the children did during his absence, but it is thought they attempted to turn the team around. The horses became frightened and commenced to run. As soon as the older of the boys saw they were in danger he started to help the other boy and the little girl, aged two years, to the ground. The little girl was rather badly hurt in falling and may be internally injured. The other two escaped with a slight shaking up.

The horses in their mad run, went about half a block, and taking to wards the sidewalk they went, one on each side of a Hydro-Electric pole breaking the neck yoke and pole. Mr Berd Heard caught them and held them till the owner arrived.

Twenty-five boxes of huckleberries which the owner had brought several miles to market, were completely lost. They were scattered, baskets and berries, along the road. This meant a clear loss of about $25 to the owner, beside the damage to his waggon.

The little girl is resting easily this afternoon and it is hoped there will be no serious results form the accident. This should be a warning to parents to keep their children off the vehicles of farmers or gardeners who happen to stop along the street. It is said since the accident that it is a common occurrence for a gardener to return to his waggon and find from two to five children perched about it and one with the reins, and if there is a whip about, another has it in hand.

A Peculiar Accident

Charlotte Street Boy Knocked Out By Stream From Hose

A peculiar accident, with no bad results, but which might have been serious, happened to little Artie Jones son of Mr. R. N. Jones, Charlotte street. The watering cart is filled from a hydrant and the hose has a long iron nozzle which blew out when the cart was full. Artie was standing on the lawn and the force and quantity of the water stunned and almost drowned him.

He was carried into his home unconscious, but quickly revived. While the driver was looking after the little boy the team with the cart ran away but did no damage and was caught after running a couple of blocks.

To Investigate Remarks Made By Capt. Evers

BOSTON, Mass., July 17. — Remarks alleged to have been made from the side lines by Captain Evers, of the Boston Braves, during last Tuesday's baseball game with the St. Louis Cardinals, are to be the subject of the investigation which Mr. Tener will make here. The Braves' captain, taking exception to a decision by Rigler, who declared "Bob" Bescher safe at the plate on a close play, was quoted in a newspaper as having shouted: —"They're trying to get the crowds out. They've ordered a close race. Leave them alone boys, they're only following instructions."

Evers later expressed indignation because his remarks had been interpreted as a claim tht the National League race was "fixed." He said:

"I claim no such thing. I've been in baseball long enough to know better. To be sure, I might have said anything on the ball field. When an umpire hands you one like Ringler did at the home plate. What you say will invariably be the result of hard feeling at the time. You're out there fighting and anything you can get away with goes. Nobody living could fix a race like the one in the National League, just now. It's the greatest ever and we all have a chance."

"There is absolutely no truth in the story that Captain Evers said that the National League race was fixed," declared George Stallings, manager of the Braves. "I have personally made a thorough investigation of the report and find it to be false. Evers has been with me two years and a straighter and more honorable player cannot be found."

GENEVA, Switzerland, July 17.—The Tribune prints the following despatch from its correspondent at the front:

"The Austro-Hungarian forces which attempted to dislodge the Russians from positions along the Vistula River have been repulsed with heavy loss. The Russians, attacking in turn, occupied a mile of Austrian trenches.

Situation is Critical.

Athens, July 16.—The French dragoman, Ledoux, recently expelled from Constantinople by the Turkish authorities, stopped here on his way to France. He considers the situation in Turkey critical, and says that many members of the political party opposing the Young Turks have been removed by the popular Hamidian method of being sewn up in sacks and dropped into the Bosphorus.

The relations of Turks and Germans in Constantinople are strained, and the latter no longer disguise their intention of making Turkey a German protectorate openly stating that Turkey is quite unable to govern her foreign population. It is also stated that every document requiring the Sultan's signature is first scrutinized by Von der Goltz.

British & French Capture Enemy's Trenches

GERMANY SENDS AN ULTIMATUM TO ROUMANIA

Quick Capture of Warsaw Then Crushing Drive to Paris Believed to be Kaiser's Plan

But France is Amply Prepared for any Mass Drive on the Capital---Joffre is Ready for Them---The South Wales Coal Miners' Strike Situation.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, July 19.—The quick capture of Warsaw, then crushing drive southward to the French Channel parts, and finally the triumphal entry into Paris, that is what the Kaiser is believed to have meant when he said a few days ago: "Germany will win the war by October." But France is amply prepared for any mass drive on the capital. Military men and strategic writers here are not worrying over the Kaiser's plans. "Let the Germans start," said a high official to-day. "Joffre will be there, and when they drop their guard he'll send in the knockout punch." Because of its close connection with future developments on the France-Flanders front, the great battle being waged for Warsaw holds Paris tense with excitement. Not since the Germans attempted to reach Paris last summer have the street crowds followed bulletin boards with such interest.

GRAVEST CRISIS SINCE WAR BEGAN.

LONDON, July 19.—That the gravest crisis England has faced since the war can only be averted by the Government taking over the South Wales coal mines, was the growing conviction in official circles to-day, when the cabinet met in special session to discuss the great coal strike. Government investigators believed that the miners will not object seriously to temporary nationalization of the mines. They pointed out that this would remove the chief bone of contention, the belief on the part of the miners that the owners are piling up huge fortunes by selling at "war prices." Unless this is done a settlement appears remote, the investigators frankly told President Runciman of the Government Board of Trade to-day.

PARIS, July 19.—The map fans are following every move of Russian and German generals with their pins and flags. From Swiss sources it is learned that General Von Hindenburg, far from "being in disgrace," is really in high favour with the German Emperor. Before the Warsaw campaign was started he held two important conferences with the Kaiser. It is reported here that he was told if he could squeeze the Russians out of Warsaw he would be given supreme command of the German forces in the west for a great drive on Calais and Paris. While other commanders were assigned to the task of sweeping the French out of Alsace, the Kaiser, according to Swiss reports, is said to have declared that even the defeat of the new dash on Paris would bring the Allies to to terms. He argued that the French must withdraw their forces from Alsace to meet the new German offensive and that the Allies thereby would lose their last hold on German soil and be willing to make peace.

ROME, July 19.—Montenegrin troops have occupied Graliovo after defeating the Austrians in a severe engagement.
Fifty Turkish officers in the garrison at Adrianople have been shot for instigating an anti-German plot, according to Salonika despatches printed by the Tribune to-day.

Foe's Offensive Against Riga Is Very Strong

LONDON, July 18. —A new German offensive of huge proportions with Riga, a great Russian seaport and the seat of the Governor-General of the Baltic Provinces, as its objective, is revealed in the latest official statements issued at Petrograd and Berlin. Military experts here construe the offensive to be a vast envelopment movement in which the Germans are making a herculean effort to destroy the Russian army. Both the German and Russian communications agree that the Germans forces are at the Windau River, near Goldingen, which is only 80 miles from Riga, the great strategic commercial metropolis in the Gulf of Riga and on the Upper Baltic.

An official statement received this morning from Petrograd adds details of sanguinary fighting all along the new line in efforts to hold back the German advance, which now is being concentrated on Riga and on Warsaw while the Austro-Hungarians are moving northward from the Dniester River.

GERMANS LEAVE DESOLATION BEHIND.

Advices reaching London to-day say that the Germans left a trail of desolation along the Baltic Sea from Memel to Libau, where the villas, hotels and casinos are alleged to have been destroyed, about the only exception, it is said, being the palace of a Polish nobleman. The palace now is being used as a military headquarters in which Prince Henry of Prussia and Field Marshal von Hindenburg recently conferred on the new offensive toward Riga.

Field Marshal Von Mackensen's army that swept through Galicia is giving signs of renewed activity in pursuance of the assumed plan of the Teutonic forces to attack simultaneously all along the sweeping 800-mile front, from the Baltic to Bessarabia. Unofficial reports through Geneva, declare that all the lower end of this line Austrian troops who crossed the Dniester, have been driven back to the other bank, where their retreat is being turned into a rout.

SAW CANADIAN CRUCIFIED

Sergt. Bristow Fastened to Fence by Bayonets of the Germans.

MONTREAL, July 19. — Sergt. Bristow, of the Second Battalion, C.E.F. was impaled on a wooden fence with German bayonets, according to Private J. Toppam, also of the Second Battalion, who passed through Montreal Friday night on his way back to his home at Oshawa. Private Toppam said that he himself had not seen Bristow when he was brought back to the Canadian base, but many of his comrades had seen the crucified man, and Toppam vouched for the truth of the story.

Toppam himself was invalied home after operations rendered necessary by the fatigue of marching. He arrived in Montreal Friday night with Private John Hawarth, of the Third Battalion, whose home is in Toronto.

Hawarth was one of the victims of the first gas attack, which was used against the Canadians. His voice was still little more than a hoarse whisper Friday night.

BIG GUNS HARD AT WORK TO THE NORTH OF ARRAS

PARIS, July 19.—The French War Department to-day gave out the following official statement:

"In the region to the north of Arras the cannonading continued during the night. It was particularly violent to the north of Souchez and between Neuville and Reclincourt.

"In the Argonne there was bomb and petard fighting in the region of Marie Therese, and violent cannonading at the ravine of Meurissons. Two German attacks against our positions on the side of Hill No. 263 (west of Beauruille) were repulsed.

"On the heights of the Meuse the bombardment of Esparges and of the region of Songaux reported in the last statement continued during the night.

GERMAN COUP FAILED.

"In Lorraine the Germans a bout ences, delivered a new attack against our trenches in the district southeast of the forest of Parroy. The assailants were dispersed.

"In the Vosges the enemy last night launched an attack upon the positions which he had lost at Ban-de-Sapt. It was checked by our curtains of artillery fire and the fire of our machine guns.

"A coup attempted by the Germans at eleven p.m. upon our works at the Tournies farm (1,600 metres northwest of the village of Benhomme), was completely defeated."

MORE EXAMPLES OF GERMAN "KULTUR"

Dead Bodies of Soldiers Are Being Reduced by Chemists.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19. — The Public Ledger prints the following London despatch:

The points gaect, whose effect there will be better opportunities to study presently in the hospitals in France, have made the Tommies "see red" to a point where the officers can no longer check their incontinent rage. There are fewer and fewer prisoners taken. I could give the name of one of the greatest surgeons of our time as authority for the statement that follows. In the Gallipoli peninsula, whence he recently returned, the Germans found the Turkish troops entirely too willing to be taken prisoners. For some of their number had fallen into British hands aforetime, and had been treated with greater kindness, poor devils, than they ever expected to receive this side of Paradise. With a fiendish cunning that Beelzebub might envy, the Germans thought out a way to assure the death of all who should fall into the hands of the allied forces, that there might be a fearful instead of an agreeable penalty. They took a dozen Australians, mutilated them, and crucified and then burned their officers before them. Is it to be wondered at when the blood-brethren of men so foully done to death become uncontrollable? Is it a triumphe of applied chemistry, or what is it, that the Germans are now taking the dead bodies of their own men home from the trenches and rendering them down into soaps and nitrates with the cool impersonal unconcern of the processes whereby the garbage of Berlin has been in times of peace converted into perfumes?

OPTIMISTIC REPORTS FROM CANADA'S WEST

Weather Conditions Have Been Favourable—Wheat Nearly All Headed Out.

MONTREAL, Q., July 17.—Crop reports received from the west by the C.P.R. at Montreal continue to be optimistic. The weather during the past week in Manitoba was warm and bright with sufficient rain to keep up the supply of moisture. Wheat is practically all headed out with a good length of straw. Professor Bradford, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, predicts considerably better than average crops. Flax is less satisfactory, but the acreage in flax is small. Hay crops may also be light and many farmers reseeded corn areas to other grains. In Saskatchewan the weather conditions have been favourable with good growing weather. The set back due to frosts and cold weather in the month of June were retrieved by ideal conditions in the first two weeks of July. At some points rain is needed.

In Alberta along the main line of the C.P.R., and in the south the weather has been bright and warm with showers. In the north the rains have been heavier and more settled weather should be beneficial. In districts in Southern Alberta there is every indication of a good yield. South of Lethbridge cutting of fall wheat is expected to commence August 1st. So far damage from hail has not been very serious. On the whole Alberta should have the best wheat yield of years.

VILLAGE RECAPTURED IN BAYONET ATTACK

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 19.—Fierce fighting continues on the right bank of the Oraye. Three enemy regiments attacked the village of Podoosie, captured it, and crossed the river taking five Russian guns. The Russians later succeeded in recapturing guns and village in a fierce bayonet attack.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

"I generally used to go and sojourn in a little town in south-eastern Kansas, and I had a lot o' friends there who used to hold me up as a model young man. I claimed that my business was to report crops and general conditions to an Eastern trade paper, and as I didn't never borrow money nor compete with anyone else, they all thought well o' me.

"One time we held up a gamblin' joint and made a big haul and I went back to my little town to rest up and contribute to charities and churches and do whatever other philanthropy was possible in such a quiet little hole. I was out callin' one night near the post office, and when I left I was feelin' mellow and genial, and walked along as though I really was what I pertended to be.

"As I crossed the alley, four fellers pounced on me, took me to the back of the post office which had been opened, stuffed the packets of stamps into my shirt and the money into my pockets, and then shot in the air a time or two and knocked me on the head. When I came to, I had the cuffs on, and was in charge of three men who had been prowlin' about the town for the last few days. I had thought they acted suspicious; but I knew I wouldn't do any harm to be watched in that town, and I also knew that it would be next to impossible to prove anything on me anywhere, so I hadn't worried a mite.

"Well, Dave Kensington was the name of the deputy who managed the thing and he paraded me around town the next day as though I was a two-headed calf. It was twenty miles to the railroad station, and he and the other two started with me to catch a train for Leavenworth, ridin' horses they had brought with 'em from the railroad town.

"As we passed through a little mott o' timber, six fellers rose up and cut down on the deputies, and then rode away without a word to me. Kensington was killed outright, and the other two were bad wounded. At first I didn't know what to do; but after studyin' it over, I armed myself, rode to a farm house, made an old man file off the cuffs, and then cat-footed it back to No-man's Land where Bill and—and Banty generally scattered to. That was really about the wind-up. We had purty fair stakes and we made us a camp over in a canon north-west o' Tascosa and rode in there now and again for a little sport; but we didn't bother any law-abidin' citizens."

"What tale did the survivin' deputies tell?"

"They said that the whole thing had been a put-up job to get Dave Kensington. That word had been sent to him to watch me as I intended to collect my gang at that town for a raid on a Wells-Fargo shipment. On the night the post office was mussed up—the blame thing never did have enough on hand to pay for sortin' out a mailbag—two strangers had drifted in and had got the deputies into a friendly game at the hotel not far away. They never could figger out just why I happened to be found knocked out, and lyin' on the post office floor; but it was plain enough that it was my gang which had rescued me and had killed Dave Kensington; so I was in bad and for keeps. Why, I, myself, more 'n half thought it was the Stern boys who had rescued me until I saw 'em again."

"What's your guess, now?" sez I.

"I've quit guessin'," sez Tom Smith. "It generally happens that when a gang leader gets caught, the rest o' the gang follows after mighty shortly, and whoever put it through has the goods on us as far as circumstantial evidence goes. All he has to do now is to turn us over to a United States Marshal, and our case is all made out."

"I should think," sez I, "that knowin' all this you could have kept from callin' Panther Emmons by name that day at Big Jeff's."

"I had been drinkin'," sez he, "and then—I don't exactly know why it is—but I allus want to put all the frills on a scene I can think up when I once take the bit in my teeth. When I planted out a cold-blooded hold-up, I went through with it without any circus additions; but when I got mixed up in a rough-house I couldn't help but put in a lot of extras, and just the smell o' licker is enough to make me giddy. I never did want to kill anybody, but I liked to show off my shootin', and I liked to hear my own voice."

"If the' hadn't been any lookin'-glasses in your home," sez I, "like as not you wouldn't 'a' been troubled this a-way."

"I suppose not," sez he; "but now you've got enough o' my story to know what my chances are, and what would you do if you were me?"

"I'd stop herdin' goats," sez I, "'cause that seems to me one shade worse than swingin' out o' the world. I own up that you're plumb up against it; but this is what I'd do, so help me: I'd shave myself, marry Kate, and start into whatever business I was able to do best, at some point where I'd not likely be bothered.

"Why do you want to hang around here, what earthly good can come of all this spyin' around and hidin' out? Why, man, it's all nonsense, and Kate would a heap sooner be your widder than to die an old maid of suspense.

"A married man stands more show of gettin' off light and bein' pardoned, too. Take on at the Lion Head again and we'll all give you the best possible reputation. You allus claim that a feller like you gets tried on his reputation, instead of any particular crime. We'll fix you up a reputation!"

He sighed and looked down at the grass a long time. "When I left, I intended to go back home," sez he, "but I simply couldn't, with all these things hangin' over me. My people didn't handle me right; but still they're good, respectable people, and I couldn't drag them under what was hangin' over me. When I saw you, the' was so much fresh air still stickin' to ya, that you made me hangry to the heart and I just had to come. There's a—a person out here that I simply have to see again before I can do anything definite."

He stopped and I gazed off into the night, and then I said in the tone I used in gossipin' about the weather: "Bill and Banty Stern have been pirutin' around near the Horse-shoe, lately."

He whirled on me with his eyes narrowed. "How do ya know?" sez he.

"Kate told me," sez I.

"Did they speak to her?" sez he.

"No, they hadn't even seen her at last accounts."

"You must keep them from her," sez he, shootin' it into me as an order.

"I don't see where I'm called to look out for her," sez I, purty cool. "I've told her a time or two that just as soon as she discards you, I'll provide her with more sensible company, but as long as she sticks to you, I don't see where I have any call to fret."

"Do you mean to say you're goin' to fail me, now?" sez he, dartin' a look into me which told plain enough how he had come to be the leader of his gang.

I hadn't ever belonged to his gang, though, and so his look was only amusin'. "Listen to me, Tom Smith," sez I. "Whatever I do for that girl, I'll do for that girl: but what I would like to know is, what do you intend to do?"

"I just can't tell," sez he. "I tried to keep clear of her, I did honest, but it was all in the cards. I don't take much stock in ever climbin' back over that fence and bein' a regular inlaw again, free to say what I please and go where I please, and it grinds me fierce to think o' draggin' her down here with me. Then, too, I've got somethin' else beside the law hangin' over me, and I can't tell what I'll be able to even try until I see this person I told you I had to see. It was to see this person more than anything else that brought me back here."

He spoke altogether down in the mouth and I felt mighty sorry for him, as he looked into the dyin' coals.

"Tom Smith," I sez, "did you ever harken to the still, small voice of your own private instincts? Did you ever just listen for the first hint you got from the inside as to what you really ort to do, and then do it and keep on abidin' by the judgment o' that voice no matter where it took ya?"

"Old Josiah told me all about that," sez Tom Smith; "but I can't risk it in this case, I don't dare to. What that voice whispers for me to do would be to simply look Fate in the face and holler for a show-down—and I haven't the nerve."

"I'm a friend to ya, Tom Smith," sez I, "and I'm willin' to risk about all I've got to risk in provin' it, and I want you to remember what I'm tellin' you is comin' from the centre o' my heart. Old Josiah Cornell has followed this rule through the four-score years, followed it again' his better judgment, so called, followed it when it seemed leadin' him plumb into the wilderness, followed it until it finally brought him out above the fog and the mist to where all that life holds for him lay waitin' for him.

"What he craves most is self-respect and a body tired but clean; and this he's finally found. I'm not advisin' you to do any one thing except to listen to your own instinct, and do whatever it tells ya to do."

Then we shook hands and parted.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

All the way home I puzzled over the fix Tom Smith was in. I knew as well as he did that the proper thing was for him never to have met Kate at all, but that was beyond the mark now. He had acted on his instinct in warnin' her again' Welchy, and I didn't doubt but if he would just quit tryin' to think a way out and would simply hold himself ready for the first genuwine hint, he'd get the right marchin' orders for sure.

Still, this was askin' a sight. The United States was after him for skimmin' that post office, Kansas wanted him for nottin' the deputy, the Sterns wanted him for having put Buck out of the game, and now if Banty, the worst of the lot, really did know about Kate, she'd want him with more vehemence than all the rest put together.

Tom Smith reminded me of a tale a feller once told about a nigger named Mahomet. This Mahomet he dreamed out a new religion in which every nigger 'at killed a Christian would go to a heaven where he'd have seven beautiful blonde wives, and the feller said 'at this religion had took more thorough 'n airy other one he'd ever heard tell of: but when Mahomet came to die and was put into a coffin, the earth wouldn't have him, hell wouldn't have him, nor heaven wouldn't have him. The feller had to catch a train before he had time to tell me what finally did become of him, and so Tom Smith and Mahomet looked to me as though they'd have to herd by 'emselves clear out beyond everything possible.

Average Life in the Allied Trenches, Says J. Garner Smith.

The average life of an officer in the trenches of the Allies in the present war is twenty-three days, according to a statement appearing in the July Bulletin of the Seventh Regiment. The statement occurs in a letter from J. Garner Smith, a former officer in the Queen's Westminster Rifles of London. Mr. Smith inclosed a copy of a letter he had recived from his son, Lieutenant Eric Smith, who subsequently met death on the firing line in France.

MORMON CHURCH FACES SEARCHING FEDERAL INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 18.—Upon the outcome of the case of Albert Geddes, who is seeking to prove that he is a son of David Eccles, and entitled to a $1,000,000 share in the vast estate, which now is being heard in Ogden, much will depend affecting the future of the Mormon Church in Utah.

If polygamy is shown to be practiced in violation of the law, prosecutions will follow. Already the United States Attorney for Utah is investigating a complaint that the Mormon Church is at the head of a $10,000,000 beet sugar company, and is trying to drive all competition to the wall. He is watching the Geddes case on the theory that information may develop, which will warrant the institution of anti-trust proceedings under the Sherman law.

Officials of the Department of Justice made it plain that they would await the report of the United States Attorney before deciding on a course of action. He has a free hand to get all the information possible.

Plural marriages, long practiced in Utah, are forever prohibited in the act of July 16, 1894, admitting Utah to the Union. This places the jurisdiction in the hands of the federal government, which stands ready to enforce the requirement. There have been report after report that polygamous marriages existed in Utah, but the government has never found sufficient evidence for prosecution since the issuance of the Church edict prohibiting the custom.

Evidence that the Mormon Sugar Company, which is capitalized at $10,000,000 and hich has Joseph F. Smith, head of the Church, as its director, is trying to monopolize the beet sugar industry in Utah has been presented to the Department of Justice. The United States Attorney in Utah has been conducting an investigation into the business methods of the corporation, but the report is not yet complete.

This situation received publicity during the consideration of the sugar schedule of the Underwood tariff law, passed by Congress at the outset of the Wilson administration.

Any prosecution that might be instituted would come under the section of the Serman anti-trust law which prohibits monopolies in restrain of trade. Both civil and criminal actions against the directors of the corporation would be possible.

The Geddes case is attracting attention among officials here, who recall the inquiry by the Tom Smith into the question of the desirability of seating Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, which attracted nation-wide publicity. Any action that would follow the Geddes case, however, would be along a different line, since the Senate acted on its constitutional authority to pass on its membership.

DIVINE LOVE FOR THE NEW CREATION

God's Love For the Church Different From His Love For the World.

Adam's Disobedience Alienated His Posterity From God — Jesus' Obedience Secured Opportunity of Return to Divine Favor—Justification and Sanctification — New Creation Tested as to Loyalty and Obedience—The Messiah of Many Members—Riches of Love Divine, All Love Excelling.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Toronto, Ont., July 18.—Pastor Russell spoke here to-day on the text, "The Father Himself loveth you." (John 16:27.) Among other things he said:

This is one of the most wonderful texts in the Bible. When we think how great God is and how little man is, when we consider that sin has blotted out in very large measure whatever there was of God's image in humanity, we are constrained to wonder what this text can mean. We are not surprised that the Father loves the angels, who are perfect, without blemish in any sense of the word. But how could He love mankind? We read, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16.) This text tells of some kind of great love that God had for the whole world of mankind.

God had a sympathetic love for humanity, not an affectionate love; for there was nothing in fallen man worthy of Divine love. He felt just as we would feel for some poor injured dog or cat—we would bind up its paw and give it something to eat. So God's sympathy for the world takes notice of the fact that mankind have gotten into a great deal of trouble through the curse which came upon Father Adam through disobedience to his Creator's command. Divine mercy and sympathy have gone out toward our race to such an extent that God has provided a great Plan of Salvation for mankind. He has provided the death of our Lord Jesus Christ to be our Redemption-price—not to recover us from eternal torture, but from death. Unless we were rescued from that perishing condition of death, we would have no future life whatever.

His first great step on behalf of mankind turned our dying condition into a sleeping condition. Instead of perishing as do the brute beasts, men merely fall asleep, to wait for the morning of the New Dispensation, when our Lord will call forth those sleepers from the tomb. (John 5:28, 29.) They will be called forth to an opportunity for restitution to human perfection in a world-wide Paradise—a restitution for which God has made provision based upon the death of our Lord Jesus Christ—a restitution lifting mankind out of sin, misery and death back to all that was lost in Eden. St. Peter tells us that this Restitution is mentioned by all the Holy Prophets. (Acts 3:19-23.) In their writings are repeated references to the time when all the willing and obedient shall be brought back into fellowship with God, and all the wicked shall be destroyed in the Second Death.

Over and above Divine love for mankind in general comes the love mentioned in our text. God so loved the world that He provided for their redemption from sin and death. But to the Church our Lord Jesus says, "The Father Himself loveth you." No one belongs to this class except the saints—those in covenant relationship with Him through Christ. (Psalm 50:5.) It does not include those who merely have turned from sin to say, "I will not lead a wicked life any longer." To these the Father is paying no attention. They are still of the world, still condemned, still children of wrath, even as others; for they have not taken the only step which will transfer them from being children of wrath to being children of God.

We are not to think of the Heavenly Father as exercising no discretion in bestowing His love. If He loves any one, He loves that person for some reason. So in the character of those to whom our Lord Jesus referred there must have been something which constituted them worthy of the Father's love. The commendable thing in their character was that they had given themselves to God to do His will. They had come back into God's family as sons. —John 1:12, 13.

Adam had been a son of God; but he sinned and forfeited the Father's love. When he came under the sentence of death, "Dying, thou shalt die," he was cut off from fellowship with God. He and all his posterity became sinners under the death sentence, unworthy of Divine notice or care. While God has permitted certain blessings to come to mankind—the sunshine, the rain and other material favors—yet He has kept Himself aloof from our race, and has treated mankind as aliens and strangers. Their claim upon Him was forfeited when disobedience came in.

Since all mankind were born in that condition which would not be pleasing to God, and since the Church are still in very much the same condition, why does the Father love those who have given themselves to Him in consecration? It is because from the Bible viewpoint a very great change took place when they came into the family of God. There is only one way back into harmony and fellowship with the Father. Jesus is the way; for, as the Bible points out, in harmony with the Father's Plan our Lord gave Himself sacrificially, with all the rights which He had as a man; and in due time the merit of His sacrifice is to be applicable to Adam and all his race. Christ's death is the satisfaction-price for the sin of the whole world. And although it has not yet been appropriated for the whole world, God is inviting a certain class to come out of the world in advance of the remainder of our race. Of these our Lord said, "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world."—John 17:16.

Those disciples whom Jesus was addressing had come out of the world. They had left everything that they might be His pupils and do just the right thing in the right way. Thus to be children of God was their chief aim and ambition. The first step in this direction is justification—the being made right, just. Justification and righteousness mean the same thing; they are different ways of expressing the same thought. We must be made right with God before He will deal with us at all.

God has permitted six great Thousand-Year Days for the world to have experience with sin and death. During all this time He has let mankind see what they could do to help themselves out of sin and death conditions. We have made a sorry failure of it. The wisest people in the world have been unable to deliver themselves from the bondage of sin and death that is upon the whole world. God's time for delivering mankind is the great Sabbath of the Lord our God, when Jesus and His Church will be associated in the blessing of all the families of the earth.

During man's Work Week the race has had a severe lesson of what sin is and what it will do. As we look over into Europe, we see what evil passions can accomplish. Yet the savagery there is only beginning; it will be far worse. With all our preaching and teaching, with all our surgery and medicine, we have not bettered our race very much. When we perceive that sin has accomplish this evil work, we dread sin; we realise that it is the most terrible thing that can befall any one. When the whole world come to realize the true situation, men will know that the entrance of sin is the worst thing that can happen.

According to the Divine Program for human salvation, the Lord Jesus Christ was to do a sacrificial work for the race; next the Church was to be gathered out from amongst mankind, and then the Millennial Age was to begin. When our Lord Jesus gave His life freely and unreservedly to the Father in consecration at Jordan, God started a New Creation, by begetting the Son with the Holy Spirit to the Divine nature. As He was coming up out of the water, the Holy Spirit came upon Him, anointing Him to all the glorious work which He is to accomplish as the great King and the great Priest for the world of mankind.

When the Father planned this New Creation in connection with human salvation, He arranged that the New Creatures should be those who would give up all their own rights as men, laying everything at His feet, and desiring to know and to do the Divine will. As our Lord was the beginning of the creation of God (Revelation 3:1), the Father wished Him to have the highest place in this New Creation. The angels never had such a test of loyalty as came to Jesus; they never laid down life on one plane and passed to a lower plane, as He did. Although they have been loyal in everything which God has asked of them, He did not put this test upon them.

When at the beginning of His ministry our Lord, then thirty years of age, gave Himself unreservedly to the Father, saying, "Lo, I come (in the volume of the Book it is written of Me), to do Thy will, O God," the Father manifested His special love for the Son by anointing Him with the Holy Spirit, making Him a member of the Divine family on the highest plane of being. Then for three and a half years the Father tested Him, proved Him, and found Him worthy to receive the honor, the glory, the power, the might. (Revelation 5:12). How we rejoice in our Saviour's victory! How we love and admire Him, for the same reason that the Father does! There is something of character there.

The Apostle tells us that there was one feature of God's Plan for human salvation which was not made known in the past; that is, the fact that there was to be a Body of Christ—not merely one individual, but a company. This figure of speech we use when we speak of the body of Congress, of which the chairman is the head. So we speak of the Body of Christ, of which Christ Jesus is the Head. God gave Him to be Head over the Church, which is His Body. (Ephesians 1:19-23.) Nobody knew beforehand that The Messiah is to be composed of many members, and that the members were to be selected from amongst mankind. The Jews simply expected Messiah to come. They read of the glory, and thought only of the glory and of one person, not realising that they themselves would have an opportunity to be of this Messiah, class—just what the Jews are still expecting.

Through St. Paul the Lord tells us that in this Body of Christ there would be both Jews and Gentiles; and that the twain were to become one New Man, one complete Christ — Jesus the Head, and the Church the Body. (Ephesians 2:11-16; 4:11-16.) The first members of this Body came from the Jews, to whom the call was first to be made, because they were the natural seed of Abraham. God had told Abraham that He would give the first chance to the Jews. It is wonderful to contemplate how many were ready for this call. Probably twenty-five thousand Jews responded quickly to the Gospel Message, thus showing a wonderful condition of consecration to God and His ways.

Then the door was thrown open to the Gentiles. There were not many of these ready for the call; and so it has taken eighteen hundred years to gather from amongst the Gentiles enough to complete the exact predestined number. If the Gentiles had been as thoroughly consecrated as were the Jews, the required number might have been found during the first century. But the Gentiles had not had the previous instructions of the Law to assist them, and therefore it has taken a much longer time to take out the proportionate number. Thus we were called out of the world to be followers of Jesus—invited to make the same kind of consecration to God which He made, and to receive and to manifest the same Holy Spirit —the Spirit of anointing.

During this Gospel Age the Father is calling only those who have the spirit of His Son, whose disposition was one of faith and obedience. These cannot have the same degree of obedience because their flesh is imperfect; but they can have the same degree as far as the mind, the will, is concerned. We can will to be whatever we like; and God is looking at the will. He knows far better than we do that we cannot do the things that we would. The Apostle said, "Yea, I judge not mine own self. * * He that judgeth me is the Lord." (1 Corinthians 4:3, 4.) St. Paul did not know how much allowance to make for even himself; and we do not know how much allowance to make for ourselves, our neighbors, our friends, our brothers. Therefore the Lord instructs us not to judge one another; for whatever kind of judgment we mete to others will be the standard of our own judgment.

The ability to criticise others manifests knowledge of just what constitutes the wrong act or word, and renders the one aspiring to be judge the more responsible. We are to render all the help we can to others, and leave the matter of disciplining to the Lord. He alone knows what experiences His people should have. Therefore His people should avoid all judging, condemning and fault-finding. Let God do the judging and any punishing which He may see necessary.

In the Millennial Age mankind will simply put away sin and try to live as nearly right as possible. Then God will bring them up to perfection. But now it is different. To those who come trusting that Jesus has made satisfaction for their sins, a certain measure of His merit is imputed as soon as their consecration has been accepted by the Lord. To illustrate: Suppose the one who offers himself to God in full consecration represents twenty per cent. of a perfect human being. Since he is willing to give his little all to God, our Lord Jesus imputes to him eighty per cent. Thus the person has the one hundred per cent. representing the perfection of human nature—"complete in Him." Then our Lord, the great High Priest, takes His own eighty per cent. and the person's twenty per cent. and presents it all to the Father. Just when we take the same step that Jesus took then the Father begins to love us with a special love.

The Father's love, which began when He begat us with His Holy Spirit, continues with us as long as we are loyal to Him and in proportion to the degree of our loyalty. Should we at any time prove disloyal, like Judas Iscariot, the Holy Spirit would be taken from us. There is forgiveness for errors made through weakness of the flesh; but disloyalty to the Lord will not be forgiven. A sin against the Holy Spirit will never have forgiveness.

We should all be very careful not to have the Judas spirit—not to barter off the Lord or the Truth or the brethren for thirty pieces of silver of any kind. Some betray the Lord by saying, "For business reasons I must do thus and so." Others betray the Lord by declaring, "I know that I am not preaching just as I should—that I am slandering God's character and His Word, as well as misrepresenting myself; but I must make a living." Why should such persons be acknowledged before the Father and the holy angels? But only the Lord could determine whether such were worthy of the Second Death. They could not be of the Body of Christ, however.

What a wonderful honor is this to which God has called us! Those who have been begotten again by His Holy Spirit have been anointed from the day of their begetting to be kings and priests unto God and to reign with Christ a thousand years. There are tribulations, identified with all their experiences; nevertheless, while they have tribulations, they also have the peace of God, which passes human understanding. As the Bible declares, all things are theirs; for they are Christ's, and Christ is God's. He has promised grace sufficient for every trial; and even the adversities of life shall work together for good to them, because they love God and are the called according to His purpose.

Joy of Heaven to Earth come down."

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

A Dangerous Mine.

The peculiarly dangerous type of mine which is being used by the enemy in the Dardanelles operations is the invention of a Swedish scientist. It was offered some two years ago to both England and France and rejected, but was eagerly snapped up by Berlin. It floats automatically with the ebb and flow of the tide, and a very slight concussion will cause it to explode.

Daylight on Tires

Reveals Why Goodyears Won Top Place in 4 Years

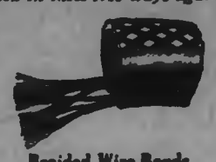
Five extra features—all under our control—have won for Goodyear Tires against a field of rivals. A few leading makes—in rubber and fabric—approach the Goodyear standard. There are many which fall below, so will always be lower priced. But the vital point to remember is this: Goodyear Tires alone are fortified in these five ways against the major tire troubles:

No-Rim-Cut Feature

This combats rim-cutting in the only successful way. It protects the side-walls of the tire from damage caused by rims. Rivals now try to build their tires like this. But we control the method. Make-shift substitutes have never equaled Goodyear's way.

Our "On-Air" Cure

Most tires are cured but once—on an iron core. Goodyears are the only tires receiving a second cure on bags of air. Under heat this air expands and smooths out the fabric. So we save many blowouts—caused in rival tires by wrinkled fabric.



Braided Wire Beads

In the beads of these tires we vulcanize six flat bands of 126 piano wires to hold the tire to the rim. Others have tried wire "cable," "strands" of wire, etc. But ours has proved the practical way to combine rubber and metal securely in the base.

All-Weather Tread

Note the matchless beauty of these rows of rugged, deep-cut blocks. They are sharp-edged, so they grip where common "non-skids" slip. They are tough and extra thick, so they lessen punctures and give more mileage.

Then come our famous Rubber Rivets between the tread and "carcass." They hold on the tread securely—by actual test they lessen loose tread risk by 60%.

These five costly Goodyear features save endless trouble and expense for car owners. Yet our prices are low because of large output. Goodyears cost 37% less today than they did two years ago, when rubber was higher and our output was smaller. Get our new low price from any dealer.

HUMAN BEINGS AND GERMANS THE ONLY CLASSES IN WORLD

Rudyard Kipling's Remarkable Recruiting Speech—No Crime, No Cruelty, No Abomination That the Mind of Man Can Conceive Which the German Has Not Perpetrated, is Not Perpetrating and Will Not Perpetrate if He is Allowed to Go On.

The full text of the remarkable speech delivered by Mr. Rudyard Kipling at the great recruiting meeting held at Southport, Lancashire, June 23rd, is as follows:

Mr. Kipling said: "I am here to speak on behalf of a system in which I do not believe, and in which, I dare say, a good many of you do not believe— the system of voluntary service. (Cheers.) It seems to me unfair and unbusinesslike that after ten months of war we should still be raising men by the same methods as we raise money at a charity bazaar —(hear,)—but clumsy and unfair as that system is it is the only one we have and we must work it. We committed ourselves to it in time of peace when we decided that we would not endure national service on any terms whatever. We chose it because it made us more comfortable and released us from obligations which might have cut into our time, our pleasure, and our money. We believed that in the hour of danger there would always be enough men ready at their own free will to defend their country. Our belief was justified in the past. The mistake we made—and it was not for want of being warned—was that we did not conceive a war on such a scale as that which we face to-day. The system by which we are meeting that war has shown itself to be grossly unfair, but since we chose it of deliberate intent in the face of grave warnings we cannot, now that it is being put to the test, shelter ourselves behind its defects. (Hear, hear.) How do matters stand in regard to recruiting to-day? There is, of course, a small, pernicious minority who do not intend to inconvenience themselves for any consideration, but I am convinced that the overwhelming bulk of the men who have not yet come forward to enlist argue: 'Why should I go when my neighbour stays behind? Make it equal all around and I'll go gladly.'' That is a detail that should have been settled in time of peace. It is illogical to complain of it now. If it is changed soon so much the better, but meantime we must reap what we have sown.

How Germany Prepared.

The German has spent quite as much energy in the last forty-five years preparing for war as we have in convincing ourselves that wars should not be prepared for. (Hear hear). He has started this war was a magnificent equipment which took him time and heavy taxation to get together. That equipment we have had to face for the last ten months We have had to face more. The Germans went into this war with a mind which had been carefully trained out of the idea of every moral sense or obligation— private, public, or international. He does not recognize the existence of any law, least of all those he has subscribed to himself in making war against combatants or non-combatants, men, women, and children. He has done from his own point of view very well indeed. All mankind bears witness to-day that there is no crime, no cruelty, no abomination that the mind of man can conceive, which the German has not perpetrated, is not perpetrating, and will not perpetrate if he is allowed to go on. These horrors and perversions were not invented by him on the spur of the moment. They were arranged beforehand—(hear, hear) — their outlines are laid down in the German War-Book. They are part of the system in which Germany has been scientifically trained. It is the essence of that system to make such a hell of the countries where her armies set foot that any terms she may offer will seem like Heaven to the people whose bodies she has defiled and whose minds she has broken of set purpose and intention. (Hear hear.) In the face of these facts it is folly for any fit man to waste one minute in talking about what he would do if our system of recruiting were changed, or to wait on, as some men are waiting, in the hope of compulsion being introduced. (Cheers.) We shall not be saved by argument. We shall most certainly not be saved by hanging on to our private jobs and businesses. Our own strength and our own will alone can save us. If these fail the alternative for us is robbery, rape of the women, starvation, as a prelude to slavery. Nor need we expect any miracle to save us. So long as an unbroken Germany exists, so long will life on this planet be intolerable not only for us and for our Allies, but for all humanity. And humanity knows it. At present six European nations are bearing the burden of the war. There is a fringe of shivering neutrals almost under the German guns who look out of their front doors and see, as they were meant to see, what has been done to Belgium, the German-guaranteed neutral.

Human Beings—and Germans.

But however the world pretends to divide itself, there are only two divisions in the world to-day— human beings and Germans. And the German knows it. Human beings have long ago sickened of him and everything connected with him — (hear hear)—of all he does, says, thinks, or believes. From the ends of the earth to the ends of the earth they desire nothing more greatly than that this unclean thing should be thrust out from the men-scents and the memory of the nations. The German's answer to the world's loathing is: "I am strong. I kill. I shall go on killing by all means in my power till I have imposed my will on all human beings." He gives no choice. He leaves no middle way. He has reduced civilization and all that civilization means to the simple question of kill or be killed. Up to the present as far as we can find out, Germany has suffered some three million casualties. She can suffer another three million, and, for aught we know, another three million after that. We have no reason to believe that she will break up suddenly and dramatically as a few people still expect. Why should she? She took two generations to prepare herself in every detail and through every fibre of her national being for this war. She is playing for the highest stakes in the world, the dominion of the world. It seems to me that she must either win or bleed to death almost where her lines run to-day. Therefore we and our Allies must continue to pass our children through fire to Moloch until Moloch perish. (Cheers.) This as I see it is where we stand and where Germany stands.

Our Fate if We Lose.

Turn your mind for a moment to the idea of a conquering Germany. You need not go far to see what it would mean to us. In Belgium at this hour several million Belgians are making war material or fortifications for their conquerors. They are given enough food to support life as the German thinks it should be supported. By the way, I believe the United States of America supplies a large part of the food. In return, they are compelled to work at the point of the bayonet If they object they are shot. Their factories, their houses and their public buildings have long ago been gutted, and everything in them that was valuable or useful has been packed up and sent into Germany. They have no more property and no more rights than cattle; and they cannot lift a hand to protect the honour of their women. And less than a year ago they were one of the most civilized and prosperous of the nations of the earth. There has been nothing like the horror of their fate in all history, and this system is in full working order withing fifty miles of the English coast. Where I live I can hear the guns that are trying to extend it. The same system exists in such parts of France and Poland as are in German hands. But whatever has been dealt out to Belgium, France and Poland will be England's fate ten-fold if we fail to subdue the Germans. (Hear, hear.) That we shall be broken, plundered, robbed and enslaved like Belgium will be but the first part of the matter. There are special reasons in the German mind why we should be morally and mentally shamed and dishonoured beyond any other people—why we should be degraded till those who survive may scarcely dare to look each other in the face. Be perfectly sure, therefore, that if Germany is victorious every refinement of outrage which is within the compass of the German imagination will be inflicted on us in every aspect of our lives. Over and above this no pledge can we offer, no guarantee we can give, will be accepted by Germany as binding. She has broken her own most solemn oaths, pledges and obligations, and by the very fact of her existence she is bound to trust nothing and to recognise nothing except immediate superior force, backed by illuminating cruelty. (Hear, hear). So, you see, there are no terms possible. Realise, too, if the Allies are beaten, there will be no spot on the globe where a soul can escape from the domination of this enemy of mankind. There has been childish talk that the Western Hemisphere would offer a refuge from oppression. Put that thought from your mind. If the Allies were defeated, Germany would not need to send a single battleship over the Atlantic. She would issue an order and it would be obeyed Civilization would be bankrupt and the western world would be taken over with the rest of the wreckage by Germany, the Receiver. So you see, there is no retreat possible. There are no terms and no retreat in this war. It must go forward, and with those men of England who are eligible for service, but who have not yet offered themselves, the decision of the war rests. (Cheers.)

More Men and More Arms.

Let us look at a few figures. Like yourselves, I have no definite information, but as far as one can estimate rather more than two million men have joined the army up to date. This is an impressive record till one remembers that the population of these islands is rather more than forty-five million, so that the present portion works out as about 5 per cent., for the total population and 10 per cent. for the total male population. We do not know how many soldiers we shall need to end the war, but we do know that we do not need 80 per cent. of the male population to make ammunition and carry on the necessary work of the country during the war. People who won't look facts in the face ask sometimes, "What's the use of piling in men before one has the arms and equipment for them." The answer is quite simple You can use equipment the minute you get it, but you can't use a man until he has been trained. (Hear hear). That is why the supply of men must always be months ahead of other supplies. And we need a steady unbroken flow of men—young and without domestic ties for choice—always coming on into training. Once again I admit as freely as any of you here the immense unfairness of our system which has been well called conscription by calamity, but it is the system we have chosen, and till we have another we must work it. Those who believe in national service can take comfort from the thought, that if the Government has not yet brought it in, they must be quicker than the Government (this isn't difficult) and bring themselves in. Those who believe in the principles of voluntary service must realize that now is the one time for them to show what an excellent system it is by voluntarily shouldering their responsibility (Cheers.) In the meantime public opinion is hardening every day against the eligible men who have excuses which are not reasons for not enlisting. Public opinion is hardening against those parents, wives, and relatives and employers who directly or indirectly are keeping these men back. You can't expect people who have given or lost their own flesh and blood in this war to be patient or sympathetic with people whose families are still untouched and unseparated. That feeling may be reasonable or unreasonable, but it is one result of our system, and as more men join, it will increase. What's the good of waiting till it breaks bounds? (Cheers.)

A Peace More Terrible Than War.

This is for us, in truth, war to the death against the power of darkness with whom any peace except on our own terms would be more terrible than any war. Words cannot begin to do justice to the devotion and bravery of our men who have already gone up against that power. They have dealt, almost as a matter of routine, in battles any one of which in the old days would have made the marvel and the glory of a generation. They have endured as never British troops have been called upon to endure, the most amazing devices of warfare and the unclean malice of the enemy. They have proved themselves through all these things heroes without stain. The counties know, the great cities know, and the little villages where they mark the names on the church door know, what their neighbours and kin have done.

There is no part of the land to-day which has not its new reverence and pride in our armies' achievements, and no part has better right to this pride than Lancashire. But the need —the Empire's great need— is for more men of this mould. In the days that seem so little and so far off now —the days when we dealt in words— there used to be a saying which ran 'What Lancashire thinks to-day, England will think to-morrow." Let us change that saying for three years, or the duration of the war, to "What Lancashire does to-day, England will do to-morrow." (Subdued cheers.)

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart bad and smothering feelings came on till I thought I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me, so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework and have a family of ten."

SPECIAL PRICE REPORT ISSUED BY DEPARTMENT

The prevalence of war during a considerable part of the year 1914 lends a special interest to the report on prices just issued by the Department of Labour. The volume is the fifth annual report on the subject and known technically as "Wholesale Price in Canada, 1914," though containing also much information as to retail prices. Prices during 1914, from week to week, or from month to month are given for some 300 commodities representative of production and consumtion in Canada, divided into the following groups: Grains and Fodders, Animals and Meats, Dairy products, Fish, Fruit and Vegetables, Miscellaneous groceries, Textiles, Hides, Leathers, Boots and Shoes, Metals and Implements, Fuel and Lighting, Lumber, Miscellaneous Building Materials, Paints, Oils and Glass, House Furnishings, Drugs and Chemicals, Furs, Liquors, Tobaccos, and Sundries. The report includes also index numbers showing the price movement in each commodity and group back to 1890 and analysis of changes during the year with detailed information as to conditions affecting prices, production, demand, trade conditions, etc.

Findings of the Report.

The opening paragraphs of the report are as follows: "The factor which chiefly affected Canadian prices during the year 1914 was the outbreak in August of the great European war. From January until April the general price-level was steady with a slight tendency upward; there after there was a decline of two points in the index number, during June and July, the latter being the lowest month of the year. The war, however, at once caused advances of about seven points, and though there was a reaction almost immediately, and although the year ended on approximately the same level as it began, the effect on the average for the twelve months was a rise. The Departmental index number (which includes 272 commodities) stood at 136.1 for 1914, compared with 135.5 for 1913, and 134.4 for 1912, these numbers being percentages of the average prices prevailing during the decade 1890-99, the period adopted by the Department as the basis of comparison. The point reached in September, namely, 4.3, was the highest recorded by the number since 1890.

The chief increase for the year as a whole appeared in the groups grains and fodder, which rose 14 per cent. animals and meats 6 per cent., woollens 8 per cent., hides 10 per cent., drugs and chemicals 7 per cent. Raw furs declined 33 per cent., fuel and lighting 6 per cent. and cottons 5 per cent. Food prices returned to the high levels that prevailed in the latter part of 1911 and early 1912. Meats were on a high level throughout the year, but showed much weakness in the last three months."

Retail Prices.

An appendix to the report gives the average retail prices of some thirty-two articles of food and of coal, wood and coal oil, and the rent of a representative workingman's dwelling in each of the localities of the Dominion having a popualtion of 10,000 and over for each year back to 1910. A statement showing the average weekly expediture of a typical family of five on these staple commodities gives the cost of a budget of food at $7.73, as compared with $7.33 in 1913 and 1912, $7.17 in 1911 and $6.96 in 1910. Meat bread, flour and sugar averaged higher in 1914 than n 1913. Rent averaged $4.65 per week as compared with $4.75 in 1913, $4.60 in 1912 and $4.06 in 1911 and 1910.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This model of a trotteur skirt is just as suitable for chiffon taffetas as it is for serge, and, indeed, it may be used for practically all materials except those which are entirely sheer.

It is cut with four gores front and back, being without a seam. At each side is a small group of pleats and the closing is concealed at either of these points. The yoke is a matter of choice, for it is applied and may be used or not, as desired. High or regulation waistline may be followed. The lower edge of the skirt in the medium size measures 2¾ yards.

These skirts are excellent for the plain woollens which are so serviceable when used with lingerie waists. Serge retains its place at the top of the list and next to it comes whipcord, which is displacing gabardine to a considerable extent. The two are so alike, however, that the change will not be noted for some time.

Linen, linene, pongee silk and even gingham can also be made up in this style, and the taping of the pleats is the only troublesome feature. It is worth some pains to get so handsome a model and most women will not find this an objection.

The skirt pattern, No. 7247, is cut in sizes 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Medium size requires 4½ yards of 44 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

MACKENSEN'S ARMY IS IN BAD PLIGHT

RUSSIANS HAMMERING IT ON TWO SIDES

Defeat of Mackensen's Army Checks Foe's Drive on Warsaw

Germans Are Rapidly Shifting Troops to His Support---Mackensen's Centre Endangered by Fierce Russian Attacks Which Are Battering in Both Sides of the German Wedge---Heavy Losses Reported in Przasnysz and Riga Regions.

AUSTRIANS ARE CHECKED IN THE SOUTH

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 19.—The defeat of General Mackensen's right wing in the great battle south of the Lublin-Cholm railway has at least temporarily checked the new German offensive on Warsaw. The official despatches to-day reported the Germans are rapidly shifting troops from all fronts to the support of Mackensen, whose centre is endangered by furious Russian attacks. Both sides of the German wedge, whose apex rests near Krasnostaff, are being battered in by the reinforced Slav armies, and the continuation of the Russian advance threatens to cut off a large body of German troops. Desperate fighting around Przasnysz and in the Riga region to the north has resulted in severe losses on both sides in the last 24 hours. The War Office admits that Russian retirement still continues at some sectors of this front, but military men here see no menace in Von Hindenburg's offensive. Since the withdrawal of the German divisions from Galicia the Austrians have made no perceptible gains in their attacks against the Russian positions.

PARIS, July 19.—Thrown back with heavy losses the German Crown Prince's army has not renewed its attempts to pierce the French line in the Argonne since last Tuesday, said the official statement to-day.

The War Office in this connection said that the German claim that 7,000 prisoners had been taken in the Argonne battle was ridiculous. During the past month, the War Office said, not more than 7,000 French soldiers had been reported missing on all fronts.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—Secretary of State Lansing called at the White House at 11 a.m to-day to confer with the President concerning the German note. He carried a valise in which were papers relating to the matter. The Orduna case, said the Secretary of State, might delay the note a little, but not for long.

LONDON, July 19.—The British losses in killed, wounded and missing at the Dardanelles, since the operations began, total 42,431, Premier stated in the Commons this afternoon.

OTTAWA, July 19.—The Canadian casualties not including prisoners, now total 10,273. This includes 1,772 killed, 6,601 wounded, and 1,900 missing. The prisoners captured, it is said, total nearly 3,000, and this would place the number of Canadians put out of action at somewhat in the neighbourhood of thirteen thousand.

WAS FINED $20 AND COSTS

Another Young's Point Man Runs Foul of the Liquor Law.

County Police Magistrate Langley held a Court in Lakefield, when Bert Godfrey, of Young's Point, was charged with being drunk in the township of Douro. He was fined $20, and costs.

The township is one in which liquor licences are not issued, and under the amended Act of 1914, a person found intoxicated in such a district is liable just the same as though he were found intoxicated in a local option district.

He Wants to Know What Mr. Burnham Has Done

Dear sir,—As Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is, I am told, laying pipes to secure the nomination, I should like to have somebody tell me what he has done for the constituency in his time. It appears to me that such an inquiry is natural, after four years of membership of Parliament, and that a public servant, in seeking a renewal of his stewardship, should give an account of his stewardship. Will somebody who has kept tab upon the representation of our member furnish some statement of the assets in public service and service to West Peterborough to justify the $10,000 Mr. Burnham has pulled in in the way of sessional indemnity since he was elected in September, 1911?—Yours truly,

BRITISH-BORN.

THE FLORAL CO.

The Peterborough Floral Co. are preparing for the winter flowering plants. While these greenhouses still contain a large stock of foliage plants, ferns, palms, lilies, etc., cut flowers have been going like hot cakes, and only a limited supply is left in the greenhouses. Large orders have to be sent out to supply the constant demand for cut flowers. One large greenhouse has just been filled with benches of healthy chrysanthemums in various stages of development. Others are being prepared for greenstuff and new flower stock. Asters are in bloom earlier than usual. A large amount of potting and repotting work is being done. There has been a brisk demand for wedding decorations, funeral work, ferns and bouquets.

THE EXPLOITS OF THE GERMAN SUB. U-21—Despatches say the U-21 has been sunk in the Black Sea by Russian warships. The map gives the route taken by the phenomenal voyage of the sub. to the Dardanelles, where it sank two British warships. Capt. Hersing, commander of the sub, is Germany's hero. It is not known whether the crew are lost or not.

TRAGIC DEATH OF SISTER OF MR. WM. CAMPBELL

Mrs. Margaret Henthorn Run Down By Street Car in Rochester and Sustains Fatal Injuries

INQUEST TO-MORROW

Special to the Examiner.

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 19.—An inquest will be held Tuesday morning in Rochester in the case of Mrs. Margaret Henthorn, aged sixty-eight, sister of William Campbell, of Peterborough, who was run down by a street car Friday night. Death was caused by several fractured ribs which punctured her right lung causing internal hemmorrhage. She leaves a husband, two daughters and five sons, and another brother, James Campbell, residing in Rochester. Interment will take place Tuesday afternoon in Rochester.

Mr. Wm. Campbell and his daughter, Mrs. Alex. Long, left on Saturday for Rochester to attend the funeral.

Sergt. Fred Reed Now at Front

Is Attached to Ammunition Column —Lieut. Morris Appointed to the 7th Artillery Brigade.

Word has been received from Sergt. Fred Reed of Peterborough, who left with the 39nd Battery, C.F.A., and who was one of the draft selected in England to go to the front as reinforcements, that he is now with the first division and is attached to the ammunition column.

Lieut. "Bill" Morris, son of Mr. W. R. Morris, and graduate of R.M.C., has been appointed to the 7th overseas Artillery Brigade and leaves at once for Valcartier. The 36th Battery, under command of Major Hall of Peterborough, forms part of the 7th Brigade.

Garden Party Was a Success

Ten little girls of St. Andrew's Sunday school gave a garden party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Cocks, 614 Reid street on Friday evening last. The grounds were prettily decorated with flags and flowers. Cake, candy and ice cream was dispensed. Among the attractions on the grounds was a fish pond. The sum of fifteen dollars was realized, which was turned over to the Patriotic League of St. Andrew's church.

Regular Meeting of the T. A. S.

New Candidates Initiated and Officers Installed

The regular meeting of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society was held yesterday. Several new candidates were initiated. The new officers for the coming six months were duly installed. Strong committees were also formed to carry on the work during the fall and winter months. Extra attention will be paid to the debating and literary phase of the work.

Police Court

Henry Furber failed to answer to his name when he was called upon to answer to a charge in Police Court this morning of having assaulted his wife.

Furber was properly served, so the Magistrate did not see why the trial should be held up. He accordingly took the woman's story and fined the defendant $10, remarking that this would be a reminder of what the Court would do in a case like this.

MADE NEW PROPOSALS

Meeting of the Executive Council of Miners Concluded Abruptly This Afternoon When Government Made Important Offer

LONDON CONFERENCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CARDIFF, July 19—Important new proposals made by the British Government to end the South Wales coal strike, brought the meeting of the Executive Council of Miners to an abrupt adjournment at two o'clock this afternoon.

What these proposals were, none of the members would say.

The officers boarded an afternoon train for London for a conference this evening with President Walter Runciman of the Board of Trade.

LONDON, July 19.—As forecasted on Saturday, Minister of Munitions Lloyd-George will leave for Cardiff to-night to make a personal appeal to the Welsh coal miners, his fellow-countrymen, to return to work and prevent the slackening of war munitions.

Several members of Parliament sought to "quizz" the Ministers in the Commons immediately after the adjournment of the Cabinet session. They were asked particularly about the report that the Government is planning to take over the mines.

President Runciman of the Board of Trade, declined to tell anything.

President Runciman, however indicated that the miners' complaint—that the mine owners are taking excessive profits during the war—has been upheld by the Government investigation.

In moving the second reading of a bill to limit coal prices, he said the Government intends to levy a tax against excessive profits of collery owners.

This announcement was heartily cheered by the Labour members.

President Runciman and Arthur Henderson, President of the Board of Education, and Labourite, will accompany Lloyd-George to Cardiff to-night.

Strong Box Was Opened

Memorandum Showing the Receipt of $20,000

Special to the Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., July 19.—Dr. R. M. Simpson's famous strong box in the Royal Trusts vaults, has been opened and the contents were produced before the Royal Commission to-day. It was a memorandum made on an Imperial bank deposit slip and showing apparently that $20,000 in the form of 1,000 $20 bills had been received in a package from the Imperial Bank by Dr. Simpson. The memorandum was affixed to an Imperial Bank seal and attached were strings used in fastening the original package. No money was found in the box. The memorandum was undated.

Four Men Accused of Theft of Hens

Norman Clark, Arthur Kennedy, Oscar Coons and Joseph Hagerman, as a result of a "boil," which they held in a lime kiln in the north part of the city on Wednesday night last, or early Thursday morning, faced a joint charge in police court this morning of having stolen three hens from the hen house of Mr. A. E. Micks, 212 Hunter street, valued at $4.50.

Mr. Micks, who had particularly hard luck with his valuable barred rocks, having lost all of a large flock this summer, excepting four hens. Several other local citizens have complained of losing fowl also.

The defendants were, in turn going into the witness box in their own defence at time of going to press.

Mr. W. H. Moore appeared for Hagerman, Mr. C. J. Widdifield for Coons, while Mr. G. W. Hatton, Crown Attorney, conducted the prosecution.

THE CUNARD LINER ORDUNA IS ATTACKED BY GERMAN SUB.

GERMAN ATTACKS ROUTED BY THE FRENCH ARTILLERY

Thick Columns of Foe Reeled Back in Confusion, Leaving Several Hundred Dead and Wounded on the Field

OTHER ATTEMPTS FAIL

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 19. — Charging the French lines in thick columns along the front of two-thirds of a mile the German troops in the Artois region were sprayed with a rain of sprapnel that sent them reeling back in confusion, according to the War Office this afternoon.

Before certain sectors of the French trenches the entire German first line was mowed down by the French shrapnel and machine gun fire. In their retreat the enemy abandoned several hundred dead and wounded.

The Teutons launched a similar attack near St. Hubert as part of a general scheme of offensive movements yesterday between Arras and the sea, but were beaten back.

"During the night the Germans violently bombarded the Belgian trenches at St. Georges, and also at the village of Boesinghe, said the the communique. Only small actions have occurred in the past twenty-four hours in the Apremont forest and Lorraine. These resulted favourably to our troops."

RECORD NUMBER OF COMPLAINTS

Are Received by Sanitary Inspector Spence Concerning Odours Arising From Back-Yards

Sanitary Inspector Spence is wondering whether the olfactory nerves of the citizens are becoming more highly developed than formerly. This month he has had a record number of complaints respecting odours which are usually credited to back yards, hen houses and various other causes. In some cases the complaints are due to an overwrought imagination, while the majority of them are justifiable. Inspector Spence proposes to take drastic action against horse owners who persist in ignoring the regulations concerning the disposal of stable refuse. Receptables for this purpose must be fly-proof as well as weather proof.

Attempt to Tamper With Flying Machines

Suspicious Characters Around the Curtiss Aviation School at Toronto

A daring attempt, according to Mr. Guy Gilpatric, instructor of the Curtiss Aviation School at the Island, was made in the early hours of Saturday morning by two men to tamper with the four machines on the western sandbar which are being used to train aviators for the British army.

Although the object of the men is not known, their actions, along with the arrest of two men recently at the Strachan avenue factory of the Curtiss Company, has resulted in precautions being taken to prevent any future exorts to damage the Island and city properties of the company.

MANY DROWNING ACCIDENTS OVER THE WEEK-END

Wilfrid Thornton, a G.T.R. Engineer, Loses His Life at Lindsay When Steamer's Swells Upset Canoe

FATALITY AT PORT HOPE

The following drowning accidents are reported throughout Ontario yesterday:

LINDSAY, July 18.—The Scugog River claimed its third victim within three weeks' time last night, when Wilfrid Thornton, a G.T.R. engineer, was drowned by the capsizing of a canoe. In company with George Smith, he left Lindsay early in the evening for Sturgeon Lake to spend Sunday. Between Nos. 7 and 8 lighthouses they were overtaken by the steamer Lintonia on her trip to Sturgeon Point. The swell from the steamer capsized the canoe, and after both men had struggled in the water for some time Thornton bade goodbye to his companion, stating that he would swim for shore. He became entangled in the weeds, however, and was drowned. Smith clutched a log, upturned the canoe, and paddled to a lighthouse, where he was afterwards rescued by a passing launch.

Thornton, who was about thirty years of age, leaves a wife and two children. Parties are searching for his body.

A PORT HOPE BOY.

PORT HOPE, July 18. — Oliver Moffett, the ten-year-old son of Mr. O. H. Moffett, John Street, was accidentally drowned in the harbour yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock.

The little fellow had been learning to swim lately, and becoming overconfident, jumped into the harbour to show another small boy how he could swim, but sank. The body was recovered shortly after by Captain McMahon and first-aid given, but all efforts to revive life were unsuccessful.

A GUNNER DROWNED.

LONDON, July 18.—Gunner Edward Kennedy, with the 29th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, in training here for active service, was drowned in the north branch of the River Thames, just east of the Adelaide Street bridge, early this afternoon.

SWIMMER FOUGHT RESCUER.

HAMILTON, July 18.—Clyde Robertson, 238 Emerald Street North, was drowned from the Beach Piers today while swimming from a launch to the shore. He and William Murray, 193 North Wentworth Street, dived in from the launch some hundred yards apart. Murray reached shore, but seventy yards out Robertson threw up his arms and cried for help.

George McPhail, 269 East King Street, swam out, but Robertson fought him and McPhail was forced to let go.

GOT INTO A HOLE.

DRESDEN, July 18.—Earl Butler, aged 24, and coloured, employed by Wm. Latimer, a Chatham township farmer, was drowned in the Sydenham River near here this afternoon, when he stumbled into a deep hole while assisting two other men in washing a buggy in the river.

GOT IN THE WEEDS.

TORONTO, July 18.—John O. Hanlon, aged 26 years, 161 University Avenue, was drowned this afternoon, when he was thrown into seven feet of water west of Ward's Island Wharf by the capsizing of a dinghy which was occupied by himself and three companions, Arthur Tanner, Ward's Island; Herbert Williams and his brother, of 113 Springhurst Avenue.

Bound From Liverpool to New York Big Ship Has a Narrow Escape From Being Torpedoed, While the Undersea Pirate Fires Seven Shells at Her.

PASSENGERS INDIGNANT

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 18.—The Cunard liner Orduna, bound from Liverpool to New York, with 237 passengers, including twenty-two Americans, was attacked without warning, it was learned on her arrival here Saturday, by a German submarine on the morning of July 9.

Twenty miles from the graveyard of the Lusitania, off Old Head of Kinsale, the Orduna escaped the Lusitania's fate by one-half of a second of time, or ten feet of space, the German torpedo churning the water that distance behind the liner's rudder. Then the Orduna sped away. She was followed by the submarine, which rose to the surface, manned a gun on her deck and shelled the fleeing steamer.

Her Passengers Asleep.

The attack was timed at ten minutes to 6 o'clock in the morning, when all but a few of her passengers lay sleeping in their berths. Aroused by stewards, the passengers dressed hurriedly and went to the upper deck, where they put on lifebelts and took their places at the lifeboats. They heard the scream of the shells, and saw the ocean spit up columns of wteer where the shells struck; when the fire grew hot they were ordered, for their own protection, to the next deck below.

Seven Shots Fired.

For half an hour the Orduna showed her heels to the assailant. Through marine glasses the passengers watched the dark splotch on the water's surface astern. They saw the low-lying German warship coming on with a bone in her teeth, but the Orduna's flight was faster than the pursuit, and after seven shots had been fired without effect, the submarine gave up the chase.

A wireless call for help was sent by the Orduna when the torpedo was seen. She was then 37 miles south of Queenstown. The reply, Captain Taylor says in his official report, was that help would be given within an hour. It was four hours before the first British vessel, a small armoured yacht, appeared.

U. S. Citizen to Protest.

Protest will be made to the American Government by at least one citizen of the United States and possibly others who were aboard. William O. Thompson, of Chicago, counsel to the Federal Industrial Relations Commission, who went aboard in his official capacity last March and was returning to complete his mission by making a report, is the passenger who said to-day that he would make vigorous protest to the American Government.

MANITOBA ELECTIONS.

It is unfortunate that a general provincial election is necessary in Manitoba. There is something of the objection involved in a Dominion general election in war time. The election, however, seems to be a necessity; the Roblin Government, which, theoretically at least, had the confidence of the electorate, resigned or fell to pieces. A new government was formed, and it is necessary that it should be approved by the people before it can constitutionally or logically, administer public affairs. The elections will be over in three weeks, and will not distract public attention from the duties of war work any more than the investigation into the mess made by the Roblin Government, or the other investigation brought on as a counter irritant to the damaging exposure of real scandals, has done. Besides the provincial election will only involve one-sixteenth of the population—500,000—out of the eight millions of Canada, who would be set by the ears by a general Dominion election. Besides, again, the West in proportion to the population, has done more, perhaps, in sending soldiers, and contributing to helping the war, than the rest of the Dominion. And besides, again, the election may be justified on the ground that the electors will be helping on the interests of Canada and Britain, by pronouncing upon — and condemning—the German methods of dishonesty and high handedness, that wrecked the Roblin Government.

WHY CANADIANS SHOULD FIGHT.

It is quite true that Canadians are fighting in this war, because as a part of the Empire they feel it their duty to help in a time of crisis. There is another reason besides loyalty and patriotism, that should stimulate us in continuing the fight — to continue sending soldiers and munitions of war, Red Cross supplies, and in a word, using all our resources. That other reason is self-preservation. The world all knows that Germany's ambition is "world domination"; that if she wins, the world—beginning with Britain and the Dominions — will be brought under the evil genius of German militarism and German methods, such as we have already seen practiced, with malevolent refinement of cruelty, upon Belgium and the countries where in her first rush she has gained ascendancy.

Germany has special reason for "hating" Britain and the British, the lion in the path of her unbridled ambition. If she wins, we lose. We lose the liberties we possess, and all that makes life worth living. What it would be to come under German domination, the treatment of Belgium shows us. The first step of the conquerers would be to plunder, ravage, burn, blow up, and abuse the population. And when more settled conditions succeeded, we would come under the full burden of militarism and German ideals of government. We should lose our individual liberty, our national freedom, and be slaves in comparison with the freedom we now enjoy. Instead of ruling ourselves we should be ruled with a rod of iron. Our people who are living in the rural quiet of the country, do not see the situation as it exists. The war raging in Europe does not yet touch them directly. They plough, and sow, and reap, in peace and safety. They do this by virtue of the protection the British and the Canadians, now battling in Europe, afford. But let Germany win, and all this country's peace will vanish. Every farmers' son will be dragged from the plough and harvest field, to do military service. The whole country would be converted into an armed camp, and we should be subjected to conditions of rule that would represent a perpetual martial law. Everything would be subjected to military considerations; we should be burdened with oppressive taxation, and in effect be made slaves, especially as compared with the wide-open freedom we now possess. Rudyard Kipling, in the course of a recruiting speech in Lancashire, put the matter strongly and tersely. He said:

"There has been childish talk that the Western Heimsphere would offer a refuge from oppression. Put that thought from your mind. If the Allies were defeated, Germany would issue an order and it would be obeyed. Civilization would be bankrupt and the western world would be taken over with the rest of the wreckage by Germany the receiver. So, you see, there is no retreat possible. There are no terms and no retreat in this war."

Germany aims at "world domination," and she will win if Great Britain and her Dominions do not, by putting every man in the field and employing every resource, prevent the calamity. The call is for more men. What Canada and Peterborough have done will have to still be done. Recruiting must be vigorously urged, and generously responded to. Men are needed at once. We can use guns and munitions of war the moment they are ready. The men must be drilled and taught the art of war, and they should be under training promptly, that is, now. The call is to every able-bodied Canadian not otherwise employed in promoting war, to join the ranks.

Canadians eligible for service, are opposed to conscription. Let them show that conscription is unnecessary, by voluntary offers of service. Let them take to heart the fact, that they must do their share in fighting for their self-preservation, for their families, for their homes, for their country. If Canadians do not do their share in saving our country they will have no country. It will become another Germany, and no free man can contemplate that without a shudder; without a vision of the enslavement that he would have to exchange for the free conditions he now has. If Germany wins, we lose; and Germany will win if we do not do our share to prevent it.

SUBMARINE'S LIMITATIONS.

Before anybody either exults or laments too loudly over the extent of the achievements of German submarines, and especially before anybody bases on them disparaging remarks about the comparative inactivity and inefficiency of England's surface-going navy, he would do well to compute the total losses suffered by Germany from the almost complete abolition, for nearly a year now, of the ocean commerce that had grown so great and was still growing so rapidly in the first half of 1914. Whoever does that will soon realize that the submarine isn't such a potent instrument of destruction after all — that there are others the work of which, though less spectacular, is more effective. From a strictly business standpoint, the imprisonment here of the Vaterland is disastrous, and for every British ship sunk by a submarine there are two or three—perhaps a dozen—German ships lying idle at home or foreign docks eating their heads off, productive only of expense. This the navy that some call useless has done, and the successes of the submarines are petty compared with it, particularly a no bitter obloquy has attached to the efficiency of the British ships judged by neutrals. That, too, should be counted in estimating the balance.— New York Times.

How the Irish Routed Turks With Cold Steel

An Irish chaplain, whose brother is fighting with the Dublin Fusiliers in Gallipoli, gives a stirring story extracted from a letter which he recently received. The writer before enlisting was a student at the Irish Bar.

The Lord knows we have been through the mill," he wrote, since you last heard from me. This is the first rest I have had after a fortnight's continuous fighting. My baptism of fire was a terrible experience, but in a few days I had lost all sense of fear and sensation. Now I have quite settled down to my new role, and a warmer job you cannot imagine. You may perhaps have read a little about our landing, and how we tackled the Turks under enormous disadvantages. The beggars were magnificently entrenched, and the wire entanglements looked absolutely invulnerable.

'It fell to the lot of the Munsters and the Dublins to force a landing, for there were several regiments arriving by an old steamer. We cut the entanglements in one mad rush, took the forts and a village, and then cleared the Turks out of their trenches. It was a glorious sight when we made one of these cold-steel charges for which the Blue Caps are famous, until we had finished off as many Turks as we reasonably could. What an ordeal, too, getting off the old steamer! You had to be very nippy along the gangway and then into a barge—all the time under the fierce pom-pom fire. If you had the misfortune to get hit on the gangway nothing could save you from a watery grave. Heaven only knows how some of us got through. I seem to have forgotten everything, but have just a recollection of making a Tipperary dash which brought me to the shore. The Turks set about us during the night and spilt some blood.

Singing All The Time.

One by one the old Dubs and Munsters dropped out, but we never turned a hair. Assistance soon came, and another regiment arrived, all the lads singing "Here we are Again." In such moments it may seem to you impossible that men could sing a ditty, but the English are made of the true stuff and they do let it rip at the right moment. The engagement was continued throughout the night with the assistance of the big naval guns.

It seemed to me that the Turks were in swarms but we made up our minds to go after them, and we let them know for what. We pitched them back about five miles and then came the moment to avenge the poor lads who had fallen. We waited until they were within fifty yards of our trenches again, and then, by all the saints in the calendar, we poured shot and shell on them, finishing the job with the bayonet. No words can describe what we left behind. The shore and the side of the cliffs were dotted with the corpses of the enemy and our own men. I lost every pal I knew—not one was left, but you should have heard us singing 'Bravo, the Dublin Fusiliers,' with a new verse. You'd have joined in your self, and have had an easy conscience for the remainder of your days.

Accumulating Evidence That Germany Sees The Game is Up

If any may judge by the "news" now being sent out from Germany, both directly and through neutral channels, the powers that be in Berlin recognize at last that the game is up. An ancient wheeze in warfare was to dress soldiers up as superhuman monsters and endeavour to frighten the enemy with them. A modern version of his has been adopted by Germany, which is turning loose an unending stream of talk about the wonders of German science, and the horrors that it will accomplish in the near future. The object is to frighten the people, and make them believe that a war against Germany is hopeless. A recent entirely erroneous compilation of wounded and killed, prepared in Germany but purporting to come from France, was sent out for the same purpose, the losses of the Allies being swollen to enormous proportions, and those of the Teutonic Alliance being made a mere trifle in comparison.

While, on the other hand, amazing efforts are being made to discourage the nations opposed to Germany, in the hope that they may be inclined to call it a draw, which is the greatest triumph that Germany can now hope for, equally strenuous efforts are being made to rehabilitate Germany in the eyes of the world. Thus the official announcement from Berlin that in the ships sunk during June, "the loss of life was remarkably small, the submarines using every precaution and giving ample warning and time for crews to leave their ships if no resistance were attempted." If the Germans were so highly considerate in June, why were they not equally susceptible to the dictates of humanity in May and April, and all the preceding months? The answer is that they dreamed they were going to rule the world and be in a position to defy the opinion of other peoples, and that no withey have awakened from their dream.

Then we have the specious stories coming from German sources to the effect that Germany is to rebuild Louvain, about the wonderful care she is taking of Louvain's art treasures, and about press correspondents being surprised to find "seven-tenths of the city untouched by fire." Germany, in fact, is depicted almost in the role of a good fairy saving Louvain in spite of itself, and having but destroyed a small portion in order to rebuild it on a grander scale. There is not a word, however, about the crime against civilization by the destruction of the priceless treasures of the Library at Louvain, and nothing about the horror of rapine and murder with which the Germans overwhelmed the innocent inhabitants and shocked the world. Besides, if Germany had really acted with some consideration towards Louvain, why did the Kaiser send out the message, in response to horror-stricken protests, that "my heart bleeds for Louvain?"

And then we have the trail of the serpent, too, in letters being sent to Canada from Canadian prisoners in Germany. One such letter was published in Montreal this week. It had a casual reference to the Fifty-Royals having left Montreal eleven hundred strong, and in less than four months being all slaughtered except 37, who were prisonrers in Germany. This portion of the Canadian soldier's letter, by the way, is declared by the authorities at Ottawa to be a German falsehood. But the portion to which we wish to draw attention reads as follows:

The men portray the fight at Ypres as one of indescribable horror. They chafe at confinement and the lack of assurance that England is winning; they express in varying degrees surprise that the Germans are not the "barbarians" they had believed them to be.

No Canadian of his own free will would write such twaddle as this. The sentence fairly reeks of Germanity. This "Canadian" letter is an attempt to intimidate Canadians on the one hand, and on the other is part of the campaign to make the world believe that the Germans are good fellows after all. All this specious rubbish, however, will not avail Germany. Germany cannot run amuck in the world and escape punishment for it. She cannot defy the laws of God and man and then make amends by pretending to be actuated by the highest determination to observe them. Germany began this war, the Allies will finish it. And not all Germany's wails and tears and protestations will cause them to deviate one hair's breadth from their determination to make it impossible for Germany ever again to deluge Europe in blood. We know Germany now:

The Moving Finger writes; and having writ,
Moves on; nor all your Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all your Tears wash out a word of it.

FORT GARRY HOTEL A SPLENDID BUILDING

"The Fort Garry," the Grand Trunk Trunk Pacific Railway's magnificent hotel at Winnipeg, is described and pictured in the latest booklet issued by the company. The combination of simplicity and elegance which characterises "The Fort Garry" is excellently portrayed in the illustrations of the spacious public rooms of the hotel. Fourteen storeys in height, and built of sandstone, "The Fort Garry" is architecturally one of the finest buildings in Canada. The people of Winnipeg proudly refer to it as "The Hotel of the Century." Every modern appliance has been used in making the house perfect in its appointments, and in this regard, and also in the matter of service, it confidently challenges comparison with any of the famous hotels of America or Europe.

Advertise in The Examiner

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU

That if there are three houses to rent in this town, anyone of which would suit you, at least two of them will be advertised in these columns.

That YOUR NEXT POSITION may be advertised to-day.

That the next furnished room you'll live in is probably advertised in another column.

That if there's nothing a Want Ad. can help you to accomplish—you're leading too quiet a life!

That if you have need of a worker, you have need of a Want Ad.

That a Store should be advertised as REGULARLY as it is opened for business. A merchant who would'nt close up for a while now and then 'to save running expenses' should'nt stop advertising now and then "to save expense."

That sometimes a LITTLE more advertising will mean a GREAT DEAL more business for a store.

THISTLES AND EAST CITY WON SATURDAY'S CITY LEAGUE GAMES

It Was a Close Fit in Both Cases, the Winning Teams Having the Small Margin of One Run—Empires Came From Behind and Gave East City a Battle Royal—Thistles Scored Only Run in Their Game.

East City and Thistles were the winners on Saturday in the City League, in two very close games, in which the winners were not at any time decided until the last man was out. The first game was between East City and Empires, and the final former. The second game, between Classics and Thistles, ended 1 to 0 in favour of the Thistles.

Kirn and Rahmel were the opposing pitchers in the first game, and they both had a couple of bad innings. The East City swatsmen leaned on Rahmel's shoots for 13 hits, while Kirn allowed nine. In their part of the third it looked as though East City had the game put away, when they scored five runs and held the Empires down until the sixth and seventh, when they scored one in each. In the seventh, Rahmel gave four hits, one a three-bagger, and walked one man and another reached first on an error. In this frame, East City tallied four more, making the score 9 to 2. But Kirn was even worse in the eighth, allowing seven hits and one pass, with which the Empires brought home eight runs.

With the opening of the ninth, the Empires were one to the good, but Rahmel walked Miller, the first man up. Kirn sacrificed and Butcher singled. A wild throw and an error brought in Miller and Butcher. Hagerman and Shaw were out. The two runs were enough to win, as Emtheir part.

Umpire, W. Andrews.

The second game, between Classics and Thistles, was a duplicate of the East City-Thistles struggle of a week ago, but if anything a little more uncertain. It was a pitchers' duel between Huycke and Neary, with Neary receiving a little better support.

Huycke had sixteen strike-outs to his credit and Neary eleven. Phelan caught for Huycke, but could not hold him, and a couple of strike-outs got away from him.

Two decisions of Umpire Andrews in the seventh are the basis of a protest which the Classics will enter with the League. The first dispute arose when Neary was attempting to steal second and Phelan pegging to catch him, hit Umpire Andrews. Neary was ordered back to first. He stole a second a few minutes after, and when he attempted to steal third, Phelan made a throw to stop him. The ball hit the bat of Anderson, who was up at the time. Neary was sent back to second, and Anderson was an easy out retiring the side.

The only run of the game was made in the sixth. Johnny was the first up, and he was out Nearly to Corkery. Phelan was hit by the pitcher and Smythe got to first when Phelan was being tagged out at third. Long got a base on balls, Huycke was safe on Anderson's error, and Jackson got a base on balls, bringing Smythe over the plate. Soden struck-out.

SHORT SPORTS OF INTEREST

That ball players are becoming more particular about their playing implements, is the assertion of a sporting goods man. He says that nine-tenths of the ball players have their own model gloves, bats and shoes, and that this is the time of the season when all troop into the factory for their supplies. Johnny Evers has his own model but uses only two gloves a season. He purchases them in July. By the time the season is almost over the glove is well broken in. These gloves are used the following spring until the warm weather arrives. Then he makes his usual shift.

Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox, is willing to give a fortune in players and cash for Ray Chapman, the Cleveland shortstop, but owner Somers of the Indians, will not part with him. The White Sox would like to get Chapman for third base. The Indian is a good fielder and hitter and a fast man on the sacks. It is said that Chicago offered Blackburn, Russell, a young catcher, and another pitcher for the Cleveland player, together with $30,000 in cash.

"Stalling's men are as good as ever," said Boston's Mayor, James M. Curley, to a Denver questioner. "They're only lying low in the race, waiting for the proper time to start their sprint for the pennant and the world's series money. They have a new park to pay for. They don't want to get too high in the standing and thus cut down the interest and attendance. Believe me, those Braves are better politicians than baseball men, and they are some baseball men at that."

Germany has lost many of her best athletes in the war. Bruno Lange, Andrai Rabb and Schneider, international soccer players have been killed. E. Binder, one players, havebee n killed. E. Binder, one of the country's best half backs, has been wounded. Carl Schutt and Johannes Schutt, soccer players, died on the field. George Miehler, once holder of the world's record for 1,000 metres, has been wounded. Arthur Schmidt, Charlottenburg's famous relay runner, and Emil Spannuth, Brunschweig's champion athlete, have been killed. Others are so crippled by wounds that they will not again be able to compete in athletic events.

Chicago baseball writers are writing books about a play in the ninth innings of the recent nineteen-inning game between the Sox and the Cleveland Indians. They all agree that Umpire R. J. Wallace erred in a decision. With three Sox on the batter hit to short. The Cleveland shortstop tossed to second, where they turned a force play; then the second sacker relayed the ball home, and the catcher, without touching the runner coming in from third, wheeled and snapped the ball to first, trying for a triple play. They missed the batter. Wallace, who was working behind the plate, said the runner from third was out. It went as a double play. Later someone started to investigate. 'The Cleveland catcher did not tag the man at the plate and the run should have counted,' said Eddie Collins. "It was no force, the play at second nullified that." If the run had been allowed the game would have ended in the ninth.

The Commercial Men Have Fine Outing

Knights of the Grip Spend Pleasant Afternoon at Rice Lake—Baseball Game Was One of the Features.

MUSIC AND DANCING

The second annual picnic, inaugurated by the Commercial Travellers' Association, came off last Saturday and was in every way a huge success.

At the time of departure the sky had a gloomy, threatening look which foreboded rain, probably deterring many, who might otherwise have availed themselves of this opportunity, from joining in the merry throng on board the favourite steamer "Stoney Lake." At 1.45 the staunch little steamer loosed from its mooring at the George street government wharf, and, after calling in at the Mark street wharf, the Street Railway wharf, at each of which places contingents strengthened the main force, some one hundred passengers were steaming down the pretty reaches of the Otonabee river. The sun shortly put in its appearance, and, what with alternate sunshine and cloud, a very pleasant trip down the river to Rice Lake was thoroughly enjoyed. It was in fact, an ideal day for a water trip It was neither too hot nor too cold there was just enough sun to make it bright and pleasant, with just enough breeze to temper the atmosphere. Another source of comfort was the fact that the boat not being crowded there was plenty of space to move around in and to make oneself thoroughly comfortable.

During the passage down the river music, both vocal and instrumental was provided. Contrary to usual experience the male sex preponderated; naturally, the members of the gentler sex were at a premium.

About five o'clock Harwood—the objective of the trip—was reached and tracks were at once made for the Hotel. Here a plentiful dinner was set to speak in readiness for within a quarter of an hour of landing a merry, happy, hungry party was busy in knife-and-fork work. As on the voyage, Vice-Presidents O'Brien and Firth as well as Acting-Secretary Frank Whitehouse, were here, there and everywhere, looking after the wants and comforts of the guests, and right well they did it, too! Ample attention having been paid to eatables, a baseball match—one of the events of the day—was played between the Tough Necks and the Rough Necks This was certainly one of the interesting features. If there was not much science there was any amount of fun, the whole game provoking roars of laughter and merriment. "Black Watch" O'Brien and Saddler Overend were managers for the Tough and Rough Necks respectively. Line-up:

Rough-Necks—

1st base—Pilsener Brooks.
2nd base—Sausage Rosenberg.
3rd base—Generator McPherson.
Pitcher—Pyker Blade.
Catcher—Safety First Oke.
Short-stop—Coalheaver McClelland.
Centre field—Bones Dissentell.
Right field — Light-weight Harry Phelan.
Left field—Model Firth.

Tough Necks—

1st base—Piano Whitehouse.
2nd base—C.P.R. Skinner.
3rd base—Trent Valley Giroux.
Pitcher—Three-star Coons.
Catcher—Empress Graham.
Short-stop—Christys.
Centre field—Pork Blakesley.
Right field—Metropolitan Tobin.

Umpire Scalpel McDonald who handled the game to the entire satisfaction of the winners only, and, owing to the losing team's good nature, passed several rotten decisions. The game, it was understood, ended in favour of the Tough Necks, 6-4, but these figures are only given on hearsay; they are not official. No one seemed to be sure what the score really was—not even the official scorer himself.

The fun was fast and furious and many things were done which the Sporting Editor of this Journal would not have allowed had he been there or acting as referee. With a beautiful, clear sky and and a brilliant sunshine overhead, all were somewhat sorry to hear the warning whistle thrice sounded from the steamer However, there was nothing to do but "up stakes" and hike for the transport. The return journey was commenced at 7.30 p.m. and very pleasurable indeed it was. There was a young moon of some seven days' age which made the river scenery just charming. Dancing held great sway all the way back. The pianist, Mr. Davis was indefatigable. He never seemed to tire for a second. He was always on hand —whether for instrumental solo work or for vocal solos, chorus es or dance work.

It was certainly one of the happiest picnic crowds ever taken down the river. The grown ups were supremely happy and the kiddies superlatively so. At 9.50 p.m. the Street Railway wharf being in sight, "The Maple Leaf" and "God Save the King" were heartily sung, and at 9.55 a large number were put ashore at this wharf, and in due course the remainder were landed at the George street and Mark street wharves. Every one appeared to thoroughly enjoy him or herself. And in concluding this writing it must be said that, as usual, the captain and crew of the Stoney Lake did everything in their power to ensure the safety and comfort of their passengers.

The catering on board, which was very efficiently carried out, was in the hands of Dawson Bros. F. R

Are Rallying To Asquith

Premier Occupies Stronger Position Now Than at Any Time Since the Beginning of the War

CHEERFULNESS GROWING

(Copyright, 1915, Central News.)
By T. P. O'Connor.

LONDON, July 17. —Never since the war began have I seen a more remarkable or more complete change in the atmosphere than between this week and those immediately preceding it. The strong feeling about the delay in the supply of munitions, followed by the Russian reverses and then by the attempt on the part of certain sensational newspapers to produce bickerings between distinguished politicians, together exercised a depressing effect. These were accompanied by a strong suspicion that the inevitable mistakes in the creation of a gigantic new army in the midst of the greatest of modern wars were being exploited for political intrigue with the object of discrediting Asquith and replacing him by Lloyd-George.

Lloyd George, who has been made furious by the misuse of his name, is undoubtedly personally and even fiercely loyal to Asquith, but indiscreet friends and sensational journalists, desirous of exploiting military and political errors to force conscription, acting against George's desires and interests, insisted on pushing this campaign of disparagement. Thus an ugly situation was evolved.

For the first time since the war began many politicians began to give way to that character of Englishmen at all times—to grumbling self-disparagement. Fortunately the spirit of the country remained remote from this intriguing atmosphere and the House of Commons and its spirit in time relieved the situation.

From all parts, and especially from the workingmen's organisations, came a paremptory demand to proceed with the war and the output of war equipment. The politicians were frankly told that their heads would be knocked together if they did not speak more rationally and more patriotically. By this a more healthy atmosphere was created wherein all unnecessary criticism and, still more, any bickerings in high places, could not live.

When, on the reassembly of the House of Commons further attempts were made to renew the bickerings and criticism, and a demand was even made for a full dress debate on the conduct of the war, Premier Asquith had an easy task. With one sentence, amid ringing cheers, he refused any answer or any debate on the past conduct of the war. He figuratively stamped on all the sinister manoeuvres and everybody breathed freely again.

The final result of all these intricate transactions has been that everyone has rallied to Asquith, including the Tory members of the cabinet. Today Asquith occupies a stronger position than at any time since the beginning of the war. In the meantime Asquith, who, though characteristically phlegmatic like most Yorkshiremen, feels and shows acutely any outbreak of internal difficulties in his cabinet and who grows pale and nervous when things are going badly, has been enormously encouraged anw now looks at ease, healthy and resolute.

His trip to the battlefields has helped to give him his present ruddy cheeks, especially as, according to all private accounts, he established himself as an immense favourite with the "Tommies" and showed an extraordinary courage by calmly facing the shell fire at Ypres, the hottest spot on the front. He further endeared himself to the soldiers' hearts by talking with them quite unceremoniously and even laughed good naturedly when a big body of men who had been bathing in tubs rushed out still naked and dripping and gave him wild cheers to welcome him.

The closing of the entire chapter of personal and political recriminations has luckily coincided with the receipt of better news from the eastern frontier. Russia's exhibition of her extraordinary powers of recovery has been followed by the better news from the Dardanelles and the increasing certainty that though it is still a long and bloody job, Constantinople will be taken.

Two other incidents of the week have helped to increase the growing cheerfulness. The success of Premier Botha, besides adding a chapter to Germany's long tale of colonial disasters, had been hailed by all broad-minded people as a triumphant vindication of the liberal policy of giving complete home rule in South Africa, and has added another to the many forces fighting for the same policy in Ireland.

This moral was discretely pointed out in the House of Commons by a speech by Asquith and in a few words from me.

Borden's presence in the cabinet portends enormous coming changes in the whole constitution of the Empire; portends an Imperial Parliament with local parliaments in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. This has given an enormous fillip to the Imperial Federationists who now form a majority of all parties in the House of Commons.

Some of us have determined to raise the question next week when the vote on the salary for A. Bonar Law, the new Colonial Secretary, will be discussed.

The gigantic services of the great dominions, especially of Canada, will enable us to raise the question in a favourable atmosphere.

Finally I may remark that the sinister intrigue by the factionists of the Dublin Corporation to embarrass Redmond by making the impossible demand of an immediate starting of Home Rule for Ireland in the midst of the war, has been defeated by a huge majority.

MUST NOT YIELD TO SHORTEN WAR SAYS POINCAER

PARIS, July 16—With impresive ceremony the remains of Captain Claude Joseph Rouget de l'Isle, composer of the "Marseillaise," were placed to-day in the Hotel des Invalides. Thousands stood with heads uncovered as the coffin, upon a gun carriage of the Revolutionary period, passed under the Arc de Triomphe, down the Avenue des Champs Elysees, across the Alexander bridge to the Esplanade.

President Poincare, all the members of the Cabinet, the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber, and the highest officials of the Government marched behind the gun carriage, while a detachment of dragoons led the way.

While the cortege was passing the hospitals in the hotels along the Champs Elysees every balcony and every window was filled with wounded men and in the dense crowds on the pavement many maimed soldiers and many bronzed reservists, home on leave, saluted the bier and the President of the Republic, in solemn silence.

There were no cheers or manifestations until the procession passed the Grand Palais, when the Republican Guards' Band struck up the "Marseillaise." "Vive la France!" and "Vive l'Armee!" shouted the crowd in a spontaneous burst of enthusiasm.

A flotilla of aeroplanes flying about circled the Arc de Triomphe at the start and followed the line of the procession to the Hotel des Invalides.

The President's Speech.

"Wherever it resounds," said President Poincare, speaking at the Invalides, "the 'Marseillaise' evokes the idea of a sovereign nation that has a passion for independence, and whose sons, all of them, prefer deliberate death to servitude. Its striking notes speak the universal language understood to-day throughout the world. A hymn like that was needed to interpret in a war like this the generous thought of France."

"Once more the spirit of domination menaces the liberty of the people. Our labouring democracy for many long years contended itself with works of peace, and it would have considered criminal or insane any man who would have dared to nourish warlike projects. Under repeated provocations, and regardless of surprises at Tangier and at Agadir, France remained willingly silent and impassive'. President Poincare rapidly sketched events in Europe leading up to the war, finding everywhere a deliberate purpose of Germany and Austria-Hungary "to provoke war for their own objects, as history will show.

"Posterity will learn with stupefaction," President Poincare continued, "that one day the German Ambassador, after vainly seeking to have himself insulted publicly by the populace of Paris, presented without smiling, as a cause for war, a fable imagined in the Wilhelmstrasse that French aviators without anyone perceiving them, had gone to throw bombs on Nuremberg." The President alluded to solemn treaties being torn up, to the barbarous terrorism of non-combatants and to science dishonored in the service of savagery. Turning to the method of the French Cabinet, he said:

Worked Always for Peace.

'You interrogated your conscience in serenity, knowing that at no moment have we neglected a word or act which could serve to dissipate this war. We have been innocent of a most brutal aggression, methodically premeditated, but, since we were forced to draw the sword, we have no right to put it back into the scabbard before the day when we shall have vindicated the dead, and until a common victory for the Allies shall permit us to repair the ruins and to restore France integrally and prevent a periodic return of the provocations.

What would to-morrow be if a lame peace should ever rest upon the debris of our country?"

The President said that France under such a peace would be at the mercy of her triumphant rivals.

"There is no soldier, no citizen and no woman of France but understands clearly that the whole future of the race and not only our honor but our very existence, depends upon the heavy hours of this inexorable war." he said. "We have willed to win. We have the certainty of winning. We have as much confidence in our strength and in that of our allies as in our right.

"No, no! Let our enemies not deceive themselves. It is not a sign of a precarius peace or a disquieting fugitive truce between one shortened war and another more terrible; it is not to remain exposed to-morrow to new attacks and mortal perils that France rose in ardent enthusiasm to the accents of the 'Marseillaise.' Already the day of glory for which the 'Marseillaise' is celebrated illumines the horizon."

ENGLISH SPORT RECOVERS.

Cricket and Golf Being Played after War Slump—Racing Expected.

LONDON, July 17.— Sport in the British Isles is gradually getting back to its normal condition. The Football Association's decision this week to play off next season's soccer league games, beginning in Scotland on Aug. 14 and in England on Sept. 1, has brought increased confidence to every sportsman in the country that in the near future every branch of sport will be in full swing. Cricket is now being played everywhere, especially by the various leagues in the North of England, and while no county games have yet taken place Yorkshire, Lancashire, and Surrey Counties are preparing to arrange a few matches in August and September.

Surrey's fine ground at Kensington Oval, which was taken over by the military authorities at the commencement of the war for the use of the troops, was released last month, and many games have been played recently between the public schools and regimental teams. A big stir was made last month in cricket circles when Hobbs the famous England and Surrey batsman, signed for this season with the Idle Cricket Club of the Bradford League, who are rivals for popular favour of the Saltaire Club in the same league. The Saltaires have the best bowler in Sydney, Barney of the Lancashire County Club.

It is confidently expected that horse racing will be resumed throughout the country by the end of the month as the result of a large petition signed by several thousands which was presented to the Government by Colonel Hall Walker, the well-known owner. Golf is in full swing and the leading professionals have had a busy time lately giving exhibition games. Harry Vardon, Taylor, and Braid in particular receiving a number of engagements. Strong hopes are now held out that with the boom in other sports it may be possible after all to hold the open championship in September. Athletic meetings, which were all declared off on account of the war, are now being held each week in different parts of the country.

Opening of Campaign Was Big Success

Evangelist Sharpe Makes Very Favourable Impressions at His First Meeting in the Hunter St. Tabernacle—Tent Was Crowded to Its Utmost Capacity

A big audience attended the opening yesterday of the evangelistic campaign in the Tabernacle on Hunter street, and the indications are that large crowds will attend the services, which will continue for an indefinite time.

The congregation, inclusive of the choir, at the evening service, would number over five hundred. More accommodation can and will be provided.

The singing is a very enjoyable feature of the service, the Stringer Sisters being gifted with beautiful voices.

Evangelist Sharpe made a most favourable impression. His address was forcible and logical and he easily held his audience while he was speaking.

The interior of the Tabernacle is very comfortable, electrically lit and ventilated. The decorations include scripture texts and the crossed flags of Canada, Belgium and France. These are not only seasonable, but help to relieve the bareness of the wooden walls. The service opened with the hymns, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder I'll be There," and "Oh That Will be Glory." After which the Stringer sisters sang, "When Jesus Came to Stay." Mrs. Sharpe read the lesson, and Mr. A. Johnston (Bethany Tabernacle), led in prayer. Mr. Sharpe went on to explain his campaign. This would be at meeting every evening, at 7 p.m., except Saturday, and he intended to ask permission to address meetings outside the factories of the city during noon hour. He also gave a pressing invitation to all and sundry who could sing to come on to the platform and help the choir.

The Stringer sisters followed with a duet, "The Shepherd Who Losses His Sheep From the Fold.' After the hymn "Nearer My God to Thee," Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe sang "The Old Account Was Settled Long Ago," which Mr. Sharpe explained had reference to his own convertion. The text for the sermon—the first preached in the Tabernacle in the City of Peterborough—was from the 12th chapter of John, verse 12, "Sir, we would see Jesus."

Hits All Alike.

Mr. Sharpe, who is no respecter of persons, dealt vigorously with the sins of the three classes of society, upper, middle and lower, using stories comic and other wise, to illustrate his theories, as Mr. Sharpe was up to being an Irishman.

He said many people's religion was a compromise between God and the devil. There was Monday card playing, Tuesday the dance hall, Wednesday the theatre, Thursday gambling, etc., etc., yet the person would put on his best clothes on Sunday and go to church, which was making a mockery of religion.

He gave an illustration of another kind. One who was ashamed to own he had any religion. This was a professed Christian who was going to work one fall in a lumber camp. His friends told him he would have a bad time there, as the lumbermen would throw boots, etc., etc., at him, and worry him in every way possible about his beliefs. In spring when he came home and his friends asked him how he had got on, his reply was, "Oh, fine, they never found out."

Woman also received a touching up with regard to her mode of living in the home. Many of them were responsible for the husband's bad habits, in not making the home bright and cheerful. This duty, he said, was part of their religion. How many wives in Peterborough met their husbands at the door with a cheery smile and a kiss when he came home tired from business. Many a man would give $1,000 for little attentions of this kind.

At the close of his address Mr. Sharpe offered u pa prayer, at which time he asked all those who were not Christians to hold up a hand, which was equivalent to saying, "Brother Sharpe I am not a Christian, pray for me." Seven people responded to this request, coming forward and taking seats in the front.

The service ended by singing the hymn, "Am I Saved",

A short service followed for the convention of the heathen.

METZ WITHIN RANGE OF THE BIG GUNS OF THE FRENCH CAN SMASH IT AT ANY TIME

(By William Philip Simms).

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY AT THE FRONT, June 28.—Any day the French select they can shell the very heart of Metz into a rubbish-heap. And if they have thus far refrained from doing so it is because they do not care to pound a town or city to pieces without either rhyme or reason.

I myself have just seen Metz. I saw this tragic city of Lorraine, the city which Marshal Bazaine so strangely surrendered to the Prussians in 1870, from the crest of a 650-foot hill, a part of the present French battle-line. Through glasses the famous fifteenth century cathedral, as well as the other houses of the city, were plainly visible, for the day was fairly clear and the mighty fortress was but some 14 miles away.

Fourteen miles is so short a distance in this day of big, long-range howitzers, and the French are amply provided with artillery capable of considerably greater distance than that.

After the Germans had deliberately dropped shells of great calibre into Dunkirk, shooting from behind their lines some 25 or 30 miles away, and killed many non-combatants, the French fired a few shells, not upon Metz, the city, but the forts of Metz just by way of saying, "We, too, can indulge in long-distance artillery practice if we care to. However, we refuse to endanger the lives of civilians uselessly."

From a thickly-bepoised valley of French Lorraine, literally knee-deep in buttercups and black-eyed-susies, we began the climb to the summit of this mountainette which rises abruptly from the plain and does not stop until its head is far above the surrounding countryside. Now and then—practically every day—shells follow its contour a hundred feet or so above the surface to drop into the town of Pont-a-Mousson, now on its way to its two-hundredth bombardment by the Germans since the commencement of the war. Its slopes are under cultivation even now, and as we toiled upwards, we passed an old man and a woman, probably his daughter or daughter-in-law (husband in the army, of course) taking care of the grapevines which are to yield, German shells permitting, their quota of the lovely pinkish and most palatable liquid, the "rose wine of Lorraine."

At the top of the hill is a cluster of houses, dating perhaps from the sixteenth or seventeenth century. One would say some former Lord of Lorraine had had his castle stronghold there and the houses remaining were those of his dependents and his men of war. Through a bayou, or trench, we gained what was left of a tiny chapel, the stained glass windows reduced to powder, the place a total wreck. It, like everything else in the neighbourhood, has caught its share of shells. It was from this point that I saw Metz.

Appeared Like Magic City.

Through the blue haze, which grew denser and denser the farther one lifted one's eyes over the succeeding range of hills bordering the valley of the Moselle, Metz appeared like a magic city of some fairly tale. To the left the Gothic towers of the cathedral sprang into the circle formed by the lenses of the field glasses. To the right were the spires of another house of God. Between were masses of houses, quite distinct, yet appearing utterly unreal. The city seemed to repose upon purple clouds and a purple veil seemed spread about it. One had the distinct impression that if one shut one's eyes for a moment the magic vision would fade away.

Turning for a moment to ask a question of the officers about me, I saw, or fancied I saw, on the face of each an expression of grim determination. Bazaine gave away Metz and its 170,000 valiant defenders to the Prussians in 1870; Metz considered an impregnable; Metz the fortress often spoken of as the "gun pointing at the heart of France." These soldiers among whom I stood thrilled one with the feeling that one day they would take Metz back.

Metz is situated at the junction of the Moselle and the Selle. It has about 50,000 inhabitants, and is surrounded by a series of fortifications said to be among the strongest in the world. Many times besieged, but ceded to France by treaty in 1648, Marshal Bazaine allowed himself to be penned up there in 1870 with about half the entire French army. He made several attempts to break through the Prussian lines, and at times seemed to be successful, yet for some mysterious reason, he invariably fell back into the city. Some claim he had political ambitions and hoped, after Germany defeated France, he might, with his army still intact, impose his will on his country; others say there was a woman in the case; but the truth very probably will never be known. His surrender of Metz, for whatever reason, was a terrible blow to France, and the fortress has remained a constant menace. That France should want it back is only natural.

Will she get it back? The Germans themselves have proved that modern forts cannot hold out against modern guns. It is an open secret that France has guns quite as powerful as the ones which pounded Liege, Namur, and Antwerp into submission. She will use them when the time comes.

THE VOYAGE OF THE 39TH BATTALION ON THE MISSANABIE

A Diary of the Passage to England of the Liner Which Carried the Eastern Ontario Third Contingent Battalion.

(Written for the Examiner by Pte. F. Ashford, of Peterborough, with the pioneer section of the 39th Battalion.)

June 23rd—Promptly at 6 p.m. the battalion parades for the last time on the old cannery grounds amidst a crowd of interested spectators, is quickly formed up, and Lt.-Col. Preston gives the word of command, "Advance in column of route," the band strikes up a martial air and the march to the station is begun.

And Belleville, which has treated the soldiers somewhat churlishly as a whole, at the last moment seems anxious to atone for its conduct and redeem its character, by giving us a hearty send-off.

It may have been the novelty of the occasion, curiosity, or the dictates of conscience, or the call of patriotism which accounted for the crowd, and seemed to have brought all Belleville and his wife to give us a rousing and perhaps a prayerful God-speed, but I think few citizens were absent from the station.

And amongst the crowd were some husky youths who would look fine in khaki, and I could not help but wonder if as they looked at the brave women and children who had come to see the last of their husbands and their fathers, they had no qualm of conscience. I wondered how they could resist their country's call and keep from saying, "Here I am, take me." And I wondered too, if their sweethearts could feel just as proud of them, and if they did not envy the sweethearts, pale-faced but smiling, who had let and possibly bid her lover go.

Too great a tribute cannot be paid to the brave women many have left behind. They also serve, who only stand and wait."

I should especially like to name a Peterborough lady, but possibly she would not desire publicity, who had just bidden farewell to a husband and a son, but whom as our second train pulled out, was still smiling and waving adieus, and the writer is proud to have had the honour of grasping her hand.

And some mothers there were, leading away a tearful child and vainly trying to longer restrain their own grief; and we who were leaving, sustained by excitement, company and the novelty of our surroundings, could not help but feel a tug at our heartstrings for the lonly, anxious wives remaining, and utter a fervent prayer for the ladies, "God bless 'em."

At 8.20 p.m. the last train pulls out of the station and the farewells are over.

The railway journey to Montreal is without incident, the last train reaches the docks at 7.30 a.m. June 24th; by 8.45 a.m. every man and every scrap of baggage is aboard, and an excellent breakfast is served by smartly dressed waiters, and before we get time to swallow it, we are called to the upper deck by cheers from the spectators on the docks. Quietly the good ship has slipped her moorings, two steam-tugs have hold of her, and we are away.

And is there one amongst us who would have missed, or who will ever forget, this day. I think not.

The crowds on the docks grow more indistinct, but for miles, ships' sirens scream and hoot like mad, railway engines, factories, steam-dredgers, yes, even steam derricks rend the air with discordant but welcome noises, and we make up our minds that we are not going to be down-hearted, for we are sure they whom we leave behind would not have us so. About 7 p.m. Quebec city is reached, the ship slows down to take on the pilot, and again proceeds. Most of us stay on deck until darkness falls, and then go to our most comfortable sleeping berths, and this ends a tiring, exciting, but never-to-be-forgotten day.

June 25th—We awaken and go on deck first thing to view our surroundings, and are rewarded by a vision of fog, and nothing else but fog. The ship is travelling dead slow, and this is the sum total of the happenings of the second day.

June 26th.—The day throughout is fine and bright and we get glimpses of shore on either side at intervals. Everyone is in excellent spirits and have developed a keen appetite. We are in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Some whose first experience it is of salt water sailing are priding themselves on being good sailors, since they are not even sea-sick. I think they regard the "rough-weather' stories as old sailors' yarns.

June 27th.—There is still no perceptible movement of the ship and one's appetite is yet disturbed. The day is cold and misty and uncomfortable, in fact, a Scotch mist prevails. We have passed numerous icebergs, met a few steamships, several fishing smacks, and at noon we have a distinct view of Cape Race, which I presume is our last view of land until we see old England's coast line.

There was church service conducted by our chaplain (Capt. Spencer) at 2.30 p.m.

7 p.m.—There is an under-swell in the ocean, and as the ship gets a roll on, the confidence of those who were so sure they would not be sick is rudely shaken. Manfully they try and fight it, but that nasty upheaval at the pit of the stomach will not be denied, and in a few more minutes the ship's side is lined with soldiers in an undignified position, engaged in the romantic occupation of feeding the fishes. When we have retired to our berths, pathetic moans and sounds of vigorous retching continue to reach our ears and we who are fortunate enough to have escaped smile serenely and go to sleep.

June 28th.—Some still sea sick, otherwise nothing to chronicle. Weather warmer and passage so far excellent.

June 29.—Fine and warmer morning. Evening wet. Sea calm, all in excellent spirits. Seasick patients convalescent. Marconigram this morning gave us news of sinking of Donaldson, S.s. Indranic by German submarine.

June 30.—Warmer but misty, with glimpses of sun at intervals. Surmise we are approaching danger zone. We had parades with life belts on at 9.30 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. and were told off to emergency stations. See calm.

July 1.—Almost continuous rain and mist, but sea calm. Are wondering how all in Peterborough are spending Dominion Day. Same old routine aboard and nothing to remind us that it is a holiday. Nothing has occurred to break monotony.

July 2.— By far the brightest and most enjoyable day of the voyage. The first thing this morning we heard of the sinking of the Leyland liner "Armenian" in the channel, which we are rapidly approaching.

At 3.45 p.m. we are met by the torpedo destroyer "Mynga," which, as I write, is sweepin grapidly to and fro across our boys. Her quick, wasp-like movements are a revelation to all. Though it is perfectly correct to say none of us have lost any sleep thinking of submarines, yet, I am sure there is not a man who does not feel more comfortable in the knowledge that to-night we are protected by this very business-like representative of the British Navy. At nightfall, all smoking on deck is prohibited, portholes are blanketted and no light is shown anywhere aboard, but we still are fascinated by the alert and agile movements of our plucky little escort.

July 3.—Went on deck at 4 a.m. and found our little guardian still darting hither and thither much as a [illegible] master, and I tell you boys, when you consider that for more than 16 hours she has kept up her snake-like manoeuvres unceasingly and unerringly, it gives the first real conception of what our silent, majestic navy is doing, and it likewise conveys the first real impression that we are on active service and that the Empire is in a state of war.

The sea is like a sheet of glass and it is an ideal morning for a submarine to earn a few iron crosses.

At 6.30 a.m. we run into a dense fog just at a juncture when it is least desirable. We cannot see our escort, but she keeps signalling us by siren sounds. At 8 a.m. we are brought to a standstill, much to the chagrin of all.

At 9.20 a.m. the fog lifts considerably, and a steam trawler runs alongside, her crew give us a cheer and we hear them plainly shout, "Are we downhearted," and you may guess our answer is "No!"

We cannot see the beauty of the landscape, of one of our most beautiful harbors, owing to the fog, but we know in a short time we shall be safe within the breakwater and our voyage done.

10.40 a.m. —At last, to the delight and relief of all we are safe in Plymouth Sound and anchored at 11 a.m. inside the breakwater, and so ends, if a uneventful, certainly a memorable voyage. It has been an enjoyable trip on the whole. Meals have been well cooked and well served, the sleeping accommodation good and no kick coming from anyone.

To-day we turn over a new leaf, open another chapter of our lives, and await events with confidence and equanimity.

PRESENTATION TO MRS. SCOTT

On Thursday evening, 15th July, a large number of friends and neighbours assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Scott, of Smith, to show their appreciation to Mrs. Scott (formerly Miss B. Cann), who has always been a very willing worker in the Sabbath School, and will be greatly missed in the community. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present, and before concluding, Mr. William Steinkrauss requested Mrs. Scott to come forward, when she was presented with a very handsome chair, by Miss Edith Tully, accompanied by the following address, read by Mrs. D. Mahood:

Dear Mrs. Scott,

We, your many friends and neighbours, have assembled to extend to you our best wishes and to spend a social evening with you in your new home. We felt we could not allow you to leave our immediate neighbourhood without showing you some mark of the general esteem in which you were regarded during your sojourn among us, and your social intercourse. You have always contributed abundantly toward making life pleasant in the circle in which we have moved.

As a remembrance we ask you to accept this chair, trusting that it may be an emblem of the pleasant associations in the past. And we also ask both you and Mr. Scott to accept our heartiest congratulations; and we hope and trust our Heavenly Father may spare you many years of happy and prosperous wedded life.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours,

MRS. D. MAHOOD,
MISS E. TULLY.

Mrs. Scott was taken completely by surprise, yet she found suitable words to thank them for the kind words expressed in the address and for the beautiful present, assuring them that she would always endeavour to help to carry on the good work.

DRY GOODS ARE SHOOTING UPWARD

The cost of living, from indications coming daily to hand, is not likely to be reduced for some considerable time. This applies to drygoods, which are rapidly advancing in price, and most mills in the Old Country, and most of the mills in the Old Country are absolutely refusing to accept business at any price.

An important wholesale house says that the public cannot have any adequate idea of existing conditions there. A tremendous volume of business has been placed during the past three months with the result that most looms are booked up to April and May of 1916.

Generally few wholesale shipping concerns have little of anything left to sell, and are consequently unable to offer a range of samples with a view to business. By the time samples reached here, and selections made, deliveries would be altogether impossible, and prices higher to the extent of another 10 to 20 per cent. over those quoted.

WOOL GOODS ADVANCING

Prices of all wool goods are already 50 to 75 per cent. higher than in January of this year, and cotton warp dress goods are fully 50 per cent. advanced in the same time.

Values are still on the uptrend, and another 30 to 40 per cent. advance may come before the top is reached. Labour shortage is rapidly decreasing production, and with Britain, France and the colonies to supply with dress goods, mills have more than they can overtake.

An acute item in the output of certain fabrics is the shortage of dyes, these being obtained in normal times from Germany, for the most part.

Mayor Held In Contempt of Court

Must Pay a Fine of Two Thousand Dollars.

Montreal, July 19.—Mayor Mederic Martin and Controllers Thomas Ote and E. Napoleon Hebert were declared "in contempt of court," and condemned to pay a fine of $2,000 each and be imprisoned for 60 days "in the common jail of this district," unless cause to the contrary be shown by the respondents in the practice court, according to a ruling handed down by Mr. Justice Panneton.

The ruling is in connection with the action of these three of the five members of the board of control in adopting, in spite of an injunction having been served, restraining them from consideration of any tramways matters, an agreement extending the franchises of the Montreal Tramways company. The agreement was introduced in the board by Controller Hebert, and the injunction had been issued upon allegation that Controller Hebert had written a letter agreeing to accept $200,000 for his support to "a new tramways franchise." Rumours of graft and scandal generally also figured in the granting of the injunction.

Since the adoption of the report the proposed agreement, which added 25 years to the 7 years the Montreal Tramways Company franchise still has to run, the Board of control has been served with another injunction enjoining it from reporting the agreement to the city council, which must ratify the board's acts before they become binding upon the city

Political Opponents Unite In Ringing Recruiting Appeal

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Speaks on Same Platform as Hon. Martin Burrell, and Returned Canadian Officers—The Capital Sets the Ball Rolling

"The privilege is yours, young men, the privilege of risking your life that your country may live, and that freedom may not disappear from the earth."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, July 16.—"Kitchener's cry is now, as it was at the beginning of the war, "Men, more men."

"The privilege is yours, young men, the privilege of risking your life that your country may live, and that freedom may not disappear from the earth. It is not to the women that I would appeal to send the men to the Front. It is to you, young men, who must remember that none but the brave deserves the fair."

That was a part of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's closing appeal for recruits delivered to an audience of five thousand in the Arena Rink to-night. The call of the Liberal Leader was backed up by the appeals of Hon. Martin Burrill, Minister of Agriculture, representing the Government; of Col. J. A. Currie, M.P., and of Captain Stetham, Kingston, R.C.R., both returned from honourable service at the Front to tell Canadians how Canadians have fought, and how more men are needed at the Front.

The Minister of Agriculture declared that to every man in Canada came the personal call of patriotism, the call of honour, of freedom, and the dread of shame, which was greater even than the love of life.

Col. Currie, with the memories of Langemarck and St. Julien still vivid and fresh, told the cheering audience that with the Canadian boys at the Front there were no politics, no grouching, no wavering, no jealousies or rivalries. They would not come back as drunken heroes, but as sober, disciplined men, God-fearing men, who had done their duty nobly, cheerfully and well.

Capt. Stetham, with his wounded arm still swathed in bandages, told with simple, soldier-like facility of the need of more men, the grimness of the struggle, and the realization which every soldier at the Front has of the meaning of the struggle and the neglected duty of the stay-at-homes.

Only One Heart in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid's twenty-minute synopsis of the underlying issues of the war, of the need of long endurance and further effort on the nart of Canada and of the stead ythough comparatively slow progress of the Allies towards ultimate victory, was characteristic of his eloquence and vision. "We must be prepared," he said, "for a long contest. It may take, as Kitchener says, two or three years, but there is only one heart in Canada as to the justness of our cause, and as to the final result."

The glory of the British nation, he declared, was that among all the powers of Europe, Britain alone never sought war, and never even deliberately prepared for war. But, though the least military of nations, Britain never entered a fight she had not won. Canada was heart and soul, he said, with the Motherland in the present fight.

The Canadian troops had fought from the first day like veterans, and not like the raw recruits of a peace-loving country, and winning at once the respect not only of all the Allied troops, but also of the enemy.

There were some, doubtless, who were disappointed at the slow progress being made. But let them remember that the Germans had the most perfectly organized war machine ever devised, and that the German boast of a quick march to Paris had been promptly checked, and after that French's "contemptible little army" had stood like adamant against the drive towards Calais.

Germany's Tune Changed.

There had been a marked change in the German attitude since the war began, said Sir Wilfrid. In August the war cry of Germany had been "world domination or downfall." Throughout the streets of the captured towns of Belgium German soldiers had chalked on the doors "William, Emperor of Europe."

"What,' asked Sir Wilfrid, "was their battle-cry in July of 1915? That the Germans were fighting for their independence—nay, for their very existence. That was the excuse they offered to the United States for the murder of women and little children on the Lusitania — that they were fighting for their lives."

A Significant Victory.

Another victory had been won against Germany in the wiping out of the last vestige of German power in South-west Africa. That feat in itself was not great; the significance of it was that their power had been removed from Africa, not by an English-speaking leader, but by one who not many years ago had been the foe of Britain.

"It is the greatest possible tribute to British institutions and British freedom, for which we are now battling. When the Boers were given their liberty, it was an experiment which only one nation would have dared to try. That nation was Britain, mother of modern liberty. (Loud cheers). This is the only basis on which we want her to continue."

Canada, declared Sir Wilfrid, was free to take part or not to take part in the war as she saw fit, but she did so because Great Britain was in it, and because if Great Britain goes down the freedom of Canada shall go down with her.

At a late, he continued amid laughter, "I am not much burdened with confidence in the present Government, but I gave it my wholehearted support so that the world would know we are a united people."

Filling the Gaps Urged.

Hon. Martin Burrill paid a high tribute to the men at the Front, and urged the young men now at home to come forward and follow the example they had set, and fill the gaps in the ranks left by those who had fallen.

He had just received a letter from Col. Buller of the Princess Patricias, and though that officer was in the hospital wounded, there was not a whimper in the letter. He had expressed regret at the losses his regiment had sustained, and gratification at the fact that 200 young McGill men were going to fill the gaps. Canada, said Mr. Burrill, had vindicated herself, and found her soul in the great war, standing as she did with free France, free Britain and free Belgium against a nation organized for the destruction of human liberty and human freedom.

"We all hate war," said he, "and why shouldn't we? But there are other things we hate worse than war. We hate tyranny worse than war, and our patriotism is like a living flame when we fight for the right."

The victory of General Botha over the Germans in South-west Africa provided one of the reasons why the British Empire was great. By clemency, fair-mindedness, and free institutions, a one-time enemy of Britain had been turned to one of her warmest allies and friends.

NEW C.P.R. HOTEL VANCOUVER VISITED BY MANY SHRINERS

MONTREAL, Q., July 18.—Shriners from the middle west have been travelling during the past week on their way via the C.P.R. to the big convention at Seattle. A large proportion of the delegates, nearly 1600 of them, passed through Vancouver. The advance guard of 225 persons travelling under the auspices of Adkar Bedouin and Mirza Temple of Oklahoma, arrived in two special trains; another special train came with 150 delegates of the Murat Temple, Indianapolis. Two other special trains of Shriners with 260 members of the Mecca, Nourmi, Cresent and Cyprus Shriners were followed by another special train carrying 130 Pittsburg Shriners, members of the Syria Temple. Three other trains brought 411 members of the Ist Lu Temple, while another had 125 from Oklahoma. In addition to the excursionists who are travelling in chartered trains, several hundred other Shriners travelled on the regular trains. Several Shriner parties are returning east via the C.P.R., the first contingent leaving on July 16. The extra accommodation for the large influx of visitors was arranged by the company at the Hotel Vancouver. Many rooms in Granville street wing, which up to the present had not been opened for the use of guests, were rushed to completion. It is expected that with the regular tourist traffic which is already assuming large proportions, the accommodation of the hotel will be taxed to practically its full capacity.

PRAISES TURKISH SNIPERS.

British Officer Says They Employ Protective Colouration Cleverly.

ATHENS, July 18.—Tributes to the cleverness of Turkish snipers in Gallipoli in concealing themselves from the British sharpshooters are paid in a series of letters received here from a British officer.

"The Turks," he says, "are very brave and clever. Their snipers frequently place small trees on their backs and so crawl up almost to the trenches. Recently I watched a bush which appeared to be shaking a lot, despite the fact that there was no wind. I fired into it a couple of times with my rifle. It moved quickly enough then.

"Some of the Turks paint themselves and their rifles with splotches of green and are then practically invisible among the herbage. Snipers operating in sandy or muddy soil daub themselves from head to foot with mud. Among the bare rocks they are like chameleons, half green and half a dull brown, like a piece of sun-dried moss."

A Lively Stunt By Alderman Duffus

Alderman Duffus rarely misses a meeting of the City Council or of any of his committees. On Saturday afternoon he took in the commercial travellers' excursion to Harwood. That evening he remembered that he had received notice of a meeting of the Property Committee at 8 o'clock. When the steamer arrived at Harwood, he telephoned the Duffus Garage for a Ford car to meet him at Campbelltown, 10 miles from Peterborough. His car was there waiting when the steamer reached the point at 8 o'clock on the home run. At 8.25 he was with his committee, having motored the ten miles at the rate of a mile every two and one-half minutes over a country road. Takes some going to be a punctual man!

SUSTAINED A FRACTURED SKULL

PORT HOPE, July 19.—Mrs. J. C. Rosevear met with a fatal accident when going down the cellar steps at her home. She evidently missed her balance and fell over, as when found her head was resting on the cement floor and her feet part way up pthe steps. She received two bad fractures of the skull and also fractured her ear. Despite the best of medical attendance she passed away. Deceased was 66 years of age and a very highly esteemed lady. The funeral took place to-day to the Cold Springs Congertational cemetery.

THE CUNARD LINER ORDUNA IS ATTACKED BY GERMAN SUB.

"It probably will be several days before I shall make my report of the attack and my protest," Mr. Thompson said. "I consider that I am in duty bound to do so. As an American citizen employed in an official capacity by the Government to go abroad, I feel that I should bring the Government's attention to the attack.

"I felt that I had a right to return home on the Orduna, although she flies the British flag, because she is a passenger ship. The fact that she had no munitions of war aboard fortified this opinion. The Orduna, an unarmed passenger ship, carrying no munitions, was deliberately attacked without warning, pursued and subjected to shell fire. It is little short of marvellous that she was not sent to the bottom with all aboard.

"In making my protest to Washington I shall proceed along these lines, combining with the protest a report of the attack as I saw it."

Hid Behind U. S. Ship?

Whether the submarine hed behind an American ship — the bark Normandy from Gulfport, Miss. — was a point upon which passengers held varying opinions. A small sailing ship with two American flags painted on her side was sighted ahead shortly before the attack. Captain Taylor, suspicious of the craft, changed his course. Soon thereafter the torpedo was sighted.

There was no certainty as to the identity of this ship that displayed the two painted American flags, but one of the passengers thought that he made out her name to be "Normanie," through his glasses. There is no such vessel listed. The American bark Normandy was in the vicinity at the time, however. When she reached Liverpool July 12 some of her crew said that a submarine had used her as a shield from which to manoeuvre against and torpedo the Russian steamer Leo — a story that the Normandy's Captain denied.

The Leo was torpedoed 20 miles, approximately, from the place where the Orduna was attacked. The Normandy's crew said the submarine had held them up on the evening of July 9. The Orduna was attacked the same day, but in the morning.

Victory in the Cameroons an Important Allied Success

PARIS, July 19.—Additional details regarding the capture by Franco-British troops of Garua and Ngaundere in the Cameroons, a German colony in West Africa, are contained in a statement issued last night by the Ministry of Colonies. The assertion is made that the movement to encircle the German forces also is progressing favorably nearer the coast of the Gulf of Guinea. The communication follows:

"The allied troops recently captured the port of Garua, in the Cameroons, forcing the garrison to surrender unconditionally and continued their victorious march to Ngaundere (150 miles south, which was captured on June 29th.

"Ngaundere, owing to its situation, climate, and the number of roads diverging from it appears to have been the centre of German resistance, and its loss is a serious blow to them. After a vain attempt to retake Ngaundere, the Germans retreated in the direction of Tibati (110 miles south-west.)

"Near the coast Franco-British troops captured Dahane and Tjahe on July 15th, thus extending the movement to encircle the German forces."

Garua, is one of the four Government school towns in the Cameroons. Ngaundere is one of the chief interior trading stations with a population of 30,000, situation about 100 miles from the border of the French Congo, and 440 miles from the Coast. The Cameroons are located in Western Equatorial Africa. The area is estimated at 191,000 square miles and the population at 2,540,000, of whom about 2,000 are whites.

CREX GRASS RUGS FOR VERANDAHS AND SUMMER COTTAGES

How Two German Prisoners Escaped From English Prison Camp

A remarkable story of an enemy prisoner's escape — beginning like a chapter of "Monte Cristo," and ending with the narrator's safe arrival in a safe corner of the Continent, is told in Stockholm.

On June 2 the London Daily Chronicle published the following announcement:

Two German prisoners who escaped fro the internment camp at Loftthouse Park (between Wakefield and Leeds), on Friday, May 8, are still at large.

The two men are Frederick N. Wiener, who was transferred to Loftthouse Park from Edinburgh Castle on April 29; and Alfred Klapproth, formerly an officer on a Hamburg-Amerika liner, and a German naval reservist.

5 feet 11 inches, is dark, and speaks English fluently, with an American accent.

The other is 30, is 5 feet 8 inches in height, stout of build and speaks English imperfectly.

A Clever Ruse.

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent supplies the following interesting version of Wiener's adventures as given by himself:

The Frankfurter Zeitung quotes from the Aftonblad of Stockholm an account from Lieut. F. N. Wiener, an Austrian officer, of his experiences in escaping from the internment camp at Wakefield.

Lieut. Wiener, who had settled in America, was on his way to Austria when captured by a British warship and brought to Kirkwall, being subsequently interned in Wakefield with a German naval officer of the name of Alfred Klapproth.

These two officers decided to attempt to escape together. Their first plan, to dig a subterranean passage to freedom, had to be abandoned, as it too up too much time, so they resorted to ther tactics. They ordered sporting costumes from the camp tailor in order to appear as British as possible. They were also able to procure gold to the extent of £30.

Then they asked to see the censor knowing that he would not be in his house at the time.

Talked His Way to Freedom.

From the censor's office (says Wiener) we went to the guardroom, and I was able, thanks to my perfect command of English, to give the impression that we were British officers. A few generalities about military matters to the men on duty completely dispelled any lingering suspicion they may have had, and we succeeded in escaping without molestation, after climbing a park wall about eight metres high.

Our first objective was Leeds, the nearest big town. There we bought two first-class tickets to Manchester, without, however, making use of them, but travelling instead by third-class to Liverpool. Of course, we were industriously searched for in Manchester, and thus gained invaluable time.

We went to London from Liverpool, but did not venture to stay at an hotel, fearing discovery. We spent a week lving over nights in restaurants, night cafes, and dancing saloons.

From English to French.

Meanwhile, we read with much satisfaction reports of our escape in the papers. As my description in these reports stated that I spoke English with an American accent, we now spoke only French, and gave ourselves out to be Frenchmen. Incidentally we dropped the commander of the camp a postcard stating that we were no longer speaking "American," but French.

After various vain attempts to secure passage on a cargo boat, we were finally able to steal on board the Danish steamer Tomak, where we hid in one of the holds, crushed between bales and boxes, without food or drink. We spent four dreadful days and nights until we reached Copenhagen, where we again made passing acquaintance with a prison. My companion had already gone to Germany, and I propose going on to Austria as soon as I am able to complete certain affairs.

The Peterboro' County Crops

If the Weather Proves Fair Some of the Wheat Will be Cut This Week

The weather of the past few days, including to-day, is anything but favourable to the farmers, who are making a determined, but ineffectual attempt to close up haying operations this week. The fall wheat is fast approaching maturity and should the weather prove fair, some of it will be in the shock before the end of the week. The crops throughout Peterborough County are looking fine, in consequence of which the farmers are more than usually optimistic. The hay crop was only fair. The old meadows made a better showing than the new ones. Most of the hay crop is in the barn, and preparations are being made to cope with the grain harvest. Wheat, which two weeks ago, was quite green, has turned a deep golden colour. So far it is free from rust and smut, although a little of the former has made its appearance on the oat crop.

GENERAL DIES A PRISONER.

Former Equerry to King of Saxony Succombs In Russia.

DRESDEN, June 26. — The first high German officer to die in captivity, so far as has been recorded, is Lieutenant General von Haughk, former chief equerry of the King of Saxony, who has just been reported as dead of kidney trouble in Taschkent, Russia.

General von Haughk fell into the hands of the Russians last October, while he was in charge of a set of gifts being transported to the German soldiers. Many Notables Are Visiting In The Rockies

American Political Stars Loud in Their Praise of the Scenery.

Special to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, July 19.—Never have the Canadian Rockies been visited by so many American political stars as this year. Samuel Untermyer, the great lawyer and close confidante of President Wilson, was only a few days ahead of Colonel Roosevelt on his private car. To-day Governor Dunne, of Chicago is at Lake Louise with Mrs. Dunne and family, Senator J. H. Lewis, the Hon. James J. Brady, the Hon. and Mrs. G. Blair, the Hon. and Mrs. P. J. Lucey, the Hon. and Mrs. Adolph Karpen, the Hon. and Mrs. William A. Tilden, the Hon. William L. Sullivan, General and Mrs. Frank S. Dickson, Colonel S. O. Tripp, Colonel Edwin Romberg, Colonel and Mrs. M. R. Kelly, Colonel James K. Finn, and Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob Frank.

Governor Dunne has got out a special annotated time-table for his party, and gives a flattering account of the scenery to be seen from the car windows. He introduces the descriptions with a well informed account of the Dominion of Canada, its provinces, climate, constitution religious system, educational facilities, report for law and order, banking system, and imports and exports, with special emphasis on the great agricultural wealth of the country. In fact the governor is evidently a booster for Canada, and as such is a more than welcome guest.

Orillia Town Hall Is Quite Destroyed

Opera House in Same Building Also Demolished—Will Rebuild the Municipal Building.

ORILLIA, July 8—Little more than the bare walls remain standing of the fine municipal and Opera House building, which burned early yesterday morning. The fire was discovered half an hour after midnight bursting through the roof above the Opera House stage. There was an abundant supply of water and good pressure, but the firemen were only able to prevent the total destruction of that portion of the building occupied by the Council chambers and Clerk's office on the ground floor. The municipal records were not destroyed, the vault being untouched, and most of the contents having been removed to a place of safety.

Have Forced Russians to Retreat at Several Points Across Narew, Says Berlin

Great Drive to Squeeze the Russians Out of Warsaw, Moving Forward at an Amazing Speed, According to German War Office---Petrograd Admits Repulses.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

BERLIN, via wireless, July 20.—Sweeping down upon Warsaw from the north, the German army under Gen. Gallwitz, has forced the Russians to retreat across the Narew River at several points, and has taken up positions less than forty miles from the Polish capital.

An official statement from the War Office early to-day, the first since that issued Sunday afternoon, declared that the great 1,000-mile drive to squeeze the Russians out of Warsaw is moving forward at an amazing speed. From the Riga region to Bukowina the Slavs are everywhere in retreat, abandoning guns and ammunition. In the fighting, south of Przasnysz alone, Von Hindenberg's forces have captured 101 Russian officers and 28,760 men. Between the Bug and the Vistula, Mackensen has made 16,250 prisoners in the past 48 hours of fighting. Prisoners taken at other sectors of the long battle front raise the total number of captives to more than 56,000. In the Riga region in the extreme north, Gen. Von Bulow's forces have occupied Tukum, and are continuing their advance against Riga, now [illegible] Von Bulow's cavalry is overrunning the Windau River region, driving the Russians back in a panicky retreat.

ADMITTED AT PETROGRAD.

PETROGRAD, July 20.—The War Office frankly admitted to-day that the Russians have been driven from their positions and forced to retire at half a dozen points under heavy pressure from the Kaiser's armies marching against Warsaw.

Turkey is Reported as Being Terribly Short of Munitions

LONDON, July 20.—Reports which have reached Britain during the last few days regarding the Dardanelles operations, and particularly the Turkish means of defence, have led to the prediction that a victory which will place Constantinople at their mercy will be reached within six weeks. Generally speaking, this confident anticipation is regarded as ultra-optimistic, but it originates in a quarter which deserves attention.

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUES.

A despatch to The Daily Mail from Athens, dated yesterday, says:

Heavy fighting continues on the Gallipoli Peninsula. The Allies are attacking vehemently along the whole front. Each attack is preceded by a bombardment from heavy French artillery and the guns of the warships. All the attacks are reported to have been successful, but there is no definite news concerning them.

TURK MUNITIONS SCARCE.

The Daily Chronicle has the following from Athens: A great scarcity of munitions in Turkey is about to lead the Governments of Germany and Austria into taking extremely serious steps. It has been already reported that consignments of munitions of war from Germany for Turkey have been held up in Roumania. A Russian newspaper, Russko Slovo, states that the Governments of the central Empires are preparing a note to Roumania on this question, which is one of life and death to the Austro-German hopes in Turkey. Inquiries in diplomatic circles here tend to show that the Russko Slovo's statement is quite correct. I learn that the note will take a form akin to an ultimatum. Austro-German troops are now being concentrated on the Roumanian frontier as a means of exerting pressure on the Bucharest Government before the note is handed in. The whole position of Turkey's army in the Pallipoli Peninsula is in the balance until Turkey can secure immediately large consignments of ammunition.

TURKEY IS ISOLATED.

A Ministerial order was issued yesterday, says The Times' Sofia (Bulgaria) correspondent, under date of last Thursday, definitely suspending railway communication with Turkey. The step appears to have been taken in consequence of continued Turkish interference with traffic, and may probably be regarded as marking the collapse of the negotiations for the cession to Bulgaria of the Dedeagnatch railway.

Sir Robert Borden Reviews The Canadians at Shorncliffe

LONDON, July 19.—Premier Borden left London for Shorncliffe on Friday afternoon, and in the evening attended a dinner given by General Hughes, at which were gathered Gen. Steele and the officers of the staff. On Saturday he inspected and reviewed the Canadian division, the men presenting an inspiring appearance as they marched past the saluting point. Both officers and men were in the best of health and highest of spirits, and are eager for an opportunity to get to the Front.

The Prime Minister was accompanied by General Hughes, Sir Archibald Murray, representing Lord Kitchener, and by the General commanding the troops in the Shorncliffe district.

Inspects the Wounded.

The Prime Minister later proceeded to the camp, about a mile distant, where the details of reinforcements for the Canadian troops at the Front are stationed. He inspected and reviewed the Canadians at this camp. Among them were several hundred wounded men, now convalescent, who had sufficiently recovered to appear on parade.

The Prime Minister went carefully through the lines of these wounded men and inquired of each as to his condition and treatment in the hospitals. Without exception they reported that the care and attention bestowed upon them in the hospitals had been most excellent and satisfactory.

Praise for Officers.

In addressing the officers of the Canadian division and of the other Canadian forces assembled at Shorncliffe, the Prime Minister congratulated them upon the splendid appearance of the men under their command. He reminded them that while the training of the men is important, that of the officers is even more essential, as to them are confided the care and safety of thousands of men under their command.

"We realise," he said, "the great importance of the officers' training and feel you have devoted yourselves to your duties in that regard with the greatest possible success. The cause for which we are contending is the highest that can be imagined. Not only does it involve the future of our Dominion and of the Empire, but vitally concerns the future of humanity and the destiny of the world. Canadians were thrilled with pride at the splendid achievement of the men of the First Canadian Division. We are assured your record will not be less worthy or less splendid. Canada expects you to do your duty, and more than that, Canada knows that you will do it. His Royal Highness the Governor-General commanded me to bid you God-speed for him in the full confidence, which is shared by all the people of the Dominion, that your career at the Front, which we shall watch with the most intense interest and anxiety, will be worthy of the great races from which you have sprung."

At the conclusion of the review, cheers were given for the King, for the Governor-General, and for the Prime Minister.

Before returning to London, Sir Robert visited one of the hospitals at Shorncliffe, in which there are many wounded Canadians, and found the arrangements most comfortable and satisfactory. He spoke to each man in the hospital, and had the satisfaction of congratulating Colonel Armour on the excellent accommodation, care, and attention provided for each of the wounded.

Visits Duchess' Hospital.

Premier Borden has lost no time in commencing the visiting of the Canadian wounded. To-day he delighted the men at the Duchess of Connaught Hospital at Cliveden, the Prime Minister being accompanied by R. B. Bennett, Surgeon-General Jones, and L. C. Christie. They were met by Col. Gorrell and Major Astor.

Sir Robert spent two hours going through the wards. His cheery words to the men individually were much appreciated. A number of the wounded assembled in the dining-hall. Addressing them, Sir Robert said it was a great privilege to meet those who had been fighting for the Empire. "We in Canada," he added, "appreciate the splendid achievements of the men at the Front, and are glad to know that their efforts have not been unworthy of the best traditions of the race from which they sprang. I am glad to know that you are so comfortably situated in this splendid hospital. I wish you all God-speed towards complete recovery, and share with you the highest confidence the great cause for which we have been contending will in the end prove triumphant."

Sir Robert subsequently remarked that he had been greatly impressed by the undaunted spirit of the men and the wonderful cheerfulness which seemed to animate them. The situation of the hospital and everything in connection with it were all that could be desired, and the men to whom he had spoken were more than satisfied with the conditions by which they were surrounded. He hoped as far as possible to visit the Canadian wounded throughout the British Isles and France, although they were scattered in 1,300 hospitals and convalescent homes.

Rev. W. L. Baynes-Reed Going to The Front

Will be Chaplain to the Ninth Mississanga Horse—Formerly Lived in Peterborough.

TORONTO, July 19.—Residents of Norway and district are justly proud of their militant parson, the Rev. W. L. Baynes-Reed, rector of the Church of St. John the Baptist. Born at London, Ont., in 1871 he had a distinguished educational career, graduating from Trinity College, Toronto, in 1895. He was ordained to the diaconate the same year and advanced to the priesthood a year later. He was appointed assistant to the late Rev. Charles Ruttan at St. John's, Norway, in 1898, and in 1900 succeeded him as rector and still retains that post. He is a keen enthusiast in military matters, having held the position of Chaplain to the Ninth Mississauga Horse for several years. He is no church parade chaplain, but is anxious to proceed to the front with his regiment, and it is practically certain that the authorities at Ottawa will grant his request. At present he is taking an active part in the recruiting campaign and has granted the use of the parish hall for this purpose.

System Necessary.

Speaking to a newspaperman on Saturday he said:—"As a born Canadian, I am sorry that more of our men are not volunteering for service overseas. I feel confident that if a systematic campaign were conducted by the Government instead of leaving it in the hands of individuals, greater results would be obtained. Eloquent speakers and rousing meetings could not fail to create enthusiasm, and it is from such a wave of enthusiasm that recruits will come. I feel that if I preach to others that it is their duty to go to the front, I must go myself, and that is why I have volunteered. From my own church fully one hundred have joined the colours, and I believe that number will be increased."

Rev. W. L. Baynes-Reed is well-known in Peterborough, especially among the older members of St. Luke's, Ashburnham, where for a time he served as curate to Rev. Dr. Symonds, during the latter's term as rector of that church.

A Full Measure of Health is the reward of those who live right and eat right.

And as fresh air, exercise, and food are the principal factors it is important that food be selected which contains the essential nutritive elements in well-balanced, easily digestible form.

In making the famous wheat and barley food,

Grape-Nuts

the malting of the barley brings out the diastase (the digestive element) while the long 20-hour baking breaks down the starch cells of the grains. Thus Grape-Nuts does not tax the digestion, but actually assists in the assimilation of other foods.

Happy Hawkins in the Panhandle

By ROBERT ALEXANDER WASON

Truth to tell, it was a headachy tangle. After a bad-handled colt falls in with a feller who knows hosses, all he has to do is discard his bitin' and kickin', and he'll get just as good treatment as any hoss; but hanged if I can see where there's much inducement held out for a human to repent and live the best he knows how.

Genuwine gun-fighters are born that way, but they never find it out until circumstances force 'em into a corner, after which plain, ordinary fear sets off their natural instincts. A rabbit squeals and wriggles, a rat bites, an antelope runs; but they don't airy one of 'em pick out this course after a long stint o' ponderin', and neither does one o' these gun-fightin' kids.

He sees it's up to make a move, and he is surprised to find that he is lightnin' quick and wickedly accurate, and that when the pinch comes the very same fear that throws some into a panic, throws him into a bunch o' nerves that work like clock-work. He gets in bad from actin' natural and in self-defence, and then when he picks up a little wisdom and tries to get back over the fence, why, he finds the whole world waitin' on the other side with clubs. I went to sleep feelin' purty much discouraged.

The next mornin' Kate was able to walk all right but she did look pale, and the Begum spoke her mind right out when Kate suggested that she'd have to go to her father that day. Kate's tale about bein' on her way to Elliot to stock up with some new dresses had took with the Begum like a house afire, and Kate purt night had to be rough to keep her from joinin' in and goin' along.

I overheard 'em at the discussion and I thought all was lost; but Kate was just as much a woman as the Begum was, and she managed to block her off as easy as ever. Then I got Kate to write home a note to her father and I took it over to the Horse-shoe, where I found things as smooth as the haw in a hoss's eye.

There was an expression o' solid satisfaction in the face of the old hermit which showed that he was getting a heap of enjoyment out o' puttin' himself as a bumper between Kastle's disposition and his jangled nerves, and there was somethin' more like content in the face of Kate's father ever I'd seen there. He was mighty glad to get the note and didn't show a mite of suspicion about it.

That evenin' Isaac seemed more bent 'ever on havin' some one go up to Big Jeff's to see if somethin' couldn't be learned about what had become of Tom Smith, until I lost a part o' my patience, and told Isaac that the time for him to have done his worryin' was when he had been left in charge of Tom Smith, but that was all I'd ask of him, was just to quit harpin' on that subject.

Next mornin' bein' Sunday we didn't line out quite so prompt and it was amazin' to see the boys blossom out in finery just because the' happened to be a gel on the place. When I wandered over to see how breakfast was gettin' along, I saw Monody feedin' Madame. The calf had thrived amazin' and didn't need pail-vittles any more 'n the old crumpled cow did, but Isaac was never content unless he was spoilin' two or three dumb brutes and as he had lit out early in his chariot, Monody had agreed to feed the calf three times.

Jim had a team o' black mares and when I hitched them up to the buckboard and drove up to the porch after Kate, I certainly did feel like some one in particular. The Begum had fussed up Kate's hair and had made her wear some sort of a loose robe with big flowers in it and lace around the neck and it made Kate stack up like the portrait of a reignin' queen.

All the boys were lined up tryin' to look as though I was softer than a goose-hair pillow, but envy stuck out on 'em like warts on a toad, and while I was waitin' for her to come out, I couldn't help but make the black frisk about a little, in spite of this bein' dead again' my principles.

She finally came out wearin' her fawn-skin suit and the Begum beside her with her arm around her waist, her lip quiverin' and her eyes full o' tears. At sight of the Begum's face the boys all took off their hats and every last one of 'em looked as though they were helpin' out at a funeral. The Begum had rested heavy on us and that's the truth; but she had been so out and out about it that we had agreed she was game, and every time she loosened up and got a little soft we put a higher estimate on just how game she was.

We had all been half afraid at first that she wouldn't let the gel go in the house at all, but when she had turned loose and nursed her and fussed over her and was now weepin' about her goin' away again, why, we wiped the Begum's account clean and regarded her as bein' a regular humane female, in spite of her warlike ways. I happened to glance at Flames and he was lookin' at me with accusin' eyes, for makin' him pester her durin' Friday evenin'. Pore little chap, he didn't have nothin' but an imagination to picture to him what mother-fussin is like, and he had his tender spots deep under his thorns, the same as the rest of us.

Kate was all rested out and the' was a rich glow in her face. She felt kind o' shy, footin' it before all those strangers in a fawn-like suit, and the was a trace o' friendly appealin' in her deep, moist eyes. She said good-by to the boys in a bunch and thanked 'em for all they'd done for her, which put every last one of 'em to blushin' and filled 'em with a desire to shed quarts o' blood in her favour.

Then she and the Begum took one last hug and kiss which made everything so misty in those parts that I didn't know rightly what was goin' on until the blacks were out in the open and headed for the north-west. We drove across Bed Deer Crick and down on the other side in order to make our tale carry, provided any of the boys chose to ride after us part way, which they didn't none of 'em do.

We didn't talk much about what we was most thinkin' of until we got close to the Horse-shoe, and then I sez. "Kate, how on earth are you ever goin' to square up between Tom Smith and your father?"

"Oh, I don't know," sez she. "I simply couldn't harm my father in his present condition, and if Tom Smith were to beg me to go away with him, I reckon the'd about split my heart in two. Uncle Josiah sez that livin' a life is a lot like buildin' a wall—if we set our minds to fussin' too much about the bricks to go on at the top, we'll probably lay the bottom bricks so careless the whole wall 'll topple over; but if each row is put in solid and square, why, the's mighty small chance of breakin' down the wall by dumpin' the heaviest sort of a load on to the top. This is why I try to live each day at a time and not to worry."

"I reckon that's about all you can do, but it's too much like preachin' to make me hilarious," sez I. "In buildin a wall, you know what you're buildin' it to stand, but in livin' a life you got to brace yourself again' the very worst that can happen to ya."

"All the more reason why you should live out each day solid and square," sez Kate.

"That old hermit," sez I, "has managed to win out on his own system, but hanged if one day at a time is far enough ahead for me to figger. Tom Smith is liable to be routed out and put on the jump at any moment, and he don't even know where you stand."

"Neither do I," sez Kate, and she held her head high and looked off in the direction of Tom Smith's mound with her face smooth, her lips firm, and only a trace of sorrow in her eyes.

"What would you do if you found there was another woman in the case?" sez I.

She hardened her muscles in her firm little jaw, just once, and then said, "I'd be mighty glad that I had laid my lower rows of bricks solid and square."

When that old hermit took the trouble of shootin' an idee into a feller, he'd shoot it in so deep, it took a mighty sight of wearin' to get it out again.

When we reached the Horseshoe, we found Kate's father sittin' in the doorway with his cheeks flushed and his eyes glowin' like coals. His hands were shakin' and he was breathin' fast.

"Kate," he called to her, "Kate, I've heard from Douglas!" Douglas was the name of his son.

"Where was the letter mailed this time?" sez she, speakin' calm and cool so as to put the brakes on his hopes.

"From Dodge City," sez he. "Here read it."

Delightful Summer Drinks

Many Tempting Beverages From the Same Bottle

One of the very pleasant features of a bottle of Montserrat Lime Fruit Juice is its versatility.

The ordinary Montserrat beverage is made with half a wine-glassful of Montserrat, some sugar, broken ice and a glassful of water. This is delightful and quenches the thirst.

Another Montserrat beverage can be made by using Soda Water instead of plain water. It gives a little more snap—Golfers like it.

Montserrat can also be used instead of lemons for flavouring frozen punches and ice creams.

Montserrat is not common Lime Juice. It is pressed from fresh cultivated limes from the beautiful island of Montserrat.

TAKE IT EASY.

Don't let little things ruffle you; there are too many great trials in life for one to waste time and emotion over little things.

Little revenges gratified, little spites avenged, never accomplish any good, and life is too short to waste your substance in a way that leaves you no power of resistance for its greater trials.

Take it easy. There are thousands worse off than you are, although that is not much comfort to one who has his own troubles, yet the calmer we bear them the more courage will we husband with which to meet them.

The mother whose disposition is calm and lovable, who has too much self-control to inflict her own worries on her household, is the mother who can always retain the love of her children. If they have little worries she can soothe them and her own calmness communicates itself to them.

Life is not an easy problem by any manner of means but we can make it easier by that philosophy that makes us lovable and sympathetic rather than the indulgence of moods that give everyone around us the "blues."

Besides, think of this, a woman who is not amiable and calm grows ugly and wrinkled, looking old before her time.

Fret and worry make more dyspeptics than an unruly internal organism ever created, and so she who would escape dyspepsia and the woman who would retain her good looks must cultivate the art of taking life easy.

Battles of Antiquity Now Shrink to "Street Brawls"

Alexander the Great Conquered Orient with 35,000 Men—Israel's Kings Had an "Army" of 600—Profanity Then an Important "Weapon."

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

LONDON, July 17.

When one reads of the great numerical strength and wonderful resources of the armies fighting in Europe, a comparison with some famous military events of remote antiquity makes the latter dwindle into insignificance. It seems incredible to a modern generation that Alexander the Great conquered the Orient with only 35,000 men. On a still smaller scale the great battles of Israel appear to have been conducted, as told in the Bible accounts. For instance, in the fights against Gibeon the Israelites are said to have suffered "severe losses," to wit, 20 men.

The Egyptian army which invaded Palestine and subjugated the whole country counted barely 5,000 soldiers. Saul confronted his Philistine adversaries with an "army" of 600, which in the course of time was increased to 1,600, after the "militarists" of those days had persuaded the authorities to provide a reserve force, a sort of "Landsturm," of 400 warriors brave and bold. King David's military establishment did not exceed his predecessor's in numbers. According to the First Book of Kings, however, King Ahab must have been pretty much of a war lord, judging by the standard of olden times. In his army were 7,000 soldiers and a constabulary force of 230 men.

In the light of the gigantic conflicts of the present day, the old time battles shrink to the proportion of ordinary street brawls. The opposing armies were usually arrayed in lines within hearing of one another. Frequently the actual combat was preluded by an exchange of opprobrious profanity, in order to get up the proper sentiment of "holy wrath," which was considered an indispensable element in a soldier's efficiency. Siege operations were equally primitive, and few cities ran any risks of being taken if surrounded by walls of adequate strength to withstand the impact of the besiegers' battering rams and rock-throwing catapults. Starvation usually was the only means which could bring about the surrender of any fortified place.

GERMANS HOLD HORSE RACES AT THE FRONT

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

BERLIN, July 17.—In order to relieve the monotony of the protracted trench fighting the Crown Prince of Germany recently arranged for a series of horse racing contests near his headquarters in France. According to the German newspaper Sportwelt, this proved to be a healthy diversion for both men and horses at the front.

The Crown Prince donated a silver cigarette case for first prize, and General von Gossler, General von Heraeus, and others also gave prizes. There was keen competition, fifty-one riders entering for the Crown Prince's prize, though of this number only three finished the course. This was due to the fact that the race was a cross country steeplechase. In some places the horses had to jump the German trenches. The winner was Captain Wchowsky. Other prize winners were Captain Trautmann, Lieutenant von Hindeburg and Lieutenant Lehmann. The Crown Prince, who was accompanied in the race by the well known racing masters von Mikusaff and von Zobeltitz, presented the prizes to the winners.

The event was so successful and so enthusiastically enjoyed by the officers that other similar contests are to be held.

HUSBAND AN OFFICER, BRIDE BUT A PRIVATE

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

BERLIN, July 17.—A romantic incident of the war is told in the German papers regarding a charming couple who were recently to be seen in the streets of Warsaw. The one is a young Russian officer, who moves along with the aid of crutches and of the arm of a still younger looking Russian private. The youngster has an arm in a sling. Both were wounded in battle and wear the decoration of the cross.

The young soldier is the wife of the wounded officer and is the daughter of a Russian Princess. These young persons met in a train en route to Warsaw recently and fell in love. The officer was on his way to join his regiment in Warsaw, and the young lady was going in the same direction to visit some friends. The journey required more than two days and when they left the train the young couple sought a priest and were married.

As the young officer had to leave at once with his regiment for the front, the young wife enlisted as a private, donned a uniform and accompanied her husband to the front under an assumed name. It was in the battle of Rawak that both were wounded.

ITALY'S CROWN PRINCE DEVOTED TO NAVY AND INTENDS TO BE AN ADMIRAL

Scion of House of Savoy Has Ambition to Lead Fighting Ships, but He Carefully Follows All Campaigns on Land in European Struggle in Which His Country Is Involved.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

ROME, July 17.

San Rossore, a chateau in the vicinity of Livorno, is the favorite summer residence of the Italian royal family, and the young Crown Prince in particular always has enjoyed the sojourn at the coast. Here he could dig channels in the beach and sail his little toy ships all day long, and he also had his own little rowboat, in which he could paddle around under the watchful eyes of an attendant. From his early infancy little Prince Humbert has exhibited a great affection for the sea and a sailor's life. When he was six years old he declared with much earnestness that he wanted to become an admiral. Being reminded that he ought rather to become a general, like his father, the royal youngster often retorted, almost angrily:—"No, I won't. An admiral is what I am going to be when I get big because that is much more than to be only a general."

It was not surprising that the Prince early bestowed his affection on Captain Bonaldi, the naval aid of the King. He admitted freely that he preferred Captain Bonaldi to the rest of the court entourage, because the former was a "commandante." In the presence of Captain Bonaldi the future ruler of Italy always was on his best behavior, never disobedient. Every word the navy officer spoke was law to the young heir to the throne. As soon as the King became aware of the strong influence which the urbane and otherwise excellent Captain Bonaldi exercised over the lively and sometimes quite unruly Prince, he asked his aid to become the youth's tutor and governor. So it happened that Captain Bonaldi, about two years ago, took official charge of his little royal admirer, to the latter's unbounded joy and satisfaction.

Prince Humbert, who will be eleven years old in September, already is a proficient scholar in some subjects, especially history and geography. His studies, however, are not very exacting as yet, and he has ample time for sport and play. He is a good horseman and an enthusiastic bicyclist. Anything having a military touch to it appears strongly to this worthy descendant of the martial Victor Emanuel, the first King of a united Italy. Although Humbert was only a stripling at the time of the war with Turkey, he followed the campaign with absorbing interest. He had his own war maps, on which he carefully manoeuvred the colored pins representing the different forces, in accordance with the bulletins received every day at the Quirinal. When the war news did not warrant a forward move of the pins with the Italian colors the Prince became impatient, and he did not trouble much about concealing his feelings.

Last autumn Prince Humbert's cup of joy was filled when he was permitted to take a two months' trip on board the cruiser Apulia. Four days in advance he had his sailor's chest all packed, and he left Captain Bonaldi hardly any peace before the two left Rome for Naples. At the latter place a jubilant crowd escorted the heir presumptive on his way to the cruiser, where the crew greeted their new shipmate no less warmly. Prince Humbert insisted on sharing the daily life and labors of the ordinary seaman, but he also was happy over passing a few hours now and then on the bridge or quarterdeck, together with his beloved "Uncle" Bonaldi, who incidentally gave to his young charge an elementary course in navigation and matters nautical in general.

Whether his love for the sea will prevail upon the Crown Prince and his father to such an extent as to cause a break in the tradition of giving a military education to an heir to the throne is a matter of interested speculation among the Italian people. Just at present the valiant little scion of the house of Savoy is centring his attention on the immense land campaigns all over the European continent, and it is barely possible his former attachment for the navy may suffer in consequence.

Pathetic Letter from Austrian Officer Releasing His Fiancee

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

VIENNA, July 17.

The pathos of the great war finds a particularly striking expression in the following letter from Lieutenant Wirico, of the Austrian army, to an intimate friend in Vienna.

"This will be my last letter," he writes, "and I address it to you because you will understand me better than would poor little Wiani, my fiancée. I wish you to explain to her as gently as possible the reasons why we can never meet again. If she asks for my address do not give it her. She would only send me a long tear-stained letter, which would rend my heart with grief. 'Why all this?' I can hear you both exclaim. One minute and I will tell you."

The officer then proceeds to describe a battle in which he was severely wounded, and continues:—

"Two days later I regained full consciousness in the hospital. The first thing I was told was what I wished the least to hear—that I would not die just yet. I would live on, mind you, with half of my face cut away. A sabre stroke had made one big warped scar of the once handsome features of dashing Lieutenant Wirico. You understand now, my dear fellow, why I am so anxious to release Wiani from her engagement. Tell her all about it.

"It is all very well for people to say that wounds received in battle are to be valued higher than medals, and that a soldier should glory in his scars. But only once have I dared to gaze at my hideously distorted face in a looking glass, which the nurse held over me. That was enough. Little Wiani must never see me thus. She must remember her lieutenant as he looked at their last parting. I need not tell you any more, for I am sure you can picture what I feel about this. Above all, please don't write, because it will only make me suffer the more. It might force the tears to my remaining eye and the cavity where the other used to be. And that hurts. Farewell, Wirico's Wiani, whether for ever be eternity is split. Whether for ever or for a moment, matters little."

WEAR BRIGHT DRESSES TO CHEER SOLDIERS

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

BERLIN, July 17.—"What is the proper style of dress for women to wear in war time?"

This is the puzzling question that is being discussed widely in Germany and Austria. In order to get some idea of the sentiment regarding this matter the Prager Tagblatt, a leading German newspaper in Prague, publishes a symposium giving the opinions of German women—artists, authors, singers, actresses and dressmakers. Among those who sent their opinions to the newspaper are Alice Trubner, a well known artist of Karlsruhe; Anselma Heine, successful writer of best sellers; Grete Meisel-Hess, authoress and social reformer; Lilly Hafgren-Waag, opera singer; Lucie Hoflich, of the Deutsche Theatre, in Berlin, and numerous other prominent women.

The sentiment practically is unanimous that black should be eliminated in feminine attire. Frau Trubner urges that bright, not gay, colors be chosen for gowns, and hats, so that when the ill and wounded soldiers return home they be not depressed by the predominance of sombre colors.

Black, it is argued, is depressive. Despite the large number of dead and wounded, the feeling of confidence in ultimate victory should be reflected in the dress of the women. Black would discourage even the optimist, and to keep up the spirit of the people it is suggested that variegated colors be chosen—not gay or frivolous, but bright and hopeful.

War Transforms Kaiser Into Occult, Mysterious Figure

No Longer an Irresponsible, Unchecked Power, but the Symbol of Imperial Germany—Crown Prince's Popularity Wanes as Ideas of Lese Majeste Are Swept Away.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

LONDON, July 17.

"A Neutral Observer" in the following article in the Times analyzes German public feeling with regard to the Emperor and the Crown Prince:—

The present war has upset all traditions. It is not a war of men or deeds. Personal prowess counts for little. Men and their achievements are of no importance detached from the great common task. Acts of bravery or heroism of the individual soon fade from view and are of little influence on ultimate outcome. Just as manual labor has been to a large extent supplanted by machinery, so in this war a man, whether he be a private or a general, must be content to carry out with clock-like precision the tasks intrusted to him. And so it is with the rulers of States.

When last August the German Emperor proclaimed that by his will a state of war existed between himself, Russia and France, he was following old traditions of imperial prerogative. Later, when he let it be known that he intended to make a triumphal entry into Paris on a certain date, he was following the same traditions.

Then came the reaction. When the advance on Paris failed it was whispered among the higher classes in Germany and afterward in the street that the Emperor had interfered with the plans of the Grand General Staff and had ordered the hasty forward march on Paris when, according to better authority, the eastern campaign should have been given attention. It was alleged that he had differed from the Chief of Staff, General von Moltke, and had compelled him to resign. These stories became current gossip, and the Emperor's prestige declined visibly. People avoided mentioning his name. At the cinema the portrait of other personalities of the war were more loudly applauded. Six months ago the German people privately thought their Emperor to be a meddler in military matters, in which he was not an expert. The Crown Prince, the "victor of Longwy," was then immensely popular.

Kaiser Changes Tactics.

But as soon as the Emperor became aware that he was on the wrong path, he changed his tactics and vanished from the scene. He no longer made proclamations and speeches, he let it be known among the lower classes—and the stories have this time crept upward—that he no longer interfered with military matters. His whereabouts was kept secret. One day he was on the western front; the next in Poland. In various cities of the empire it would be whispered: "The Emperor passed through here last night." No one had seen him, but it was known, or at least believed, that he had been in the city.

On another day he would appear suddenly in Berlin unannounced, and in the early morning drive rapidly down Unter den Linden in a new motor car, wearing the gray field service uniform, the ends of his upturned moustache clipped short, his face pale, his eyes deep-sunken and grave. As suddenly telegrams would then report his presence among victorious troops in Alsace. The figure of the Emperor became occult, mysterious, almost unreal. He was everywhere at once, and gradually became the symbol of the unity of the German people.

From a German standpoint this transformation is unquestionably valuable. The Emperor is now regarded as exercising the true functions of a modern sovereign. It would be no exaggeration to say that he is to-day venerated by the great mass of the people. This feeling seems thoroughly sincere and runs all through the country, but it is especially strong in the Prussian Rhine provinces. It reminded me of the feeling of the Japanese toward their Emperors.

To the German people the Kaiser had caused concern. He filled so much space in public affairs that he often obscured the horizon. This seems now to have changed. William II. has lost much of his personal influence and has become, or has made himself, an institution. He is no longer the irresponsible unchecked power that might at any moment deflect or impede the onward motion of the organized State at war and interfere in matters of vital importance. He is the symbol of Imperial Germany. He has risen far above the attributes of mere sovereignty and has assumed imperial dignity in the true sense of the word, paving the way for what Germans believe is their new destiny.

Crown Prince Unpopular.

Yet, while regard for the Emperor has increased, the feeling is not dynastic. In strong contrast with the increasing respect and admiration for William II., the former popularity of the Crown Prince is daily waning. The gossip about his escapades in France and elsewhere finds ready credence in Germany. His behavior is held to be inconsistent with the dignity of the position he occupies, not merely as heir apparent, but as a commanding officer. I heard it stated in Germany on the best authority that the major responsibility for the defeat of the German army in the battle of the Marne lies at the door of the Crown Prince, whose army failed to do its allotted work. This point future historians will decide; but it is significant that the only serious reverse which German arms have suffered since the beginning of this war should be directly attributed to the heir to the throne.

It would almost appear as though the Crown Prince were deliberately inviting criticism. His absence from the ceremony of the baptism of his only daughter in the latter part of May seemed inexplicable to many Germans. Nor was the official excuse that for military reasons the Crown Prince could not relinquish his command deemed satisfactory by the people, in view of his many known leaves of absence. Of the other members of the Hohenzollern family little is heard. They are fighting with the various armies, but no particular significance is attached to their royal birth.

Why Poor People Are Better Off

It has long been a mystery why farmers, the poor, and savage tribes are physically better off than those who live in hotels, restaurants, or have the most expensive food and live seemingly on the fat of the land.

Yet "some hae meat and canna eat," while others with royal cooks and a treasury of god things fall ill with scurvy, wasting diseases, anaemia, emaciation and loss of flesh.

The explanation of this strange state of affairs is to be found in the experience of the German sea raider, the cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm, which was compelled to make for a neutral port in order to save the lives of its crew of 500.

Why were these men in danger? Not from any microbe or contagious malady. Not for want of sunlight. Not for want of plenty of food, fresh air and water. None of these necessities of health were absent from shipboard.

Yet 110 of the men were incapacitated to the point of being bedridden and the other 300 odd were able to do little more than sit up and take notice.

The true inwardness of it all is to be traced to food defects, to wit, the absence of certain mineral constituents and vitamines, the same things which are demanded by chefs in their foods, to make their bones strong, their teeth proper, their blood red, and to keep their hair from sweating and showing other tissue defects.

Refined and polished wheat, rice, and other cereals, canned fruits, canned vegetagles, and even meats served in the usual way — the so-called "embalmed beef" of the Spanish-American war was such meat — lack certain elements such at calcium and certain ferments called "vitamines," which are absolutely necessary for vitality, health and strength. These lime salts and vitamines are always present in fresh country vegetables and fresh fruits.

In the human tissues other than the bones there is an average of ten teaspoonsful of chloride of lime, baking soda, table salt, phosphate of potash, and iron for each 100 pounds of weight. These minerals keep the blood, lymph, chyle and fabric juices balanced and properly distributed. They are intimately connected with each intricate fibre in the living textiles.

Yet without the clean, new, unrested minerals just named, beri beri, hemorrhages, scurvy, rickets and all sorts of chronic maladies often included under that false, useless and meaningless term, "rheumatism," follow.

How, then, are such serious afflictions to be avoided? Can the minerals be administered with food, like table salt, or like iron as a medicine? No. While doctors usually so advise and believe that the patients receive benefits, it is untrue. In doctors, like other average people, hope springs eternal in their human breasts, and their wishes are parents to their beliefs. They always "get results," because they do not recognize that better results are possible in this way.

In fresh orange juice, fresh fruits in general, fresh green vegetables, rough milled, unpolished wheat, barley, oats and other cereals all contain in a serviceable form the minerals which can be taken into the human structures. "Vitamines" are also [illegible] nor the minerals are to be found in refined cereals, in canned goods, in stale vegetables. Even to keep lima beans a day after they are picked without canning them destroys a great many of these necessary ingredients.

Chicken Timbales.

Two cups raw chicken meat, one-quarter cup of soft bread crumbs, one cup of beaten cream, one-half teaspoon of salt, few grains of cayenne, four egg whites beaten until stiff. Chop meat and press through a sieve; add remaining ingredients; fill buttered timbale moulds which have been previously sprinkled with finely chopped pickles or olives. Remove from moulds and serve with Hollandaise sauce.

Totally Discouraged by Nervous Prostration

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chases' Nerve Food and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams,, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The plain dress with bloomers is one of the blessings which mothers have appreciated for some time past and it has not yet lost its attractiveness for either child or parent. In the illustration which accompanies these words we have a frock of plain sacque cut, closing at the side of the front where there is an ornamental tab to break the severe simplicity.

The neck is round and the sleeves may be made either short or long, but for summer weather the short sleeve is more practical.

Under this dress are worn the bloomers and these are made entirely separate from the outer dress. They are to be buttoned to the underwaist or merely fastened by a band of their own.

In making these little frocks it is customary to use the same material for both dress and bloomers, but if the outer material be linen or other harsh fabric it is better to select something softer in the same color for the bloomers. In this way they will not become an irritant for the child's tender skin.

Most mothers let the bloomers take the place of all other underwear and, indeed, they are surely sufficient protection, but they may be slipped over the drawers if preferred.

The dress pattern, No. 7,260, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Medium size requires with bloomers, 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

DEFENCE OF BRITAIN

Austria Does Not Acquiesce in German Campaign of Slander

So much has been written as to Britain's position prior t her ultimatum to Germany and of the "Perfidy of Albion" that it is quite refreshing to read what a member of the Austrian house of peers has to say on the subject. This nobleman apparently had little difficulty in securing the co-operation of the Vienna Neue Freie Presse towards the publication of his views and the fact that the leading newspaper of the Austrian capital lent its aid in this connection suggests that the feeling between Great Britain and Austria is not quite so intense as that between Britain and Germany. Or there is this viewpoint, that Austria, recognizing the struggle to be a futile one so far as she and Germany are concerned, is taking the initial step to secure, if possible, better treatment at the hands of the quadruple entente when the division of the spoils takes place. "To speak of British perfidy," the writer of the article declares, "seems to me evidence of defective logic, not to say of an imperfect power of observation. Among the cardinal charges brought against England is her 'starvation plan' and various breaches of international law. Concerning the first-mentioned charge, no rational person can doubt that Germany, were her fleet strong enough, would make the fullest use of it to cut off all supplies to the United Kingdom. And no one could complain if she did so, for both the founder of the German Empire and his immediate successor declared in the most emphatic words this method to be perfectly justifiable."

From beginning to end the article deplores the policy of hate which Germany has engendered and fostered, but to which the Austrians do not, apparently, subscribe. Conclusive evidence is adduced to show that far from being treated with severity in England, the direct opposite is the case, and instances are given to prove that Germans in prison camps are being treated with a degree of kindness and generosity foreign to their own natures, but which must be somewhat surprising and agreeably so to them, bearing in mind the fearsome tales of British barbarism.

"Everybody who helps to fan the fires of Anglophobia and to feed them with fresh fuel—however good the intention may be—sucuceeds only in forging still more firmly the bond between Londan and Petrograd. But I believe we have better ways of expressing admiration and gratitude to our allies than by attempting to compete with them in hatred of England, and thus rendering more difficult our position in subsequenut negotiations, without confering the least benefit on those allied with us."

GERMAN BRAINS OVER-RATED

It is beginning to dawn upon the English-speaking world, including a goodly number of Americans, that the intellectual capacities of the German people have been vastly over-rated for some generations past, and that they have been made the object of a species of adulation among scientists and philosophers which may have helped to produce their present attack of "swelled head." The achievements of Germany in the last thirty years have consisted wholly in the acquisition, arrangement and systematising of facts, in all branches of knowledge; and the reason why Germans have been more successful in this species of effort than other races has been simply that they have possessed a vastly larger, more centralised and more despotically governed educational system than their neighbors. It is discipline, not brains, that has brought the Germans to the front as makers of knowledge; and while we must certainly admire their discipline for this achievement we can scarcely envy them for it, since it is their discipline, and their utter lack of individual judgment upon matters of the profoundest importance, which has brought them to their present pass.—Rask's Weekly, Montreal.

Change of water, change of diet, catching cold, eating unripe fruit, etc., are all causes of diarrhoea.

The safest and quickest cure for diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cholera, cholera morbus, cholera infantum and all looseness of the bowels is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mr. W. J. Quinn, Shelburne, Ont., writes: "About two years ago I was out in the West for harvest. The water out there was so bad that I took diarrhoea, and became so bad I was not able to work. I procured a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and when I had taken half of the bottle the diarrhoea stopped, and by the time I had taken the entire bottle I was able to resume work. I sincerely recommend it to all those troubled as I was."

There are a great many imitations of "Dr. Fowler's" on the market, so see you get "Dr. Fowler's" when you ask for it.

The diarrhoea remedy that has been on the market for the past 70 years.

Told to Go to The Front to Fight He Did Go And Was Wounded

ASBURY PARK, N.J., July 17. — The echo of a street fight here has been heard in the trenches of the Allies above the noise of the 42-centimetre guns, and John A. Borden, Judge of Asbury Park police court, is entitled to be designated an A1 recruiting officer.

In the meantime Thomas Shaw, who formerly lived here, is in a hospital in Sheffield, in England, where the surgeons are trying to save his left arm, and Michael Manners, a German and owner of a delicatessen store, is in a mood to outsulk Achilles if he can find a tent.

Having introduced all the characters and properly prepared the mise en scene, let there be a harking back to August, 1914, hen war talk ended more frequently in actual fighting than in an interchange of opinions, as at present. It was about the time the Kaiser was scrapping treaties and teaching Belgium the duties of a neutral nation.

During that particular period the majority of neutrals was horrified at what seemed then a heartless procedure on the part of Germany. None shared to a greater degree in the general detestation than did Thomas Shaw, a Briton by birth. It was not difficult for Shaw, a Briton, to find a point of difference with any German or pro-German, and the delicatessen shop proprietor offered large opportunities.

The evidence would seem to indicate that Shaw was in peevish mood, and if Michael Manners was not in a truculent humour he was, at least, in a non-receptive state concerning the views of Shaw.

However, the next morning in the police court, after a night in jail, the pair were led before Judge Borden to be neutralized. When the two belligerents had related just what occurred, the Judge dismissed the charges and sentenced them to go to the front, each on his respective side.

Manners went back to the delicatessen shop, but Shaw left Asbury Park. Wednesday Frank Turner, of No. 721 Cookman avenue, recived a letter from the Briton. He had taken the words of Judge Borden literally, leaving here to go to Canada, where he enlisted, was sent to the front and was seriously wounded in the left shoulder by a shell.

"Give my regards to Judge Borden," writes Shaw in his letter. "Tell him I'm still in the land of the living and that the Germans with all their guns couldn't kill me.

"This war is hell, and that's a very ladylike and genteel way of putting it. I was in two bayonet charges. Raving mad, I was, while they were on. I mustn't try to say what they were like. For days I couldn't get ocer the first one. Afterward in the trenches I couldn't close my eyes for a single minute.

Judge Borden, when informed of Shaw's message and letter, said:

"When I sentenced the two men to go to the front I had in mind that Shaw was an old army man, but of course I meant the sentence in a jocular way only. I was exceedingly grieved when I heard that Shaw had gone to the war and I am ever more regretful to hear that he has been wounded."

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

[illegible] writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Simultaneous Drives Against Russians

THE SOUTH WALES COAL STRIKE IS SETTLED

TWO MILLION GERMANS NOW ENGAGED IN RUSSIAN ATTACK

Enemy Not Only Threatening Warsaw But Are Attempting a Drive to Expel the Russians From Their Naval Base at Riga and Compel a General Russian Retreat That Would Release German Hordes for Work Against the French and British.

EXTENT OF OPERATIONS IS REVEALED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 20. — The most stupendous military campaign since the days of Alexander the Great, not only threatens the capture of Warsaw, but contemplates the envelopment of Russia's chief field armies under the personal command of Grand Duke Nicholas. Official despatches from Berlin and Petrograd to-day, for the first time, revealed the extent of the German operations. Military men here did not conceal the amazement at the Kaiser's daring in attempting, by simultaneous drives, to expel the Russians from their naval base at Riga, to capture the capital of Poland and to force a general Russian retreat eastward toward Brest-Litovsk, 115 miles away, a coup that would release great German armies for operations against the French and British. At least two million Germans are believed to be engaged. The War Office officials, since the beginning of the present German offensive, have expressed doubt that the Teutons would attempt serious movements against the Polish capital, both from the north and south-west.

PARIS, July 20.—This afternoon's official communique reported that the Germans are again shelling Soissons.

LONDON, July 20.—Premier Asquith this afternoon moved a new vote of credit of 150 million pounds sterling for war purposes out of the funds created by war loans. This brings the total amount appropriated for the pursuit of the war to more than three billion dollars.

AVIATORS SUCCESSFUL.

PARIS, July 20.—Six French aeroplanes to-day showered bombs on the railway station at the German fortified city of Colmar in Alsace. The War Office, in announcing the raid this afternoon, reported that four French birdmen bombarded the railway junction at Challerang yesterday.

Challerang lies at the junction of two railways in North-Western Argonne. The object of yesterday's raid was to wreck the junction through which large parts of supplies to the Crown Prince's army around Verdun are carried.

ROME, July 20. — Austrian troops were defeated with heavy losses in a furious all-day battle yesterday on the east bank of the Isonzo, near Sagrado. Unofficial despatches this afternoon reported the enemy's losses in killed, wounded and prisoners nearly 10,000. These figures were not confirmed in the official despatches to the War Office.

ROME, July 20.—The fighting on the Carso plateau is now raging more fiercely than at any time since the Italian offensive was begun. Unofficial reports this afternoon said that the Austrian retreat is now but a matter of a few hours.

LONDON, July 20.—The German statement this afternoon claims to have captured fortresses within twenty miles of Warsaw, and to be gradually closing in on the Polish capital, making heavy captures of prisoners as they go.

LONDON, July 20.—The Russian steamer General Radetzky was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine on July 17. Her crew of 23 was saved.

Conductor Did Nothing to Replace Trolley Pole Nor To Set The Rear Brakes

Queenston, July 20.—A car crowded far past the danger point, tracks weed covered and slippery with rain, the lack of a sand "punch," and a conductor who made no attempt to put the trolley pole in place after it jumped the wire or to use the extra set of brakes under his care were the chief causes of the street car tragedy at Queenston a fortnight ago. So much was revealed here yesterday afternoon by a five-hour investigation of the accident before Coroner Greenwood and a jury. The inquiry was not completed, but Mr. N. F. Davidson, K.C., representating the Attorney-General, succeeded in getting on record the stories of the car crew and a number of local "eye-witnesses." Further evidence will be taken a week from Wednesday, when the inquest will be resumed at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

By far the most important evidence of the day was secured in the admissions made by Sidney Boyt, the motorman, and Caswell, the conductor of the wrecked car. Neither made a willing witness, and Mr. Davidson had to use more than a little persistance.

Boyt's chief admissions were that the tracks along the stretch where the car got beyond control were overgrown in parts with weeds so that when the brake and reverse were alternately applied the effect was simply to make the car skid; that he made no attempt to use the auxiliary hand break, and that though there was sand in the sand box, there was no punch to spread it with.

Caswell, the conductor, admitted that his car was overcrowded. He collected 157 fares, "and din't get them all," yet his car had a seating capacity of only 84. When the car began to get out of hand and the trolley poll jumped the wire Caswell hung to the trolley rope, made no attempt to replace the pole and never thought of the rear brake, which, according to the rules of the company, he should have jumped to as soon as the car was in danger.

The evidence of the motorman showed that the fact of the trolley pole being off prevented the reverse from working, other than to lock the wheels.

TO ARRANGE FOR CIVIC HOLIDAY CELEBRATION HERE

Meeting Will be Held in the Council Chamber To-morrow Night for the Purpose of Considering Possible Programme.

TO FORM COMMITTEE

There has been so much talk in the city in previous years and so far this year, that the citizens, in order to spend a pleasant holiday in sports and recreations of some kind, must go to some outside point to enjoy themselves. With the object of arranging, if possible, a programme of attractions for Civic Holiday, which is to be held on the second Monday of August, a public meeting of all those interested is called for the Council chamber to-morrow (Wednesday) evening at eight o'clock. Particulars will be placed before the meeting of a possible programme and if sufficient of the citizens, merchants, workmen and others interest themselves, it is just possible that Civic Holiday may be profitably spent in the city this year.

The object also is to have a committee who will have charge of arrangements for programmes for the public holidays of the year, and altogether the meeting is an important one.

If you are interested in Peterborough Civic Holiday, attend this meeting.

BONNER-WORTH EMPLOYEES HAVE GOOD OUTING

Annual Trip Was Held to Niagara Falls

The employees of the Bonner-Worth Co., Ltd., held their 2nd annual trip to Niagara Falls, on Saturday last.

A party of close upon 300 assembled at the C.P.R. station, and proceeded by special train to Toronto, where they caught the "Chippawa" for Lewiston. The lake was very smooth and everyone enjoyed the sail across.

On arrival at Lewiston the trip was taken along the Gorge Route, to Niagara Falls, New York, where many participated in the pleasures which are to be had in this city. The falls were viewed from all the many points of vantage, both above and below.

The return journey was made along the Canadian side, passing Queenston Heights, and the boat was again boarded at six o'clock. After a very pleasant journey, Toronto was reached at 9 p.m. and many of the travellers caught trains later in the evening.

The trip was an even greater success than had been expected. The arrangements were perfect, everything ran smoothly, and the Bonner-Worth trip is now an established event in the life of our city.

GERMAN SUBS. OFF MAINE

Five United States Departments are Considering the Story That Enemy Undersea Boats are Operating Off Coast.

LOOKING FOR TRANSPORTS

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Five Government Departments, State, Treasury, Navy, Justice and Commerce, had under consideration today, the reports that submarines, presumably German, were operating off the Maine coast. The story was looked upon rather doubtfully. However, it was being looked into. In naval circles it was said it had been believed for some time that Germany planned establishing a submarine base in American waters to attack the Canadian transports and munition freighters, but officers did not believe it had done so yet.

NEW DIRECTOR FOR PETERBORO' CHORAL SOCIETY

A special meeting of the Peterborough Choral Society as held on Monday evening, when plans for the coming season were discussed. It was suggested that the society do something this year to assist a well known city charity (which for the present shall be nameless) in raising the necessary funds, which are most urgently needed to carry on this important work. Last year the society was able to turn over a substantial sum to the Patriotic Fund, and the members feel that their talents are being used rightly, when devoted to such worthy objects at a critical time in the nation's history such as we are now passing through.

Mr. John Allan was elected musical director to succeed the retiring director, Mr. R. J. Devey. Mr. Allan needs no introduction to the Peterborough public, who are familiar with his work as organist of St. Paul's Presbyterian church.

The following are the officers and Executive committee for the ensuing year:

Musical director—Mr. John Allan.
Accompanist—Miss M. Flowers.
President—Mr. W. Stocker.
Vice-President—Mr. G. East.
Secretary—Mr. B. Reed.
Treasurer—Mr. F. Mather.
Librarian—Mr. W. Packman.

United States Cabinet Council is Regarded as One of the Most Momentous Since the Days of the Civil War.

PRACTICALLY DETERMINED

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, July 20.—In a Cabinet Council regarded as one of the most momentous since the Civil war, President Wilson and his advisers to-day practically determined America's future attitude toward Germany. For nearly two hours President Wilson and members of his ministry went over and over the note drafted by Secretary Lansing in answer to the Berlin Foreign Office's last rejection of America's demand for the humanitarian modification of Germany's submarine warfare.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The State Department began an investigation to-day of the Orduna incident. It asked the Treasury Department to secure, through customs officials, affidavits by the Cunarder's crew and passengers, and such other information as available concerning the reported submarine attack on the vessel. This followed a receipt of a letter from W. O. Thompson, of Chicago, an Orduna passenger, referring to the affair.

THE SOUTH WALES COAL STRIKE IS DECLARED SETTLED

Personal Triumph for Lloyd-George in the Bringing to an End of the Most Serious Domestic Trouble That Has Confronted the British Government.

TERMS NOT ANNOUNCED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

CARDIFF, July 20. — The great strike of the South Wales coal miners that threatened to interfere seriously with the production of war munitions for the British armies has been settled, it was announced early this evening. The strike leaders made this announcement following a short conference late this afternoon with the Minister of Munitions, Lloyd George, and other members of the Cabinet, who had just come from a protracted session with the colliery owners. The terms have not yet been made public, but it is understood they are of such a nature that the executive council of the Miners' Federation is positive they will be ratified at once by the delegates to the miners' conference. The settlement of the labour dispute, the most serious domestic trouble that has confronted the British Government since the war, is regarded here as a personal triumph for for Lloyd George, whose home is in Wales. Lloyd George came to Cardiff last night after President Runciman of the Board of Trade, and other Government officials had made vain attempts to bring about an agreement.

ADVANCE ON WESTERN FRONT TO BEGIN AUG. 1ST

For the Past Two Weeks Preparations Have Been Going on to Get Kitchener's New Army Out of England.

CAMPS ARE DESERTED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, July 20. — In letters from London dated July 10th, published in the New York Tribune to-day, it is prophesied that the real advance in the Western front will begin August 1st. For two weeks past, although no word was allowed by the censor to be sent abroad, mighty preparations have been going on through England to get the main body of Kitchener's army out of England by July 20, today.

The troops now departing include those who enlisted between the outbreak of the war and last January. The remainder stay behind as reserves. No man is going out who has had less than six months' training, that remaining million will serve to fill up the reserves. For the moment Aldershot, Salisbury Plain, and all the great training centres are deserted. They will be reserved for the new recruits, compulsory or otherwise, expected shortly.

Game Will Be Re-played

Classics Win Protest Against the Thistles

At a meeting of the executive of the City League held last night, it was decided to throw up the game won by the Thistles, from the Classics last Saturday and have it replayed if the standing depends upon the result. The Classics' protest was based on two decisions by Umpire Andrews in which he sent "Duke" Neary of the Classics to first base after he had stolen second because the catcher's throw struck the umpire, and then after he had stolen third sent him back to second, when Phelan hit the bat of Anderson who was at the plate. The League decided that the umpire was wrong in both instances.

Mr. C. R. Banks Broke His Leg

As Mr. C. R. Banks was on his way home on his motorcycle at noon today he sustained a very serious injury when the wheel got caught in the street car track west of Bethune street on Charlotte street and he was thrown to the pavement, breaking his leg below the knee.

He was taken to his home and his physician called, when the break was attended to. At 3 p.m. he had just recovered consciousness after the chloroform. The break is considered a serious one.

Mr. W. McCracken, who has been the active manager for Gordon-Davies Limited of this city for the past three years, has accepted a more lucrative position with Mr. J. R. Gordon, in Timmins, as manager of a similar business. Mr. McCracken, during his residence in Peterborough has conducted the branch store of the Gordon-Davies business here with gratifying success to the company. His business capacity has been demonstrated in the careful handling of the large retail trade which has been developed in this city, as well as in its important jobbing trade, which had grown with the rest of the business. Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed

MONDAY, JULY 19, 1915

PAVEMENTS AND RATE-PAYERS.

A resident of Water street informs The Examiner that he has been served with a notice from the city that, as it is the intention to have Water street, from Brock street to McDonel street paved, he is asked to provide for any services he may want put in. This resident is a large taxpayer, and an old resident, and looks at things seriously and sensibly. He asserts that the proposal to pave Water street this year is untimely and unnecessary. With a scarcity of revenue and a heavy tax-rolling tax bill to be paid this year, the construction expenditure involved, might well be postponed. He asserts that there is no immediate necessity for paving this stretch of street, for it is now better for traffic purposes, in several respects, than a new pavement will be. It has been nicely levelled and oiled; and to his thinking, and by his experience, it is preferable as long as it is retaining in its present condition, to asphalt pavement; and besides, the money expended upon it recently will be wasted. Whether or not his contentions are true to the letter, it seems that the representations of responsible citizens who have, with others, to bear the heavy expenses incurred, should have some weight, with those who are entrusted with the duty of serving and promoting their interests. Of course, the policy of the Council cannot in practice, always be adapted to individual cases, but when individuals represent a class the situation becomes different.

Paving is as new to the City Council as to the ratepayers, and the former can only find out where they are at in the matter through the sentiments of citizens affected by, or concerned in, laying down pavements. Another citizen to-day suggested from his knowledge of the circumstances, a view which deserves consideration. He says that more than usual extension of pavement, is held to be warranted on the plea of giving employment to the unemployed. Influenced by such a consideration he signed a petition for paving a certain street; but later in reconsidering his action he regretted having done so. When he reflected that, as a matter of fact, the frontage assessment for the pavement would be added to the taxes of widows and single women who owned property, and men burdened by the amount of ordinary taxation, it was seen that the appeal of providing employment lost much of its force — when it meant virtually oppressing the weak and unprotected for whom the limit of endurance of ordinary taxation had been reached. St. Paul, in his writings, time after time, condemned the doing of evil that good might come. When public interests and normal times combine, it may be necessary to construct pavements; and the widow and the spinster who own property, cannot be expected to have exceptional consideration. If their property is increased in sale or rental value by the improvement, or better times makes possible the sale of property to escape the burden of paying taxes, they should not complain; but they should not in fairness, be asked by large increase of taxation to provide employment—for many who may have first claim for consideration than themselves.

HUMAN BEINGS—AND GERMANS.

But, however, the world pretends to divide itself, there are only two divisions in the world to-day—human beings and Germans. And the German knows it. Human beings have long ago sickened of him and everything connected with him—(hear, hear)—of all he does, says, thinks, or believes. From the end of the earth to the end of the earth they desire nothing more greatly than that this unclean thing should be thrust out from the membership and the memory of the nations. The German's answer to the world's loathing is: "I am strong. I kill. I shall go on killing by all means in my power till I have imposed my will on all human beings." He gives no choice. He leaves no middle way. He has reduced civilization and all that civilization means to the simple question of kill or be killed. Up to the present, as far as we can find out, Germany has suffered some three million casualties. She can suffer another three millions, and for ought we know another three millions after that. We have no reason to believe that she will break up suddenly and dramatically as a new people still expect. Why should she? She took two generations to prepare herself in every detail and through every fibre of her national being for this war. She is playing for the highest stakes in the world—the dominion of the world. It seems to me that she must either win or bleed to death almost where her lines run to-day. Therefore we and our Allies must continue to pass our children through fire to Moloch until Moloch perish. (Cheers.) This as I see it is where we stand and where Germany stands. — Rudyard Kipling.

BRITAIN'S SUPREMACY AT SEA.

A great English journal lately wrote that the British public must not, by the heroic deeds of the British Army, be led to forget the preponderant part played by the French on land. This frankness must be mutual. If the support of our British Allies on land is still limited, it must not be forgotten that at sea—on all the seas—it is they who have by far the heaviest task to fulfill. From the very first day of the war the British Fleet gained such absolute control of the ocean roads and so evident a naval superiority that the public has come to take this state of things for granted. We must not lose sight of the advantage we gain by this uncontested supremacy. This cannot be repeated too often; if at the beginning of the war we were able to complete the equipment of our Army with a rapidity which was not among the least of the surprises of the German Staff, we owe it to the Fleets which rendered us masters of the seas. — Paris Temps.

WERE TAKEN OVER THE BATTLESHIP H. M. S. KENT

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Turner Sr. Return Home After Six Weeks Trip to the Canadian West, British Columbia and San Francisco—Crop Never Looked Better.

After a six weeks' trip, embracing visits to the leading cities of the Canadian west, British Columbia on the way to the San Francisco Exposition, and returning by way of the United States, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Turner, Sr., arrived in the city last evening. One of the most interesting features of the trip, Mr. Turner stated to the Examiner, this morning, was the tour of His Majesty's ship, the "Kent," at Esquimault, B.C. The "Kent," it will be remembered; was one of the ships that took a prominent part in the sinking of the Emden. A former employee of the Turner factory namely, Midshipman Ellicock, is a petty officer on the "Kent," and it was through his kindness Mr. and Mrs. Turner were permitted to go abroad. The second shot from the "Kent," Mr. Turner was informed, sank the enemy's ship. The "Kent" looked as if it had suffered too, the railings, ladders and other equipment had all been burned in keeping the fires going. A large hole was also an evidence of having been hit.

Canadian Crops.

Speaking of crop conditions in the west, Mr. Turner stated that a great harvest was anticipated. The crop never looked better and everything points to a banner year. At the present time business is very dead in western cities. Large business blocks are vacant, while other large works in the course of construction have been stopped. There are many men out of work in these towns, but it is hoped the harvesting of the crops will provide work for them for a time. Mr. and Mrs. Turner were in Calgary at the time of the cloudburst. He never witnessed such a downpour before. In a short time there was a foot of water in the streets.

At San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Turner of course, visited the Exposition. The Canadian exhibit was wonderful and took first prize, the Californian being second. The crowds are not very large at the Exposition, and owing to present conditions, it had not been the attraction it was expected to be. The only disagreeable feature to California, according to Mr. Turner's idea, was the intense heat. The thermometer registered well over one hundred in the shade.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner returned to Peterborough by way of Salt Lake City and Utah, spending a few days in Chicago en route. They were delighted with their holiday, which was full of interest all the time.

Lindsay Man Badly Injured

LINDSAY, July 20.—A serious bicycle accident occurred on Saturday afternoon on the Lindsay road to Peterborough, when Mr. Warden Brown, Kent Street, Lindsay, was thrown from his bicycle.

It appears that Mr. Brown, who is a young married man, was on his way to Cavanville, and it was while descending a steep hill that the accident occurred. It is surmised that the wheel struck a boulder and threw the rider to the ground with such force as to render him unconscious. The wheel was considerably damaged as a result of the accident.

Mr. Brown, it is understood, received a severe shock and shaking up, although it is not believed that any bones are broken.

Germany Is Near Last Stage, That of Stubborn Resistance

Like a Strong Wild Animal at Bay, She Will Take a Good Deal of Beating Yet—This Calls for Every Man and Every Resource.

With German bankers bearing to the Kaiser the news of impending bankruptcy, with every man available for active service or for less strenuous attendance on the fighters called both at home and abroad, with the sadness of the German capital breaking down the officially ordered gaiety and unconcern, with obvious efforts to turn United States demands into intervention, it is apparent that this gigantic outrage on civilization is passing into the endurance stage. The most ambitious scheme of spoliation in the world's history is a failure. The design of national criminality planned even to the detail of wholesale poisoning, coldly including murder, outrage, and the revolting denial of all claims of civilized humanity, has been frustrated. The expectation of national plunder is abandoned, and the guilty designer has no hope except to mitigate the retribution he deserves. That trust or confidence by the nations can ever be restored is regarded as a vain hope. That the nations will ever again leave themselves exposed to the possibility of a repetition of the nefarious plot cannot be expected. With possessions lost in Southwest Africa, with Kaio Chau and the Pacific Islands gone, with a shocked world aroused and determined, there can be no hope even in the mind of an ambitious visionary for more than a chance to gain tolerance by restitution. Terms of restitution are all that can be hoped for from the desperate stubbornness of this phase of the war.

A full recognition of the enemy's capacity for stubbornly protracting the war is the best means of promoting the voluntary response and determined effort essential to an early issue. Sir George Paish regards as a momentous sign the representations of the German bankers. That the phenomenal waste of war is threatening the nation with bankruptcy is a financial outlook. But the world is for the moment changed from financial to military dominance. Germany's financial collapse has been preceded by a moral collapse which will make her bankruptcy a calamity more to her creditors than to herself. With a large food-producing capacity in the Austrian agricultural areas, and with the output of farms, mines, and factories commandeered to sustain the whole nation as a military organization, the power to resist can survive national bankruptcy. To the Kaiser the property of his subjects may be no more sacred than their persons. It is in the human element that weakness is developing, and the change foreshadows the final stage. The class of men called to the colours reveals desperate straits. Examining physicians pass virtually everybody. Weak boys are seen in uniform, and men long past the age of efficiency are enrolled to release the young and vigorous from duty at less arduous posts. These are signs of exhaustion. Let them stimulate redoubled efforts.

The duration of the war depends on the courage, determination, and unity of purpose of the Allies. It rests with the men in the field and the great army of workers who must sustain and equip them. It depends on individual willingness to enlist, to work, and to contribute. As a nest of snakes the nation of plotters and poisoners must be crushed. To leave the world again exposed to the devastating sweep of insane ambition would be the crime of the century. No consideration of profit, ease, or immunity would excuse such dereliction. And when the tyranny of an unscrupulous ambition is put down, Germany will gain by her defeat and share in the benefits of a definite advance in the world's progress toward higher civilization. Protection of the society of nations, not revenge on the criminal nation, is the dominant purpose in this great emergency, and it demands stripping the autocrat of his power and reducing within bounds of safety the destructive capacity of those who would respond to his whims or satisfy his visionary ambitions.—The Globe.

Interesting Letters From Local Soldiers With 39th Battalion

The letters published below from Peterborough boys with the 39th Battalion, give some interesting details of the voyage across to England.

Pte. Allen Wade, London St., writing to his sister, says:

This letter finds us safe in the harbour of Plymouth waiting for the tide to come in so we can go up the river.

We certainly had a swell trip. I will try to tell you something about it. We left Belleville on the 22nd of June at 8 o'clock in the evening, and had a great send-off. Thursday morning we landed in Montreal at 7 o'clock. We left Montreal at 9:30 a.m. and had a nice trip down the St. Lawrence. Passing Newfoundland we saw lots of icebergs and all sorts of fish, then things were quiet for a few days.

We had life-belt instructions on the way over.

On the first of July we reached the war zone, and a boat ahead of us was sunk with 500 horses and seven men drowned, and it was reported in England that it was. On the second of July we were in the dangerous part. We had torpedo boat destroyers with us, and we all thought the Germans would get us. Nearly everybody stayed awake all night, sitting on the lifebelts. The life boats were swung out and air-tight doors closed. We were expecting to be hit any minute. It was the most exciting night I have spent in my life. Next morning it was foggy, and so thick we had to stop, and when the fog lifted there were fifteen destroyers and two cruisers with us, so we were well protected.

Most of the fellows were seasick. The third day out Stan (Pte. Stanley Wade) was sick. It didn't bother me a bit.

We can see some fine sights from where we are anchored. It is the swellest town I ever saw, all stone forts and cannon all around it.

The old wooden flagship on which Lord Nelson was killed is in the harbour here. It is a funny looking boat alongside the ones they have to-day.

Later—We got on shore Sunday morning and took the train to Shorncliffe. It was a trip across the country. We went through a lot of large cities including London. It was certainly beautiful. You couldn't realize how nice it is unless you saw it. We also saw the Crystal Palace in London.

There are about fourteen thousand troops here, all Canadians. Airships are flying over us all the time to guard us from Zeppelin raids.

We are only thirty-three miles from the firing line, and when the wind is blowing from the south we can hear the big guns.

Met Bruce Mills just come back from the battle of Langemarck. Victor Carton and dozens of other boys from Peterborough are here.

Sergt. McGrath Writes.

Writing to his mother, 41 Hazlitt St., Sergt. Jas. McGrath, of the 39th, says:

Dear Mother,—Arrived safe and did not see any German submarines. We are stationed at Shorncliffe, about six miles from Dover, and about 35 or 40 miles from the firing line. On a clear day you can hear the big guns roaring. You can also see the coast of France from the top of the hill near the camp.

There are over thirty-five thousand Canadians within ten miles around. Most of the Second Contingent are here, about six miles from our camp. I have not seen Bill McKib yet. The towns of Shorncliffe and Folkstone are about two miles away. The camp is situated between some very large hills; some of them twice as large as Cox's hill. We passed through London and some other large cities. The people here treat us first rate. When we were coming on the train the people would all run out of the houses and start waving. The prices of goods are dearer than they are in Canada. They are raising the price on Canadians. I saw a lot of wounded soldiers last night. There is a fellow by the name of mills from Peterborough here who came from the trenches suffering from a nervous break down. There are aeroplanes and airships flying around almost any time of the day. The country all around here is very pretty. There are hardly any fences, all hedges. I have sent you some of the menu cards we had on the ship. We had a very narrow escape. The Germans torpedoed three ships right near where we were.

Aeroplanes Fly Over Montreal

Aircraft Appear Over the City Every Night and Alarm the Inhabitants

MONTREAL, July 19.—The nightly appearance of the aeroplane which has been hovering over Montreal for the past week did not fail last night.

At 9.20 o'clock it was over St. Laurent going south-west, and then turned in the direction of Lachine. The plane was flying very low and could easily be distinguished by the thousands who heard the hum of the motor and looked skywards.

Hundreds of automobile parties were on their way home and stopped to get a good look at it. The plane carried no searchlight, or at least it was not lighted, but it had a light beside the pilot, which shone on the wings and made the whole shape of the plane stand out plainly.

To bleach celery without the constant labour required to heap soil about it as it grows, a New Yorker has invented strips of webbing, supported by large wire staples, to be placed about the growing plants.

Herring, great quantities of which are caught in Japan each year, are used chiefly to fertilize rice fields.

Beneath a new washing machine is a stove so that water can be heated in its tank without additional handling.

One French motion picture manufacturing company turns out about 2,000 miles of finished film each working day.

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU

That if there are three houses to rent in this town, anyone of which would suit you, at least two of them will be advertised in these columns.

That YOUR NEXT POSITION may be advertised to-day.

That the next furnished room you'll live in is probably advertised in another column.

That if there's nothing a Want Ad. can help you to accomplish—you're looking too quiet a life!

That if you have need of a worker, you have need of a Want Ad.

That a Store should be advertised as REGULARLY as it is opened for business. A merchant who would'nt close up for a while now and then "to save running expenses" should'nt stop advertising now and then "to save expense."

That sometimes a LITTLE more advertising will mean a GREAT DEAL more business for a store.

HIS SUMMER OUTING

How He Saved a Girl From Drowning.

On Lake Winnepogo in New England is a camp where in summer several hundred girls of all ages from twelve to twenty are congregated. They are housed in bungalows and eat on a long, broad portico, an extension of the central building, and dance in a hall built expressly for that purpose and for sundry exhibitions. There are riding masters and swimming masters—which of course involves horses and paraphernalia for both—and canoes ad libitum. A number of tennis courts complete the equipment for summer exercises.

Camp Wocomoc is located on one end of the lake, which is several miles long and from a half to a mile wide. A newcomer is not allowed to go out in a canoe until she can swim continuously a certain distance and keep afloat for fifteen minutes. Having passed this test, she may thereafter go canoeing at her pleasure. She is not hampered with skirts, for every girl must wear the camp uniform—a blouse, bloomer knickerbockers and stockings to the knees. This dress is also worn by the ladies in charge, and when they are short and fleshy it gives them an appearance of a waddling fat hen. As to the canoe ladies in camp costume, they all look about the same age—that is, anywhere between twelve and fifteen.

Nicholas Brewerton, a young lawyer of promise, having worked very hard during the winter till late into the spring, inquired of friends in New England for a place to spend a few weeks where he could be quiet. There must be no hotels, no casinos, nobody, in fact, except himself. The best that could be done for him was Lake Winnepogo. The person who recommended it—a Miss Webster—forgot to say anything about the girls' camp. It may be that she left it out of her description of the location intentionally, thinking that the sight of young girls paddling about in picturesque costumes would be a pleasant sight for the young man. She may have had a sinister intention. Be this as it may, the young man was recommended to go to Lake Winnepogo, but to the other end from the girls' camp.

Brewerton went to Lake Winnepogo and found at the end where he had been advised to settle several cottages, one of which was to rent. After learning that the occupants of the others were couples with small children who desired quietude he took the vacant cottage, getting his meals at a farm house near by. There was a rowboat in an outhouse which was rented with the house. Being settled, Brewerton prepared to live an uneventful life and rest.

But "man proposes, God disposes."

One morning—the next after his arrival—Brewerton got out his rowboat and started out to row lazily on the lake. It was a beautiful summer morning, and the hills on one side were reflected in the water. Light clouds floated above as indolently as Brewerton floated on the lake. He was much pleased that his was the only boat within sight. Truly this was just what he had come for. He thanked in his heart the lady who had recommended it.

Hark!

Brewerton had pulled up near the shore where there were overhanging trees. From under the branches came an exclamation of dissatisfaction. The voice was feminine and seemed to be that of a child. From a disturbance of the branches he inferred that some one in a boat had become entangled in them. A few strokes brought him to where he could see what was going on.

First, there was a canoe with the word "Wocomoc" painted on the bow; second, there was a girl in the boat, who might have been twelve, thirteen and perhaps fourteen, dressed in a costume Brewerton had never seen before. The navy blue material of her apparel from her waist to her knees might have been a skirt or something else, he could not tell what. Judging from its length, she should be about six years old, but Brewerton was sure she was not as young as that.

"Can I do anything for you, little girl?" he asked.

"I'm not quite as familiar with canoeing as I should be. I came under the shade of these branches, and in getting out I am afraid I shall upset the canoe."

Brewerton reached forth his hand, took hold of an end of the unsteady shell and withdrew it from under the branches.

"Can you manage it now?" he asked.

The girl put her paddle in the water, and the canoe careened on one side. She gave a little shriek.

"Your mother should not have let you come out in such a topply boat without your being accustomed to such sport. Look out! You'll go over."

"Oh, dear, I'm afraid I'll be drowned!"

Brewerton was perplexed. He did not like to leave the child in her perilous position and did not know right to do with her. Finally he told her that if she would get into his boat he would take her home with her canoe in tow. She gladly accepted the invitation, taking a seat in the stern facing him and holding a line attached to her canoe.

"Where do you live?" asked Brewerton.

The girl looked in several directions, then pointed to a house on the opposite side of the lake. But half the distance had not been traversed when she pointed to a house in another direction. Brewerton looked at her in surprise, and she said she had "got turned around." But she soon confessed herself mistaken again and said she thought she would go to the camp.

"What camp?"

"Camp Wocomoc."

Then for the first time Brewerton learned that around a bend in the lake there was a girls' camp.

"For kids?" he asked.

"Most of us are kids, but there are some older girls."

For a kid she was quite entertaining. Brewerton was amused to hear her at times talk like a grown person. She had a sweet smile, a pair of dimples in her cheeks and pretty eyes. Brewerton was inclined to think that when she became a woman she would be quite an attractive one.

Presently they turned the bend, and the oarsman, turning, caught sight of the camp. He was much astonished. There on the margin of the lake was a congregation of boats about a large float for swimming purposes, equipped with diving apparatus. Brewerton pulled up to a landing where stood a number of girls, all in camp costume. His passenger got out of his boat, thanked him and, having tethered her canoe, went up to the camp.

Brewerton pulled back to his cottage, not knowing whether to be dissatisfied or not with his discovery. He rather thought that he would like to have the little girl go boating with him occasionally. Her prattle rested him. Indeed, during the next few days he found himself wishing he would meet her again on the lake. If he should he would inquire her name and address and ask her mother if she would not let her little girl go out with him.

One afternoon Brewerton got into his boat for a pull to explore the lake from end to end. He pulled up past Camp Wocomoc till he could go no farther by water, then turned and pulled back. Noticing that the swimming float was covered with girls, while others were splashing in the water, he concluded to go to it and watch the aquatic performances. At a point about a hundred feet from the float he paused. Some of the girls were diving from a springboard. One girl climbed a ladder and stood on a platform about twenty feet above the lake. Presently she gave a jump and plunged headforemost. The water closed over her, and she did not appear again for half a minute, and when she did she popped up within a few yards of Brewerton's boat and facing him.

Great heavens! She was the kid he had rescued from under the branches of a tree and had taken into his boat to save from drowning!

The water was cool, but not cool enough to keep the blood from rushing in a torrent to her cheeks. Though out of breath, she ducked and came up with her face the other way and swimming lustily for the float.

Brewerton's eyes were opened to the fact that he had been fooled. Indeed, he had been fooled in more than one respect. He had by this time seen a number of the girls of the camp and had learned that he could not judge of their age when in camp costume. But why should this girl have deceived him, feigning to be afraid of the water? Quite likely she was one of the most expert canoers on the lake. Doubtless she was one of the denizens of the camp. All this was unintelligible to Brewerton, and, being unintelligible, it occupied his mind during the rest of his sojourn at Lake Winnepogo.

One day in September, after the mill hegira back to the city, Brewerton received a message from his friend Mrs. Webster, asking if it would be convenient for him to dine with her the next evening. She was anxious to hear how he liked Lake Winnepogo. He replied that it would be convenient, and he was desirous of learning why she had not told him that there was a girls' camp on the lake.

Brewerton had been admitted to his hostess' house and was telling her about how he liked the lake when the doorbell rang and another guest was admitted. Mrs. Webster left him to receive the newcomer and presently returned with a stately young woman in dinner dress. Brewerton's eyes were fixed on her for a few moments before he recognised in her altered costume the girl he had saved from drowning.

There was on the young lady's face an expression of mingling emotions. There was some blushing, some shrinking, some sign of a guilty conscience, the whole topped with a dash of amusement. On Mrs. Webster's face it was all amusement. On Brewerton's face—Brewerton's face was indescribable.

"This is my friend Nick Brewerton," said the hostess, "and this is also my friend Miss Eleanor Tibbits. I believe you two have met before. Be seated."

It was not till long after this, when Brewerton had become the husband of Miss Tibbits, that he learned what a nefarious conspiracy had been concocted against him. Miss Tibbits had been with Mrs. Webster when he asked to be recommended to a restful summer spot where there were no women. Miss Tibbits—she was twenty years of age—thought it would be a good scheme to impose herself on the gentleman in camp costume as a little girl. She had engaged to go to Camp Wocomoc and when Brewerton arrived was posted as to the fact. She had "laid" for him and caught him the first day after his arrival. Her husband, referring to her popping up before him after having taken a twenty foot dive, declared that it was more surprising than if he had seen a veritable mermaid with a fish's tail.

Snappy Retort.

The occupant of a seat on the train was disturbed by the struggles of an elderly man who tried to place a large bundle on the rack overhead.

"That rack is only for light articles," protested the annoyed one.

"Then why don't you put your head on it?" was the snappy retort.—Boston Transcript.

Musically Bankrupt.

"Who is the man wearing a high hat and dyed mustache?"

"That is Gargle, the famous tenor."

"What is he so mad about?"

"Why, he has just been reading the critics' views of his last performance and found that some of his notes have gone to protest."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Not to Be Fooled.

When Shimmerpate arrived home an hour later than usual he was nibbling a clove.

"I stopped in a concert hall for a few moments," he observed. "The music was intoxicating."

"That's right!" exclaimed his better half. "Blame it on the music."—Wisconsin State Journal.

One Failure.

"It's funny our minister never gets married," remarked the young husband who had just refused his wife a new dress in his endeavor to change the subject. "I think he'd make a good husband."

"Well," replied the wife warmly, "he didn't seem to make a very good one when he married us."

Unsatisfied Curiosity.

"Father," said the small boy, "what is the fourth dimension?"

"I can't be bothered about that just now, my son."

"Why? Is that a foolish question?"

"I guess the question is all right, but I must say I never heard an answer to it that struck me as very sensible."—Washington Star.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

Herons, which average only 4 lbs. in weight, often have been known to eat more than 3 lbs. of fish at a meal.

To tint discoloured lace curtains mix corn starch with an equal quantity of the ordinary starch; boil and use in the same way as white starch.

The secret to cleaning paint is first of all to brush all the dust off, and then to wash it, drying each little piece as one goes. Afterwards rinse and dry immediately.

When a boot or shoe pinches wring a cloth out in very hot water, and place it over the piece while the boot is on the foot. This expands the leather and will give relief.

When using velvet remember that it must never be pressed flat on a table with an iron. It should be held in the hands and the iron passed gently over it on the wrong side.

A carpet that has seen a fair amount of usage is sometimes discarded on account of it showing wear in certain parts, but dyeing in another shade, which is not too difficult to be carried out at home, ought to make it still good for further wear.

With the aid of some good petrol any girl can become her own dry cleaner. Chiffon blouses, gloves, ribbons, and all kinds of vanities that soil easily, are quickly cleaned if immersed in petrol, which, however, must be used with the utmost care in a room in which there is neither a light nor a fire, as it is very inflammable.

Those who are fond of carrots will find this recipe excellent Use three good-sized carrots for four persons. Scrape and pare them and cut in small pieces. Put a teaspoonful of renedered beef suet in a pot, add a little onion juice, put in carrots, let them cook for a few minutes, but not brown, pour in boiling water to cover, season with a half-teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, and one teaspoonful of sugar. Let the carrots boil rather slowly for an hour. If the water boils low add a little boiling water to replenish.

To remove a dent in furniture is not such a difficult process as it may seem, although the degree of success is measured to a great extent by the kind of wood that is to be treated—soft wood being more easy to deal with, of course. The first thing is to damp the affected part with warm water. Then make a pad of brown paper and damp it thoroughly. When this has been done lay the damp brown paper over the dent and hold over the part a hot iron. The reason for this is that it makes the wood swell out level. The harder woods may require treating several times, but excellent results will eventually be obtained.

ST. MARGARET'S DAY

Who St. Margaret Was—Some Fine Characters Bearing Her Name—Her Emblem.

In this City there are many girls and women who have been baptised with the name of Margaret. Yet I wonder how many of them are aware of, or remember the fact that this, the twentieth day of July, according to the Ecclesiastical Calendar, the day dedicated to her—the day on which is commemorated the Matrydom of St. Margaret, virgin and martyr, which occurred in the early part of the fourth century.

AN ANCIENT NAME

Margaret is one of the good o'd names which came down to us from very early ages. Others are Mary, Magdalen, Anne. These names, or modifications of them are to be found in most languages.

WHO WAS ST. MARGARET?

St. Margaret was born in Antioch, in Asia Minor, towards the end of the third century. Her father was a pagan priest and on account of her embracing Christianity she was disowned by him—her mother having died at the time of Margaret's birth—and was adopted by her nurse. One day, while attending her nurse's flocks she attracted the attention of a Roman prefect, Pisidius, who was led to make her his wife, conditioning that she renounce the Christian faith. As she declined to do, the prefect had her brought before him in public trial. Threatened with death unless she renounced the Christian religion (the Greek Church) she—brave girl that she was—refused to acknowledge the Pagan gods of the Roman Empire.

HER MARTYRDOM.

As a result an attempt was made to burn her, but tradition says that the flames left her unhurt. Then she was bound hand and foot and thrown into a cauldron of boiling water, in which she stood uninjured. Finally, she was beheaded.

Here we may reflect on the slow but invincible power of good living in this world. Shakespeare says:

"The evil that men do lives after them." Optimism teaches us that the good they do also survives. And of course these remarks apply equally to women as to men.

THE EMBLEM OF ST. MARGARET

In art, St. Margaret is usually represented as a shepherdess, sometimes as a maiden, leading a chained dragon.

The emblem of St. Margaret is the flower known as the field daisy, well enough known to most of my readers. The French name for a daisy is Marguerite, which is the way of spelling in French, Margaret. These field daisies, looked upon here by many, as no better than weeds, are really beautiful flowers. It is the same as with a good many other good things; it is not the most costly or the most showy article that is the most beautiful.

CULTIVATION OF THE FLOWER

In England as well as in France and Germany, the "Marguerite" is largely cultivated for market, being very much in vogue for decorative purposes, whether in the church or in the home.

In the old country the large daisy is known as the Margaret daisy in contra distinction to the small daisy which grows on lawns.

THE MEANING OF THE NAME

There have been many famous Margarets. Amongst others there were: Margaret of Scotland (1045-91), Margaret of Denmark (1353-1412), Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI., King of England (1430-82), Margaret of Navarre (1492-1549.)

It may be more coincidence but, curiously enough, the majority of girls bearing that splendid, good, old-fashioned name are girls of high repute force of character, and fineness of feeling; but of course there are exceptions. It is a name very popular in all Christian countries, and has been borne by saints, queens, princesses and duchesses. The meaning of the word is "a pearl," both in Latin and Greek.

The cult of St. Margaret was very widely spread in England, where more than two hundred and fifty churches are dedicated to her, and a considerable number of girls are named after her.

ODE TO THE MARGUERITE

Scented Spring!
[illegible]
And white Marguerites with you bring.

In your song
To the merry flower throng,
Praise the Marguerite loud and long.

Woodlands green!
Where the loveliest flowers are seen,
Hail the Marguerite as your queen.

Pte. Martin's Description of the 39th Battalion's Voyage to England

The following interesting letter from Pte. C. Martin, formerly an employee of the Grand Trunk Railway, received by his friend here, Mr. W. J. Brooks, of the C.P.R. Freight Office, gives a good account of the voyage of the 39th Battalion on the s.s. Missanabie:

s.s. Missanabie, At Sea,
June 27.

Dear Bill,—At last we are on the briny deep; and, believe me, this is the life.

We have no idea just yet where we are going, but we are on our way. We'll likely land somewhere sometime. Land is out of sight by now, but we could see Cape Race on the coast of Newfoundland this morning, and we are in the path of icebergs now. They vary in size, but one was estimated to be about 60 feet out of the water. But I must start at the beginning and give you a detailed account of our trip. Will keep this letter running until we land or until the mail is picked up.

I have just been up to have a look at a whale. We couldn't see very much of it, as all it did was turn over and then go down again, but will likely see some more later. We have had no rough weather yet, just a steady roll, which we are used to by now, but the waves seem to be getting bigger since morning. Haven't seen any symptoms of seasickness yet, but I guess there is lots of time. Peggy is feeling O.K. also.

Here is everything from the beginning: We left Belleville at 8.30 p.m. on Wednesday, the 23rd, the train being one hour and a half late. Verily, I believe the whole city was at the station, as there was nothing but a mass of people for a full mile each side of the station. People would shake hands whether they knew you or not. We had a good trip to Montreal, and everyone was in the best of spirits. Got in about one hour's sleep. I wrote some cards as we were nearing Montreal, where we arrived about 8.30 on the morning of June 24th. We went aboard immediately, the train, of course, taking us right to the docks. We sailed at 9.30 a.m., and also got a good send-off from Montreal, the piers being crowded, and all the other ships and tugs let loose with their whistles as soon as we left the dock. It sure made an awful din for a while. There was some grand scenery along the St. Lawrence. I went to my bunk about 5.30, intending to sleep until we reached Quebec, but I slept right through until the following morning. The fellows say they saw a couple of Canadian submarines there; and I forgot to tell you that there was a Canadian light cruiser at Montreal dry dock.

On June 5th, we were in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and nearly all day there was a heavy fog, through which the ship had to crawl at about four miles an hour. It lifted towards evening. Pilot was taken off at Rimouski on the morning of June 26th. It was very cold and damp, with more fog for a while. We passed quite a few liners, freighters, and a large sailing vessel was sighted, but too far away to distinguish anything on her. Also very cold in the evening, and overcoats were worn on deck. The band plays in the evenings and we have games. There is very little work or drill, and we can do anything we like to put in the time, which is an altogether pleasant time. We enjoy ourselves immensely. Everybody hopes the voyage lasts for a couple of weeks.

On June 7th, we could see Cape Race fading in the distance, and realized that it would probably be the last piece of land we would see for some few days, as we were pulling well out into the Atlantic. We sighted quite a few icebergs, a couple of ships, and a whale, about which I was telling you. Will leave off until to-morrow, as I want to start one to mother. It is some job finding one's way around this boat. We are used to it now, but I got lost a couple of times the first day. One fellow wandered around all of three hours before he could find his bunk. Besides the 39th, on board there are now 300 of the 38th, some of the 47th from B.C., and a dental corps, making a total of about 1,750. Wish you were with us. I think I will take a sea voyage on my honeymoon.

June 28th 6 p.m.—Since last night we have had a big time. About 4 p.m. yesterday the ship started to roll pretty badly, and by 7 o'clock everybody was on his toes to keep from getting sick. There has been an awful bunch sick all night and all day. You can see them "cast their bread upon the water." I haven't been sick as yet, but for a while this morning I felt kind of dizzy, but I was all right as soon as I had breakfast. Have been feeling O.K. all day, and am getting used to the roll, so I think I will be able to pass the sickness. There sure are some waves. They toss this old boat around as if she was a canoe on Lake Ontario. This table I am writing on is always on a slant.

At supper to-night my teacup was trying to do a tango on the saucer. We had to wear overcoats all day, and I was wishing I had had a couple more to put on, but it seems to be getting warmer to-night. We always take a walk on the promenade deck at nights, and it is great. The wind is coming up again, and I believe she is going to roll worse than ever; but I should worry. I never felt better in my life. Well, this will be all for to-night. We haven't passed a ship or anything to-day. I believe we are away out of our course. I'll look at the chart to-morrow and let you know where we are. Up to noon to-day we have travelled an even 1,300 miles from the mouth of the St. Lawrence. We have to put our watches on half an hour at ten o'clock each night, so if we are ten days on the boat, there will be five hours which we won't be able to account for.

June 29th, 9.30 p.m.—Here I am again. There was nothing much doing to-day. We passed a tramp bound for New York. Warmer to-day, but there is an awful storm raging to-night. She is blowing some gale, and there is a pelting rain. I'll bet the waves will be washing over the main deck by the morning, and they have cleared it of everything that would float. We expect to land at Plymouth about Saturday or Sunday. We are having lifebelt and lifeboat drill to-morrow. Well, this will be all for to-night. Am feeling fine, and no sign of seasickness.

June 30th, 9 p.m. — Everything was quiet to-day. We certainly had a rough night last night, but it quieted down early this morning. Had our lifebelt and lifeboat drill to-day. Expect to catch sight of our escort some time to-morrow, if they come near enough for us to see them. Will likely land on Saturday. To-morrow is the day the white elephant, or rather the gold elephant, walks. Will try to get some souvenirs of the ship to send you.

July 2nd, 1 p.m.—Well, this is just to finish up, Bill, as we land early to-morrow morning at Plymouth. We are going to camp at Hythe, in Kent. We will be busy packing up all afternoon, so will have to finish this in a rush, as I want to post it as soon as we land. We are in the danger zone now, and everyone is on the lookout for submarines. We have an escort, but it is not in sight. All souvenirs have been sold. Will write again as soon as we get settled.

Private C. Powell Out of War Hospital

After Five Months' Inaction From Pneumonia Peterborough Man Is Well Again.

After being in a London war hospital for five months, Private Charles Powell, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Powell, Boundary Road, has been discharged as cured and is now at Shorncliffe. He was taken ill with pneumonia early in the spring and for a time was in a dangerous condition. In a recent letter to his parents he mentions that he has completely recovered and is apparently joining one of the Canadian battalions now at Shorncliffe, instead of being sent on at once to what is left of the old second battalion. This should give Pte. Powell every opportunity of becoming physically fit again. His friends in Peterborough will be glad to learn of his discharge from the hospital.

The Niagara Fruit Crop

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., July 20. — In view of the contradictory reports anent the peach and other fruit crops in the Niagara fruit belt, which have been circulated, some of which were not correct, County Registrar Carl Fisher has given out an authoritative statement. Mr. Fisher owns one of the finest fruit farms in the district in Niagara township.

"While on our farm we have a very heavy crop of peaches, I have received papers from some of the sections of the fruit belt which say that in some parts there will only be a third of a crop of peaches. In others they have a half a crop, and in others again the crop is heavy. There will not be a very large crop this year.

"Pears are light, except Bartletts, which are pretty heavy, while plums are only just fair," Mr. Fisher said. "Last year the apple crop in this district was very large, but this year there are hardly any. Grapes are coming along remarkably well, and there will be a large yield, though not so great as in former years.

"While there will be plenty of fruit for everybody, I am inclined to think the expected surplus will not materialize this year, and fair prices will have to be paid. The canneries will put down a lot of peaches, as there were none last year."

Are Ready to Execute Becker

OSSINING, N.Y., July 20.— State prison officials virtually have completed the arrangements for the execution on July 28 of Charles Becker, former police lieutenant of New York city for the murder of Herman Rosenthal. Warden Osborne will send out invitations to nineteen men, including New York officials, physicians, and newspapermen selected by him to witness the electrocution. The warden, who is opposed to capital punishment, will not be present when Becker is put to death. He has notified Deputy Warden Johnston that he will be out of town on the day of the execution, and Mr. Johnson will be in charge.

Two other prisoners are condemned to die in the chair on the day set for Becker's death, and on account of Becker's apparent courage, it is considered likely that the lot of waiting until last will fall to him.

Strange Effect of a "Jack Johnson" Bursting Among Canadian Troops

MONTREAL, July 19. — Private Edw. Donnelly Boyle, of Montreal, in a letter to his mother, says.

Just think! It is now nearly a year since I left home, and dreadful things have been happening with such frequency of late that a day often seems like a week. But that's all in the game. I suppose you read all about the thrills of "trench-war" life, but I doubt if the newspapers can describe them to effect, nor can I, for that matter, so I'd better leave it go at that. It's a nasty subject but it haunts one so that I shall probably fall back on it, but don't mind. I have become so much a part of the "War" now that I can think of nothing that does not savour strongly of it. I have still got my violin with me, and had it in the trenches with me too, although I had neither the time nor the inclination to do much playing there as you will readily understand. However, I have played upon it while shot and shell were screaming 'round—just to have it to say that I did so.

The First Impression.

One's first impression of the trenches is peculiar. I cannot say that I felt particularly daring, nor will I say that I felt afraid. But, of course, when a huge "Jack Johnson" lands in one's vicinity and kicks up an "awful dust" one doesn't feel inclined to chant the "Te deum Laudamus" or other psalms of thankful character. Rather, one instinctively falls flat, or crouches low, till the pieces have ceased whizzing past one's head; then gets up to the accompaniment of some very unholy comments on the Germans in general, and the German artillery in particular. The shells make an awful racket when they are coming, and to this may be attributed the salvation of many a man, for one has a chance to clear out of the way. Of course, when a shell lands sufficiently near, one's goose is instantly cooked. And I had an example of that kind last time I was in the trenches. We had to sneak out by night to assist in trench-building around that Orchard (about which you've doubtless already read). We got there safely, and all was progressing fine until a German flare-light went up. They spotted us and proceeded to make theings warm. A shell dropped about ten feet away from me—in fact it passed quite close to my face ere it hit the ground. I was perspiring while shovelling at the time, and, do you know! that shell was so hot that it dried the sweat on my face and slightly shrivelled up the skin. The explosion killed three and wounded seven men near me, yet, save for the injury to my eardrum I have already told you of, I went unscatched.

Don't Mind the Bullets.

And the three that were killed seemed practically welded into one by concussion, so that it looked like a six-legged man lying there. We don't mind the bullets so very much. They're no sooner heard than they've passed up by or become part of us. Just a "whizz" and the bullet may have sped a mile as we become conscious of its passing. And, mid the hail of bullets whizzing around, occasionally a fellow near says "Ugh" and drops to the ground. One sees wounded crawling back by the dozens, yet one doesn't fear when one is used to it. One goes ahead with the work on hand just as if nothing out of the ordinary were happening, and one gets to be that kind of fatalist out here that says "I may be next, but—." It's an awful sight on the field after a charge. The first I saw disgusted me, so nauseating was it. We got into the trenches at night, and in the morning I found that a German (with his head blown off) lay about two yards from me. When we were able to take a look around there were many dead scattered about, but when the shells start a-coming there's lots to think about besides dead men.

To give you an idea of the last encounter in which I took part is impossible. I will simply tell you that it was the one in which Capt. Warmington was killed. He was then a Major of No. 1 Company. We certainly have brave officers, and Col-Meighen is a hero, as also our Adjutant, Mr. Holt. Neither of these men seem to mind the danger and are always among the men. In fact, all the officers are the same, and I hate to be here (in the hospital) when I feel I should be there taking chances with the rest, but I'll be at the front again in a few weeks.

Voice of The People

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In reference to the band concerts being given each week in both the King Edward and Victoria Parks, I must say the City Council in this respect, are doing a good work.

After a hard day's work, one feels blue, and a great stimulus can always be found in good music. The S. A. Band have lost, so I learn, some of their best musicians, and have had to resort to march music chiefly, whereas the 57th Regimental Band have added to their numbers, one or two men, who I think I am same in saying, are as good as any music-loving crowd need wish to hear. The programmes of late have been of the first water, especially Friday evening's programme. The special for the evening being the trombone solo, The Palons, by Bandsman Gilbert, which was certainly rendered in brilliant style: and when one considers the nature of such an instrument, and under such trying conditions, for the heat was terrible, surely such execution and dash cannot be excelled. The band as a whole was in good form, especially after such a hard weeks' work. Both the S. A. and 57th Regimental Bands are worthy of notice on these occasions, and one of The Examiner staff at least, could be worse, than to follow these programmes and comment on them to the delight of the music-loving people of Peterborough. Such comments on the latter band, at least, may help in recruiting. There are many who think with me in this. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your past favours during the last six years, and also thanking you for this space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours truly,
R. McDONALD.

THE EVANGELISTIC SERVICE HAD A GOOD ATTENDANCE

Large Crowd Flock to the Big Tent on Hunter Street—Number of Converts Hit the "Sawdust Trail"—Meetings Will Continue Each Evening—Good Music.

The second night of the evangelistic services which are being conducted on Hunter street by Evangelist G. W. Sharpe and his party, brought out a number of converts who decided to don the gospel armour, and win souls for Christ. For a Monday night meeting the attendance was very gratifying. The big tent which constitutes the tabernacle, was well filled, and everything points to a successful campaign. A feature of the meeting was the singing in which the entire congregation participated, and which included a number of well rendered selections by the Stringer sisters, who form a part of Evangelist Sharpe's party. Prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. Kidd, of the Free Methodist church, following which Evangelist Sharpe delivered his message in his usual characteristic manner. He appealed to his hearers in terms that were devoid of all doubt as to the meaning. His delivery is forceful and demonstrative, and is calculated to reach the hearts of the luke-warm Christians as well as the unsaved.

"BIBLE BELLS"

The speaker based his remarks on a number of passages of Scripture which were designated as "Bible bells." The first was found in Matthew 22, 5, "Come, for all things are now ready." In this chapter we are told that the kingdom of heaven is likened unto a marriage table. Everything is prepared for the reception of souls. Christ might have compared the Kingdom of Heaven to a funeral, but He did not wish to convey to the world the impression that religion required a man to put on a long face. More souls can be won by putting on a smile than by a vinegar face. If anybody on God's earth has a right to carry a smile it is God's child. You can go to various places of amusement but you will never get real joy in the world, because the world hasn't got it to give.

"THE WORK BELL"

Another bell that is ringing over the land is the "work bell." Every drunkard and harlot in Peterborough constitutes a ding of the bell calling Christians to go to work. Men and women in Peterborough are perishing and are going down to a Christless grave and a Christless eternity. "Don't you hear the bells ringing?" said Evangelist Sharpe, with considerable emphasis.

Another bell is to be found in Genesis 19, 17, "Escape for thy life." It is the fire-bell which warns the sinner to escape for his life as Lot was warned when the city of Sodom was about to be destroyed. Lot's son-in-law refused to heed the warning, and returned to his home where death subsequently overtook him. There are people in Peterborough who go home each night and sleep as though they were Christians. "God knows how they do it — I don't," said the speaker.

The meeting closed with a stirring appeal to the congregation to accept Christ, after which a meeting was held for the benefit of those who joined the ranks of the converts.

The meetings will continue each evening, commencing at eight o'clock. On Friday afternoon at four o'clock a special meeting will be held for the benefit of the children.

THE 14TH BATTALION NOW ARMED WITH LEE ENFIELDS

Mr. Charles Duggan has received the following letter from Pte. Patrick Duggan of the 14th Battalion, C.E.F., formerly of Peterborough:

France, June 30th, 1915.

Dear Charles,—I have just received your letter, dated June 13th, and I was pleased to hear you were getting along O.K. We have been out of the trenches for about five days now, but we no sooner get into some billet than we are shifted to another, and from that to another. We have been to four different billets during the last five days. We landed in this one this afternoon. We have no idea how long we are going to stay here. We may move again to-morrow. We had a draft in to-day for men. One of them told me that the 2nd contingent is still in England. I think they are going to relieve us. I'll try to get you a helmet if possible. I had plenty of chances at Fausterberg, but they are a nuisance to cart around, and it's a job trying to get them through the post. A couple of fellows are still carting them around. Most of the fellows gave theirs away after a few days. You asked me what I would like you to send me weekly. Well the only thing you can send me is cake, candy and tin fruit. I get plenty of tobacco. I have not much use for cigarettes. I like my pipe best, though we always get plenty of them here. We get paid once a fortnight here, 25 francs $(3), but it doesn't last long. They soak you for anything here; 20c. for a loaf of bread, 30c. for a 10c. cake, 4c. for a 1c. bar of common chocolate, and so on. The Ross rifle has been condemned. We all have the short "Lee Enfield." I have a long one myself, more accurate. My papers went through for the job of armourer corporal. I have been waiting for it since I left Valcartier. Of course there's a new officer in the ordnance now, a Col. Murray, and he has told our Armour Sgt-Major to hold on to the papers till the end of the month. At present it's hard to say whether they will engage the same amount of men as they did for the Ross R. With the Ross they had eight corporals and a sergeant. In the Imperial army they have one sergeant and two assistants to a battalion (Lee Enfield). So I will tell you the cause of the delay. It's already a big knock to the Ross Rifle Co. by having their rifles condemned; it will be another one if they reduce the staff (armourers) to that of the Imperial army, which is, as I have already stated, three men. People in Canada will say it took nine men to a battalion to repair the Ross, whereas it only takes three with the Lee Enfield, so they are trying to avoid this if possible. At present I am just acting armourer for this company until they have decided what they will do at Ordnance. I spent a good deal of my time at Valcartier studying that rifle and the 45 calibre Colt automatic, and I passed my examination as a qualified armourer. It doesn't seem to be of much use, though. Of course it depends upon Col. Murray at the Ordnance. He runs the whole show and can do just as he likes about it. It may turn out alright and it may not, still I am hoping for the best. Well this is all I have to say at present. Hoping to hear from you again soon, I remain,

Yours,
PAT.

The Passing of Eel's Creek and Sandy Point

Two of Prettiest Spots on Stoney Lake Have Been Placarded With Notices Threatening Prosecution for Trespassing—Privilege Abused.

STONEY LAKE PERSONALS

Owing to the carelessness of a few people who "don't care a hang" the many have to suffer. Ever since the beginning of time Eel's Creek and Sandy Point two of the prettiest spots on Stoney Lake have been 'wide open' to pleasure seekers, but this year they are placarded with threatening notices of prosecution for trespassing. The chief objection, of course, is to the lighting of fires, and carelessness in putting them out. Mr. Jackson, formerly of the Crown Hotel, Peterborough, is the owner of the property around Eel's Creek, while Messrs. Wm. Robertson of Peterborough are the lessees of Sandy Point, which they have fenced off.

The first regular Sunday service at the Juniper Island pavilion was held two weeks ago with Mr. R. J. Colville of St. Thomas, as leader. The second was taken by Mr. Robert A. McKinney, merchant, and Mr. Henry Akens, lawyer of Newcastle, Pa., both of whom conduct a large Bible class for men. One of their recent converts, an ex-saloon keeper, named William Smith, is spending his vacation in Stoney Lake.

During the offertory, Miss Middlebrook delighted her hearers with the solo, "Ashamed of Jesus?" Mr. Asa Huycke played the accompaniment.

Mr. [illegible] returned to his home in Avalon, Pa., after a three weeks' vacation at McCracken's Landing.

Mr. and Mrs. George Henderson and Miss Dorothy are summering at their cottage, "Del Bonita."

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McKinney and Mrs. McGhee, who have been staying at the "Victoria House" since the middle of May, moved into their new bungalow last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McKinney returned to their home in Orange, N.J., after a three weeks' vacation at McCracken's Landing.

Mr. Bert Huston, Editor Canadian Grocer, Toronto, accompanied by Mrs. Huston spent a short holiday on the lakes.

Mr. Loomis and family of Cleveland have opened up "The Rafters" for the season.

Mr. J. O. McCarthy, while on his way from Toronto in his trusty Ford to spend the week-end with his family at "Emerald Isle," came to an abrupt halt on a steep hill three miles south of McCracken's Landing. Said he to himself: "Ten o'clock Saturday night, no gasoline and only three miles from a cozy, warm bed; good-night Mr. Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker, Mr. and Mrs. George Walker, Master Charles and Miss Retta, who have been holidaying at the "Victoria House," McCracken's Landing, returned to Pittsburgh Saturday.

Pte. Harold Smith is spending a short vacation with the Misses Denne. He sails from Valcartier on the twentieth.

Mr. Ralfe and family of Toronto, have taken Mr. Peck's cottage, "Saint's Rest" for the season.

Mr. Rayson of Toronto, has opened his cottage for the season.

Mr. Harold Knapman, accompanied by two chums, Messrs. Willoughby and Smith set sail in the "Eygnet" for a cruise, with Lindsay as the turning point. They expect to be gone several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brewer have taken Rev. Mr. Webb's cottage, "Bon Repos" for a month.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Nugent of Peterborough, have opened 'Meedawabeek' for the season.

Judge and Mrs. Roger of Cobourg are occupying their summer home, "Juniper Lodge." Rev. and Mrs. Horn of Cobourg are their guests for a short time. Rev. Mr. Horn is the successor of Rev. Wm. Beatty, who is now serving his king and country in the trenches and who spent his vacation with us last summer.

Mrs. Dutton and family, Mrs. Patterson and the Misses Patterson, of Peterborough, are occupying "Fern Haven" Apartments.

Rev. Orr Bennett is the guest of his brother Mr. J. W. Bennett at "Gumsach Lodge," Juniper Island.

Mrs. Frank Spriggs, ho came up to Stoney Lake with Mr. Haskill in his yacht "Pastime" to 'Bon Repos" last Tuesday, returned to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Fred Norish who has been engaged in the construction of the McKinney bungalow since spring, returned to Lakefield on Thursday. He will open up the Dr. Barnes, Jr., cottage "Benrab," for the reception of the family, who will motor from Cleveland next week.

Mr. H. L. Beal spent the week-end with his family at "Seldom-Inn."

Mr. H. Sutherland spent a couple of days at his cottage, "Inglestone," last week.

WAR COST AIDS PEACE SAY THE SOCIALISTS

PARIS, July 2.—"The Ministers of Finance in the belligerent countries will be the most forceful advocates of the limitation of armaments after the war," asserted Marcel Sembat, Socialist leader and French Minister of Public Works. Mr. Sembat is the first Socialist Cabinet Minister ever appointed in France.

"I have just come from an interesting session of the Chamber of Deputies devoted to war appropriations. M. Matin, general Budget reporter of the Chamber, emphasized the extent of the sacrifices that the war has imposed on France. He calculated the war is costing France $10,000 a minute. The expenditures of the English are not less than ours, while the Russians and the Italians are feeling like burdens.

"Our adversaries, the Germans and the Austrians are crushed by the financial load. You have noticed recently the failure of the Austrian loan.

BURDEN OF LONG WAR.

"If the war proves to be long—and the President of the Cabinet and the Minister of Finance to-dav took occasion to say it would be—and to prepare the public mind for it—we must calculate what will be the state of the public finances of all the belligerents when peace comes.

"How will it be possible for all to pay the billion upon billion of interest on the loans, and at the same time keep up costly armies and fleets? It will mean renouncing the expenditures for social reforms which all civilized people now consider necessary.

"This war has demonstrated above all the supremely important role of cannon, rifles, shells and explosives. In the United States you know it better than anyone. You know also that rifles and cannon be improvised over night—months are necessary.

ARMS LIMIT PLAN

"Formerly to partisans of the limitation of armaments, was cited the ability of Prussia to get around the prescription of that sort imposed by Napoleon I., but since it is demonstrated to day that troops, however numerous, can do nothing without powerful artillery, we may find a practical means of control in the supervision of all manufactories of arms and cannon by an international commission instituted by the eventual treaty of peace.

"That commission should include representatives of all European powers, and should be presided over by a representative of some neutral State, such as Switzerland."

A simple but accurate method for measuring the surface of a human being has been invented by a French scientist.

A recently patented step ladder has additional supports which give its base practically the outline of a pyramid.

Tobacco From Armature Dept. Received by Gunner Dorris

Letter of Acknowledgement Received by Mr. Ernie Thurston Who Sent the Parcel, Bought With Money Collected in Dept.—Remembrance Appreciated.

A short time ago the employees of the Armature Department of the C. G.E. works took up a collection, and with the fund purchased tobacco, etc., which they sent to Gunner A. Dorris, who had been employed with them previous to the outbreak of the war. Mr. Ernie Thurston made up the parcel and wrote the letter, conveying the best wishes from the "armature" men. Writing on July 1st from some place in France, Gunner Dorris ackowledged the gift in a manner that would indicate that if there is anything the people can do in a small way that the men appreciate it is the personal remembrance that finds its way from the old home to the position in the lines. Gunner Dorris in a way mentions this fact and wrote his former fellow workmen that words utterly failed to describe the feelings with which he received their gift. They had asked to be remembered by him, and he replied that every day almost, he thought of the shop and the fellows, and in contrast, the strange position in which he found himself.

In regard to the action at the front, Gunner Dorris said the last big action had been on the 15th, when after two of the gunners had been wounded, he volunteered for one of the vacancies and went up from the ammunition column to work at the gun.

JUDGMENT IN FAVOUR OF PLAINTIFF

Parties to Somewhat Complicated Piece of Litigation Reside in Peterborough.

LINDSAY, July 20.—A decision of considerable local interest has been handed out by His Honour Judge McMillan in the Supreme Court of the suit of George L. Stevens, of Peterborough, against John A. Pearks and Jennie Pearks.

Mr. Stevens was proprietor of the confectionery business as formerly carried on by his son, Leslie Stevens, in the town of Lindsay, and still earlier by Mr. A. B. Terry. Mr. Stevens advertised his stock and fixtures and business for sale and the defendant, John A. Pearks, who lived in Toronto, came to Lindsay, looked over the premises, and finally agreed to purchase the same at the sum of $2,000.

Mr. Pearks handed Mr. Stevens a cheque for $1,000, drawn on a local bank, and gave notes for the balance of the purchase money and then entered into possession. The deal was finally closed about three oclock in the afternoon of the day in question, and Mr. Stevens remained in town until noon the following day. No complaint was made by the defendant, Pearks, to the plaintiff, Stevens, during that time.

At the time of giving the cheque in question, it was explained by the defendant to the plaintiff that he had an account in a bank at Aylmer, and the defendant, Pearks, handed his bank book to the bank manager and signed an order to have the money transferred from Aylmer to Lindsay, and the bank manager was instructed when the money reached Lindsay, to credit the amount, less the $1,000 represented by the Stevens cheque, to the defendant, John A. Pearks.

Issued a Writ.

Some four or five days after the closing of the purchase, Mr. Pearks claimed that he did not receive all that he had expected, and he immediately went to the bank, forbade the payment of the cheque, and transferred the money to the name of his wife, Jennie Pearks. He then wrote the plaintiff to come and take his business as he was leaving. The plaintiff, having ascertained some of the facts in connection with the transfer of the moneys, immediately issued a writ for the amount of the cheque and secured an injunction from His Honour Judge Harding, restraining the defendants or either of them from interfering with the $1,000 deposited in the bank.

An application to continue the injunction was heard by Mr. Justice Middleton at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, and was granted. Mr. Justice Middleton referred the action to His Honour Judge McMillan for trial. This action came on for trial at Lindsay on the 1st day of June, and was adjourned until the 26th of June.

Judgment has now been handed out in favour of the plaintiff for the amount of his claim, less $120, representing the shortage of some of the articles referred to in a bill of sale given by the plaintiff to the defendant, and the learned Judge has found against the defendant on his allegation of fraud and misrepresentation.

The defendant, Jennie Pearks, is directed to re-assign to the defendant John A Pearks, the $1,000 standing to her credit in the bank, and in the result the defendant, John A. Pearks is directed to pay to the plaintiff the sum of $880.

L. V. O'Connor, of Counsel for the defendants; L. R. Knight, of Counsel for the defendants.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Arcadia, B. C. writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was for nearly completely cured of pretended ills by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

Chicken Pot Pie Costly

Two Local Men Will Serve Two Months in Gaol to Pay for Fowl.

In disposing of the quartette this morning, who were on trial for the theft of fowl from Mr. A. E. Micks, Magistrate Dumble found Arthur Kennedy and Norman Clark guilty, and sentenced them to each spend two months in the County Jail at hard labour, while Joseph Hagerman and Oscar Coons were discharged.

In giving judgment this morning, His Worship said that as to Kennedy and Clark, there was an abundance of evidence. The four had been drinking in the American House up to a late hour, and it was arranged between all four that they should have a chicken pot pie. Kennedy and Clark went to get the fowl, while Hagerman and Coons went to the corner of Reid and McDonnel by agreement, where they were to meet the others when the fowl were secured. Hagerman got a pot at his home and all proceeded to Jackson Park, the appointed rendezvous, where all took a hand in preparing the meal.

After the meal Kennedy remarked that the fowl were taken from Micks' place, and there would be a row this time as Micks had been touched before. His Worship could not find that Hagerman and Coons were parties to the theft of the birds. They also had a previous good record, and he discharged these two. Kennedy and Clark he found guilty and sentenced them as above.

Gaelic Fooled The Germans

Commendatory Letter of Prisoner Was Signed "Briegan Mor."

HALIFAX, N.S., July 20.—How the German censor can be fooled was shown in a letter recently received by a Cape Breton mother from her son, who is a prisoner of war in Germany. The letter told in detail of the kind humane treatment and the abundance of food meted out to the prisoners generally, and the writer in particular. In fact, everything was lovely, but the Gaelic words added as the writer's name so as to deceive the censor told the whole story. The words were "Briegan Mor," meaning "Big lies."

Three Trench Lines Run One Hundred Miles

UDINE, via Paris, July 20.—The Austrians now have sufficient troops at their disposal to construct three lines of defences from Trent, Bozen, Brixen, Brunneck and Toplach. This line runs fifty miles more eastward.

An offensive movement has begun in Cadore from encampments on Monte Averau, Busella and Pore, at an altitude of 7,500 feet. The fighting is slow and difficult as the passes in this region are protected by a modern ring of fortifications. At Passeveggio, San Pelegrino, Monet, Livinallongo and Tre Sassi these fortifications are constructed of cement and have steel cupolas. The batteries communicate with one another by protected corridors, which are wide enough to allow Austrians to rapidly move troops to any threatened position.

Quick, Painless Way To Remove Hairy Growths

(Helps to Beauty)

Here is a simple, unfailing way to rid the skin of objectionable hairs: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to cover the hairy surface, apply, and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair will be vanished. This is quite harmless, but to avoid disappointment be sure to get the delatone in an original package.

Ald. Green Hopes Explanation Of Road Oil Matter Will Satisfy

Crop Outlook is Very Promising but Harvesting Will Not be General Until Near the Middle of August.

Ald. G. Walter Green returned from the West last night, and this afternoon resumed his duties as chairman of the Board of Works.

To the Examiner he stated that he was aware of the discussion of the quality of oil latterly used on some of the streets, and intimated that he believed his explanation would prove satisfactory to the "level-headed citizens, and most of them are level-headed," he added.

Ald. Green preferred to wait until the next Board meeting before making any statement, as he wished to acquaint himself fully with what had been said and done.

Crops Look Splendid.

Speaking of he crop outlook, he said that harvesting was not expeted to be general until about the 10th of August. He was through Manitoba and Saskatchewan, practically to the Alberta boundary. Old settlers said that the grain fields never looked better. Wheat was heading out rapidly, and barley was ripening; in fact, he knew of one field that had been cut. The rains have been abundant, and explain the splendid appearance of the country. It was everywhere felt that without frost or hail the crop would be a bumper one.

Political Situation.

Ald. Green said that the people of Manitoba have been deeply moved by the political situation as brought to light during the past few months. Whatever party is returned in the coming elections, the electors are determined that there must be good government. Politics of a particular kind has left a bad taste throughout the province; there was no mistaking the sentiment of the people in this respect.

Ald. Green said he had met Premier Norris before the date of the election was announced. The Premier stated that he felt an election coming, but did not offer any preview of its outcome.

WAIT UNTIL WAR IS OVER

When a Public Reception Would be Tendered Peterboro's Returning Heroes—Mayor Buller's Opinion.

Asked this morning as to whether a public reception would be tendered Private Arthur Noble of the 7th Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, who is returning from the front, incapacitated as a result of injuries received in action, His Worship Mayor Buller said he was of the opinion that it would be better to wait until the conclusion of the war, which he hoped would be speedy and satisfactory to the Allies, when Peterborough's returning heroes would be tendered a suitable public reception which would include a presentation of some kind on behalf of the city. It would also be fitting and proper to hold a public memorial service in honour of those who have fallen and if possible erect a suitable memorial. To hold individual receptions or memorial services for those who are invalided home or who fall on the field of battle would lead to confusion and constitute a constant source of anxiety to those concerned, as it is possible that a number would be inadvertently overlooked.

The Mayor approved of any recognition that might be made by the military authorities respecting soldiers who are invalided home. Personally he himself would be glad to participate in any form of welcome that might be decided upon.

Preparations For T.A.S. Camp Under Way

The amalgamated T.A.S. last night decided to begin at once the preparations for the annual camp at the society's park on the river. The principal detail to be worked out in the next day or two is the engagement of a chef, preferably a man and his wife, to take charge of the commissariat. Several capable men are in sight, and with this matter arranged, there only remains the opening of the camp.

Last year the idea was given a preliminary trial, and as a venture, was a real success.

This year it is expected to be even more largely patronized. There have been numerous inquiries from those who desire to spend a holiday on the river, and especially from boys who made up the bulk of last year's camp.

It may be arranged that meals will not only be served for the campers, but also for canoeists who paddle down during afternoons and evenings and desire lunches.

This is the annual trip undertaken by His Lordship essentially for the purpose of administering the sacrament of confirmation and incidentally to visit the various congregations.

His Lordship will be absent a week or ten days.

A Card From Gunner Simmons

Mr. C. Simmons has received a card from his son, Gunner Simmons, of Peterborough, with the 4th Battalion, 1st Brigade, in which he says that things have been quiet lately as regards fighting but the battery has been doing a lot of moving around. Gunner Simmons says that the boys of the first contingent were to be allowed leave.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

MR. P. J. LALLY ON THE TROUBLE OVER THE MANN CUP

MR. P. J. LALLY.

Mr. P. J. Lally, as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Mann Cup, has given to the press his promised statement of facts connected with the long-pending trouble between the Cup Trustees and The Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association and The Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, and is content to leave the matter in the hands of the sport loving public of Canada to judge as to who is, and who is not, endeavouring to keep "Amateur" Lacrosse AMATEUR, and entirely clean of any vestige of professionalism.

He says: "The Mann Cup was donated by Sir Donald Mann to represent the World's Amateur Lacrosse Championship. Sir Donald appointed Mr. John R. Robinson, Managing Editor of The Toronto Telegram, Mr. Fred Killer, of Toronto, and myself, as a Board of Trustees to carry out his wishes, my co-trustees delegating to myself the honour of being chairman of the Board.

On March the 10th, 1914, the Chinooks of Calgary, having challenged for the Cup, William Clark, President of the Vancouvers, signed an agreement, allotting the Calgary team the dates of May 23rd and 30th. In the first of these games, Vancouver protested Marshall, one of the Chinooks' players, and Calgary, rather than have any trouble, dropped Marshall. Calgary protested Kendall of the Vancouvers, but refused to drop him. Calgary pressed their protest, with the result that the British Columbia Branch of the A.A.U. of Canada, held a meeting on May 26th, at which Kendall stated under oath that he had received money for his travelling expenses from Kelowna to High River, and further, that his board was paid for him for a month whilst in High River, yet in the face of this admission, Kendall was given a clean bill of health. After the meeting Mr. Archibald, the chairman of the board, claimed that the Kendall case was not finally disposed of and declared that the matter should be considered by the Alberta branch of the A.A.U. of Canada. In passing it might be mentioned that Messrs. Archibald and Scragg of the A.A.U., of Canada, (who practically decided the Kendall case), were both members of the Vancouver Amateur Athletic Association, the latter being their Physical director, and the Vancouver Amateur Lacrosse Team is the above named association's team, and one of its principal sources of revenue. It will therefore be understood that the possession at all costs of the Mann Cup was a valuable asset. However, in accordance with the expressed opinion of Mr. Archibald, a meeting of the Alberta branch of the A.A.U. of Canada, was held in Calgary on June 17, last year, to consider the Kendall case, Kendall and the V.A.A.A. Lacrosse club both having been given the proper notice to attend. Neither filed an appearance. This meeting was composed of delegates from all over the province of Alberta, and the following resolution was passed: "That this Union notify the British Columbia Union that 'according to sworn evidence submitted by Kendall, we consider him a professional and that further evidence is not necessary.' A further meeting of the British Columbia Branch of the A.A.U. of Canada, was held in Victoria on July 14th, and that august body, after declaring Kendall a "fly-white' amateur on May 26, decided at this meeting to recognise the ruling of the Alberta branch, and suspended Kendall. In the meantime, however, the Bramptons, the champions of Ontario, who were allotted dates by the Vancouver amateur team on June 27th and July 1st, were the next team to be handed a raw deal at the hands of the Vancouver Amature Lacrosse Club's officials. The first game was played as per schedule, Brampton winning by a score of 5 goals to 4. Then, without consulting the trustees in any way, and on the pretext that grounds were not available, Vancouver postponed the second Brampton game from July 1st to July 4th, in the meantime sending out an 'So.O.S.' signal to Kelowna, which brought in Jill and Gillanders, of the Okanagan Valley Lacrosse League, both of whom had played with Kelowna against Armstrong in a league match on June 25th, only nine days prior to the second Brampton Cup game, which was a direct violation of Rule 4, sections 2 and 3 of the Constitution and Rules of the Pacific Coast Amateur Lacrosse Association, under which rules these matches were being played. Having helped to defeat Brampton, these men returned to their team in Kelowna.

Being convinced that Kendall was an out and out professional in every sense of the word and being backed up in their decision by the decision of the Alberta branch of the A.A.U. of Canada, given on June 17th, and that of the British Columbia branch given on 14th of July, the trustees on September the 20th ordered the cup turned over to Henry Birks & Sons of Vancouver, to be forwarded by them to Calgary. This the Vancouver "sportsmen" refused to do, and in the face of the adverse decision given them by their own British Columbia Branch on the 14th July, carried the case to the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association and the A.A.U. of Canada which met in Ottawa on Dec. 7th and at which meetings these patriotic bodies forwarded the Mann Cup to Vancouver, notwithstanding that the above facts were communicated by myself, as chairman of the Mann Cup Trustees, to Mr. Norton H. Crowe, the secretary of the A.A.U. of Canada, who in turn communicated them to the C.A.L.A. Now, just to show how ridiculously inconsistent the president of the C.A.L.A. has proved himself, I herewith quote an extract of one of his letters to me, dated Feb. 1st: "The question between the Calgary Chinooks and the Vancouver team hangs on the eligibility of Kendall. I am personally convinced that Kendall is a professional in the strictest sense of the word, and the information you gave me in regard to the Vancouver Club's action in connection with the Brampton Cup Games is even more serious, and I am certain that any governing body that would overlook such facts is not worthy of that name."

Notwithstanding the above, note their action at the Ottawa meeting, in which the president of the C.L.A. acquiesced, for the reason that he states that the A.A.U. of Canada voted to regard Kendall an amateur and that at the C.A.L.A. is affiliated with the A.A.U. of Canada, there was no other alternative for that body than to accept their finding.

It is perfectly true that the Mann Cup Trustees agreed that all players competing for the Mann Cup must first obtain a card from the branch of the A.A.U. of Canada in the Province for which the competing team belong; but this arrangement was entered into with the distinct understanding that this union would cooperate with the trustees to enforce the rules governing amateur lacrosse in Canada. This the A.A.U. did not do, as was proved by the result of an enquiry made into the workings of the British Columbia branch by three of their own members, Messrs. Russell, DeGraves and Cotter, by which revelations of a startling nature were brought to the surface. These gentlemen, amongst other findings, found and reported that the administration of amateur sport in British Columbia had been carried on contrary to all the laws of the constitution and disclosing a condition of affairs that was characterized as deplorable, among other things showing that sixty members of the Vancouver "Amateur" Athletic Club had been given their registration cards without the necessary application forms having been filled in and signed the applicant in accordance with the constitution. Further, at the Good Friday meeting of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, held in Toronto, Mr. Francis Nelson, one of the leading officers of the A.A.U. of Canada publicly admitted that matters in the British Columbia branch of the A.A.U. of Canada, were run in a slip shod manner to promote their own interests and asked that the difficulty be allowed to stand with a view to an amicable adjustment. This was agreed upon; yet up to the present time no action has been taken to strengthen the hands of the trustees in upholding Canada's National Game, which has been prostituted by just such jug handled methods as are being indulged in by those supposed to govern amateur sport. I would like any true sportman to imagine how he would view the case if a team of amateur sportsmen from his town who were playing the game for the honour of the town and the love of the sport, journeyed several hundred miles in quest of the Mann Cup, as Calgary did, or travelling five thousand miles, as the boys of Brampton did, and have as contemptible a deal put over them as was put over these two teams by the supposed "sportsmen" at the head of the Vancouver "Amateur" Lacrosse Club, and the trustees of the Mann Cup sit back and let them get away with it? What would your opinion of the said trustees be? Such "sportsmen" are a curse to lacrosse or any other game with which they are associated; and when they are backed up in such actions by the Canadian amateur Lacrosse Association and the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, is it any wonder that such organizations are discredited, and that the mention, in Canada, of amateur sport is a stench in the nostrils of any honest sportman?

When it comes down to the final analysis, the Mann Cup Trustees are the sole owners of the Mann Cup, and will conduct its affairs as heretofore, in a manner which they consider to be honest and just, and feel confident that the public of Canada will be behind them in their endeavors to have this cup remain emblematic of the Worlds AMATEUR Lacrosse Championship.

The recovery of the Mann Cup is now in the hands of Mr. George A. Stiles, barrister, of Cornwall, who has instructions to proceed to recover the same, after which it will be turned over to Calgary, they having proved their case to the hilt.

MR. BURNHAM'S REPLY TO BRITISH-BORN'S QUESTION

(Editor of The Examiner.)

Sir,—The Examiner's correspondent of Monday evening, "British-Born," asks what I have done to justify my election. I will give him some of the facts. He can judge for himself.

1. It has been my chief consideration to maintain a clean administration of the affairs of the constituency. This was begun by sweeping all known forms of graft out of the riding; as notably in the case of the Trent Canal investigation and in the case of the lease of the Burleigh Falls power, worth three-quarters of a million dollars to a private company at a rental of one dollar a year for 60 years, and by making it clearly understood that any person who has a charge of wrongdoing to make can have and must have it investigated at once either by the Government or in the Courts as he chooses, or take it back. The habit of secrecy, graft, and special privilege of all sorts in West Peterborough is on the list for final extinction. Canada has shown what she can do in the way of this sort of "business." No patriot will seek to continue it. The real battle just now in Canada is not one of party. It is the battle of all decent men with the thieves and grafters. Such men begin by robbing the easy victims first, and they are always those least able to bear it.

2. The office of your member has been a bureau of information, and I am happy to say of consolation in this year of war. The confusion sure to arise in a huge and hurried undertaking has to a certain extent fallen upon us, but by means of setting up a fund of $2,500, advanced without interest to those waiting for soldiers' pay or wives' separation allowance, the disasters of many a little household in West Peterborough have been tided over. This work is a privilege not a labour.

3. Work done at Ottawa: Being always at Ottawa in session and always within reach of an inquirer or a correspondent, every inquiry and every letter has been answered promptly. The people of this constituency have been kept in close touch with all departments. This involved a great deal of work.

4. The Old-Age Pension scheme: If the member had not done more than get the Government to consent to the taking of evidence for an Old-Age Pension scheme, he might well have been excused. He was done the high honour of being made chairman of the large special committee named by the House of Commons for the purpose, and for two years personally examined all witnesses summoned before the committee. Witnesses at a large expense to the Government were summoned from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from mountain, mine, and farm, their evidence being taken down under examination by shorthand reporters, and the whole body of testimony published by order of the House. The foundation was thus laid not only for Old-Age pensions, but for many movements requiring just such information for the improvement of condition of the mass of the Canadian people. In no other way and at no other time could the mass of the people speak on their lives' circumstances and wants so fully and without cost to themselves. This fact alone made the inquiry absolutely invaluable to the mass of the people of Canada.

5. Site purchased by Government in Ashburnham at Lock 6 for dry dock. All plans ready for beginning work when war ends.

6. Rifle Range: This splendid range which has been of such practical use at this time, was a matter of much labour on my part, both in securing the appropriation and in overcoming difficulties of purchase. It cost in the neighbourhood of $40,000 all told, and everybody admits it is well worth the money.

7. A new pavilion at George Street Wharf and small pavilions along river shore for accommodation of those attending market.

8. The giving annually of watches to entrance pupils in each township and the city has had a splendid effect in encouraging education amongst public school pupils. There is no greater pleasure for me than to go to a gathering of pupils, parents and relatives, who always turn out in large numbers in rural districts at the presentation of these tokens of success.

9. Although not much of a farmer, I have presented also to the County Council a trophy for annual county ploughing championships. Many hundreds of people attend those contests.

10. Labour also knows what I have done in the best interests of labour, if "British-Born" does not.

11. The amendment to the Criminal Code (suggested by Detective Newhall) to protect boarding and lodging houses against swindlers.

12. Rural Mail—extension of.

13. But for being blocked by the Senate, we would have had other improvements, for example, The Highways Bill.

14. Attempt to abolish deposits in elections.

15. To further remind the rich and ambitious that this is a democratic country, I introduced the Titles of Honour Bill, by which I proposed that the bestowing of titles should be left wholly to the Crown, since it was unnecessary in a democratic country like Canada to supplement the action of the Crown in this way, especially as it has led to strange anomalies and abuses, not to mention absurdities. The Bill, though not yet passed, has been widely discussed and approved by leading journals throughout the Empire.

16. Much time spent in urging the Government to adopt some plan of preserving even flow of water in river —appointment in 1915 of inspector of dams for that purpose, accordingly.

17. Formulating plan for sale of old buildings and giving up tenancies of other buildings and of removal of all public offices to new public building to cost $[illegible],000. Site has been purchased and tenders are in.

18. As ocean freight rates in the hands of the British and American shipping pool are the greatest obstacle the exporting farmer has, I devoted much time and research to looking for a remedy, and have helped to find one. I fought land grants, railway subsidies, inadequate protection of women, etc., and have helped, if only a little, to influence Governmental opinion in these respects.

19. It must be remembered that closer study of natural history in these days is likening the students to the objects of study, and the human idealist of great pretensions of a few years back is being succeeded by a new type in imitation of the hawk, the vulture, the toad, grub-eaters, the wolf, and the ass. It is public opinon that restrains us, and when it fails or preaches selfishness, what remains but to be overcome. See Manitoba, members of Parliament at Ottawa, etc., etc. A member cannot practise law and represent a riding. He must give almost wholly one or the other. A members salary, therefore, is not by any means what it appears to be or the position either.

There has been some criticism of my manner of treating people. As the poor will not complain in this particular, I am not so concerned about my shortcomings. When some people cannot get what they want, the modern way is to say that they have been "insulted."

Hoping this hasty and incomplete reply may give your correspondent some of the desired information.

Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

DEATH OF HUGH WADDELL.

Another worthy and valuable citizen of Houston has been called to his reward, and the social and business life of the city has sustained a grievous loss.

Hugh Waddell filled fully the definition of "a good man." In every relation of life he measured up to a high standard. He met every obligation which in the course of the active life of any useful citizen can devolve upon him, and failed in no instance to meet it like an honest man.

He built up a great business, the corner-stone of which was integrity. His word was his bond. No law or not contract was needed in dealing with him. He did business according to his clear conception of right and fair dealing.

He not only enjoyed himself the wealth he had accumulated by honest toil, unflagging industry and rigid integrity, but he found his highest pleasure in sharing it with others as to give them pleasure and comfort also.

He was a modest, unostentatious, kindly man, who had the deserved respect of the entire citizenship of the community. Men trusted him because he was worthy of trust, and dealt with him without fear or misgiving because they knew that of deception or trickery he was incapable.

He was a rarely indulgent and devoted father, and was at once the boon companion and the wise counselor of his children.

"Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." Houston (Texas) Post.

The late Mr. Waddell was a cousin of Mrs. H. Waddell, of this city, and had been a frequent visitor to Peterborough.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

Sir,—While returning from the city with my wife and a friend on Monday night, about 10.30, I met on what is known as Findley's hill, a large car, with only the driver as far as I could see, and he only had one very small light in front of his car, no other light on the car. As he was going at a very high rate of speed, and keeping all the road, I had a very narrow escape from being smashed up. The only thing which saved me was swinging into the ditch. On about of the small light I thought that it was a bicycle. Now, how much longer have we to put up with this kind of work? Are we supposed to build roads for these reckless scamps to do as they like, or is there no law suitable so we can get after them. When there is no light on a car number how are we to know who they are? The only way I see is to take the law into our own hands and carry a gun and plug two or three of them. About one half of the car drivers ought to be driving a wheelbarrow on a clay dump. It is all they are fit for. I just wish to say to a few of these chaps, Be careful, for if I have got to watch night and day I will catch some of you yet. Then look out. Yours,

R. N. SCOTT.

NO CASES OF SPINAL MENINGITIS NOW AT BARRIEFIELD

Lieut.-Col. Johnston, O.C. the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons, and recruiting officer for the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, has received a communication from Col. Hemming, commanding the Third Division and the Barriefield Camp, to the effect that there are no cases of spinal meningitis at Barriefield Camp, and that the camp is in a splendid condition, from the standpoint of sanitation.

The case of Pte. Merton Adams seems to have been an isolated one, and it had been impossible to trace the source of infection at Barriefield.

The official statement from Col. Hemming will dissipate some of the rumours of many cases of spinal meningitis that have been heard recently.

CONDITIONS IN PETROGRAD ARE GOOD

PETROGRAD, via London, July 20.—Statements having appeared in the Germanic press that physicians are being recalled from the front to check epidemics in Petrograd, official denial was made here to-day of these reports. It was said that there was no case of cholera in the city and that statistics showed the amount of typhoid and dysentery throughout Russia was less than in preceding years.

Austrians Fail to Move Russian Line

GENEVA, July 20.—An Innsbruck despatch to the Tribune says.

"The Austrians in the Sokol region are making desperate but vain attempts to drive back the Russians. The daily losses of the Austrians are very heavy.

"On the Dniester front the Russians are resisting the Austrian advance north of Horodenka, where the Austrians gained a partial success, succeeding in throwing troops to the left bank of the Dniester. The Austrians lost ground near Jaslovice."

A Strict Limit To the Sale of Intoxicants

LONDON, July 20.—Besides limiting the hours during which liquor may be sold in town where the government has taken over the control of the sale of liquors, the Board of Control, appointed to deal with the munitions areas, has ordered that there shall be no treating and has prohibited the giving of credit for liquor.

The sale of liquor in licensed houses is permitted only between the hours of noon and half-past two p.m. and between six and eight o'clock in the evening. No orders may be given or accepted for spirits to be consumed off the premises on Saturdays and Sundays and only between noon and half-past two p.m. on other days.

The penalty for contravention of the regulations is fixed at six months' imprisonment and a fine of $100.

That there are airquakes, caused by the explosion of meteors in the atmosphere and entirely independent of earthquakes, is a theory advanced by an eminent English astronomer.

According to a German scientist a particle of water evaporated from the ocean is condensed and returns in ten days, but it remains there 3.46 years before being evaporated again.
